Mrs. Roche: The Passport Agency aims to process all straightforward and complete applications received from their partners, Post Office Counters Limited and Worldchoice Travel Agents, within 10 working days. This target will continue to apply in the future.

Electronic Tracking

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 31 January 2000, Official Report, column 431W, on electronic tracking, (1) which category of one-off absence was used to allow a professional footballer to breach the home detention curfew restrictions; who gave authority for this one-off absence; and if the player will be allowed further one-off absences; [108682]

(2) if he will make it a requirement for private sector contractors operating the home detention curfew scheme to notify his Department of all one-off absences and the circumstances in which they occur. [108683]

Mr. Boateng: Mr. Gary Croft was granted a variation in the hours of his Home Detention Curfew on 21 and 22 January by the Governor of Her Majesty's Prison Hollesley Bay. The variation in hours was, therefore, not a one-off absence, which can be granted by contractors in specified circumstances as outlined in my earlier reply to the hon. Member.

Governors have the discretion to vary an offender's curfew hours, taking into account legitimate reasons for the necessary absence of the curfewee from his or her home at certain times. This would include working hours, and would take into account reasonable travelling times. Mr. Croft was granted the variation in hours to enable him to represent his employers, Ipswich Town Football Club, in an away match against Bolton Wanderers Football Club. He was subsequently granted a similar variation in hours to enable him to represent Ipswich Town in an away match against Barnsley Football Club on 5 February.

Mr. Croft continued to be subject to the curfew requirement until his automatic release date on 6 February and the total number of hours he spend under curfew was not reduced.

There is no contractual provision for the electronic monitoring contractors to notify the Home Office of one-off absences. The contractors are able to provide the Home Office with details of any such absence on request, and there are no plants to make any changes to these requirements.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what offences have been committed by prisoners released under the home detention curfew scheme while they were on the scheme. [108291]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 3 February 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe) on 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 249W.

Satpal Ram

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Satpal Ram has been given a place on the offending behaviour course. [108310]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 3 February 2000]: Mr. Ram is currently held at Full Sutton prison which does not provide a specific offending behaviour course. However, it does provide a number of other courses all directed towards dealing with offending behaviour. Following an assessment by probation staff and psychologists, Mr. Ram has been recommended for the reasoning and rehabilitation programme which is available at the prison.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Satpal Ram will be eligible for parole. [108311]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 3 February 2000]: As with any mandatory life sentence prisoner, Satpal Ram will be released from prison on life licence only if, following a review of his case by the Parole Board, the Board recommend his release and Ministers, after consulting the judiciary, agree. Satpal Ram's latest Parole Board review began in December 1999. The review will take account of reports prepared by prison and probation staff familiar with Mr. Ram's case, an interview between Mr. Ram and a Parole Board member (who will not be a member of the Panel who ultimately considers Mr. Ram's case) and any representations which Mr. Ram wishes to make for consideration by the Board. A Panel of the Board will then consider his case and make their recommendation. This all takes time, but the outcome of Mr. Ram's latest review should be known later this year.

Sexual Offences

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will complete the review into sexual offences; and if he will list those offences which are under review. [109057]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Sex Offences Review should be completed in the spring. The review has been asked to review the sex offences in common and statute law in England and Wales. These are primarily contained in the Sexual Offences Acts 1956 and 1967, the Criminal Law Act 1977 and the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. The review is also looking at the offences of indecent exposure (Vagrancy Act 1824; Town Police Clauses Act 1847); indecency with children (Indecency with Children Act 1960); burglary with intent to rape (Theft Act 1968) and the prohibition on sexual intercourse with patients in the Mental Health Act 1959.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of asylum seekers whose applications for asylum were refused who (a) were removed from the United Kingdom as a result of enforcement action, (b) left the United Kingdom voluntarily after enforcement action had been initiated, (c) left the United Kingdom voluntarily otherwise than as a result of enforcement action and (d) absconded, in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [109213]

Mrs. Roche: The available information on asylum removals and voluntary departures is given in the table. As requested, the information provided relates only to enforcement action and therefore excludes removals and voluntary departures of port asylum applicants under port procedures. There are no estimates of the numbers of failed asylum seekers who depart voluntarily before enforcement action has been initiated.

The latest figure for the number of known asylum absconders is 20,000. This is a snapshot, taken from the immigration and nationality directorate (IND) port and enforcement databases at the end of November 1998, of those persons (excluding dependants) who have applied for asylum at some point and who have breached the conditions of their temporary admission, temporary release or restriction order, or are otherwise found to be out of contact with IND. Some persons recorded as absconders may have left the United Kingdom without the knowledge of IND.

Removals and voluntary departures[1] of asylum applicants, excluding dependants, as a result of enforcement[2] action, 1992–99[3]

1993	[4]—	[4]—	580
1994	700	170	870
1995	1,000	290	1,290
1996	1,720	430	2,150
1997	2,340	710	3,060
1998	2,720	720	3,440
1999[3]	[4]—	[4]—	2,750

[1] Covers only those persons departing 'voluntarily' after enforcement action had been initiated.

[2] Deportation and illegal entry action. Does not include removals and voluntary departures of port asylum applicants under port procedures.

[3] 1999 data are provisional.

[4] Data not available.

Note:

All figures are rounded to 10.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the number of asylum seekers held in detention. [108878]

Mrs. Roche: A total of 985 persons were detained in immigration detention centres and prison establishments in the United Kingdom solely under Immigration Act powers on 31 December 1999. This figure is not recorded in such a way as to identify those who had applied for asylum at some point.

The latest reliable snapshot of detained asylum seekers relates to those asylum applicants detained in immigration detention centres, prison establishments and police cells solely under Immigration Act powers as at 30 December 1998 for port applicants and 4 January 1999 for in-country applicants. On those dates, 741 such persons were recorded.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funds will be made available to assist in the Asylum Seekers Dispersal Programme with regard to (a) recurring revenue and (b) capital costs to local authorities. [108877]

Mrs. Roche: In England and Wales for the period 1 April—5 December 1999, local authorities may recover costs associated with supporting asylum seekers subject to unit cost limits of £140 per week for single adults and £240 per week for families. In addition, local authorities may reclaim a maximum of £10 per week for capital investment to bring accommodation on-stream. Financial arrangements for the period 6 December 1999 to 31 March 2000 are still being discussed with the Local Government Association.

In Scotland, local authorities will be able to reclaim at the rate of £165 per week per person in this financial year.

Where local authorities provide accommodation after 1 April 2000 for the National Asylum Support Service, this will be on the basis of a contract between the Home Office and the local authority or local authority consortia concerned.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the backlog of unprocessed asylum applications to be cleared. [109210]

Mrs. Roche: We remain committed to meeting the White Paper targets of clearing the backlog of asylum applications by April 2001.

Bond Scheme

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the responses to his Department's consultation document on the proposed financial bond scheme for visitors. [108882]

Mrs. Roche: Responses to the consultation document are now being considered, and we shall make available an analysis of them in due course.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the cost of administering a financial bond scheme for visitors to the UK. [108881]

Mrs. Roche: The cost of the proposed pilot scheme will be absorbed within departmental budgets. The costs of operating any scheme subsequent to the pilot could not be assessed until a decision were taken on whether to make the scheme more widely available.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will make a statement on the introduction of a bond scheme for visitors to the United Kingdom under sections 12 and 13 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1999. [108883]

Mrs. Roche: We intend to make an announcement about the results of the consultation process on the design of a pilot study for financial bonds for visitors under sections 16 and 17 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 in due course.

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library all correspondence between his officials and the legal representatives of General Pinochet. [108872]

Mr. Straw: I have placed in the Library a letter dated 24 January from a Home Office official to Senator Pinochet's legal representatives which was disclosed in the application brought by Belgium for permission to bring judicial proceedings against the Secretary of State. All the correspondence between my officials and Senator Pinochet's legal representatives which has been disclosed in the current judicial review proceedings is now available in the Library. I do not at present propose to make available any other correspondence.

Community Safety

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on recent initiatives local authorities have taken to improve community safety. [107340]

Mr. Boateng: The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 requires local authorities, jointly with police, to lead local partnerships to tackle crime and disorder in their area. The strategies which the 357 partnerships in England and Wales have produced show clearly the wide range of initiatives being undertaken. Coventry City Council is to be congratulated on selection as a Beacon Council in the field of preventing crime and disorder in town and local shopping centres.

Graffiti

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost of graffiti to public and private property owners over the past four years; what plans he has to tackle the problem of graffiti on public and private property; and what recent guidance he has given to paint spray manufacturers and retailers concerning age limits on the sale of their products. [109249]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Graffiti is a form of criminal damage, which is recorded in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin—Notifiable Offences. According to the Recorded Crime Statistics covering England and Wales from October 1998 to September 1999, there were 908,585 offences of criminal damage. There is no sub-total for graffiti and it is not, therefore, possible to estimate the costs of graffiti over the past four years.

The Government take all forms of criminal damage seriously. Under the Criminal Damage Act 1971, where the value of the damage is more than £2,000, the maximum penalty is ten years imprisonment for those over 18 and over, and up to two years detention in a Young Offender Institution for those aged 15–17.

The Home Office recognise that the most effective way to tackle vandalism is through co-ordinated preventive action at the local level involving all of the relevant agencies, such as the police, local authorities and schools. That is why the police and local authorities now have a statutory duty under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 to develop crime reduction partnerships.

Regarding guidance for paint spray manufactures and retailers, I understand the attraction of introducing a ban on the sale of aerosol paint. To introduce a blanket ban on the sale of aerosol paint, however, would penalise young people who have a legitimate reason for their purchase. Such a ban would prevent the determined graffiti "artists" from obtaining aerosol paint and continuing their criminal activity. Retailers should, as a matter of course, give consideration to whom they sell such products. There are no plans to issue guidance on this; nor do we have any present plans to legislate against the sale of spray paints. The matter will be kept under review.

Asylum and Immigration

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the text of the amendment to the motion considered by the House on 2 February 2000 which was approved by Ministers but not tabled, to which he referred in his oral statement of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 1048. [109215]

Mr. Straw: The text of the amendment to the motion approved by Ministers but not tabled, read as follows:

"That this House approves the Government's comprehensive, integrated strategy to modernise the immigration and asylum system to make it fairer, faster and firmer; notes the increase in asylum applications in the United Kingdom and other European countries as result of the war in Kosovo and instability in other countries; welcomes the provisions of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 which will overhaul the inadequate legislative framework created by the previous Government and replace the present chaotic asylum support arrangements which have imposed an intolerable burden on local authorities; notes with concern the conclusion of the Seventh Report of the Public Accounts Committee that the contract signed in 1996 to computerise the Immigration and Nationality Directorate was over-ambitious from the outset; welcomes the substantial additional investment that the Government is making to increase the volume and speed of asylum decisions; and supports the Government's commitment to protecting genuine refugees while dealing firmly with those who seek to evade the control".

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been under section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 in each of the last three years; how many were successful; and what penalties were imposed in each case. [109211]

Mrs. Roche: Home Office administrative records show only one prosecution under section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996, in 1999. A company was found guilty on nine counts, fined £500 on each count and ordered to pay costs.

Immigration Delays

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to give formal notice to the Department of Social Security that Mrs. B (HO Ref:- B 1009308) has been given exceptional leave to remain; why this was not done in July 1999; what were the reasons for the delay between July and late December 1999; what steps were taken following representations by the hon. Member for Manchester, Central; and what the reasons were for the further delay in taking action since December. [108600]

Mrs. Roche: After my hon. Friend was informed on 26 July 1999 of the decision to grant exceptional leave to enter to Mrs. B and her children, their papers were prepared and sent to the port for service. However, due to an administrative error the names on their papers were incorrect so they were returned for amendment. The file was then unfortunately put into a large queue and not considered until quite recently.

Mrs. B was notified on 7 February that she and her children have now been granted exceptional leave to enter. She should show these papers to the Department of Social Security when she applies for benefits. I am sorry for the delay in dealing with her case.

Drugs (Prisons)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reports on prisons were made by the Prisons Inspectorate in each of the past two years indicating those which mentioned the (a) use and (b) supply of illegal drugs. [107928]

Mr. Boateng: Between 1 February 1998 and 31 January 2000, the Chief Inspector of Prisons published 76 inspection reports on Prison Service establishments. Of these, 41 were announced and 35 were unannounced. Of the 35 unannounced, five were full inspections and 30 were short. To provide the detailed information on drugs requested would entail disproportionate cost. However, it is likely that all the announced and full unannounced reports will have mentioned the use of drugs, as will some of the short unannounced reports. References to the supply of drugs would require line by line scrutiny of each report.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if any prison establishment has been closed because of illegal drugs use. [107930]

Mr. Boateng: No.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the proportion of prisoners known to have taken illegal drugs who could only have taken the drugs while in prison. [107931]

Mr. Boateng: In 1999, 84,911 mandatory drug tests were undertaken, and some 17,789 of those tests were positive for drugs. This figure includes results from both random and targeted tests. Provisional information indicates that, during 1999, there were 15,857 recorded offences of "unauthorised use of a controlled drug", of which 13,409 were recorded as being proven at adjudication and punished under Prison Rules.

Driving Licences

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 January 2000, Official Report, column 278W, on driving licences (a) what confirmation of details for the purposes of a driving licence application the Immigration and Nationality Department is prepared to offer those whose cases have yet to be finalised by them and (b) how long on average it took the Immigration and Nationality Department to issue such information of details in response to (i) a written request and (ii) a telephone request in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [108068]

Mrs. Roche: Further to the answer I gave on 31 January 1999 to my hon. Friend, as the Immigration and Nationality Directorate is not the issuing authority of an applicant's identity document, they are not in a position to offer any confirmation of their proof of identity.

CCTV

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to promote the use of CCTV in car parks to increase safety and reduce theft; and if he will make a statement. [R] [108383]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Under the Crime Reduction Programme Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) Initiative, the Government are investing £153 million over three years in public area CCTV systems in England and Wales. We have already allocated £32 million for 180 car park related schemes under the first round of the initiative.

The second round of the initiative will be launched in the spring. We will continue to encourage applications aimed at reducing theft in car parks, particularly where CCTV is being introduced as part of a package of measures to achieve Secured Car Park status.

Car Theft

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received on reducing car theft; and if he will make a statement. [R] [108384]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We have received 110 comments in response to the report of the Vehicle Crime Reduction Action Team (VCRAT) published in September 1999 setting out measures to achieve the Government's 30 per cent. vehicle crime reduction target. All but two of the comments referred specifically to the VCRAT proposal for the compulsory fitting of electronic immobilisers to seven to 10-year-old cars and most of these were opposed to the proposal. Two comments were received on the question of compulsory carriage of driving licenses (one for and one against). In addition, two of the comments covered wider issues including the role of the courts, motor projects, the insurance industry, crime and disorder partnerships, legislative protection of marks on vehicle component parts, retention of motor salvage, motorcycle theft and the possibility of reducing the rate of Value Added Tax on vehicle security products.

Police Pensions

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of police funding was spent on pensions for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what estimate he has made of the proportion to be so spent in each of the next 10 years. [109214]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information available is set out in the table. Information on police pension costs as a proportion of police funding is not available beyond 2001–02.

Percentage

Year	Proportion spent on pension costs[1]
1990–91	7.2
1991–92	7.7
1992–93	8.2
1993–94	9.2
1994–95	10.0
1996–97	11.3
1997–98	11.9
1999–2000	13.8
2001–02	14.8

[1] Information from 1990–91 to 1998–99 taken from the Chartered Institute of Public Finance Accounts Police Statistics. Information from 1999–2000 to 2001–02 taken from Government Actuary's Department Projections of pension costs as a proportion of Total Standard Spending.

Wheel Clamping

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on changing the law in England and Wales to ban wheel clamping on private land; and if he will make a statement. [R] [108385]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We regularly receive representations from members of the public, right hon. and hon. Members, and others about wheel clamping on private land, but the majority are in favour of regulating, not banning, the practice.

Race Relations

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with chief officers of police regarding his proposals to amend the Race Relations (Amendment) Bill to make public authorities subject to legislation forbidding indirect discrimination. [109212]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Commission for Racial Equality's Third Review of the Race Relations Act 1976 recommended, among other things, that the Act apply to all activities of Government and to all public sector bodies. The Association of Chief Officers of Police responded positively to this recommendation, as part of the Government's public consultation on the Commission's proposals, indicating support for it. The Association reiterated that support in March 1999 in the context of the recommendation in the Report of the Inquiry into the Death of Stephen Lawrence that the full force of the Race Relations legislation should apply to the police.

The Government had initial concerns that including indirect discrimination in the Race Relations (Amendment) Bill might leave public bodies open to routine legal challenges to regulatory, economic and social policies in circumstances where these were entirely proper, in particular those that helped ethnic minorities the most. On balance, however, the Government concluded having listened carefully to the arguments put forward about this issue in Parliament and elsewhere that the risk of spurious challenge is outweighed by the principle of including indirect discrimination in respect of public sector functions in the Bill. No further formal public consultation was conducted.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Energy Conservation

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what average saving in energy consumption he estimates would be made if new houses were constructed using best available techniques for energy conservation in place of the requirements of current building regulations. [108019]

Ms Beverley Hughes: New dwellings might have an annual energy consumption for space heating and hot water around half that of dwellings built in compliance with current building regulations if built using best available techniques that take account of factors such as capital and running costs, buildability and environmental costs.

A36(T) Wiltshire

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what representations he received (a) from Wiltshire County Council and (b) from named councillors in support of the provision of a pedestrian crossing on the A36(T) at South Newton, Wiltshire; [107640]

(2) for what reason he decided to construct a pedestrian crossing on the A36(T) at South Newton, Wiltshire; what type of crossing will be built; when it will be operating; and how much it will cost. [107641]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 1 February 2000]: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Robert Key, dated 9 February 2000:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the provision of a pedestrian crossing on the A36 trunk road at South Newton as these are operational matters for the Highways Agency.

A written representation was received from Wiltshire County Council last December asking the Agency seriously to consider a pedestrian crossing at South Newton. In addition, Mr. West, a County Councillor for the area, has also asked orally for a pedestrian crossing to be provided there.

The reason for providing a crossing is that a large part of the village is cut of from the village shop by a heavy traffic flow, and there have been personal injury accidents involving pedestrians crossing the A36 at this point. When taken together, these factors support the case for the provision of a crossing.

A signal controlled crossing is to be provided and detail design work is programmed to commence in Spring of this year. We expect the crossing to be operational by Winter 2000. The estimated cost of this scheme is £30,000.

If you require any further information, the Route Manager, Mr. Nigel Dovell, telephone 0117 987554, who is based in the Highways Agency's Bristol office, will be pleased to help you.

Airline Accidents

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 24 January 2000, Official Report, columns 131–32W, on airline accidents, if new boundaries for public safety zones at airports were defined following the receipt of the advice from NATS Ltd. [108215]

Mr. Mullin: We have accepted NATS' advice that it is feasible to base public safety zone boundaries on risk contours around airports, and NATS are well advanced with the detailed work to redefine the boundaries for us on this basis. We hope to bring the new boundaries into effect, together with guidance to local planning authorities, in the spring.

Open Skies

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had concerning the Open Skies policy in relation to regional airports in England and Wales during (a) this parliamentary session and (b) the last parliamentary session. [108634]

Mr. Mullin: In June 1998 we offered to bilateral partners with whom we did not already have liberal agreements unrestricted third/fourth freedom access to all UK regional airports, as long as UK airlines were also allowed to operate on the same routes. Some 17 countries have accepted the offer and it has been discussed in virtually all air services negotiations held since June 1998.

Whaling

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the proposals to be put forward by (a) Japan, (b) Norway and (c) other states on whales and whaling to the forthcoming meeting of the parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, indicating the position of Her Majesty's Government in relation to these proposals. [108492]

Mr. Meacher: Japan and Norway have put forward four proposals to downlist whale populations to Appendix II of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). These are the North-east Atlantic and North Atlantic Central, the West Pacific and Southern Hemisphere stocks of Minke whale (Balaenoptera acutorostrata) and the Eastern North Pacific stocks of Grey whales (Eshrichtuis robustus.) We have already made clear to both countries our opposition to these proposals on the grounds that they would undermine the moratorium on commercial whaling under the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling (ICRW). This position was endorsed by the majority of EU member states at a recent informal meeting of EU experts.

The meeting of experts, which acts as a precursor to the formation of a common EU position through the Council of Ministers, also considered three resolutions concerning the relationship between CITES and the International Whaling Commission (IWC). There are two competing resolutions: one from Japan, that seeks to weaken the primacy of the IWC in the field of managing and conserving whale stocks; and one from the United States, which underscores existing arrangements. In addition there is a simple consolidation of all extant CITES resolutions on whaling proposed by the CITES Secretariat. The majority of member states agreed that the EU should seek the withdrawal of the US and Japanese proposals in favour of the simple consolidation of resolutions which will preserve the existing arrangements between the two Conventions.

School Crossing Patrols

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the latest available figures are for the number of designated school crossing patrols in (a) England and Wales in total and (b) each London borough; and how many of these designated school crossing patrols have vacant positions in (i) England and Wales and (ii) each London borough. [108676]

Mr. Hill: The figures requested are not collected.

Major Road Schemes

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many major road schemes were (a) accepted, (b) provisionally accepted, (c) deferred and (d) rejected in each English region in the local transport settlement 2000–01. [108721]

Mr. Hill: The information is given in the following table:

Region	(a) Accepted	(b) Provisionally accepted	(c) Deferred	(d) Rejected	Total
South East	0	1	5	3	9
South West	1	0	2	2	5
West Midlands	2	0	6	3	11
North West	0	1	4	0	5
North East	1	0	2	0	3
Yorks and Humber	0	2	6	1	9
East Midlands	2	1	4	1	8
East of England	2	5	1	1	9

The table refers to the 59 bids which are either being funded as major road schemes or were identified as being wholly roads-based. A further 14 major schemes put forward contain significant road schemes as part of an integrated strategy including public transport and related works.

Housing (Domestic Violence)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will issue guidance to local authorities on allowing housing in cases where a woman has left the area in which she was living as a result of domestic violence and has moved to a different authority area; and if he will make a statement. [108727]

Mr. Mullin: People who are fleeing domestic violence are regarded as homeless by virtue of sections 175 and 177 of the Housing Act 1996. Authorities should consider whether applicants are vulnerable as a result of having suffered violence or abuse from a person with whom they are associated. If so, they will have a priority need for accommodation. When discharging their duties under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1996, authorities must have regard to how suitable the location of that accommodation is. Threats of violence would clearly be a factor in their decision making.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions revised draft Code of Guidance on the Allocation of Accommodation and Homelessness, due to be published in the Spring, gives clear messages to local authorities about the approach they might take where women need to leave their home because of domestic violence. It also encourages authorities to refer to the voluntary Inter-Borough Agreement on out-of-area-placements of homeless households in the private rented sector, which has been agreed between member authorities of the Association of London Government. This sets out a framework for co-operation and consultation between member authorities. Although this addresses the particular context of London, the principle and policies advocated apply equally across all areas where there is a need for out-of-area placement.

Health and Safety Laboratory

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will decide the future location of the Health and Safety Laboratory. [108789]

Mr. Meacher: The Health and Safety Laboratory is currently in negotiations with a preferred bidder under PFI to rationalise its estate. This involves locating the Laboratory on a single site at Buxton. If Ministers are satisfied that the final proposals represent value for money, approval will be given. A decision on the project is due in Summer 2000.

Reprocessing (Road Surfaces)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for the latest 12 months for which figures are available how many miles of resurfaced highway contained reprocessed waste tyres; and if he will make a statement. [108983]

Mr. Hill: Road surfacing products containing waste tyres are currently undergoing trials as part of their development process. No central records are kept concerning the use of these materials. A trial just under one mile long was laid on the A244 Hersham bypass in June 1999 for Surrey County Council, and is being monitored jointly with the Highways Agency.

Rent Acts Judgment

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the need for primary legislation following the judgment of the Court of Appeal in R vs Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions ex parte Spath Holme Limited that the Rent Acts (Maximum Fair Rent) Order 1999 (SI 1999 No. 6) was ultra vires. [108787]

Mr. Mullin: We will consider whether any further action is appropriate once the outcome of the petition to another place is known.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on the stock of affordable homes of the judgment of the Court of Appeal in R v. Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions ex parte Spath Holme Limited that the Rent Acts (Maximum Fair Rent) Order 1999 (SI 1999 No. 6) was ultra vires. [108783]

Mr. Mullin: The Court of Appeal's judgment does not affect the supply of affordable homes. However, it is likely to affect the ability of some tenants to afford rent increases which would have been capped under the Order.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he plans to take following the judgment of the Court of Appeal in R v. Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions ex parte Spath Holme Limited that the Rent Acts (Maximum Fair Rent) Order 1999 (SI 1999 No. 6) was ultra vires. [108785]

Mr. Mullin: We intend to petition another place seeking permission to appeal the Court's decision.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on rents of the judgment of the Court of Appeal in R v. Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions ex parte Spath Holme Limited that the Rent Acts (Maximum Fair Rent) Order 1999 (SI 1999 No. 6) was ultra vires. [108784]

Mr. Mullin: The judgment is likely to lead to significant increases in fair rents that would have been capped under the Order. The impact will vary between regions. However, provisional analysis of rents registered by rent officers in England and Wales shows an average difference between the amount capped under the Order and the uncapped amount of £5.61 per week.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions by what means he will prevent disproportionate increases in rent following the judgment of the Court of Appeal in R vs Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions ex parte Spath Holme Limited that the Rent Acts (Maximum Fair Rent) Order 1999 (SI 1999 No. 6) was ultra vires. [108786]

Mr. Mullin: The Secretary of State has no powers to intervene to prevent disproportionate increases in rent. It is for rent officers and rent assessment committees to decide whether and by how much to increase the rent for tenancies registered under Part IV and Part VI of the Rent Act 1977. They must follow the rules set out in Section 70 of the Act and have regard to leading court judgments on the assessment of a fair rent.

Minicabs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce legislation to control the use of minicabs in the Greater London area. [108731]

Mr. Hill: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge) on 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 537W.

Deregulation

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the potential impact on business associated with each of the following planned deregulation proposals (a) the disposal of houses by local authorities in England, (b) amending section 7 of the Building Act 1984 and (c) eligibility to drive a private hire vehicle outside London. [108776]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 7 February 2000]: A consultation exercise was carried out last year on the proposal concerning the disposal of houses by local authorities in England. Following this, an assessment of the potential impact on business has been produced, and is currently under consideration.

The proposals to amend Section 7 of the Building Act 1984 arose from proposals made by the Better Regulation Task Force. A forthcoming consultation will seek to identify the impact of amending Section 7, and this will be fully assessed by means of a Regulatory Impact Assessment prior to making a deregulation order.

The issues surrounding the eligibility to drive a private hire vehicle outside London are being considered in the light of consultation responses from business and other interested parties. If these result in a deregulation order, Cabinet Office guidance on making such an order will be followed. This guidance requires that a Regulatory Impact Assessment be produced.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the economic impact associated with each of the following deregulation orders and contracting out orders on business (a) the Deregulation (Parking Equipment) Order 1996, (b) the Deregulation (Motor Vehicles Tests) Order 1996, (c) the Deregulation (Building) (Initial Notices and Final Certificates) Order 1996, (d) the Deregulation (Exchangeable Driving Licences) Order 1998 and (e) the Deregulation (Taxis and Private Hire Vehicles) Order 1998. [108775]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The five listed orders were laid prior to the requirement, introduced in August 1998, to produce Regulatory Impact Assessments looking at all economic impacts of proposals. At that time, Compliance Cost Assessments were required, but only for proposals expected to impose costs. Since, under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994, deregulation orders are not allowed to impose burdens, no such assessments were prepared in these cases.

Raptor Working Group

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish the main report of the Raptor Working Group. [109089]

Mr. Mullin: The report of the UK Raptor Working Group was launched at the Raptor Forum meeting hosted by my Department on 3 February. The full report is published as a priced publication entitled "Report of the UK Raptor Working Group" available from Scottish Natural Heritage at the address below. Copies are also available in the House Libraries.

Thameslink

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what options for additional capacity on the Thameslink rail route have been proposed since June 1999; and what is the timetable for such options. [109108]

Mr. Hill: The loan of four class 317 units from WAGN and two class 319 units from Connex has resulted in longer trains on Thameslink services, providing 3,900 extra seats per week, and an extra train path from 26 September 1999. The SSRA are currently evaluating proposals for new rolling stock and further additional train paths on the Bedford to London section of the route. They are also investigating other options for additional capacity on this section. The earliest any further additional capacity could be provided by the acquisition of new rolling stock is September 2001.

Public Transport (Accessibility)

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to increase accessibility to bus and rail services for the (a) elderly and (b) disabled elderly. [109248]

Mr. Hill: The regulations we are introducing under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will ensure that in future all land-based public transport vehicles are fully accessible.

Rail Vehicle Accessibility Regulations have been introduced which apply to all new types of passenger rail rolling stock first introduced into service from 1 January 1999. Similar regulations dealing with new buses and coaches used on local and scheduled services will be introduced this year. The regulations cover a wide range of features which will improve access for older people as well as for disabled people: for example, improved handrails which will benefit those with poor dexterity and the use of colour and tonal contrasts to assist those with low vision.

PPG3

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions whether the target in draft PPG3 of 60 per cent. of homes on brownfield sites is a target for (a) each planning authority, (b) each planning region and (c) the country as a whole; and how he intends to ensure that authority and regional targets will achieve the national target. [109013]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The Government's target is that by 2008, 60 per cent. of additional housing in England should be provided on previously developed land or by re-using existing buildings.

Forthcoming guidance on Planning for Housing (PPG3) will advise Regional Planning Bodies to set appropriate regional and sub-regional targets taking account of the national target, the amount of land available for recycling and their assessment of the capacity of their areas to accommodate additional dwellings. Local planning authorities will wish to set targets consistent with the regional targets as confirmed by the Secretary of State in Regional Planning Guidance.

Departmental Secondees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many staff were seconded from the private sector to his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [109071]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 8 February 2000]: Secondments and attachments are part of the Interchange Initiative, which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the Civil Service and other organisations. All sectors of the economy are involved: Voluntary, Education, Health, Public and Private. Interchange is a key component of the reform agenda. The Modernising Government White Paper committed us to increasing interchange, in particular by bringing in more people on secondment and seconding more of our people out.

From May 1997 to April 1998, there were 19 secondees to the Department. Four of these secondees were from the private sector, and came from the following companies:

CRE Group Ltd.
Bank of Scotland
Unilever
District Audit.

Between May 1998 to April 1999, there were 40 secondees to the Department. 21 of these secondees were from the private sector, and came from the following organisations:

Kvaerner Construction
OVE Arup
Crown House Engineering
British Gas
Bovis Construction
Kvaener Cementation Foundations
Geoffrey Reid Associates
Marks and Spencer
Bellway Urban Renewal
KPMG
Buildings Research Establishment
IPPR
ABROS
Boots the Chemist Ltd.
College of North East London
D. A. Dawson and Associates
National Grid
Hider
Waters Ltd.
OPM
Institute for Fiscal Studies.

From May 1999 to December 1999, there were 20 secondees to the Department. Five of these secondees were from the private sector, and came from the following companies:

Buro—Happold
Christiani and Nielsen
Development Trust Association
Building Research Establishment Homeless Network.

Biosafety Protocol

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Montreal conference on the Biosafety Protocol. [109081]

Mr. Meacher: The Montreal conference, at which I represented the United Kingdom Government, was a success. Countries throughout the world agreed by consensus on 29 January to adopt the Biosafety Protocol to the United Nations Convention on Biological Diversity. We achieved our goal of securing a Protocol that is robust in protecting biodiversity, and effective and workable for those who have obligations under it.

The Protocol will ensure that developing and developed countries alike will be able to take informed decisions, on the basis of scientific information including a risk assessment, about whether to import certain living (genetically) modified organisms (LMOs) that may have adverse effects on the conservation and sustainable use of biodiversity. In the absence of scientific certainty, due to insufficient scientific information and knowledge, and consistent with Principle 15 of the Rio Declaration, countries will be able to take such decisions on import on a precautionary basis in order to avoid or minimise any potential adverse effects, and to take into account the impact of LMOs on the value of biodiversity to indigenous and local communities.

Where importing countries lack a domestic regulatory framework for taking decisions on the import of LMOs, they will be able to do so under the Protocol. In the case of LMOs intended for intentional introduction into the environment, this will be on the basis of information provided in advance by the exporter. In the case of LMOs intended for direct use as food or feed, or for processing, importing countries without domestic legislation will be able to take decisions on the basis of information provided through a clearing-house mechanism established under the Protocol.

Further provisions in the Protocol lay down minimum documentation requirements for LMOs moving between countries. These requirements are categorised according to whether the LMO is intended for intentional introduction into the environment, for contained use, for direct use as food or feed, or for processing, or for other purposes. The Protocol also requires work to be undertaken on the options for a regime for liability and redress to be completed within four years of its entry into force.

The effectiveness of the Protocol in achieving its objective of contributing to biosafety is strengthened by specific recognition that trade and environment agreements should be mutually supportive with a view to achieving sustainable development.

The Protocol is a significant step forward in ensuring proper evaluation of any risk to biodiversity from the transboundary movement of LMOs that may have adverse effects on the conservation and sustainable use of biological diversity, taking also into account risks to human health. It will complement national and regional law in many parts of the world and enable other countries to benefit from experience elsewhere, including the United Kingdom and Europe, and to protect their biological diversity.

Suburban Housing Estates

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if draft PPG3 contains a presumption against approval of large suburban housing estates, predominantly of high-priced housing. [109297]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The consultation draft of PPG3 states that any substantial new development should be planned as a community with mixed land uses, including adequate shops and services. It also advises that local planning authorities should adopt policies to secure an appropriate mix of dwelling size, type and affordability in new developments to meet the changing composition of households in their areas. The final version of PPG3 will be issued shortly.

School Grants

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions under what circumstances schools may receive grants for environmental projects from the proceeds of the landfill tax; and if he will make a statement. [108781]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

Operators of landfill sites who are registered for landfill tax may claim for tax credits for contributions that they make to support environmental projects. These may include research and education for the purpose of encouraging the use of more sustainable waste management and the provision and maintenance of public amenities in the vicinity of landfill sites. Landfill site operators may choose to support schools as part of such projects.

DEFENCE

Digitisation Systems

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of fitting the British Army units in Kosovo with platform level digitisation systems; and how many units will be refitted. [99414]

Mr. Spellar: We have no immediate plans to fit British Army platforms in Kosovo with digitised systems.

Cluster Bombs

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research his Department has carried out into the failure rate of cluster bomb sub-munitions used by Her Majesty's armed forces. [107427]

Mr. Spellar: Information on the failure rate of cluster bomb sub-munitions used by UK armed forces is collected during regular in-service trials and from field data. Recent statistics show a failure rate of approximately 5 per cent. in line with expectations.

Service Men (Telephone Calls)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the costs per minute of telephone calls to the United Kingdom by service men based in (a) Belize, (b) the Falklands and (c) Cyprus; and what assessment he has made of the impact of such costs on recruitment and retention in the armed forces. [107862]

Mr. Spellar: We recognise the importance to personnel serving overseas of keeping in touch with family and friends by being able to telephone home. The standard cost of telephone calls per minute to the United Kingdom is:

Cyprus: Peak 33p Off-peak 28p

Falkland Islands: Peak 99p Off-peak 80p.

Falkland Islands costs can be reduced by 15 per cent. by purchasing telephone cards from Service sources on the island.

The call-back services provided by a number of telecommunications companies can reduce these charges substantially. Typical rates are 41p per minute for Belize, 17p for Cyprus and 59p for Falklands (although the latter is a limited service). The availability of these reduced cost services is widely publicised at each location and personnel are encouraged to use them.

Personnel in these overseas locations are in receipt of Local Overseas Allowance (LOA), which contains an element for telephone calls.

UK/VSC 501 System

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of installing the UK/VSC 501 system on the 18 Land Rovers and the Hagglunds BV206 vehicles currently being delivered to the Royal Marines. [108591]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 9 February 2000.

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost to the Ministry of Defence of installing the UK/VSC 501 satellite system on the 18 Land Rovers and the Hagglunds BV206 vehicles being delivered to the Royal Marines. This matter falls to me for answer within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

This procurement provided for the upgrade of 18 MOD-owned Land Rover-mounted VSC 501 terminals together with the development and production of two new terminals on MOD-owned Hagglunds BV206 vehicles. The total cost of the work was £11M and the vehicles were delivered between March and September 1999.

This cost includes the procurement of spares, training, equipment documentation and supporting infrastructure to provide the users with full terminal functionality and connectivity.

Racism (Armed Forces)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department has taken to improve racial equality in the armed forces in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [108744]

Mr. Spellar: The Armed Forces continue to work hard to develop an organisational culture that welcomes racial diversity and places the highest priority on tackling racism within the Services. Within the framework of the Partnership Agreement with the Commission for Racial Equality, the cornerstone for Service racial equality policies, the Armed Forces are committed to reflecting more closely the rich ethnic balance of our society, and to be a beacon for others in the promotion of racial equality.

During the last 12 months the Armed Forces Equal Opportunities goal was published on 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 10W, and seeks to achieve universal acceptance and application of a working environment free from harassment, intimidation and unlawful discrimination, in which all have equal opportunity, consistent with our legal obligations, to realise their full potential in contributing to the maintenance and enhancement of operational effectiveness. The Armed Forces respect and value every individual's unique contribution, irrespective of their race, ethnic origin, religion or gender and without reference to social background or sexual orientation.

The Service Heads of Chaplaincy are currently working with the Buddhist, Hindu, Jewish, Muslim and Sikh Religious Advisers to the Armed Forces to establish a network of "Chaplains" from minority faiths in order to ensure that the spiritual and moral needs of Service personnel from minority faiths are provided for. Additionally, as part of the Armed Forces' aim to cater for all special religious dietary requirements, Vegetarian, Halal and Kosher Operational Ration Packs have been introduced.

Education and awareness of equality issues is central in the drive to eradicate unacceptable behaviour in the Armed Forces. Comprehensive equal opportunity training is undertaken widely across the Services in addition to the specialist training provided by the Tri-Service Equal Opportunities Training Centre at Shrivenham.

The Armed Forces continue to stress their policy of zero tolerance towards all forms of racial discrimination and harassment.

Shorts Missile Systems Contract

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the value of that part of the contract between his Department and Shorts Missile Systems that will be spent in the United Kingdom; [108749]

(2) how many high-velocity missiles are to be supplied by Shorts Missile Systems under their contract with his Department. [108748]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 9 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the value of that part of the contract between the Ministry of Defence and Shorts Missile Systems that will be spent in the United Kingdom. You also asked how many high velocity missiles are to be supplied by Shorts Missile Systems under their contract with the Department. These matters falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

I presume both questions refer to the High Velocity Missile contract placed on 6 December 1999. The value of that part of this contract that will be spent in the United Kingdom is 98% of the overall contract cost which as stated in the press release is around £200M. I am afraid that I am unable to let you know how many missiles have been ordered as it is considered that the release of this information would be harmful to our national security interests and would also be in breach of a third party's commercial confidences. I am therefore withholding this information under Exemption 1 (Defence, security and international relations) and Exemption 13 (Third party's commercial confidences) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Sarin

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what study he is making of the long-term effects of Sarin. [108464]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The Department is at present undertaking no specific study into any possible long-term effects of exposure to the nerve agent Sarin. There is, however, both on-going and completed MOD funded research which will inform, in general terms, our understanding of the effects of nerve agents. The results from two earlier studies on the effects of low levels of exposure to Sarin have been published: the first appeared in the "Journal of Human and Experimental Toxicology" in 1996 (Vol 15, pages 369–375); and the second in the "Journal of Psychopharmacology" in 1999 (Vol 13, pages 128–135).

Fylingdales

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he and his officials have held with the United States Government about the future of Fylingdales in Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement. [108664]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 7 February 2000]: I have discussed with the US Defense Secretary, William Cohen, the possible US requirement for facilities in the UK to support the US National Missile Defence (NMD) programme. We have received no formal request from the US Administration regarding Fylingdales, nor would we expect any until after a US decision on whether or not to proceed towards deployment of the NMD system.

Chinook Accident (Mull of Kintyre)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence was used by his investigators to determine the weather conditions affecting the coastline on the Mull of Kintyre in the last 40 seconds before impact of RAF Chinook ZD 576. [109119]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The RAF Board of Inquiry obtained evidence relating to weather conditions from the Meteorological Office, as well as from several witnesses who were in the area at the time of the accident.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received about whether the Mull of Kintyre was covered or only partly covered in cloud as RAF Chinook ZD 576 made its final approach on 2 June 1994. [109121]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The RAF Board of Inquiry found that the weather was very poor, with cloud and hill fog extending from below the lighthouse level (300 ft) to at least the summit of Beinn na Lice (1,400 ft), the highest point on the southern tip of the Mull.

Thiepval Barracks

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what feasibility study was undertaken in respect of the land at Thiepval barracks; if he will make a statement on the options contained in the report; which option was chosen; and if he will place a copy of the report in the Library. [109082]

Dr. Moonie: The land at Thiepval barracks was last subject to a major review in 1997. The resulting report contained classified information regarding the layout of the barracks and proposed development. I am therefore withholding information on the content of that report under Exemption 1a of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Balkans (Army Communications)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning army communications in the Balkans. [109582]

Mr. Spellar: As part of my Department's on-going efforts to reduce overstretch in the Army, I am pleased to announce that a contract has been let to provide for less manpower-intensive and more modern communications equipment in the Balkans. The contract, with BAe Systems, will provide for wide area communications in support of the UK's contribution to the NATO Multi National Divisions in Bosnia and Kosovo. While maintaining the UK's responsibility to NATO's peacekeeping forces, it will enable us to bring home some 150 Royal Signals personnel by the end of the year. It is also an excellent example of the SMART Procurement Initiative by demonstrating the advantages of working closely together with industry to deliver the equipment our front-line troops need. The contract is specific to the Balkans theatre of operations and does not affect the Army's wider communications requirements. The cost of this equipment will be met from the Contingency Reserve.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Research Projects

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 373W, what restrictions were placed on contractors carrying out research projects funded by his Department in 1999 in respect of them discussing their findings with journalists (a) before and (b) after publication. [108197]

Mr. Straw: The terms and conditions with regard to publicity about research projects undertaken by contractors on behalf of the Home Office vary depending upon the detailed circumstances of the contract. As a rule, research contracts with the Home Office require contractors not to make public statements concerning the work without the prior consent of the Department. In practice, this usually means that contractors do not discuss findings of research before publication but are free to do so afterwards. I am committed to ensuring that any research commissioned by my Department is published once it has been properly validated (save in subject areas where the protection of national security or the prevention of serious crime require that the research can only be used for internal purposes). I have agreed a protocol with my Director of Research governing the publication of the Home Office research reports. I have placed a copy in the Library.

Body Armour (Female Officers)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is given by his Department to police forces on the provision of suitably designed body armour for female officers. [109000]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Suitable body armour for female officers, designed and approved to standards set by the Home Office Police Scientific Development Branch (PSDB) and the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), has been available since May 1999. The new PSDB Stab Resistance Standard for Body Armour 1999 also includes provision for testing female armour.

The results of all body armour tested to PSDB standards are published in the "Manual of Ballistic and Stab Resistant Body Armour", a joint PSDB/ACPO publication. The manual is available to all police forces and contains information on how to select appropriate body armour from among almost 200 commercially available armours. PSDB also gives presentations on female body armour to individual forces.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers who are (a) single adults, (b) families with children and (c) unaccompanied children in each London borough were being supplied through (i) the Social Services departments and (ii) other housing departments on 31 January. [108797]

Mrs. Roche: Central Government do not collect information in the form requested. I understand that the Association of London Government collates data on the numbers of single adults, families and unaccompanied minors being supported by London boroughs each week. A breakdown between those persons supported by social services departments or other housing departments is not available.

The latest figures available from the Association of London Government, for the week ending 7 January 2000, are set out in the table.

Table showing the number of asylum seekers being supported by London boroughs[1] at 7 January 2000

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has taken to ensure that current overstayers will not lose the right to a suspensive appeal against a decision to remove them taken after 1 October. [109544]

Mrs. Roche: Section 9 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 provides for a minimum three month period during which overstayers can apply to regularise their immigration status. If they do so, and the application is refused after the new removal procedures are implemented, the old procedures will apply to their case after 1 October and a suspensive right of appeal will be retained.

The Immigration (Regularisation Period for Overstayers) Regulations 2000 came into force on Tuesday 8 February. The period runs from now until 1 October 2000, which is the day before the Human Rights Act 1998 is expected to come into force, and thus lasts for a minimum of almost eight months.

I shall shortly write to all Members, giving details of the scheme and how an application should be made under it. I shall place copies of the information leaflet we have produced in the Library. We shall be discussing further publicity with relevant interest groups, but as a first step the leaflets are being distributed to local community groups through the Citizens Advice Bureaux and the Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants.

The scheme is solely intended to retain a suspensive right of appeal to the Immigration Appellate Authority for those overstayers who make a specific application to us during the period. It is by no means an amnesty: the same considerations apply whether an application under the scheme is made or not. All overstayers should be aware that a decision to remove them from the United Kingdom is, and will, remain the normal response to their unlawful behaviour. Only when the compassionate circumstances outweigh the public interest in maintaining an effective immigration control will we allow them to remain.

Women's Refuges (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women's refuges there are in each Greater London borough. [108729]

Mr. Boateng: Refuges operate independently of Government, and such data are not collected centrally. The most comprehensive and up-to-date information available is contained in "The Gold Book: the Women's Aid Directory of Domestic Violence Research and Helpline Services 1999", published last year by the Women's Aid Federation (England). Information is also available on the Women's Aid website, http://www.womensaid.org.uk.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been made available to (a) open and (b) support women's refuge projects in the Greater London area in each of the last three years. [108723]

Mr. Boateng: Refuges are funded by a range of sources, rather than directly by central Government. In some cases, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, through the Housing Corporation, provides capital and revenue funding. Other income comes from the rents paid by users (who may be relying on Housing Benefit support), local authorities, charities, trusts, private donations and their own fund-raising activities. Some refuge projects work in partnership with Housing Associations. Because of this the information requested is not available.

The paper "Supporting People" outlined plans to introduce a new policy and funding framework for the provision of supported accommodation for all who need it, including the survivors of domestic violence, from April 2003.

Firearms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many days it takes to process the grant and renewal of a shotgun and firearm certificate in each police constabulary area. [108823]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what monitoring and evaluation of the firearms licensing regime has been carried out in respect of the level set for firearm fees. [108822]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As with other aspects of police administration, firearms licensing is subject to monitoring by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) as part of their inspection process.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representatives of shooting user groups have been invited to participate in Home Office discussions on firearms fees. [108821]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Firearms Consultative Committee (FCC), the independent statutory authority that advises the Government on firearms matters, considered initial proposals for reviewing firearms licensing fees last year. The Home Office has since received detailed information from the Association of Chief Police Officers as to the basis on which the fees might be set. Ultimately, it is for the Home Secretary to lay an Order before Parliament setting out any changes, but before doing so we shall wish to consult the British Shooting Sports Council for their views.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to improve the efficiency of police firearms licensing departments in respect of the criticisms made in Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary report in 1993. [108820]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In the years immediately following the publication of their 1993 Report on Firearms Licensing, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) paid particular attention to firearms licensing departments during their inspection of individual forces, having regard to the shortcomings identified in the report. In general, HMIC was satisfied that most forces had taken those steps identified by the Inspectorate to improve their efficiency and effectiveness in this area.

Since the publication of the 1993 Inspection Report, there has been considerable change in the field of firearms licensing following the tragic events at Dunblane and the subsequent legislation. There have also been wider changes, for example in the role and effectiveness of computer systems. Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary is, therefore, drawing up new inspection protocols for firearms licensing departments.

British Summer Time

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 24 November 1999, Official Report, column 124W, what are the respective responsibilities of his Department and the Scottish Executive in relation to British summer time in Scotland. [108818]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Scotland Act 1998 reserves powers relating to summer time to Westminster and responsibility, therefore, remains with the Home Office.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consult road safety groups and others on abandoning British summer time in England and Wales. [108819]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have no plans to promote changes to the present summer time arrangements, but we will continue to listen to all sides of the argument.

Human Rights Act 1998

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much he has spent on counsel's opinion in respect of securing statements of compatibility of public bills with the requirements of the Human Rights Act 1998. [108757]

Mr. Straw: Statements under section 19 express the Minister's view as to whether the provisions of a Bill are compatible with the Convention. Each Department is responsible for seeking its own advice before making a section 19 statement. No money has been spent by the Home Office on counsel's fees for the immediate purpose of making such statements. But in forming a view as to a Bill's compatibility, the Minister will take into account all the legal advice available to the Department, including any advice from outside Counsel, where appropriate. Such advice may be obtained in relation to a specific issue or have been given, for example, in the context of relevant litigation.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of the paper setting out the basis for statements of compatibility of Public Bills with the Human Rights Act 1998. [108756]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Copies of the revised guidance to Departments have been placed in the Library.

Lawrence Inquiry

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the document relating to the Lawrence Inquiry, entitled, "Summary of Progress on Key Action Points". [108718]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Yes; but I shall shortly be publishing a much fuller account of the progress made in implementing the action plan published in March 1999 in response to the report of the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry.

Crown Court Appeals

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to my right hon. Friend the Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe) of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 599W, on his proposals to restrict the right to elect trial by jury, (a) if it is his intention to allow (i) either the prosecution or defence, or both, to petition the Crown court for an oral hearing of an appeal against the determination of mode of trial by magistrates, where an oral hearing is not requested by the judge and (ii) only circuit judges to hear appeals in the Crown court against the determination of mode of trial by magistrates, and (b) if the prosecution and defence will be able to adduce additional evidence, over and above that presented to the magistrates, during the course of an appeal to the Crown court against the determination of mode of trial by magistrates, and if they will be able to call witnesses and expert witnesses to give oral testimony. [109208]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The appeal would be a re-hearing by a circuit judge of the magistrates decision. It would be open to either of the parties to seek an oral hearing in the notice of appeal, and it would be for the discretion of the judge whether to allow an oral hearing to take place. It would also be for his discretion whether to allow the parties to adduce further evidence (including, in the unlikely event that it would be necessary, evidence from expert or other witnesses) in support of their representations.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 599W, what parts of criminal proceedings in the Crown Court may at present be heard in chambers by a single judge; what estimate he has made of the number of Crown Court sitting days that would be taken up by the hearing of appeals against the determination of mode of trial by magistrates, what items are included in the cost of (i) a written and (ii) an oral appeals; and on what basis he reached his estimate of the number of defendants who would appeal against magistrates' decisions on mode of trial. [109209]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 8 February 2000]: Business which may be heard in chambers by a single judge (pursuant to Crown Court Rule 27) includes applications for bail and for the extension of time-limits, and appeals against the decision of magistrates on those issues. In estimating the cost of appeals against mode of trial, the generous assumptions have been made that in 25 per cent. of cases the defendant might appeal, and that 17.5 per cent. of cases will require an oral hearing. In total, less than 650 judicial hours would be spent on these appeals per year. The costs have been based on court time, prosecution costs and legal aid standard fee rates. The reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe), on 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 599W, contained a typographical error: it is estimated the number of defendants who would appeal is 3,000, and not 3,900 as stated.

Organised Crime (Hungary)

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to encourage a further strengthening of co-operation with Hungary to combat organised crime. [109668]

Mr. Straw: I have today signed with the Minister of the Interior of Hungary, Dr. Sandor Pinter, a Memorandum of Understanding on Co-operation in Combating Illicit Drug Trafficking, Organised Crime, International Terrorism and Illegal Immigration. The agreement provides a framework within which law enforcement agencies and prosecuting authorities in our two countries can develop their close working relations in preventing, detecting and investigating all forms of serious and organised national and international crime. It is an important step forward in combating the common threat from criminal activity both within and beyond Europe.

Immigration

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has made to ensure that immigration officers exercising the new powers of search, entry and seizure in Part VII of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 will have regard to the codes of practice issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. [109669]

Mrs. Roche: The new powers of entry, search and seizure will come into force on 14 February 2000. In accordance with section 145 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999, a Direction has been made which will ensure that immigration officers exercising these powers, and their existing powers of arrest under Schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971, must have regard to the relevant provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Codes of Practice. A copy of the Direction is being placed in the Library. It is also being sent to members of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) User Panel and will be made available more widely via the IND website.

The use of the new powers will be restricted initially to a team of immigration officers involved in a joint pilot scheme with the Metropolitan police. This pilot scheme will enable the powers to be tested in the operational arena before more widespread use of the powers is considered.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on changes in the membership of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate Complaints Audit Committee. [109671]

Mrs. Roche: Ms Ros Gardner has been appointed as a new Member of the Complaints Audit Committee to replace Janet Whitaker, who resigned on being made a Life Peer. Ms Gardner runs a consultancy specialising in customer care and complaint handling. She was formerly Manager of the Customer Services Department of Marks and Spencer and was a member of the Cabinet Office's Citizens Charter Complaints Task Force.

Police Officer Recruitment

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the results of police forces' bids for funding from the Crime Fighting Fund to recruit police officers. [109672]

Mr. Straw: All 43 police forces in England and Wales bid for a share of the Crime Fighting Fund to recruit 5,000 police officers over and above the number they had otherwise planned to recruit over the next three years commencing April 2000.

The total number of officers which forces bid for came to 8,220. As all forces meet the gateway criteria set out in the Bidding Guidelines, I have, in allocating funding for the 5,000 officers between forces, taken into account the information which they provided in support of their bids.

The table shows the number of police recruits each force has bid for, the number they have been allocated in each year of the scheme and in total, and the funding each will receive in year one of the scheme.

The numbers of officers in years two and three are provisional at this stage. They are dependent on forces meeting the continuation criteria for benefiting from the Fund in those years.

Forces tell us that, without the additional resources from the fund, they are planning to recruit a total of 12,478 police officers (new recruits to the service) in the three years commencing in April 2000. Their estimates reflect the decisions they and their police authorities have made about the way in which they will use the resources available to them next year, and the assumptions they have made about funding and budget levels in the two following years which have yet to be settled. The money from the Crime Fighting Fund will be used to recruit 5,000 officers over and above the number forces plan to recruit over the three-year period.

Police Statistics

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the number of police officers in each police force area in England and Wales, and in total, for the latest available date; and, if he will list the total number of (a) police officers and (b) civilian support staff in England and Wales for each year from 1990. [109673]

Mr. Straw: The information is set out in the tables. At the end of September 1999, the total number of police officers in England and Wales was 125,464. The number of officers in the 43 forces (excluding officers seconded to the National Crime Squad, the National Criminal Intelligence Service and central service) was 123,050. At the end of September 1999 there were 53,254 civilian support staff in the police service.

I have also accepted the recommendations of a Working Group chaired by Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary and including representatives of the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Association of Police Authorities on the re-classification of police service personnel. The Working Group recommended that greater recognition should be given to the important contribution that civilian support staff make to operational policing. Civilian staff now account for 30 per cent. of total police service personnel.

From March 2000, police service staff will be categorised within three bands as (a) operational, (b) operational support, or (c) organisational support. The new information, to be collected annually by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, will provide a more accurate reflection of the deployment of all police service personnel.

We shall continue to publish information on police officer numbers in the usual way.

Nuclear Bunker (Soar)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will order the sale of the former nuclear bunker at Soar, Devon; and if he will make a statement on outstanding issues in relation to the National Trust. [108994]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The outstanding issues in relation to the National Trust are on the point of being resolved. The first stage in the process of offering this property for sale will begin on 24 February, with the first of a number of open days, when prospective purchasers will have an opportunity to view the property prior to submitting sealed bids.

Crime (Banbury and Abingdon)

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide statistics on incidents of crime in Banbury and Abingdon (a) in the 12 month period before and (b) after the installation of closed circuit television surveillance. [109123]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not available centrally. The British Crime Survey and other centrally collated crime statistics are not sufficiently detailed to provide the comparative before and after information requested.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

European Charter on Human Rights

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Council, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for South Ribble (Mr. Borrow), of 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 532W, on the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights, what parliamentary procedures preceded the appointment of my hon. Friend the Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) as the delegate of the House to the Charter drafting body; and what documents set out his instructions as a delegate. [108736]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 7 February 2000, Official Report, column 24W.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Fees

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which fees his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies collect; how much has been raised and will be raised from each of these fees from 1989–90 to 2004–05; and which of these fees count as negative expenditure. [107977]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the previous question on 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 134W.

Helsinki Council

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of the Secretary of State for Defence of 20 January 2000, Official Report, columns 536–37W, on the three new military committees to be established in the European Council, what Parliamentary proceedings will be initiated by a Minister of the Crown prior to negotiations and decision-making concerning their respective terms of reference. [108735]

Mr. Vaz: Draft Council Decisions establishing the three interim structures (the Interim Political and Security Committee, the Interim Body of Military Representatives, the secondment of Military Experts to the General Secretariat of the Council) are being submitted for Parliamentary Scrutiny. Future Decisions and other instruments concerning these bodies will be similarly submitted for Parliamentary Scrutiny, in line with the Government's 1998 White Paper on the Parliamentary Scrutiny of EU business.

Diplomatic Staff

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 622W, on diplomatic staff what instructions he has given UK diplomatic staff not to meet particular UK nationals. [108958]

Mr. Hain: No instructions have been issued to members of the Diplomatic Service not to meet particular UK nationals.

Gibraltar

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the appointment of the next Governor of Gibraltar and the timing of the appointment. [109183]

Mr. Vaz: The present Governor, Sir Richard Luce, is due to leave Gibraltar towards the end of March. An announcement on his successor will be made in the near future.

Sharia Law

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Sharia law continues to be imposed in parts of (a) Chechnya and (b) Dagestan; and what representations he has made concerning this. [109092]

Mr. Vaz: Sharia law, as imposed in parts of Chechnya and Dagestan, has included, among other punishments, public executions. These are in contravention of the European Convention on Human Rights and the human rights standards of the OSCE. The Government have made repeated representations to the Russian Government to urge them to seek a political solution to the situation in Chechnya, with the aim of restoring normal European standards throughout the territory of the Russian Federation. We have urged Russia to use the good offices of the OSCE and the Council of Europe in this task.

Burma

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of ethnic cleansing by the SPDC of minority groups in areas of Burma closed to monitors for security reasons. [109095]

Mr. Battle: We continue to receive disturbing reports of human rights violations against ethnic minorities from many parts of Burma. These violations include arbitrary killings, rape, torture, mass arrests, forced labour and forced relocations. We take every opportunity to condemn these violations: for example, the UK co-sponsored the UN General Assembly resolution adopted last November which contains strong condemnation of the appalling catalogue of human rights violations in Burma, including against ethnic minorities. We continue to make regular representations to the regime on this issue.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he will take to promote the long-term safety of the (a) Karen, (b) Chin, (c) Kavenni and (d) other minority tribes in their homelands in Burma. [109096]

Mr. Battle: We take every opportunity to raise with the Burmese authorities our concerns about the violations of human rights of ethnic minorities, including the Karen people. We support the work of the UN agencies, such as the UN High Commissioner for Refugees' work on Burma's Western border and UN Development Programme's projects in ethnic minority areas all over Burma. We also support the international non-governmental organisations working under difficult conditions in many of the ethnic minority areas. In Thailand, we provide humanitarian assistance through the Burma Border Consortium (£270,000 this calendar year). We continue to encourage political dialogue between the Burmese regime and democratic leaders, including ethnic minorities.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the SPDC calling for it to open up all areas of Burma to human rights monitors and humanitarian aid workers. [109097]

Mr. Battle: The SPDC have persistently refused any visit to Burma by Judge Lallah, the present UN Special Rapporteur on Human Rights. We have co-sponsored resolutions both at the UN Commission on Human Rights and at the UN General Assembly expressing concern at this lack of co-operation. Several UN agencies and international non-governmental organisations, such as the International Committee of the Red Cross, are in Burma doing excellent work, but some parts of Burma are not accessible to them, largely because of civil unrest due to the regime's continued oppression of ethnic minorities. We deplore this oppression and call on the regime to enter into a dialogue with democratic groups, including ethnic minorities, to resolve Burma's political impasse.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to ensure that the minority tribes in Burma are not subjected to forced labour. [109098]

Mr. Battle: Forced labour is one of the key areas of concern in Burma. We condemn it wherever it occurs. A report by the International Labour Organisation in 1998 highlighted the use of forced labour in Burma and made three recommendations for the regime to implement: to stop forced labour; to penalise those who exact it; and to amend Burmese legislation. So far, these recommendations have not been adopted. Until they are, we will continue to maintain pressure in the ILO, and will raise this subject again at the March Governing Body.

Indonesia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures the Government have taken (a) alone and (b) in collaboration with the United Nations, to ensure that instability within the borders of Indonesia does not spread throughout the region; and if he will make a statement. [109110]

Mr. Battle: We believe that President Wahid's democratic government is committed to finding a fair and lasting solution to the regional troubles in Indonesia. We and the international community stand ready to offer practical help to President Wahid and shall continue to support him in his efforts to create a democratic and united Indonesia, which will be a force for stability in South East Asia.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances he has received from the newly elected President of Indonesia that his Government will stop the persecution of Christians within its borders; and if he will make a statement. [109111]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I all discussed the situation in Maluku with President Wahid when he as in London last week. President Wahid reaffirmed his commitment to secure lasting peace between the conflicting Muslim and Christian communities in the province.

Moldova

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent support the Government have given to Moldova; and if he will make a statement. [109038]

Mr. Vaz: We fully support the work of the OSCE Mission to Moldova in their efforts to reach a political settlement in the Moldova/Transdniestria conflict. We will continue to press for complete withdrawal of Russian forces from Moldovan territory by the end of 2002, as agreed at the OSCE Istanbul Summit in November 1999. We have provided funding for several projects in support of reaching a settlement including, for example, part-funding a constitutional workshop, attended by members of the Moldovan and Transdniestrian experts groups, in December 1999; and funding a seminar "Living with Conflict—the Role of Local Authorities" in September 1999. We are also funding training of six Moldovan journalists at the BBC, to enhance their reporting skills and to promote balanced media coverage.

The Department for International Development's programme of assistance to Moldova stands at £1 million for 1999–2000. The main focus of the programme is the rural livelihoods sector, to which DFID have recently extended work. To complement this, DFID have also recently started work to facilitate further the effective development of savings and credit associations.

Guatemala

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to persuade the Government of Guatemala (a) to prosecute the murderers of street youths, with particular reference to murders in which the police are believed to have been involved, and (b) to give better general care and protection to Guatemala's street children. [109039]

Mr. Battle: We regularly raise human rights concerns generally, and those of street children specifically, with the Government of Guatemala. For example, we have lobbied the Guatemalan Government to enact its Child Code legislation, which would offer greater legal protection to children.

Our Embassy in Guatemala has made a number of inquiries about the state of investigations into the murders or abuse of street children. NGOs working in this area suggest that abuse of street children by state agencies has decreased in the past few years. Street children are more frequently incidental victims of the prevalent violent street crime in Guatemala. There is also an increasing incidence of serious violence between the street children themselves, mostly as a result of an increase in drug trafficking and addiction by and among these children.

The European Union is providing 200 million euros in 1997–2000 towards projects supporting the Peace Programme in Guatemala. The UK's contribution amounts to about £24 million. About a third of the EU funding is dedicated to establishing a National Civil Police Force and strengthening the administration of justice. We expect one consequence of the reform of the police and judiciary to be better treatment of street children. We also indirectly promote human rights and challenge impunity through our support for the UN Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA).

In addition to working with the Guatemalan Government to protect and care for street children, we also provide support directly. In 1999 we gave £13,500 to an NGO, Toybox (known locally as El Castillo), to finance building a hostel for rehabilitating street children outside Guatemala City. In 1998 we gave £75,000 to Toybox for a similar project.

We shall continue to convey to the Guatemalan authorities our concern for the well-being of street children in Guatemala.

Departmental Staff

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what child care provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by (i) his departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department; what was the cost to parents of this child care; and how many parents used the facilities. [109189]

Mr. Hain: The Department's site at Hanslope Park has an on-site nursery and creche facility used by 22 parents in 1998–99. The Department also had access to 16 places at a central London nursery, all of which are subsidised. It participated in the Whitehall holiday playscheme to a total of 240 days. The cost to parents of child care provision varied according to the site, the age of the child and the particular scheme. Allowances for UK-based staff overseas include provision of 390 hours of child care a year for staff with children accompanying them. The value of the provision varies according to the Post. Representational allowances cover the cost of child care overseas incurred as a result of official representational duties. The Wilton Park Executive Agency has no child care facilities.

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provisions are made available to (i) departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department, for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [109190]

Mr. Hain: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly with the details she has requested

British Council

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to increase his Department's contribution to the British Council budget. [109230]

Mr. Hain: In the current CSR period, starting in 1999–2000, this Government have already provided the British Council with an uplift of some 2 per cent. in real terms over 1998–99, in line with the settlement for the FCO as a whole. We shall seek to ensure that the Council continues to share whatever gain we obtain as a result of the current spending round, covering 2001–02 to 2003–04.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the responses of teachers to the consultation on those aspects of the Green Paper, "Teachers: meeting the challenge", dealing with performance-related pay; and if he will make a statement. [107262]

Ms Estelle Morris: The consultation on the Teacher's Green Paper ran from December 1998 until March 1999. The results of the consultation exercise on the Green Paper were published on 8 July 1999. A leaflet, "Teachers: taking forward the challenge of change", was delivered to all schools, summarising the outcomes and explaining how the proposal would be taken forward. Copies of more detailed analysis of the consultation responses were placed in the Libraries of the Houses of Parliament.

Although the formal consultation period on the Green Paper has closed, discussions have been on-going with key stakeholders. The proposals to reform teachers' pay were outlined in further detail in the written evidence which the DFEE submitted to the School Teachers' Review Body (STRB) last autumn. The STRB's report, published 1 February 2000, backed the Government's proposals. The Secretary of State will consult on its recommendations and announce arrangements for the new pay structure during spring 2000, for introduction in September 2000.

Sex and Relationships Education

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department has issued to schools and education authorities about the use of the video, "Beyond a Phase". [108216]

Jacqui Smith: The Department is in the process of consulting on the shape and content of revised sex and relationships education guidance. This will make it clear that it is for the governing body, in consultation with parents, to develop a policy on sex and relationships education, and to determine whether material used in schools is appropriate to the age of the pupils and in accordance with the PSHE framework, and the law which states that materials produced by health authorities often have a specific purpose of treating or preventing the spread of disease and schools need specifically to address the appropriateness of such material within a school context, again consulting with parents on its use.

School Sports

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what research his Department has undertaken into the number of hours per week spent on physical education in schools since 1 May 1997; [108294]

(2) what assessment he has made of the amount of competitive sport played in schools; and if he will make a statement; [108295]

(3) what figures he requires from local education authorities on the amount of sport and PE taking place in schools. [108296]

Jacqui Smith: OFSTED collects information about the percentage of taught time for each subject when inspecting schools. The number of school hours spent on physical education varies from school to school. Evidence from OFSTED inspections during 1998 of the average number of hours per week primary and secondary schools currently spend teaching National Curriculum PE is given below.

	Average hours of PE per week (approximately)
Key Stage 1 (ages 5–7)	1 hour 20 minutes
Key Stage 2 (ages 7–11)	1 hour 35 minutes
Key Stage 3 (ages 11–14)	2 hours
Key Stage 4 (ages 14–16)	1 hour 15 minutes

We have set an aspiration that all schools should provide two hours of curricular or extra curricular activities a week, and my officials are meeting regularly with DCMS and representatives of PE and sports organisations to discuss ways of promoting this aspiration in schools.

External Examiners

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance is given to (a) universities and (b) university departments on choosing external examiners. [109025]

Mr. Wicks: The Quality Assurance Agency published a section of its Code of Practice that deals with External Examining in January 2000. This contains advice on the appointment of external examiners.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what instructions his Department gives to universities in respect of payment of fees to external examiners. [109026]

Mr. Wicks: Payment of fees to external examiners is a matter for individual institutions.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what issues are included in the reviews undertaken by the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education relating to external examiners. [109024]

Mr. Wicks: The Quality Assurance Agency considers, in relation to assessment and quality management, the use made by an institution of its external examiners and of their reports. It also considers, in relation to the way an institution discharges its responsibilities for the academic standards of all its awards, the selection, appointment and briefing procedures used and the approaches adopted to the follow-up of external examiners' comments.

Departmental Responsibility

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date his Department assumed responsibility for educating children with learning disabilities from the Department of Health and Social Security. [109172]

Jacqui Smith: The Education (Handicapped Children) Act 1970 removed the power of health authorities to provide training for children with learning disabilities and transferred responsibility for the education of these children to Local Education Authorities.

The Government's education policy includes a clear strategy for children with special educational needs. A cornerstone of that strategy is to develop and promote the inclusion of children with special educational needs in mainstream schools, where parents want this and appropriate support is available.

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when his Department assumed responsibility for pensions of nurses and ancillary staff working in education establishments who had previously been the responsibility of the Department of Health and Social Security. [109173]

Mr. Wicks: Academic staff in the former Colleges of Health, which have transferred to the higher education sector, have been eligible for membership of the Teachers' Pension Scheme since 1992.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Montserrat

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the Government of Montserrat regarding conditions on the Island of Montserrat and the need for some residents to relocate to the United Kingdom. [108758]

Clare Short: The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State last met with the Montserrat Chief Minister during the October 1999 Consultative Council meetings in London. Senior officials visit the island regularly.

In October 1997, my Department approved £1.6 million for the Assisted Passage Scheme, which met the cost of flights and onward travel costs of those people who chose to relocate to the UK. DFID also finances an Evacuee Return Air Fare Scheme for those wishing to return to Montserrat.

Globalisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what procedures she is establishing to consult (a) NGOs and (b) other interested parties before she publishes her proposed White Paper on globalisation. [108979]

Clare Short: We will invite widespread consultations as part of the preparation of the White Paper. This will include establishing a White Paper website on which we will place a brief outline of the paper, and inviting submissions from the public, non-governmental organisations and other interested parties. The consultation process will in particular include developing countries, and international organisations.

Aid Misappropriation

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the percentage of United Kingdom Government aid and development funding which is misappropriated by the recipient country. [109103]

Clare Short: No instances have been identified where UK Development assistance has been misappropriated by the recipient country.

PRIME MINISTER

Arms Exports (Zimbabwe)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Prime Minister what is the Government's policy on the export of spare parts for British Hawk Jets to Zimbabwe. [107090]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 27 January 2000]: Following an interdepartmental review, the Government's policy on export licences for countries intervening in the conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) has been tightened.

We will not grant export licences for new military or dual-use equipment where there is a clear risk that it would be used in the DRC.

given an assurance that if it continues for a long time, there will be a continuing dialogue between the Governments, and structures to enable the co-operative working relationship that has been established to be maintained. On that basis, I beg to ask leave to withdraw the amendment.

Amendment, by leave, withdrawn.

Clause 1

Question proposed, That the clause stand part of the Bill.

Mr. Michael Howard (Folkestone and Hythe): I begin my contribution by returning to a matter that was raised earlier. I deplore the fact that we have had to consider the Bill without having available to us the de Chastelain report. The Secretary of State has come to Parliament to ask us to approve this legislation on an emergency basis. The only reason that he has done so is the de Chastelain report. Astonishingly, when one of my hon. Friends made that point earlier, the Secretary of State rebuked him and told him that he ought to be talking about something more significant than the de Chastelain report. In this context there could hardly be anything more significant than the report.

We in the House are not to be shown the report. That is an outrage. The Government proclaim themselves devoted to open government. One could hardly have a more eloquent example of their failure in that respect and of their arrogant contempt for Parliament than their failure to allow us to see the report.

8.15 pm

Having looked at "Erskine May", I find that the attitude of the Secretary of State and the Government appears to be clearly in breach of the statement on page 387, which says:

"A Minister of the Crown may not read or quote from a despatch or other State paper not before the House, unless he is prepared to lay it upon the Table."

I ask you, Mr. Lord, for a considered ruling on whether the Secretary of State has complied with his obligations.

The Second Deputy Chairman: As far as I am aware, the Secretary of State has neither read nor quoted directly from the report in question, but I understand that the right hon. and learned Gentleman's point is very important and I will undertake to ensure that it is given further consideration.

Mr. Howard: I am most grateful to you, Mr. Lord. I asked for a considered ruling, rather than an immediate one, because you and Madam Speaker will have carefully to read Hansard from today and last Thursday to find out to what extent the Secretary of State quoted from the report. My impression is that a careful reading of what he said today and on Thursday will disclose that he quoted from the report.

The Secretary of State did not improve matters with the explanation that he gave when we raised the matter earlier today. He appeared to rely on the fact that the report was made to the Irish Government as well as to the UK Government as a reason for not disclosing it. The clear implication was that pressure from the Irish Government was the reason why the report was not to be made available to the House. I do not know whether the Secretary of State had thought through that justification and its implications, but it seems to me that it has most unfortunate consequences.

There are many areas in which it would be desirable for the UK Government to co-operate closely with the Government of the Irish Republic, and such co-operation would have the enthusiastic support of the House, but if the consequence of that co-operation is that the Irish Government will be able to exercise a veto on the disclosure of information to the House, that will inevitably give hon. Members pause before they support such co-operation in future.

I have no doubt that, when the House was originally told that the de Chastelain report would be submitted jointly to the Irish Government and the UK Government, no one thought that it was a matter of concern. That would have been regarded as an entirely appropriate step, and so far as I am aware, no one in the House registered an objection to that course. Had we known, however, that it meant that the Irish Government would have a veto on whether or not the content of the report could be disclosed to the House, even when the House is being asked to approve emergency legislation on the basis of the report, the attitude of many hon. Members would have been different. That would have been unfortunate.

The explanation that was, in the end, dragged out of the Secretary of State earlier today has unfortunate, far-reaching implications. I hope that he will reflect on those implications when he considers the course that he has taken and the way in which he has kept from the House the contents of that report.

Mr. Hunter: I am grateful to my right hon. and learned Friend. His argument is strengthened if he shares my understanding that the decommissioning commission was established by legislation from this place and is accountable to this place. There was no corresponding legislation in the Parliament of the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Howard: My hon. Friend makes a valuable point, which reinforces mine. It is a serious argument, on which I hope the Secretary of State will reflect.

I proceed to a more general point on clause 1 stand part. Clause 1 sets out the effects of the suspension of devolution, if and when the Bill comes into force. I support the Bill and share the regret which has been widely expressed that it has become necessary.

When we debated affairs in the Province in July, I posed two questions. If the IRA and other terrorist organisations have indeed given up violence for good—the basic assumption on which the entire peace process rests—why should they need to keep their guns and their bombs? If at some point they will be prepared to give up their guns and their bombs, why not now? I do not believe that there is any answer to those questions, which is why I find it difficult to be optimistic about the process, much though I should like it to succeed.

I shall refer to one aspect of that process, which the Bill directly calls into question. It was touched on earlier, during Second Reading—the release of terrorist prisoners. Many of us found that the most difficult and painful provision in the Belfast agreement. It raises and, indeed, breaches principles that are very dear to us. The provision impinges directly on my constituents, who would have been victims of the seaside bombing plot in 1984—a plot prevented only by effective action by the police. The release of those responsible for that plot and for terrible deeds of violence which they did commit was a bitter pill to swallow.

We were, however reluctantly, prepared to go along with the provision. In my case at least, the decisive argument was that the prisoners would be the most powerful promoters of the peace. They, we were told, would be the most persuasive advocates within their movements for the abandonment of violence, for the end of terrorism and—an essential part of the process and the agreement—for giving up the guns and the bombs with which such enormous suffering had been inflicted. We were in part persuaded to take that step because the legislation that put the agreement into effect identified with some precision the factors that the Secretary of State must take into account in deciding whether prisoners should be released. Under the existing legislation, one of those factors is the extent to which the organisation to which the prisoners belong is prepared to co-operate in decommissioning.

It is, alas, now clear that our expectations have not been fulfilled, and that calls into question in the most direct way the continuing release of prisoners under the existing legislation.

Dr. Godman: I am grateful to the right hon. and learned Gentleman for showing his characteristic courtesy to me. Can he confirm that more than 200 prisoners were released under 1995 legislation when he was a member of that Administration?

Mr. Howard: The prisoners were released, but the circumstances were entirely different. What happened on that occasion was not some arbitrary shortening of the sentence, as is provided for under the current legislation. I take it that the hon. Gentleman is referring to what happened in Northern Ireland. Is that right?

Dr. Godman indicated assent.

Mr. Howard: What happened then was that the provisions that existed at that time in Northern Ireland were brought into line with the provisions that existed in England and Wales. There had been a difference between the provisions for remission in Northern Ireland and those that existed in England and Wales, and on that occasion they were made consistent with each other. That was a set of circumstances far removed from those that exist under the current legislation.

Rev. Martin Smyth: I appreciate the right hon. and learned Gentleman giving way. There are those who will find his argument hard to follow, but is it not summed up by what happened in the courts last week, when two people were convicted of murdering a Roman Catholic and a Protestant, and they showed contempt for the judgment, because they know that they will walk out in July?

Mr. Howard: Yes, the hon. Gentleman is right. I am sorry to hear that he thinks that my argument will be hard to follow. I thought that the argument that I was putting was simple, clear and easy to follow, but we must all be disabused of our pretensions. However, I agree that the example that he cited illustrates my point.

If, as we were told, the prisoners are the most powerful promoters of the peace, an announcement by the Secretary of State under the existing legislation that the release of those who remain in custody will cease until progress is made on decommissioning would put clear pressure on them to do what we were told they would do—to promote the peace. If they cannot or choose not to influence the process, the original justification for their release will not exist.

Either way, prisoner releases should not continue, and I hope that we will have a clear statement from the Minister this evening to that effect.

Dr. Godman: I shall be brief. My contribution to the clause stand part debate centres on my concern for those who are employed in any of the institutions that may face suspension. When my hon. Friend the Minister responds to the debate, can he confirm that the interests of those employees—I have no idea how many people there are in the employment of the Assembly or the Executive, for example—will be protected in accordance with their terms and conditions of employment?

Mr. Hunter: As we know, clause 1 lies at the heart of the Bill and provides for the suspension of devolved government in Northern Ireland. My approach to the Bill is generally supportive, but I have one point of genuine concern, which I hope the Minister can address when he replies.

The House spent tens of hours scrutinising and deliberating on the Northern Ireland Act 1998, and a not inappreciable amount of time considering what became section 30. I do not understand why the Government are introducing the Bill at all. Section 30 of the 1998 Act allows for the exclusion from ministerial office of members of a political party that "is not committed to non-violence and exclusively peaceful and democratic means".

Many hon. Members opposite understandably said that they wanted the structures and institutions of devolved Government to continue. The 1998 Act provides for that. I do not understand why the Government are introducing the Bill when they can exclude under existing legislation those who are deemed not to be committed to non-violence and exclusively peaceful and democratic methods.

8.30 pm

Mr. Öpik: I reiterate the point that I made in the previous short debate on the amendments. Perhaps it was a bit naughty of me to raise the matter then, because I should have waited until the stand part debate.

Clause 1(4) states:

"No person is to continue to hold office or be elected, nominated or appointed as a Minister or junior Minister, or as a chairman or deputy chairman of a statutory committee."

The provision should read, "statutory or standing committee". Will the Minister clarify whether, technically, the Chairs for the Standing Committees on Standards and Privileges, on Procedure, on Audit, on Public Accounts and the Committee of the Centre can continue to carry out their functions when those Committee cannot meet? If the Bill is used, the Minister must be absolutely clear about whether it affects Standing Committees. If it does not, does he intend to include a provision to correct that as the Bill proceeds?

Mr. Eddie McGrady (South Down): On Second Reading, my hon. Friend the Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) expressed our party's opposition to the Bill and to dismantling a delicate edifice of political institutions, which will be extremely difficult to restore.

I apologise to earlier speakers for my absence, but I have just left what, sadly, may be the last meeting of the Northern Ireland Assembly. I want to stress to the House, and especially to the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter), that this morning's Order Paper in the Assembly included a motion to exclude Sinn Fein and that it did not receive the necessary number of votes—which is only 30 out of 108—to support it. The Assembly is a cross-party body, and Unionist parties, extreme and moderate, and nationalist parties, extreme and moderate, do not support the exclusion of Sinn Fein at the moment.

That is a lesson to the House about how carefully we handle our delicate political institutions. That is why my party opposes the whole concept of the Bill, the contents of which are mainly embodied in clause 1. We cannot enforce decommissioning by such a measure, which is a slap on the wrists of Northern Ireland politicians. It penalises elected Members of the Northern Ireland Assembly, the vast majority of whom are not culpable through failing to decommission. It is therefore important to put on record that the Assembly, no later than a few hours ago, did not believe it proper to exclude representatives of the IRA from their number. In that case, why should this House do it?

Mr. Peter Robinson: Before we consider clause 1 stand part, I express our sympathy to the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady). All of us have known him for a long time, and we respect his courage in being here today following the recent tragic murder of his niece. I am sure that he has the sympathy of all hon. Members.

I suppose that I am required to declare an interest when considering clause 1. Several hon. Members who have spoken also have an interest. I am a Member of the Northern Ireland Assembly, and a Minister with responsibility for a Department in that Government. I want to speak against what might be perceived as my interest. I have been a convinced devolutionist for a long time. For the past 21 years in the House, I have frequently argued, from both sides of the House, for devolution in Northern Ireland and for decentralisation of powers. I believe without qualification that no matter how well intentioned Ministers who went from Great Britain to Northern Ireland may have been, in the time that they were there they could not have had the same feel for the needs of people in Northern Ireland. Given their number, it was asking a lot of each Minister, or of any human being, to take charge of what would be four Departments under the present system.

I am not against devolution in principle—I support it—but when I read the Belfast agreement I realised that the price that the people of Northern Ireland were being asked to pay for it was too high. The four principal features of the agreement were the release of terrorist prisoners before their due dates, the destruction of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the setting up of apparatus that leaned towards a united Ireland—including unaccountable all-Ireland bodies with executive powers—and placing in government those who were still unrepentant and have clear terrorist connections and relationships. To me, that corrupted the democratic process. One might have expected, in a fair and reasonable world, that somebody holding those views might not have been thought unreasonable, but holding them when the Government hold a contrary view can become very unreasonable.

We have been accused of many things over the past months and years, but we made it clear at the beginning that corrupting the democratic process in such a way had sown the seeds of the agreement's destruction. Day by day, it becomes more apparent that having terrorists in a democratic Government is a contradiction in terms. Sooner or later, the leaders of political parties had to recognise that conflict. The right hon. Member for Upper Bann (Mr. Trimble) has attempted over and over and over again to put off the evil day, hoping beyond hope that Sinn Fein-IRA would perhaps be prepared to decommission. There were many to advise him that everything they knew about that organisation's behaviour was such that that would not happen. He has learned the hard way in his party and in his constituency, where he can barely walk the streets. That is the reality of life in Northern Ireland.

If the price of devolution was too high, the Government's suspension of the institutions is hardly the appropriate response, which is the proper exclusion of those who are not committed to "exclusively peaceful and democratic means".

The hon. Member for South Down responded in some measure to my hon. Friend the Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter). The answer is yes: section 30 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 contains a power allowing the exclusion of political parties if, for one reason or another, they do not measure up to the standards laid down in the Act, but it can be triggered only by a cross-community vote. Indeed, such a proposal can be put before the Assembly only if 30 people are prepared to stand in their places or sign a motion support it. In the Assembly this morning, 29 people were prepared to support that motion, but in the absence of the 30th it was not even debated. Even if it had been, it is abundantly clear from the comments of members of the Social Democratic and Labour party that it would not have received the cross-community support necessary to exclude Sinn Fein-IRA. In those circumstances, it was a weapon that could not be used.

When the 1998 Act was going through Parliament, many of us on this side of the House argued that it was an ineffective weapon that would not be appropriate when the circumstances required it to be so. It would be far better and more honest if the Government said, "If people are not prepared to play by the rules of democracy, out they go until they are prepared to pay the membership fees of this club." Instead, their answer is to suspend everything and democrats will be punished alongside the terrorists. Indeed, it must be said that the central feature of the failure of the agreement to work has been the issue of decommissioning.

The hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) referred to the silence of the guns. I suspect that if I had pranced across the Floor, put a Smith and Wesson to his ear and asked him to sit down, he would not have been saying to himself "At least the gun is silent. I needn't worry too much about it." I think he would have sat down, and he would have done it very quickly, because the reality is that if one puts a gun to somebody's head it does not matter whether it is silent. It is always silent before it goes off.

The threat is there, and it is that threat which Sinn Fein-IRA rely on to give them their negotiating strength. It is that threat which they rely on to give them a status well beyond that of political parties in Northern Ireland which have greater electoral strength than they have. It is that strength which ultimately Sinn Fein-IRA recognise is their ace card in any negotiations about the future of Northern Ireland.

Many people talk about Sinn Fein and the IRA being inextricably linked. So they are, but it does not quite indicate the nature of their relationship. Sinn Fein is subservient in that relationship; it does what the IRA tells it to do. The IRA does not follow the leadership or instruction of Sinn Fein, which is the junior partner in that relationship.

Mr. Robathan: The hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) said something that I do not think I have heard said before in the House. He referred to the representatives of Sinn Fein in the Assembly in Northern Ireland as the representatives of the IRA, which we all know is so, but I do not think I have heard it said before.

Mr. Robinson: I often look across the Assembly Chamber at the ranks of Sinn Fein. I see among its membership members of the army council of the IRA—present-day members of the army council of the IRA. With the exception of two Members, every one of them has served in the ranks of the IRA. Most of them have gone through the educational process of the prison system. It is very clear that all of them are supporters of the IRA. All of them come under the whip of the IRA, and when it is cracked they jump. No one should get away with the idea that Sinn Fein can lead the IRA by the nose and require it to do one thing or the other. As my friend the hon. and learned Member for North Down (Mr. McCartney) indicated, the fact that four of the seven members of the IRA army council are also leading Sinn Fein members indicates a close relationship and the fact that there is no division between the views of Sinn Fein and the IRA.

Rev. Martin Smyth: Is not that a significant difference from what happened in the past, when at Sinn Fein conferences a messenger came from the army council? There no longer needs to be a messenger from the army council, because it is at the head of the Sinn Fein movement.

Mr. Robinson: Yes, and I do not need to go into the names. We all know the leading members of Sinn Fein who are members of the IRA army council.

The injustice of the clause is that it does not contain the freezing of certain other elements of the Belfast agreement. The Government's argument is that they have suspended a number of the operations under the clause because they believe that institutions should be frozen because they cannot proceed as a result of the IRA's failure to decommission.

The reality is that if there was ever a linkage in the agreement, the clearest was between prison release and the decommissioning of illegal weaponry. Both were intended to be within a two-year time scale. Neither had an absolute starting date set down, but it was very clear that as soon as the Government proceeded helter-skelter to release prisoners it took the pressure off the IRA to meet its bargain on decommissioning. If the Government simply continue releasing prisoners, it is a win-win situation for the IRA. It will be doing away with Stormont and at the same time continuing to get its prisoners out of jail. It can be disobedient, but be rewarded with the freeing of its prisoners.

8.45 pm

Was it a betrayal to which the Secretary of State referred last week? What kind of situation is this, in which those whom the Government believe to be responsible for a betrayal will be rewarded with the release of prisoners, while the democrats will be punished with the removal of institutions? It strikes me as a topsy-turvy, Alice in Wonderland situation. Moreover, the Government have not indicated so far that they are prepared to suspend any action that they may take to implement the Patten recommendations for the destruction of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. That is another plus for the IRA—another reward for not doing what the community would have it do and decommission its weapons.

The Secretary of State should think long and hard about this. Under the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998, he has powers to stop the release of prisoners; he should exercise those powers.

Mr. William Ross: Does the hon. Gentleman recall what was said on Thursday during questions to the Secretary of State on his statement? The right hon. Gentleman said:

> "We will not be suspending the Good Friday agreement; therefore, we are not going to put into reverse all those gains and all those changes that have flowed from its implementation."—[Official Report, 3 February 2000; Vol. 343, c. 1325.]

In other words, the Secretary of State was telling the IRA, at the very moment that he was announcing the possibility of suspension, that he would continue to reward it.

Mr. Robinson: The hon. Gentleman has drawn attention to an unfortunate message which, no doubt, was picked up by the Provisional IRA.

As the Secretary of State will see, the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act expressly states that he has the power to stop the release of prisoners if there is not a clear continuation of the commitment of an organisation to exclusively peaceful and democratic means. The Act specifies four areas for the Secretary of State to take into account when judging whether that continuation is taking place, one of which relates to decommissioning. I wonder whether one of the reasons for our not having the report from the decommissioning body is that if the report says that the Provisional IRA has not been complying with the conditions, the 1998 Act requires the Secretary of State to stop any release of terrorist prisoners. It will be interesting to see what happens when the information eventually surfaces—and the Secretary of State will discover that, in Northern Ireland, these things do eventually surface, in one way or another.

I believe that the Secretary of State should have taken the alternative course of excluding those who were not committed to exclusively peaceful and democratic means. I believe that he should also have suspended the implementation of the Patten recommendations and acted differently in regard to prison releases. However, given the limited nature of the Bill, I have no choice but to go for the second-best option that the Government are offering: the suspension of the institutions.

Mr. George Howarth: Along with, I am sure, the rest of the Committee, I join the hon. Member for Belfast, East (Mr. Robinson) in expressing our condolences to the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady). I have already expressed my condolences privately, but I think it would benefit the hon. Gentleman's family to know that we have expressed ours across the board.

Let me say to the hon. Member for Belfast, East that I suppose my right hon. Friend the Minister of State and I should declare an interest: if the suspension goes ahead, one or other of us will be doing his job next week, although we do not expect to receive any extra pay.

My hon. Friend the Member for Greenock and Inverclyde (Dr. Godman) talked about the people who are employed in the institutions. As the Secretary of State and I have said repeatedly, our hope is that the institutions will not need to be suspended, but if they are, as my hon. Friend rightly points out, many of the detailed arrangements will need careful consideration. I assure the Committee that proper regard will be given to the circumstances of people who are employed in any of the bodies. Obviously, we are not at the point where we can give precise details of that, but if suspension goes ahead we will quickly have to turn our attention to my hon. Friend's point.

In an exchange with the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard), the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter) raised a question about the status—in terms of agreements between ourselves and the Irish Government—of the decommissioning commission. As he will be aware, the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning was established by an international agreement between the British and Irish Governments. That agreement was followed by parallel legislation in both jurisdictions, so it is from that that the relationship in respect of the commission derives. Therefore, when the Secretary of State refers to the report being the joint property of both Governments, it is because of the parallel legislation in both jurisdictions which led to the establishment of the commission.

The hon. Member for Montgomeryshire (Mr. Öpik) raised a point on which I think I can give some reassurance. Subsection (3) makes it clear that no Committee of the Assembly can meet or conduct any business during a suspension. That includes statutory and all other Committees. All Committees will cease to function for the duration of suspension.

Subsection (4) deals with those individuals who hold statutory office under the Northern Ireland Act 1998, just as clause 3 deals with their reappointment in line with the provisions in that Act. The Bill does not address the various non-statutory appointments, such as chairmen of Standing Committees. Nevertheless, they too will cease to exercise any of their functions during a suspension. Their committee cannot meet or conduct any business. The Secretary of State, who, under the Bill, takes responsibility for salaries and allowances, will ensure that they are treated on a par with the chairmen of statutory committees.

The right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe took issue with the Secretary of State's explanation of why he did not feel it was appropriate at this time to publish the General de Chastelain commission's report of a week ago Monday. He went on to discuss precisely what terms the Secretary of State might have used this afternoon. In his observations on the content of General de Chastelain's report, the Secretary of State made it clear that he was summarising what was said.

As regards publication, the right hon. and learned Gentleman has held high office; he was Home Secretary. He knows that, on some occasions, certain issues are highly sensitive and delicately balanced in terms of the relationships between different bodies—in this case, the relationships between ourselves and the Irish Government. I hope that he will accept that it is because of the delicacy of the situation that, at this time, the Secretary of State does not think it appropriate to publish that report. I hope that he will also accept that the Secretary of State has made it clear that, if and when a further report is published, he will undertake to ensure that both are published at the same time.

Mr. Howard: The form of words that the Minister has just used—it was not an explanation; it was simply a form of words—is no more convincing than the very similar form of words used earlier today by the Secretary of State. Will the Minister not recognise that we are here today because of the de Chastelain report? How in those circumstances can he justify not making that report available to the House? When General de Chastelain came forth with a report that contained some relatively good news, the Government were quick to publish it. Surely the Minister should recognise that the Government should be equally quick to publish a report that, most regrettably, contains bad news.

Mr. Howarth: Forgive me, but I think that the right hon. and learned Gentleman is engaging in a little bit of sophistry—he knows the precise situation. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made no secret of the fact that we are considering the Bill today because the progress on decommissioning that everyone rightly expected to be made has not been made—[Interruption.] I repeat that insufficient progress has been made.

My right hon. Friend also made it clear that progress is ultimately a matter for General de Chastelain, who will subsequently report on it. However, as I said, at this stage it does no good for us to pore over the entrails of precisely what has happened.

We want decommissioning to occur, so that suspension will never have to be imposed. However, if it is imposed, we want to ensure that we all have confidence—this is about confidence-building—that, at that time, the suspension could be lifted.

Several hon. Members rose—

Dr. Godman: Will my hon. Friend give way?

Mr. Howarth: I shall give way to my hon. Friend, and then I must make some progress, as we are running short of time.

Dr. Godman: A moment ago, I sought assurances for those who are employed in the institutions. However, what will happen to the Bills that were presented to the Assembly at the beginning of last week? One was a fisheries Bill, and another was on social work administration. Presumably those will be taken on board by Ministers?

Mr. Howarth: During a suspension, the Assembly would have no powers to pass any legislation. Progress on legislation during a suspension would have to be made by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State or me. If we decided that passage of the legislation was not appropriate at that time, we would not make progress on it. It is one of the unfortunate consequences of the situation that we are in.

Mr. Nick St. Aubyn (Guildford): Will the Minister give the House an assurance?

Mr. Howarth: I shall give way to the hon. Gentleman, but then really must move towards a conclusion. He must realise that time is limited.

Mr. St. Aubyn: Given that the Secretary of State has told us that he will release both the de Chastelain report and the successor to it, will the Minister assure the House that such release would not at any point depend on the agreement of the Government of southern Ireland, and that they do not effectively hold a veto over the release of such a report—which we are now told will precede re-establishment of the Northern Ireland Assembly?

Mr. Howarth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made the position as clear as he can. I stand by what he said, and he will stand by what he said.

Mr. St. Aubyn: Will the Minister give way?

Mr. Howarth: I shall not give way. I allowed the hon. Gentleman to intervene—for which he did not have the courtesy to thank me—and he will forgive me if I reply to that intervention in my own way. The situation is precisely as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has described it, and the hon. Gentleman should not try playing games to get me to say something different from what my right hon. Friend has said. If he is trying to do that, he will not succeed. We are in a difficult situation. What my right hon. Friend said stands and it is neither useful nor necessary for me to add anything.

Clause 1 suspends the operation of the Northern Ireland Assembly for as long as the clause is in force. While it is in force there can be no meetings of the Assembly or any of its committees, nor can any legislation be passed by the Assembly. All Ministers and junior Ministers of the Northern Ireland Executive, including the hon. Member for Belfast, East, will cease to hold office, as will the chairmen and deputy chairmen of statutory committees.

The clause also provides that the powers under section 52 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 to nominate Ministers to attend the North-South Ministerial Council and the British-Irish Council cannot be exercised during the suspension. Our intention is to suspend those institutions by means of an international agreement with the Irish Government.

Mr. Robathan: I was not going to speak in this debate, but I was moved to do so by the Minister's tortuous and very unconvincing arguments.

The issues covered by the Bill, particularly clause 1, hang on the de Chastelain report. My right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) has made that point particularly well. The Minister failed to explain how it was possible to publish the first de Chastelain report, and why it is not possible to publish the second report if it is possible to publish a subsequent report, should one be produced.

The Minister talks about confidence-building and trust. I agree that we need confidence and trust. He and the Government—and the Government of the Irish Republic if they have anything to do with the publication of the report, although I do not see why they should—ought to take the House into their confidence and trust the British people by publishing the de Chastelain report so that we know all the gruesome details. I fear that the reason for the Government's unwillingness to publish the report is that some of its comments about the attitude of the IRA and Sinn Fein are unpalatable to the Government.

The Secretary of State has the right to stop prisoner releases if parties to the Good Friday agreement are not complying with it. If the de Chastelain report were published, the Minister might have to decide that the IRA—or Sinn Fein; whatever they like to be called—were not complying with the agreement and that prisoner releases should therefore be suspended.

Question put and agreed to.

Clause 1 ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 2

ENDING SUSPENSION

Mr. William Ross: I beg to move amendment No. 15, in page 1, line 22, leave out subsection (1).

The Chairman of Ways and Means (Sir Alan Haselhurst): With this it will be convenient to discuss the following amendments: No. 16, in page 2, line 3, leave out subsection (3).

No. 20, in page 2, line 4, at end insert—

'(3A) The Secretary of State shall publish the complete text of a review under the Validation, Implementation and Review section of the Belfast Agreement.

(3B) The Secretary of State shall publish the complete text of any report from the Commission on Decommissioning that may be made in connection with the review conducted under subsection (1).'.

Mr. Ross: I promise not to go on quite as long this evening as I did a week or two ago, because, unfortunately, we have tighter time restrictions.

Amendment No. 15 would delete the lines printed in italics at the bottom of page 1 of the Bill. I do not understand why they are printed in italics, but they say:

"As soon as is reasonably practicable after section 1 comes into force, the Secretary of State must take steps to initiate a review under the Validation, Implementation and Review section of the Belfast Agreement."

Amendment No. 16 would remove from subsection (3) the words:

"Before making a restoration order, the Secretary of State must take into account the result of the review conducted as a result of subsection (1)."

[Mr. Ross]

Several issues cause me concern. At no time during the Secretary of State's statement to the House last week or his answers to the subsequent questions did he refer to a review. The review came out of the blue. It has already been pointed out that the Secretary of State has other powers that he could use, but he has chosen to go for a review.

May we be told why we were not informed last week? Was it because the Bill had to be drawn up at the very last minute? I doubt it. I have been here long enough to know that Governments tend to have all sorts of contingency plans on the shelf, to pull out of a pigeonhole when needed and polished up. If the right hon. Gentleman knew before his statement that he was going to have a review, why did he not tell the House and the people of Northern Ireland? That straightforward question should receive a straightforward answer.

Did the right hon. Gentleman think that the weapons problem could be dealt with some other way—that he could go down another path, which turned out to be blocked? He made it perfectly plain in his answers on 3 February that weapons had to be dealt with or there would not be devolution because the agreement had not been fully implemented. We hear about full implementation when it concerns something of which the terrorist organisations approve but not when it is something of which the law-abiding population might approve. Stopping the release of prisoners and other things to put on pressure are not done.

The Government's one real lever against the IRA was prisoners. They and their families were exerting pressure on the IRA, on the ground. None of those people should have been let out the gate until such time as weapons were given up. That is the view of everyone in Northern Ireland who understands the mentality of those folk. The Government refused to understand. They threw away their strongest card and let out prisoners, so their leverage against the IRA disappeared. I have no doubt, as the release of prisoners is to continue, that it will be played out right up to July, until the very last of those fellows is out through the gate—including the two chaps that my hon. Friend the Member for Belfast, South (Rev. Martin Smyth) mentioned, who were sentenced for a double murder only last week.

There could be no doubt where the Unionist population stand. To them, weapons always have been, and are, the litmus test of whether or not the IRA-Sinn Fein system of terror, murder and intimidation will move to democracy. Weapons are the key. The distance that my hon. Friend has travelled is not a distance that I would have travelled. My experience of those people, given that I live among a fair number of them, is perhaps greater than some of my right hon. and hon. Friends. I know how they think and react. If one wanted to put pressure on those people, it had to be done in a different way than giving in to them.

Mr. Roy Beggs (East Antrim): Does my hon. Friend agree that the hon. Member for Foyle (Mr. Hume) also recognised that point? He said that there should be no guns on the table, under the table or outside the door.

Mr. Ross: Perfectly correct, but that view seems to have vanished into the past. The SDLP, it seems, wants to forget about that. All it wants now is an ounce of Semtex left at the door—token decommissioning. We were told that at the weekend. It is not sufficient for the people of Northern Ireland and certainly not sufficient for the Unionist party. Its position is perfectly clear. After this time, there must be a massive giving up of weapons and explosives—the means of violence and war.

During the speech of the hon. Member for Belfast, East (Mr. Robinson), who has just left his place, I referred to the Secretary of State's words on 3 February, when he was very precise about his intentions. He said that he would not be suspending the agreement—that it would remain intact, as would the consequences of its creation and all its actions.

I am not clear how the Secretary of State intends to proceed with the review. The Belfast agreement contains three conditions under which a review can take place. [Interruption.] I understand that the two Ministers on the Front Bench know all about this and do not have to listen. I would like to know which of those three conditions applies in this instance. The agreement states, first:

"Each institution may, at any time, review any problems that may arise in its operation and, where no other institution is affected, take remedial action in consultation as necessary with the relevant Government or Governments. It will be for each institution to determine its own procedures for review."

Under that procedure, the Assembly can take its own decisions and talk only to the Governments as necessary. I assume that the institutions mentioned refer to the two Governments and the Assembly, rather than to the various bodies which flow from the operation of the Assembly.

The second set of circumstances is:

"If there are difficulties in the operation of a particular institution, which have implications for another institution, they may review their operations separately and jointly and agree on remedial action to be taken under their respective authorities."

That would seem to involve a combination of institutions, all having to take separate reviews—followed by a joint review—and then agreeing. That is rather complicated, and I cannot see it meeting with much success if what the Secretary of State said about the frailty of the process and the structure is accurate. A structure that cannot stand another election and still survive has a mighty poor chance of surviving into adulthood.

The third set of circumstances is:

"If difficulties arise which require remedial action across the range of institutions, or otherwise require amendment of the British-Irish Agreement or relevant legislation, the process of review will fall to the two Governments in consultation with the parties in the Assembly. Each Government will be responsible for action in its own jurisdiction."

In this case, the two Governments have to take the lead and then consult with the parties in the Assembly. They do not have to get the parties in the Assembly to agree with them—they can go ahead in any case.

Which of those courses of action—or which combination of them—applies in this case? It might be difficult to have a combination, and it may have to be one. What criteria will the Secretary of State use to make up his mind? When he does make up his mind, will he tell the House which set of criteria he is taking into account and applying? When the review is set up, can we be told what items it will look at? How are the decisions within the review to be reached? Who will make the decisions? What evidence or reasons will be published so people understand what is going on?

Clause 3(2)—which refers to the restoration, as it were—gives the impression that the Secretary of State should not be involved in the review because, if he were, he would have to be not only the investigator and the chairman, but the jury and the judge in regard to whether or not he would restore the Assembly to operation. In those circumstances, we need to know the evidence. We need to know who will chair the review. We need to know the criteria, and the task that the review is being given.

The only reason for this debate is the refusal of the terrorist organisations to hand over their weapons—their firearms and their other means of murdering, blackmailing and intimidating the law-abiding citizens of Northern Ireland, and of this wider nation. If we are to go beyond the weaponry, we must be told why, what steps are to be taken into account and what is to be reviewed in the next few weeks.

9.15 pm

It has already been said that we are here tonight because of the failure of the IRA to decommission and to surrender its weapons to lawful authority in Northern Ireland or in the Irish Republic, and for that reason we should have sight of the de Chastelain reports—both the one that has been completed and any future reports. That is the key. If people could see the report, the debate today would be far more sensible. People would know exactly where they stood and we would not have had all the spin doctoring and the smoke and mirrors of the past week. The lack of precision, the double meaning, the ambiguity, and the nods and winks giving the impression that something is happening when nothing is happening, have been the root cause of the suspicion and anger that we have had in Northern Ireland for so long.

I tell Ministers—not that I expect them to take it on board, but I tell them anyway—that the mere fact that they refuse to publish the de Chastelain report only adds to the anger and suspicion, and makes any settlement far more difficult. It may be that, because Ministers live in the rarefied world of spin doctoring that so many in the House now inhabit, they are incapable of understanding the effect of the refusal to release the report on ordinary men and women in Northern Ireland, but the effect is real and the report should be published.

Mr. Hunter: I tabled amendment No. 20 in the spirit of the words of my hon. Friend the Member for East Londonderry (Mr. Ross) to avoid the ambiguity and obtain the clarification that is lacking. As clause 2 (3) stands, before making a restoration order,

"the Secretary of State must take into account the result of the review conducted".

I submit that a requirement to take into account is wholly inadequate and what is needed is the requirement contained in amendment No. 20. First, the Secretary of State should be required to publish the complete text of the review that has been undertaken and, secondly—and more importantly, in the light of the general thrust of our debate this evening—he should be required to publish the complete text of any report from the commission on decommissioning.

At this stage, with little time left, I shall not rehearse the arguments again, because they have been forcefully presented by many of my right hon. and hon. Friends. The Government have totally failed to convince us as to why the de Chastelain report should not have been made available to the House and amendment No. 20 would ensure that that would never happen again.

Mr. Robathan: I shall not detain the House long, because I merely wish to speak briefly in support of amendment No. 20. I notice Ministers muttering on the Treasury Bench, but perhaps they should consider more fully the implications of what they are doing. The issue of the de Chastelain report is a question of confidence and trust. There can be no trust if we are not allowed to see the report. Perhaps the Minister can tell us whether it refers to the intention of the IRA and Sinn Fein to decommission. We are being asked to legislate without knowing what on earth the report says, but that is leaping hopefully in the dark.

The Secretary of State said on Second Reading that there is no body of opinion in the nationalist community that is opposed to decommissioning. So can the Minister tell us what was in the report? Was there anything to suggest that a body of opinion in the nationalist community—that must include everybody in the nationalist community—is opposed to decommissioning?

If Sinn Fein is inextricably linked to the IRA, we must know about Real Sinn Fein, Continuity Sinn Fein and all the other splinter groups. They were in the IRA about two and a half years ago. Are they really so different? Does the Minister have any information—is there any in the de Chastelain report—about such groups as Real Sinn Fein and their links with the rest of the Provisional IRA? It is as certain as it could be that the leadership of the IRA and of Sinn Fein know who is in Real IRA because they used to have an organisation that included them. That relates also to the prosecution of the Omagh bombers, of whom only one has so far been arrested. Does the report say anything about that? It has been alleged that two Members of this House, Mr. Adams and Mr. McGuinness—not yet hon. Members, because they have not taken the oath—may know who these people are. Have they helped in any way in the prosecution of the Omagh bombers?

We need to see that report so that we can make a judgment on behalf of the people of the United Kingdom. We do not trust Ministers to make it for us.

Mr. St. Aubyn: I, too, do not want to detain the House. However, I was most disappointed at the Minister's earlier suggestion that we were playing some sort of game over this issue, which goes to the heart of the matter. If the report is not published and made known to us, and if we are not given a chance to debate it, how will it be possible to convince Sinn Fein-IRA that this House and our Government are serious about the need for decommissioning? If we are not to have the opportunity to question Ministers on how much movement they require before considering invoking clause 2, how will we know—and how will they know—whether or not the whole process is nothing more than a charade in the eyes of Ministers?

[Mr. St. Aubyn]

Will the Minister clarify again whether the Government have a right to publish the report independent of any permission or agreement from the other Government, who claim that it is their property as well? In the absence of a clear reply, we do not know whether Ministers can activate clause 2 when they believe it appropriate to do so without the prior agreement of the other Government. Neither do we know what change there must be in circumstances, and what criteria the Minister will objectively apply before invoking clause 2.

Mr. Thompson: Clause 2 provides that, after the Assembly is suspended and the Executive members lose their posts, a review has to take place. The review seems to be very limited, as it centres mainly on decommissioning—when it will take place, if it will take place, when weapons will start to be given up and when it will be completed. These matters have been debated on numerous occasions. As a result of understandings reached in the last review, it was assumed that they had been resolved. However, as we have come to see, they have not been resolved. It is unlikely that they will be resolved in any review—certainly not to the satisfaction of the Unionist community in Northern Ireland.

The review should be much wider, taking into account the changes that have taken place in the people of Northern Ireland and their views, especially in the Unionist community. For it is absolutely clear that the majority of people in the Unionist community no longer support the agreement.

We have always been told that any future Government of Northern Ireland and any future Assembly must have the support of the majority of both sides of the community. Support is obviously lacking on the Unionist side of the community. If support were lacking on the nationalist side, we would be told that a wide-ranging review would be needed. However, it seems not to matter when support no longer exists in the Unionist part of the community—it seems that we shall plod on anyway.

I implore Ministers to undertake a wide-ranging review that considers all the issues, rather than just decommissioning. We need a thorough review so that we may achieve proper administration for Northern Ireland that is democratic, accountable and supported by all the people.

Mr. Owen Paterson (North Shropshire): The Secretary of State's explanation of the Government's reasons for not publishing the de Chastelain report are totally unsatisfactory. We have not got to the bottom of the question whether the Irish Government have a veto. We had the bizarre statement that if General de Chastelain produces a third report, it will, even if entirely unpalatable and full of unwelcome news, be published along with the second.

By not publishing the report, the Government have let fly a flurry of speculation. First, there is speculation about what the report contains—and that may be damaging, because rumour builds on rumour, and speculation on speculation. Secondly, there is speculation about why the Government are not publishing it. Their refusal does them no credit, and it does the House no credit given that our whole debate has been triggered by the report and the IRA's refusal to disarm. Hon. Members are grown-ups, and the general public watching our proceedings must find it bizarre that we have not been made party to the critical information that has triggered the debate. I appeal to the Minister to give us a serious and sensible reason why the report has not been published.

Mr. George Howarth: The hon. Member for East Londonderry (Mr. Ross) seeks to remove the requirement for a review. Amendments Nos. 15 and 16 contradict the main purpose of suspension, which will come about only if it becomes clear that the political institutions no longer carry cross-community support and confidence. If that happens, it will be essential to bring the process back on track through discussion and negotiation. In other words, we will need a review.

That fact was recognised during the negotiations that resulted in the Good Friday agreement, which is why the agreement includes a section titled "Validation, implementation and review". If suspension occurred without a subsequent review, we might find ourselves in a dangerous political vacuum, and that could lead to the destruction of everything for which we have worked for so long. Almost certainly, the Good Friday agreement would end, because suspension without a follow-on would end the story.

A desire to see that state of affairs come about may well lie behind the hon. Gentleman's amendments. The Bill is intended not to suspend the agreement, but to save it. Although I know that the hon. Gentleman—he posed a series of questions, but he appears to have left the Chamber—would disagree with me, I hope he would accept that we are being consistent. I am convinced that the twin proposal of suspension followed by review will bring us to a positive outcome. We cannot do that by suspension alone. I cannot in all conscience recommend that we accept amendments Nos. 15 and 16.

9.30 pm

I understand the rationale behind amendment No. 20, tabled by the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter)—that the review be carried out as openly as possible. The hon. Member for West Tyrone (Mr. Thompson) made a similar point. Given the nature of the discussions that are likely to take place, complete public openness will not always be possible if we are to reach a satisfactory conclusion. Right hon. and hon. Members can envisage circumstances in which some talks would need to take place away from the public gaze. In the past, some talks between parties have taken place in a way that protected the participants and allowed them the space to decide in which direction to move.

However, it is our intention to be as open as possible and to make as much information as possible available to the public, to the House and to anybody else. At present, it is not entirely clear how the review will operate; we do not know who will chair it, or how, when, where or between whom the meetings will take place. Those details will need to be worked out, if and when the institutions are suspended.

The hon. Member for East Londonderry speculated that more detailed arrangements might be in hand, and were ready to be executed. However, in reality, we shall have to cross the bridge, and then my right hon. Friend and others will have to make the arrangements. We cannot give detailed answers at present, because we have not yet crossed that bridge—of deciding on suspension.

Until the shape of the review and its terms of reference are finalised, it is not possible to say whether there will be a report. However, the provision is not one of such import that it should be included in the Bill. It is a marginal issue when compared with provisions elsewhere in the Bill.

The second part of the amendment tabled by the hon. Member for Basingstoke concerns the publication of a decommissioning report during any suspension period. At present, I cannot say whether a further decommissioning commission report will be issued soon. General de Chastelain may have something new to report at any time, but it is within the commission's discretion to decide whether and when to issue such a report. If the general issues another report, I assure the hon. Gentleman that it will be brought to the attention of the House and that its primary findings will be made public. Consequently, I ask the Committee to reject the amendment.

Mr. William Ross: I have been a Member of this place for a fair number of years, Sir Alan. It is rare that a Minister stands at the Dispatch Box and asks hon. Members to accept legislation such that we know not what it will do, nor how, nor why, and we know not who is in charge of it. In the light of the Minister's inadequate response, we must press the matter to a Division.

Question put, That the amendment be made:—

Tellers for the Noes:

THE CHAIRMAN then proceeded to put forthwith the Questions necessary for the disposal of business to be concluded at that hour.

Clauses 2 to 9 ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Schedule agreed to.

Bill reported, without amendment.

Order for Third Reading read.

9.46 pm

Mr. Mandelson: I beg to move, That the Bill be now read the Third time.

Having listened to the debate, I have no doubt how most hon. Members would sum up the views of the House. There are those in the House who reject the entire notion of inclusive government. They would rather not have self-government than share it with those whom they consider beneath contempt.

Those who reject self-government because they cannot bear the idea of sharing it with others do not speak for the majority of people in Northern Ireland, who have demonstrated beyond doubt that they like devolution, they like having their own Executive, and they like having locally elected people who are democratically accountable—local voices taking decisions on local issues, and people with local accents in charge of local affairs.

What unites most of us is not a rejectionist mentality. Most of us, of whatever party or leaning, want the Good Friday agreement to succeed. There are aspects of it that some do not like, but they realise that the agreement stands or falls as a whole. It must be taken as a job lot. It cannot be cherry-picked. It must go forward together or not at all.

Most of us in the House commend the Unionists for letting devolution happen, and we share their disappointment that decommissioning has not followed. I do not believe that any hon. Member would honestly or realistically deny that the original deal following Mitchell was that if the Unionists went first, others would follow, and that following devolution, a start on decommissioning would be made not long afterwards.

What also joins most of us in the House is that we are not obsessed with attaching blame to anyone. We are not interested in spreading recrimination for our current difficulties. We would prefer people to make the agreement work, rather than stand accused of acting in bad faith. Accusing people of bad faith and of letting others down gets us nowhere. I am struck and I feel encouraged by the marked absence of recrimination.

Mr. Thompson rose—

Mr. Mandelson: No, I am sorry, I shall make my speech. The hon. Gentleman has had his time.

It is striking that right hon. and hon. Members who contributed to the debate were overwhelmingly positive. They wanted the agreement to succeed. They were not interested in playing some ridiculous, destructive blame game. We can agree thus far. However, we must consider what we should do now that decommissioning has not begun, and what the Ulster Unionists should do in its absence. Most Ulster Unionists are running on empty because of the disappointing lack of progress. Consequently, the Executive is close to collapse, in a matter not of weeks but, tragically, of days. What is the right course of action?

There are no easy options for anyone. Some are marginally less disagreeable than others. Several hon. Members who contributed to today's debate suggested that the Government are motivated simply by a desire to head off a Unionist veto or to deal with Unionist blackmail, and that our actions are determined by a metaphorical Unionist gun, which is pointing at our heads. That is not true. We face a complicated, real-life political predicament, and we must deal with it. People have genuine attitudes and prejudices; they have become genuinely exhausted and despair of the situation. We must face that reality and work out a response to it that preserves our achievements, saves what has been created and ensures the endurance of the possibility that the institutions and the very important Executive will flourish permanently. I am firmly set on that course, not on some short-term manoeuvre or tactics that will simply tide us over the next day or two.

We are not considering any individual. We are not trying to save the skin of the right hon. Member for Upper Bann (Mr. Trimble), although his skin is pretty valuable, and worth saving if we can. I believe that because he has shown admirable leadership of his party; because we would never have formed the Executive and set up the institutions without him; because he has a great deal of leadership left in him; and because, if he relinquished the leadership of the Ulster Unionist party, I would fear for the consequences for Northern Ireland, given his likely replacement.

We are not considering going back to the bad old days of Stormont, and government by one side of the community. We shall not do that now, later or at any time. Under no circumstances or terms will we entertain for one moment a reversion to that form of government in Northern Ireland.

I appeal to some of my right hon. and hon. Friends, to whatever extent they found the attitudes of some Ulster Unionist Members who contributed to the debate lacking, not to take a similarly one-sided view in their analysis of the situation in Northern Ireland. The new institutions in Northern Ireland cannot function with the support and confidence of one tradition alone. The new Executive needs two legs to walk on. At the moment, one leg is badly disabled and out of action. I do not think that the Unionist leg is out of action permanently, but it is dragging its foot slightly lamely as a result of a collapse in confidence following Unionist disappointment over the lack of decommissioning since the Executive was set up. I regret that and wish things were different. If I were a doctor with a miracle remedy at my disposal, I would apply it to that Unionist leg and hope for an immediate or overnight cure, but I am afraid that one is not available to me.

There is still a chance that we can repair what has gone wrong before the weekend, which I entirely accept is the next watershed that we face. I appeal to the right hon. Member for Upper Bann not to despair and not to turn off, but to remain open to new ideas and new proposals that might yet be canvassed in the coming days and to keep the channels open. We will need all his strength and energy during the review if we are to succeed in resurrecting the Executive and the institutions, should it prove painfully necessary to implement the Bill before the weekend.

I say to my hon. Friends from the Social Democratic and Labour party that I understand only too well why they feel that the option of suspension—putting the Executive and the other institutions on hold—is so very painful. The nationalist people whom they represent in Northern Ireland have been shut out of government for so long through no fault of their own, so it is deeply disappointing—almost too much to bear—to have staked their claim in the ground of the new Executive only to have it so cruelly removed after only eight weeks. I fully understand and deeply sympathise. If I could do anything to avoid that, I would do it. If there is anything that the Government, together with the Irish Government, can do before the end of the week to avoid that, we shall do it.

I understand why the prospect of returning to direct rule is so unattractive and so disagreeable, but, although this may be unfair, perhaps it is all right for the SDLP to indulge itself somewhat by not facing up to the harsh and unpalatable reality of what we have to do. For others, I am afraid that there is no alternative to the heavy lifting that we have to undertake and no alternative to putting the institutions on hold to create a pause to give us time—a breathing space—so that we can work hard with it and with others to resurrect that which we hold so dear.

Mr. Tony Benn: I am grateful to the Secretary of State for that positive statement. May I make a suggestion, which might be helpful? The Bill gives him the right to suspend the Executive and the Assembly. It is an undated cheque. He can suspend them at the end of the week if there is no news—or in a year or two years—without coming back to Parliament, but Parliament has to pass an order for them to be restored. Can he give the assurance, which would be very welcome, that he would come back to the House to make a statement in the light of the contemporary circumstances, which might be quite different, if at any time and for any reason it was necessary to bring the Bill into force, even though there is no legislative provision for that? That would give us an opportunity to consider and endorse his proposals.

Mr. Mandelson: That is a tempting offer by my right hon. Friend, and I fully understand the spirit in which it was made. I am afraid that I may not have that scope; there may not be that flexibility, between now and when I have to act, to come back to the House to make a statement and to give the House a further opportunity to debate the matter. If it were possible, if I had that latitude, I would certainly use it, because I regard it as very important on an issue as important as this, on which there are such strongly held feelings, to give people any and every opportunity to debate it properly in the only place in which democracy—live, open democracy—has been able to operate in relation to Northern Ireland for so long.

I am grateful to everyone who has contributed to this debate. I very much hope that, in the weeks and months ahead, if we have to take this painful decision before the weekend, it will not be too long before I can return to the House with better, more positive and constructive news. I hope that I can show how the parties together, as a result of the review that we intend to make, have been able to chart a new way through these very difficult waters, and how we are able ultimately to get the progress we want, not only in creating proper, democratic, devolved institutions in Northern Ireland, but in having the decommissioning that is an essential part of this peace process, without which the politics in Northern Ireland will not work.

I am confident; I am optimistic. I will certainly use all my energy to make sure that we get out of the dip—the trough—that we have now slipped into. I hope that it will not be too long before I can return to the House and give it better news.

10.2 pm

Mr. Öpik: In view of the Secretary of State's response to his right hon. Friend the Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn), I imagine that this is the last time that we shall have a chance to debate this matter before the Bill can be used. That is regrettable because, at the very least, a short debate would have been helpful. I am sorry that he did not feel able to give that guarantee.

Nevertheless, decommissioning has been widely debated tonight, and it is obvious that we are close to a watershed on the whole issue. I have just three short comments to make. First, I re-emphasise how important it is to take seriously the points made by the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon), because he represents a legitimate and considerable body of people in the community in Northern Ireland who will regard the enactment of this Bill—the suspension of the Assembly—as a very negative statement with regard to devolution as a whole. I plead with the Minister to be extremely sensitive to the need to ensure that there are confidence-building measures in place for those communities, a willingness to explain exactly what is going on and an assurance that this is not a one-way walk from the Assembly to a dark place from which we had all sincerely hoped we had moved forward.

Secondly, it is important for us to recognise the potential for division and recrimination, the noise created by this between the communities as all sides blame each other for the potential suspension of the Assembly. The Government must play a part in ensuring that we do not end up with own goals as a result of the implementation of a suspension.

Thirdly, we need to remember that this is an emergency only if we make it so. The Bill is probably right. It is not a matter of principle; it is a matter of political probabilities that we are discussing it at all. However, it is right only so long as we make sure that the political temperature is kept down as it is moved forward. I see the Bill as an attempt to avert an emergency on 22 May, by which time, as we all know, full decommissioning is meant to have taken place. I think that the Government should play it by ear, and listen carefully as the public in Northern Ireland inevitably respond to any suspension.

Let me conclude with an emotional response. I feel very sad about what we have done today. In comparison with where we were, say, five years ago, we have made tremendous and unexpected progress, but it now seems that we are going to take a couple of steps back. In fact, that is not surprising: a characteristic element of the Northern Ireland peace process has been the taking of two steps forward and one step back. I hope that this really is just one step back, and that we shall not allow the process to begin to atrophy or stall just because the difficult decision to suspend the Assembly has been made.

I say to the Government, "Please, please be sensitive to the dangers of the Bill. Please be sensitive to the likely reaction in nationalist and republican communities, who will be very disappointed about the fact that things have gone backwards." I say to the whole House that, given that we have supported the Bill by and large—and we do need to be sombre about what it will do—I sincerely hope that, if implemented, it will be seen as a staging post. Nevertheless, I feel that, having seen sunlight on the Province, we are now walking back into a valley.

Mr. McDonnell: This has been a sombre debate. I contrast it with the time, nearly two years ago, when we had a sense of hope and a sense of the future. It was then that we realised that the Belfast agreement might give us the opportunity of ensuring that the future of the island of Ireland would be determined not by the gun or the bomb or by British mandate, but by the Irish people themselves.

The agreement gave the Unionists the possibility that their future would be decided neither by some form of brute force nor by a British sell-out. They would be a party to decisions: that is why they would regain the structures of a statelet. For republicans and nationalists, there was the acceptance of the sovereignty of the Irish people as a whole, and the prospect of a mechanism to create a united Ireland. The agreement gave all of us—both traditions—peace and an opportunity to involve ourselves in policy making and governmental structures that would have an impact on the day-to-day lives of the citizens of the Six Counties of Northern Ireland. It offered the chance of a normalisation of politics—of the politics that we have taken for granted on this island: politics that are determined by electoral mandates and policy discussion in a civilised framework.

The agreement gave us the chance of a radical reform programme, the achievement of equality, respect for human rights and, in every area of policy and everyday life, a debate about what the quality of life should be. I am sorry that some quarters have appealed tonight for a retreat from that programme of reform, for it is important that we press on.

For some of us, the agreement provided the hope of a united island of Ireland at some time in the future, on the basis of agreement and mutual respect for different traditions. It provided the hope of an Ireland strengthened by the process of agreement. We accepted that peace was never to be a single act and that there were never to be any armistices. It was a process that would be achieved in stages. There must be incremental steps: lessening violence, removing violence, engaging in dialogue, achieving the appreciation of different perspectives and the understanding of different views, and securing agreement for a way forward.

That is why the Bill is such a step backwards—and it is a major step backwards. It removes the structures of the government of Northern Ireland that would make possible the debate, the process of reform and the dialogue. I am confident that we shall eventually restore those structures and achieve peace, but, as we have heard today, there is a history of structures being abolished or suspended that goes back about a quarter of a century.

I believe that the Bill poses a risk. Some people are trying to use the decommissioning issue to undermine elements in the Good Friday agreement, and some are trying to undermine the agreement overall. Decommissioning has become a weapon in the hands of anti-agreement elements—of rejectionists. It was used first as an excuse to delay the setting up of the Executive; now it is used to put the whole peace process in jeopardy. But what does decommissioning mean? The IRA has not fired weapons or exploded bombs since the restoration of the ceasefire on 20 July 1997. Before that, the ceasefire had lasted from 13 October 1994 to 9 February 1996. With the exception of the tragedy at Canary wharf, the IRA had held a disciplined ceasefire, with weapons out of commission for more than five years.

No one in the 1960s, 1970s or 1980s would have ever been optimistic enough to hope that that could be achieved within that time scale. The weapons are out of commission. We are urged today to suspend the arrangements and structures that have consolidated that ceasefire, that form of decommissioning. Why? Because some want to press some extraordinary process of surrender—and surrender is what it will be viewed as.

Mr. Harry Barnes (North-East Derbyshire): All the hon. Members who have spoken in the debate so far, including those who voted against Second Reading, have pointed out that they are in favour of decommissioning. Is that a position that my hon. Friend adopts? As he is closer to contacts with Sinn Fein than I will ever be, will he press decommissioning upon them, because it is the friends, or the people who have links with Sinn Fein, who might be able to shift its position?

Mr. McDonnell: Decommissioning has been recognised as a responsibility. That is why the agreement was signed, but decommissioning itself is a process and the achievement for most of us was peace, the lack of bombs and the lack of the use of the gun. That has been achieved. That is an argument of good faith, which has been demonstrated, but the ramifications of pressing the process to its nth degree have already been explained: the risks of splits and jeopardy for all. This week's bomb is a reminder of the problems and of how it is difficult to hold organisations and traditions together.

Mr. Winnick: Most of us were against the IRA campaign of terror, as we were against the so-called loyalists on the other side during those long 30 years. We made our position clear. Will my hon. Friend take into account the article in The Irish Times today—which I have already quoted in an intervention—by my friend the hon. Member for Foyle (Mr. Hume), who pleaded with the IRA for some form of decommissioning? We should bear it in mind that it was he who set the peace process in motion in the first place.

Mr. McDonnell: I understand the point that my hon. Friend makes. Of course, we are all pleading with all sides to move forward together on a path to peace and to decommissioning in the end, but let us make it clear that the agreement contains no provision for the suspension of power and did not set a deadline—the deadline has been set as a result of an external intervention by the Unionists. It is the exercise of a Unionist veto on the agreement, a veto that is dangerous.

The Unionist veto was dangerously used in 1975 and 1985. There have been periods when it has undermined the democratic institutions that British Governments have tried to establish in the Six Counties. We are seeing it again now. Why should we allow a timetable to be imposed by one of the parties to the agreement which is not in the agreement?

A lasting peace can be founded only on trust. It is clear that sufficient trust has not been established between the parties to the conflict. The irony of the Bill is that it suspends the operation of the key body that is engendering trust—the Assembly. The Assembly is the key forum, in which representatives from all the constituencies and all the parties are able to meet, mix, discuss and work together on common problems in the interests of their community. That process is a key foundation stone of building trust to secure decommissioning. After only eight weeks' operation, we are asked to suspend that key body of trust and confidence-building.

The Bill's wide-ranging powers are shocking. The Secretary of State is able by order not just on this occasion through the Bill, but on future occasions, to suspend the Assembly and all the mechanisms associated with the agreement without full and adequate debate. Orders are never adequately debated in the Chamber. That wide-ranging power does not even contain a review element; there is no review element on revocation or restoration. It is government by order. There is no power in the legislation for consultation with the Irish Government, although I accept Ministers' assurances on that point.

I oppose the Bill. It will not help the peace process; it is dangerous; it is undemocratic; and it cannot be supported. The Belfast agreement was founded on an agreement to secure by consent peace and a future for the island of Ireland. The Bill rides roughshod over the concept of consent, without even consulting the Northern Ireland Assembly or going back to the people of Ireland.

If we are not careful, the Bill will undermine the peace process. I therefore urge care on the Secretary of State. I urge him not to enact the Bill immediately, but to allow more time for discussion and, if necessary, to bring together again the parties that founded the Belfast agreement. This short-term measure could have long-term ramifications, and I urge other hon. Members to vote against it.

10.15 pm

Mr. William Ross: I have occasionally listened to the hon. Member for Hayes and Harlington (Mr. McDonnell) speak on Northern Ireland and Irish affairs, but I rarely find myself in agreement with him. However, I agree with all those who complain about rushed legislation. In the years that I have been in this place, I have seen that every time a new piece of legislation is rushed through, we have lived to regret it in one form or another.

In this case, I believe that the Bill is the inevitable consequence of the IRA failing to live up to the commitments that it appeared to give. IRA spin doctoring did good service. In Northern Ireland, however, people like clarity, and one cannot get away with trying to conceal reality in ambiguous language. Eventually, reality breaks through.

I regret that we have not managed to examine the rest of the Bill's clauses and amendments, few though they are. Various issues were raised in the amendments that should have been debated. I do not believe that this is a happy day for anyone. To some extent, I also regret it. However, my reasons for regretting it are different from those that have been expressed hitherto.

My regrets stem from the fact that we are in this position today because we did not at the very outset address the hard issues of weaponry and IRA objectives. If those issues had been settled initially—three, four or five years ago—we would not be debating this Bill. We would have come up with a totally different agreement and a totally different Northern Ireland Act 1998.

Although we probably would have had something at a much lower level, it would at least have been workable and provided us with a sound foundation for the future in Northern Ireland—with that part of the United Kingdom remaining firmly within this Kingdom. That, of course, is the crux of the matter. Republicans of all stripes seek to destroy the constitutional position of Northern Ireland within this Kingdom. It is around that political and constitutional issue that all the battles have been fought and all the violence has taken place, and from which all the horrors that we have suffered have flowed.

Unless and until certainty is introduced, and unless and until doubt is removed about the long-term political and constitutional future of Northern Ireland, we can expect well as during the school holiday periods. Working Families Tax Credit, payable through the tax system for working people with children, is also available.

Pensioners Income

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will complete his review of savings limits, and the savings tariff income schedule, that govern entitlement to the minimum pensioners income guarantee. [109014]

Mr. Rooker: We made a commitment in the pensions Green Paper, "Partnership in Pensions", to give "greater rewards" to those individuals who have made provision for their retirement. We will bring forward our proposals during this Parliament.

Family Credit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of claims of family credit that were agreed to in the two months prior to the introduction of the Working Families Tax Credit. [109015]

Angela Eagle: In the two months prior to the introduction of Working Families Tax Credit in October 1999, there were 248,000 awards of Family Credit.

Notes:

1. Based on claims with a start date between 1 August 1999 and 30 September 1999.

Departmental Secondees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many staff were seconded from the private sector to his Department in (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [109293]

Mr. Rooker: Secondments and attachments are part of the Interchange Initiative, which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the Civil Service and other organisations. All sectors of the economy are involved: Voluntary, Education, Health, Public and Private. Interchange is a key component of the reform agenda. The Modernising Government White Paper committed us to increasing interchange, in particular by bringing in more people on secondment and sending more of our people out.

For the periods in question, three private sector staff are recorded as having been seconded to the Department. One was from the Guardian Media Group plc between September 1997 and December 1997, one from Sacker and Partners between October 1997 and February 1998, and the third from CSL Managed Services between August 1999 and February 2000. Other inward secondments of three months or more recorded centrally in the above periods were mainly from local government and other parts of the public sector outside the civil service.

State Second Pension

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the state second pension will allow for credits of qualifying contributions for periods of (a) contributory jobseeker's allowance, (b) income-related jobseeker's allowance and (c) low income, including non-state pension income, in the five years before the statutory retirement age. [109016]

Mr. Rooker: The State Second Pension is designed for those who are employed, particularly low earners, and those who are unable to work regularly due to caring responsibilities or long-term disability. Individuals will not be able to accrue entitlement to the State Second Pension by virtue of receiving contributory or income-related Jobseeker's Allowance. As with people in other age groups, those in the five years before the statutory retirement age will be able to build up entitlement to the State Second Pension if they have a low income from employed earnings at or above the Lower Earnings Limit, through qualifying caring responsibilities or long-term disability.

TREASURY

Working Families Tax Credit

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional cost to the Exchequer of providing the working families tax credit to couples with children if couples split their total earnings in half and the credit is calculated on each half. [104867]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated expenditure on the Working Families Tax Credit for 2000–01, the first full year of the credit, is £4.7 billion. If each partner in a couple received the full amount of credits, and each had an award based on half the couple's earnings, the expenditure would increase to over three times this figure. Lone parents would be unaffected.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the numbers of families who will be (a) eligible to receive, (b) in receipt of and (c) receiving working families tax credit via their pay packet by October 2000. [107260]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 2000–01, the first full year of the Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC), consistent with the Pre-Budget Report, are given:

Number of families in receipt of the Working Families Tax Credit—1.4 million

Number of families receiving the Working Families Tax Credit through the wage packet—840,000

No estimate has been made of the total number of families eligible to receive WFTC through the wage packet.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact on the total payments of Working Families Tax Credit of a national minimum wage of (a) £3.80 and (b) £4.00. [108371]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated reductions in expenditure on the Working Families Tax Credit in 2000–01, the first full year of the credit, are given in the table.

National minimum wage	Reduction in expenditure (£ million)
£3.80 per hour	15
£4 per hour	30

These estimates do not take account of any consequential labour market behavioural effects and are on the basis of current national minimum wage rates.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what circumstances working families tax credit is available to people on full-time but term-time only employment contracts for the periods between terms. [109178]

Dawn Primarolo: Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC) may be available to people during the periods between terms either if they apply during term time and the 26-week period of the award spans the period between terms, or if they apply for the tax credit during the holiday period and they have on-going, "term-time only" contracts. WFTC is not available to people who apply for the tax credit during the period between terms, but whose contracts formally terminated at the end of the previous term.

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government are taking to publicise the working families tax credit in Northern Ireland. [107690]

Dawn Primarolo: The WFTC TV and press publicity campaign was launched in early September throughout England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland and ran until the end of November. In Northern Ireland, television advertisements ran on Ulster TV, Channel 4, Channel 5 and a number of 'satellite' channels. Press advertisements ran in the Northern Irish press, the national newspapers and women's magazines.

In addition, I led a conference in Belfast for information providers to explain WFTC and DPTC, and provided a forum for questions and answers.

Local publicity included mailshots to relevant advisory bodies, followed up by presentations to voluntary and community groups.

National Insurance Contributions (Benefits in Kind)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has under Part IV of the Child Support, Pension and Social Security Bill to extend national insurance contribution to benefits in kind which include (a) vaccination against influenza, (b) educational scholarships, to children of employees, (c) taxis provided for the security of late working employees, (d) worker children's nurseries, (e) personal safety alarms, (f) private medical insurance, (g) staff Christmas parties where the amount exceeds £75 per head, (h) membership of a sporting facility and (i) membership of the employer's sporting facilities, where these are open to the general public paid for by the employer. [107114]

Dawn Primarolo: A preliminary guidance leaflet, "Class 1A National Insurance Contributions on Benefits in Kind" CWG5, containing a table setting out the tax and proposed national insurance treatment of the majority of benefits in kind has been sent to all employers in the new annual pack. A copy is available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 16 December 1999, Official Report, column 300W, what restrictions were placed on contractors carrying out research projects funded by his Department in 1999 in respect of them discussing their findings with journalists (a) before and (b) after publication. [108194]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 16 December 1999, Official Report, column 300W.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative

Ms Oona King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the Export Credits Guarantee Department's share of the future debt write-offs, announced by him, will be financed; and where the money will come from. [108717]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The costs of providing the extra bilateral relief over and above the amounts due to the UK's participation in the HIPC initiative will be met by the Department for International Development from resources additional to the existing aid budget.

Arms Exports

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the debt owed to the United Kingdom by highly indebted poor countries relates to defence-related business expressed in (a) cash terms and (b) as a proportion of total debt. [108767]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

Debt owed by Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPCs) to ECGD under Paris Club rescheduling arrangements amounts to £1.6 billion. In addition non-rescheduled debt in arrears and current exposure is some £300 million. Much of the rescheduled debt relates to contracts entered into during the 1970s and 1980s, when ECGD did not record exposure by the nature of the goods exported. However recent researches indicate that the amount of debt, all rescheduled, currently owed by HIPCs in respect of defence-related business is £12.7 million or 0.67 per cent. of the total owed.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria were used for selecting the countries that will no longer be supplied with military equipment under the guarantee of the Export Credits Guarantee Department. [109201]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on 11 January 2000 an extension to the UK's unilateral ban on export credits in respect of "unproductive expenditure" to include a further 22 countries. The additional countries are those which are allowed to borrow on highly concessional terms from the World Bank—the so called "IDA only" countries. These countries, while they do not have an historically large debut burden, can ill afford to take on new burdens of commercial loans for unproductive expenditure.

This built on the earlier initiative announced at the 1997 Commonwealth Finance Ministers' meeting in Mauritius, which applied to the so called Heavily Indebted Poor Countries. The ban now applies to 63 countries: a full list is below.

Applications for ECGD cover of projects in these countries will be measured against whether they meet the following indicative criteria:

assist social and economic development; or be of maximum benefit to areas most affected by poverty; or tackle problem areas where private investment is not available; or wherever possible, earn foreign exchange; or encourage viable self-financing projects.

These principles need not necessarily preclude ECGD support for the sale of defence or dual use equipment, provided that such equipment is, for example, deemed essential for national security, or required to combat the drugs trade, piracy, smuggling etc. Support for projects must be cleared with the Department for International Development, who must be satisfied that the expenditure is consistent with the above.

EU Appropriation Orders

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 448W, concerning Transfer of Appropriation Orders approved by or awaiting approval by the Council of Ministers, if he will list for each application from 1 July (a) the reference and original purpose and amount, (b) the reasons for non-implementation of the 1999 Budget line, (c) the purpose for which the application was made and (d) the total sum likely to be transferred by this means for the financial year 1999. [108738]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Details of all transfers of appropriations dated up to 30 September 1999, plus the "Notenboom" ("omnibus") transfer of 11 October 1999, have been deposited and are available in the House of Commons Library. Transfers since that date will be deposited shortly in compliance with the usual procedures, when all the relevant documents have been received.

Gardening Leave

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many officials in (a) Her Majesty's Treasury, (b) Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and (c) the Inland Revenue are currently on gardening leave. [108737]

Miss Melanie Johnson: None.

Cigarettes (Taxation)

Mr. Barron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the proportion of the average retail price taken in tax for each of the last 10 years for a pack of 20 cigarettes in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Belgium and (c) Luxembourg. [109099]

Dawn Primarolo: The table shows the proportion of the price taken in tax (excise duty and VAT) for a pack of 20 cigarettes in United Kingdom, Belgium and Luxembourg in the most popular price category. The figures relate to January each year. It is not possible to provide the figures for earlier than January 1993.

Minimum Wage

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) women and (b) men in Amber Valley are in receipt of the national minimum wage. [109040]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Judy Mallaber, dated 9 February 2000:

As the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question regarding the number of males and females who are in receipt of the national minimum wage in Amber Valley.

Definitive estimates on the number of people that have benefited from the national minimum wage are not yet available. Currently available estimates for assessing the effect take data from both the New Earnings Survey and the Labour Force Survey and adjust them for known limitations in each. However, the latest adjusted estimates are based on data for the spring (March - May) 1999 Labour Force Survey and this period spans the introduction date for the national minimum wage legislation. As a result, the adjusted estimates may be giving a misleading picture of the effect of the minimum wage legislation since employees might legitimately have been earning below the minimum wage rates in March 1999.

The currently available estimates were published in an ONS First Release on 14 October and show that the number of people earning below the minimum wage rates fell significantly between 1998 and 1999. A copy of this first release is available in the House of Commons Library.

Deregulation

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic impact associated with each of the following deregulation orders and contracting out orders on business (a) the Deregulation (Building Societies) Order 1995 (S.I., 1995, No. 3233), (b) the Deregulation (Friendly Societies Act 1992) Order 1996 (S.I., 1996, No. 1188), (c) the Deregulation (Credit Unions) Order 1996 (S.I.,1996, No. 1189) and (d) the Deregulation (Industrial and Provident Societies) Order 1996 (S.I., 1996, No. 1738). [108779]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 7 February 2000]: None.

Government Spending

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy to adhere to the existing planning total for overall Government spending in 2001–02; and if he will make a statement. [108976]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 8 February 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 November 1999, Official Report, column 781W.

Earnings Statistics

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of people earning (a) over £100,000 per annum, (b) over £500,000 per annum and (c) over £1 million per annum, for each year from 1979–80 to 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [108978]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 9 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question regarding the number of people earning over £100,000 per annum, over £500,000 per annum and over £1 million per annum, for each year from 1979–80 to 1999–2000.

The new Earnings Survey (NES), carried out in April of each year, is a 1 per cent. sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes. It does not capture information relating to the self-employed. However, I am only able to provide estimates of the percentage of employees whose earnings lie within specified ranges, rather than numbers, because appropriate factors to gross the survey results to accommodate this sample frame are not currently available. Additionally, I am unable to provide data for financial years prior to 1997–98 since estimates of annual earnings are not available. Data for the 1999–2000 financial year will be available when the NES 2000 is published in November of this year.

The available information, from the 1998 and 1999 New Earnings Survey, is presented in the attached table.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish details of the calculations which determined the present indicated rates for the Climate Change Levy. [108468]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The rates of the climate change levy that were published in the 1999 Pre-Budget Report are consistent with a levy raising around £1 billion in 2001–02. They are based on energy use data consistent with the DTI's Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics.

All the revenues raised from the levy will be recycled to business through a 0.3 percentage point cut in employer's National Insurance Contributions and increased support for energy efficiency measures.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to reply to the letters to him dated 16 September, 4 November and 9 December 1999 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. D Sammons. [109250]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I wrote to the right hon. Member on 20 December 1999.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Football Task Force

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the Football Task Force report as a Command Paper. [106942]

Kate Hoey: The Football Task Force's final report was published on 22 December. I have sent a copy to every Member and copies are also available on the Department's website or direct from the Football Trust. I have no plans to commit public funds to publish the report as a Command Paper.

Motspur Park (Fulham Football Club)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received concerning the availability of Fulham Football Club's Motspur Park training ground to local amateur and school football teams. [108285]

Kate Hoey: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have received no representations on this subject.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 31 January 2000, Official Report, column 478W, if he will list those seaside resort wards on the Objective 2 European funding map that would not have qualified for inclusion had they not been in seaside resorts. [108635]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

All areas including seaside resorts proposed for new Objective 2 area status met the criteria set out in Article 4 of the Council Regulation (EC) No. 1260–1999 for European Structural Funds. Eligible areas qualified under the industrial, rural, urban or fisheries strand.

Being a seaside resort was not a criterion for selection. The criteria were linked to unemployment, urban deprivation, and structural problems in industry, agriculture or fishing.

The criteria were applied on an objective and consistent basis nationally. We made every effort to include regional priority wards where we could do so within the constraints of the legislation and the population ceiling.

Sports Strategy

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what consultations he has had directly with the professional players' associations in respect of the Government's sports strategy. [107970]

Kate Hoey: [holding answer 3 February 2000]: I have not consulted formally with professional players associations in respect of the sports strategy. I have, however, met a wide range of sporting organisations to discuss the issues which surround the development of sport. These discussions have informed the development of the strategy.

Cultural Property

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if Her Majesty's Government will now ratify (a) the UNESCO Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property 1970 and (b) the UNIDROIT Convention on Stolen and Illegally Exported Cultural Objects 1995. [108999]

Mr. Chris Smith: Her Majesty's Government has decided not to sign the 1970 UNESCO Convention because significant practical difficulties remain in implementing its provisions into UK law. I would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 7 February 2000, Official Report, columns 8–9W, regarding the Government's decision about the 1995 UNIDROIT Convention.

Gardening Leave

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many officials in his Department are currently on gardening leave. [108959]

Mr. Chris Smith: There are no officials in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport currently on gardening leave.

St. Anne's Further Education College

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Lytham St. Anne's Civic Society will receive an answer to their request that part of the St. Anne's Further Education College be declared a grade II listed building. [109241]

Mr. Alan Howarth: English Heritage, our statutory adviser on the historic environment, inspected this building on 8 February, and will submit its advice within the next few days. My right hon. Friend the secretary of State will then make his decision on whether to add the College to the Statutory List. I will write to the right hon. Member about the decision as soon as possible.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Court Service (Fee Income)

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the method employed by the Court Service to calculate the estimated reduction of litigation and consequential short-fall of fee income in the financial year 2000–01. [108826]

Jane Kennedy: To calculate the estimated reduction in litigation, the number of claims issued over two period of six months were compared. These were May to October 1998 and May to October 1999. This comparison showed that the total of originating proceedings (excluding family and insolvency) commenced in total declined by 23 per cent. The calculation of the estimated shortfall in fee income was based on a combination of actual income from April to December 1999 and three months of forecast income to March 2000. Income for 2000–01 is expected to be £308 million. The calculated level of new income from the changed fees in a full year has been downgraded by 9 per cent. for 2000–01 to allow for the fact that the higher fees will not apply for the whole of the financial year and a small decline in workload.

Court Closures

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the number of court closures in England and Wales in the past three years. [108860]

Jane Kennedy: Magistrates courts are locally managed by magistrates courts committees under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. Decisions concerning the future of magistrates courts are for the relevant magistrates courts committee to determine.

My Department surveys the number of courthouses and courtrooms in April each year. The number of closures as reported by MCC's is as follows:

	1997	1998	1999
Courtroom closures	48	46	14
Courthouse closures	22	22	8

Legal Aid

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the expenditure on legal aid for personal injury cases in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, (c) 1995–96, (d) 1996–97, (e) 1997–98 and (f) 1998–99 and for the same years in relation to legal aid for personal injury cases; (i) what amount of contributions to the Legal Aid Fund was paid or repaid by legally aided litigants, (ii) how much of this expenditure on legal aid for personal injury cases in the above years was value added tax and (iii) what is his Department's estimate of the benefits, recovery and savings by virtue of cases won by litigants in personal injury cases who had the benefit of legal aid for the years requested. [108791]

Mr. Lock: Excluding advice and assistance expenditure on cases completed in each year was as follows:

	Net	Gross	Contributions from legally aided litigants
(a) 1993–94	38.0	155.3	1.3
(b) 1994–95	44.4	190.1	1.5
(c) 1995–96	55.2	239.6	1.7
(d) 1996–97	61.8	274.2	1.9
(e) 1997–98	65.6	[1]307.7	[1]2.3
(f) 1998–99	[2]—	335.2

[1] CIS was installed during 1997–98 in the Board's Nottingham and Chester offices. Because of this the figures for 1997–98 are incomplete and do not include data for five months (Nottingham) and six weeks (Chester)

[2] I am unable, at present, to provide net figures for 1998–99 due to the differences in data collection between the Legal Aid Board's former computer system and its current Corporate Information System (CIS)

I am also unable to provide details of VAT because not all the Board's payment systems record it as a separate item. Some disbursements are registered for VAT and others are unregistered.

It is not possible to estimate the benefits, recovery and savings to litigants by virtue of cases won in personal injury cases. Neither is it possible to estimate the benefit to public funds. Although the Compensation Recovery Unit of the Department of Social Security (CRU) will seek to recover any state benefit from the amount of damages paid, the CRU does not record whether monies recovered were in relation to a case supported by legal aid throughout, partially supported by legal aid or financed in another manner, eg with the support of a trade union.

Public Trust Office

Ms Oona King: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received on the proposed reform of the Public Trust Office; and if he will consider extending the period for consultation. [108828]

Jane Kennedy: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave her on 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 132W on the consultation period. Representations from a number of organisations and groups have been received on the Quinquennial Review of the Public Trust Office including Members of Parliament, the judiciary, the Law Society and other professional bodies, voluntary organisations and groups representing the interests of PTO clients and staff.

Court Cases (Press Activity)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he proposes to take to implement the recommendations made by the National Heritage Committee in its report on press activity affecting court cases (HC 292, Session 1996–97). [109573]

Mr. Lock: The Government announced on 27 February 1998 that it accepted in principle the recommendations of the National Heritage Committee. As my noble Friend the Lord Chancellor said in another place on 22 November 1999, Official Report, House of Lords, column 169, legislation will be brought forward when Parliamentary time allows. The Lord Chancellor is setting up an interdepartmental working group of officials to review the law relating to the payments to witnesses in criminal proceedings and the publication of information in advance of criminal trials. The review will inform the Government's decisions about the form of legislation required to implement the National Heritage Committee's recommendations. The review will consider how the requirements of the European Convention of Human Rights affect the law of contempt.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list for the financial year 1998–99 (a) the number and (b) the total value of contracts let by her Department with external consultants and advisers that (i) were put out to competitive tender, (ii) were not put out to competitive tender and (iii) were let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109269]

Mr. Stringer: The information requested is not held centrally and is available only at disproportionate cost. It is departmental policy to purchase all goods, services and works by means of competition unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary.

Performance-related Pay

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what recent assessment she has made of the effect of performance-related payments in Government Departments. [107470]

Mr. Stringer: The Cabinet Office began a review of pay and grading delegation within the Civil Service in September 1998. The interim report was published in April 1999 and the findings contributed to the Report on Performance Management, published on 15 December, in support of Sir Richard Wilson's Report to the Prime Minister on Civil Service Reform. The Civil Service will now implement the reform programme and, in particular, the modernisation of its performance management and pay systems.

Copies of all these reports have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Civil Servants (Counselling)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what is her policy with regard to granting civil servants time off work for counselling. [107575]

Mr. Stringer: Individual Departments and agencies have delegated authority to determine the circumstances when staff may have time off work. Within this framework, Departments and agencies have been consistently encouraged to be sympathetic towards requests for special leave in appropriate circumstances. Last year the Cabinet Office published a resource pack "Managing Attendance in the Public Sector: Putting Best Practice to Work" to help public sector bodies manage attendance in a fair, consistent and supportive way. One of the recommendations was that the public sector organisations should provide or arrange access to welfare and counselling services, and that staff should be encouraged to make full and effective use of those services.

Quangos

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when she will respond to the Sixth report of the Select Committee on Public Administration on Quangos (Session 1998–99, HC 209). [106729]

Mr. Stringer: The Government will respond shortly to the Sixth Report of the Select Committee on Public Administration on Quangos.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what percentage of her Department's staff were (a) registered disabled, (b) women, (c) from ethnic minorities and (d) from (i) independent, (ii) grammar and (iii) other schools in (1) 1970, (2) 1979, (3) 1989 and (4) 1999. [106759]

Mr. Stringer: The first year for which there are records containing statistical information about ethnic minorities and staff with disabilities is 1989. Prior to this date surveys of the ethnic origin of staff or those with disabilities were not carried out in a comprehensive way. Information about the educational background of staff could be obtained only by searching individual records of staff.

Table for 1970, 1979, 1989 and 1999 are as follows:

Percentage

	Disabled	Women[1]	Ethnic minorities
1970	[2]—	25	[2]—
1979	[2]—	40	[2]—
1989[3]	0.82	55	6.2
1999[4]	1.26	48.39	9.02

Recycling

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what policy she has on the recycling of materials produced by her Department. [108472]

Mr. Stringer: My Department's policy on recycling materials reflects our overall approach for waste management to reduce, reuse, recycle and recover.

We are currently preparing a sustainable development strategy for greening the Cabinet Office's and its Agencies' operations taking account of Government policies and best practice. This strategy will include waste reduction targets taking account of the Government target for all Departments to recover a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting in 2000–01. We are undertaking a waste audit and will use the results of the audit to establish baselines, against which the targets can be set and performance measured. The Cabinet Office agencies are similarly working towards the Green Ministers target. We currently recycle paper, cardboard, bottles and cans.

Written Answers to Questions

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Common Land

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for reviewing the legislation affecting common land and town and village greens. [110027]

Mr. Meacher: I have today published a consultation paper on common land—"Greater Protection and Better Management of Common Land in England and Wales". The paper looks at three key areas: issues concerning the registration of common land and village greens; the consent regime for fencing and other works; and wider management issues. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House. I have invited comments on the paper by 10 April.

Greater London Authority

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what will be the cost of the new building for the Greater London Authority; and if the rent will be at the market rate for similar buildings. [110064]

Mr. Hill: We have reached agreement with the developer, CIT Group, on a rent of £36.50 per square foot, £393 per square metre. This is frozen until 2007. The fixed rent at practical completion of the contract will be £4.75 million per annum. There are no similar buildings in the area; however, the £36.50 compares favourably with current rents, for top quality space in prime locations, of typically around £50 per square foot in the City and the West End of London. The developer will meet the cost of the base building which is estimated at around £40 million.

Traffic Congestion

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what studies his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned which quantify the cost to the economy of traffic congestion. [108329]

Mr. Hill: My Department has not commissioned estimates of the costs of congestion from external sources. A number of external estimates have been made of the value road users might place on the elimination of congestion from the road network. The CBI have put this figure at £15 billion. Some estimates are lower, but agree that the figure runs into billions every year and is rising.

The Department has made estimates of the amount of time lost on English roads as a result of congestion in 1996 and produced forecasts for 2010 under a number of illustrative scenarios. The results of this work are set out in our report "Tackling Congestion and Pollution", published last month. We will be doing more work in this area as part of our follow up to that report.

Neither the external estimates, nor those undertaken by my Department, can be translated directly into assessments of the cost of congestion to the economy. This is because they relate only to the benefits road users might derive from reduced delays and take no account of the costs of achieving these reductions. The true costs of road congestion to the economy are the net benefits we forgo if we fail to tackle it.

Water Companies

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions who determines the areas in respect of which bids can be made by water supply companies based outside the area served by an existing company; and, in the event of a successful bid, which company retains (a) ownership of water pipes and (b) responsibility for their maintenance. [108741]

Mr. Mullin: A company can be appointed as a water undertaker or sewerage undertaker by the Director General of Water Services under the Water Industry Act 1991. There is no restriction on the areas in respect of which appointments may be sought within England and Wales. A water company may seek to become the supplier for any area within that of another company by means of an 'inset' appointment: where that company consents to the appointment; where the appointment is in respect of parts of that area where none of the premises is served by that company; or where it is in respect of an area occupied by premises, each of which is supplied with, or likely to be supplied with, not less than 250 megalitres of water in any year. Ownership of water pipes and responsibility for their maintenance rests with the company holding the appointment for the area in question.

The Competition Act 1998 comes into effect on 1 March, providing potential opportunities for greater competition. The Office of Fair Trading and Office of Water Services have issued guidance on the application of the 1998 Act to the water and sewerage sectors. If shared use of a water undertaker's network is agreed, ownership and responsibility for maintenance would remain with the undertaker, but with arrangements for sharing the costs between the two companies.

Air Pollution

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to encourage industrial users of (a) kerosene and (b) gas oil to switch to cleaner fuels. [108712]

Mr. Hill: Under the Marketing of Gas Oil regulations 1994, the sulphur content of gas oil marketed in the UK is limited to 0.2 per cent. The Sulphur Content of Certain Liquid Fuels Directive (1999/32/EC), due to be transposed into member states legislation on 1 July 2000, will prohibit the use of gas oil with a sulphur content higher than 0.2 per cent. from 1 July 2000 and 0.1 per cent. from 1 January 2008.

The combustion of kerosene and gas oil in industrial processes above 20 Megawatts thermal input is regulated under the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Over the past decade the Environment Agency has encouraged operators of the processes they regulate under the Act to switch to less polluting fuels, initially from heavy fuel oil to gas oil, and then (over the last few years) to gas. For example, most gas turbines now use gas as their main fuel with gas oil or kerosene only as a backup in case of an interruption to the gas supply. The Environment Agency will continue to encourage these changes to cleaner fuels.

Light Rapid Transit Systems

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to fund further tram or light railway systems; and if he will make a statement. [108725]

Mr. Hill: Central Government support is available to local authorities to fund light rapid transit systems in the form of grant under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968. Revenue support is provided through the local government finance system to meet the cost of borrowing undertaken by authorities to finance capital expenditure on major transport schemes and for eligible expenditure on local authority Private Finance Initiative projects.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has undertaken into the benefits of tram/light railway systems (a) in the UK and (b) in other European Union countries; and if he will make a statement. [108726]

Mr. Hill: My Department has contributed to studies on the impact of Manchester Metrolink, South Yorkshire Supertram and Croydon Tramlink. Reports on Manchester Metrolink and South Yorkshire Supertram have now been completed. The Department has also funded a report into light rail and complementary measures, which covers European systems. This was published in May 1998. A follow-up study is being undertaken. Copies of the completed reports have been placed in the Library.

Debt Payment

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what data he collects from local authorities on the proportions of invoices paid by them within the agreed contract time. [109049]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1999, authorities will be required to report annually their performance against specified national performance indicators. An indicator is included in respect of the percentage of undisputed invoices paid within 30 days, or mutually agreed terms. The Secretary of State has set targets for such payment of invoices of 95 per cent. for 2000–01, 97.5 per cent. for 2001–02 and 100 per cent. for 2002–03.

Housing Transfers

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what resources are available to his Department to make one-off payments to cover overhanging debt following the transfer of local authority housing stock in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02. [109102]

Mr. Mullin: There are proposals within the Spring Supplementary Estimates to allow for £25 million to assist with the repayment of overhanging debt in the current financial year. The sum required in future years will depend on Ministers' decisions in response to applications for a place on the housing transfer programme from local authorities with overhanging debt. The Government's contribution to extinguishing overhanging debt will be by taking on an agreed amount of a local authority's outstanding debt principal, rather than through the use of programme resources.

Social Housing

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the rules regarding the location of the units of social housing which developers are required by local authorities to include within their developments, with particular reference to the scope for locating those units outside the local authority in question. [109023]

Ms Beverley Hughes: We have no plans to review planning policy on affordable housing. Draft PPG3: "Housing" reaffirms existing policy that local planning authorities may require an element of affordable housing to be provided in suitable residential developments where a local need exists.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to develop the working relationship between National Air Traffic Services Ltd. and Military Air Traffic Control. [108526]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 8 February 2000]: National Air Traffic Services (NATS) and the Ministry of Defence (MOD) already enjoy a good working relationship and provide a joint and integrated air traffic control service. These working arrangements are being formalised in order to facilitate the public private partnership for NATS. Copies of the heads of terms of what will be the contract between the MOD and NATS have been made available to members of the Standing Committee considering the Transport Bill. I have sent a copy of this document to my hon. Friend today.

Road Congestion

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the cost of road congestion to business. [108529]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 8 February 2000]: A number of external estimates have been made of the value road users might place on the elimination of congestion from the on road network. The CBI have put this figure at £15 billion, some estimates are lower, but agree that the figure runs into billions every year and is rising.

The Department has made estimates of the amount of time lost on English roads as a result of congestion in 1996 and produced forecasts for 2010 under a number of illustrative scenarios. The results of this work are set out in our report "Tackling Congestion and Pollution", published last month. We will be doing more work in this area as part of our follow up to that report.

Neither the external estimates, nor those undertaken by my Department, can be translated directly into assessments of the cost of congestion to business or more widely. This is because they relate only to the benefits road users might derive from reduced delays and take no account of the costs of achieving these reductions. The true costs of road congestion are the net economic and other benefits we forgo if we fail to tackle it.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the Government's planning guidance issued to local authorities relating to mobile phone masts over the past three years; and if he will make a statement. [109288]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department has received a range of representations on planning guidance and procedures for telecommunications over the last three years. We issued proposals to improve the arrangements in "Telecommunications Development Control" published in July 1998. This attracted 269 responses. Changes were implemented, by way of amendments to the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995, in July 1999 and explained in Circular 4/99. We also issued for consultation in December 1998 the draft of a joint DETR/DH circular on "Land Use Planning and Electromagnetic Fields". This received 147 responses. The circular will be finalised as soon as practicable after the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones has reported in the spring.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) number and (b) value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109302]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The information requested cannot be provided on the ground of disproportionate cost, as it is not held centrally.

My Department would normally engage external consultants and advisers to manage competitive tendering processes only where particular expertise or knowledge is required which is not available in-house.

Minister for Transport

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what registerable share holdings under the rules laid down for Ministers are held by the Minister for Transport; what board directorships he resigned on his first appointment as a Minister; and what matters pertaining to his Department's work the Minister does not handle in order to avoid potential conflicts of interest. [109386]

Mr. Hill: The arrangements put in place by my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Transport for handling his financial interests on his first appointment as a Minister were made clear in a Press Notice issued by the Scottish Office on 3 August 1998. A copy was placed in the Library of the House. Investments which were not disposed of were placed in a blind trust with an instruction to the solicitors administering the trust that the trust should not deal in shares which relate to my right hon. and noble Friend's ministerial portfolio. In line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, my right hon. and noble Friend is not informed of changes in investments or the state of the portfolio. Consequently, my right hon. and noble Friend does not have any potential conflicts of interests.

Local Government (Payment Culture)

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to improve the payment culture in local government; and if he will make a statement. [109832]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1999, authorities will be required to report annually their performance against specified national performance indicators. An indicator is included in respect of the percentage of undisputed invoices paid within 30 days, or mutually agreed terms. The Secretary of State has set targets for such payment of invoices of 95 per cent. for 2000–01, 97.5 per cent. for 2001–02 and 100 per cent. for 2002–03.

Grants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the initiatives launched by his Department since May 1997 under which specific grants are allocated, indicating in each case and for each financial year the funding provided by central Government. [109310]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The information requested is given in the table.

Countryside Traffic Measures Group

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what dates the Countryside Traffic Measures Group has met; what matters have been discussed; what conclusions have been reached; and if he will make a statement. [109382]

Mr. Hill: The Countryside Traffic Measures Group has met formally on four occasions: 10 July 1997, 4 November 1997, 13 March 1998, and 3 November 1998, and at other times informally or to discuss individual schemes. The inaugural meeting agreed the main objective, which is to develop good practice guidance on rural traffic management designed with sensitivity to the countryside environment. Meetings subsequently have discussed and agreed the schemes to be included in the monitoring project and, latterly, progress of the schemes. Monitoring of the schemes is due to be completed in March 2001. Until then it would be premature to draw conclusions on the measures installed. My Department will continue to help the Countryside Agency and local authorities develop these measures.

Eurostar

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what obligation is placed on Eurostar (UK) to offer reduced rail fares to senior citizens; and what plans he has to change this. [109381]

Mr. Hill: Eurostar (UK) Ltd. is not obliged to offer rail fares at reduced rates to senior citizens and there are no plans to introduce such an obligation.

Road Noise Reduction

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what road noise reduction surfaces his Department has recently approved for use. [109378]

Mr. Hill: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Jon Seddon to Mr. Mark Oaten, dated 10 February 2000:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to respond to your question about what road noise reduction surfaces his Department has recently approved for use. In the absence of the Chief Executive I am responding to the question.

In addition to porous asphalt and exposed aggregate concrete which are included in the specification for trunk road construction, to date the Highways Agency has approved, for use on trunk roads in England, fifteen proprietary surfacing products which have been shown to generate significantly lower noise levels than conventional surfaces. Six of these products were approved in the past year. They are already being widely used for surfacing roads that need maintenance.

For the future, a new scheme for approving a range of innovative products has been set up with other highway authorities under which the British Board of Agreement will certify that products meet the specified performance requirements.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will treat applications in respect of properties on existing roads for double glazing as a method of noise reduction for residents in the same way as such applications in respect of properties on new roads. [109379]

Mr. Hill: The Noise Insulation Regulations apply to properties affected by existing roads which have been physically altered as well as to new roads. I have no plans to extend the scope of these Regulations to properties affected by unaltered roads.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the current progress of genetically modified crop trials in the United Kingdom. [107886]

Mr. Meacher: The farm scale evaluation programme is now starting its second year. The studies are designed to evaluate the impact on farmland wildlife of the management of herbicide tolerant GM crops, with their associated herbicide, as compared with equivalent non-GM crops managed conventionally. The ecological studies are being funded by the UK Government and carried out by independent contractors on fields of GM and conventional crops provided by the industry body SCIMAC. The studies are being overseen by an independent Scientific Steering Committee reporting to the Secretary of State.

The first year of the farm scale evaluations included plantings of oil seed rape and fodder maize in the spring, followed in the autumn by winter oil seed rape. The Scientific Steering Committee reported at the end of the first year that the methodology of the farm scale evaluations was scientifically robust, and gave a firm base from which to proceed to full-scale trials this year. A further announcement about this year's sites will be made shortly.

In November 1999, a renewed agreement between Government and the industry body SCIMAC on the conduct of the farm scale evaluations was reached, to cover the three years through to harvest of crops planted in 2002, including agreement that no general unrestricted cultivation of GM crops will take place in the UK until the farm-scale evaluations are complete. Under the renewed agreement, the farm scale evaluations are likely to be extended in scope this year to cover a further crop, GM beet, dependent on the advice of the Scientific Steering Committee on the scope and validity under UK conditions of similar trials being carried out in Denmark.

The fields grown for this year's trials will also be used to monitor the gene flow between the GM and non-GM crops to determine the depth of cross pollination.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the wind-up costs of the millennium experience. [108772]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The actual financial costs of winding up the New Millennium Experience Company would depend on the commitments and liabilities outstanding at the time when any such decision were taken. Neither the Government, nor the Millennium Commission, nor the Board of NMEC have plans to wind up the New Millennium Experience Company prior to the completion of its remit to run the Millennium Experience to 31 December 2000.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if loans made to the New Millennium Experience Company by the Millennium Commission may be subordinated. [106442]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 24 January 2000]: The Millennium Commission has not made any loans to the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) or any other organisation. The Commission cannot make loans as it has no statutory powers to do so.

All grant made to NMEC is repayable if any surplus is achieved from its operations or asset disposals after the organisation has met its other contractual liabilities. However, this grant does not constitute a loan as there is no guarantee of repayment or certainty of the amount which might be repaid to the Commission. It is open to the Commission to impose, as a condition of grant, the terms on which it will be repaid.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the foods sold in the Millennium Dome that (a) do and (b) do not meet standards required of food produced in the United Kingdom. [108957]

Janet Anderson: There are over 35 catering outlets in and around the Dome at Greenwich selling a wide range of food from snacks to cordon bleu. All are required to meet the same statutory requirements as apply to commercial catering and food outlets in the UK.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the target number of visitors to the Millennium Dome for 2000. [108963]

Janet Anderson: The New Millennium Experience Company's target is 12 million. Visitor numbers in the first month, at just over 366,400 represent just under 4 per cent. of the target. This mirrors the visitor attraction industry norm for January.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the daily capacity of the Millennium Dome. [108962]

Janet Anderson: The licensed capacity of the Dome site, at any one time during the day, is 35,000 plus 2,000 staff.

Millennium River of Fire

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) public and (b) Lottery funds were used in connection with the Millennium River of Fire; and if he will make a statement. [105904]

Janet Anderson: The "Big Time" event on New Year's Eve in central London incorporated a wide range of activities and entertainment throughout the day attended and watched, safely, by about 3 million people. The River of Fire was one part of a spectacular firework display which itself was one part of Big Time. The 17 minute display was enjoyed by people along the Thames embankment and from other vantage points, as well as by a world-wide television audience. No public or lottery funds were involved in paying for the pyrotechnics. The New Millennium Experience Company, who were asked by the Government, the Millennium Commission and other public agencies and organisations involved in the event to co-ordinate and manage it, have, in the absence of major commercial sponsorship for the London-wide event to complement Millennium Commission's grant under their Millennium Festival programme, underwritten these costs.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Computers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 31 January 2000, Official Report, column 472W, on computers, if any of the hackers accessed computer files containing (a) the personal details of jurors or witnesses and (b) details of the jury selection procedures. [109388]

Jane Kennedy: There has only been one recorded instance, in 1995, when a member of staff was found to have possible unauthorised access to juror details. The person, a casual employee, had discovered a supervisor's password and had altered system access permissions. Subsequent investigation found no evidence of tampering with data. The staff member was dismissed.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 31 January 2000, Official Report, column 472W, on computers, what action has been taken to prevent internal hacking incidents on Court Service computers, particularly files containing (a) the personal details of jurors or witnesses and (b) details of the jury selection procedures. [109387]

Jane Kennedy: The Court Service carries out security risk analyses on all its major computer systems to ensure they comply with the security guidelines laid down in HMG's Manual of Protective Security. The countermeasures implemented include unique user names, secure passwords and access to systems and areas of systems on a 'need-to-know' basis. Passwords are changed regularly. All staff are provided with guidance on how to maintain system security. Some juror details are held on systems which are owned and managed by the Department's PFI partners. Security measures have been conveyed to them and are contractual.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 31 January 2000, Official Report, column 472W, on computers, what type of information was accessed by the hackers from computers in the Court Service; and what action was taken (a) to identify the hackers and (b) to discipline Court Service staff involved in the incidents. [109389]

Jane Kennedy: The type of information potentially available to an internal 'hacker' varies according to the system accessed. Approximately half of the incidents involved stand-alone PCs or networked PCs used in the Headquarters of the Lord Chancellor's Department for administrative purposes; the remainder involved operational systems, such as those used for case management. Most incidents involved misuse of another member of staff's user name and password. The information potentially at risk was either a person's own work in progress, or in a few instances, details of cases. All incidents were investigated and remedial action applied. No evidence of compromise of Protectively Marked (or classified) information nor of a breach of the Data Protection Acts was found.

The staff responsible were identified in half of the incidents and all received verbal warnings, except for one who received a written warning and one who was dismissed.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Mrs. Rosemary Nelson

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reason the police did not contact the Committee on the Administration of Justice seeking originals of threats for forensic examination until some days after Mrs. Rosemary Nelson was killed [103821]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 January 2000]: The investigation into the murder of Mrs. Nelson is being directed by Mr. Colin Port, the Deputy Chief Constable of Norfolk. While his investigation is in progress it is not appropriate to comment in detail on it. I understand from the Chief Constable that once the original threatening note to Mrs. Nelson was obtained it was immediately forwarded for independent forensic examination. That examination has not produced results which have, at this point, assisted the investigation

Surveillance Operation, Monaghan

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from (a) the Irish Government and (b) Sinn Fein Assembly Members with regard to an alleged incident of RUC officers crossing the border to mount a surveillance operation in Monaghan. [107583]

Mr. Ingram: We have received one request for information from the British Irish Intergovernmental Secretariat concerning an alleged border incursion by the RUC on 12 January. No representations have been received from Sinn Fein.

Police

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers currently serve in (a) the Special Branch and (b) the Criminal Investigation Department of the RUC. [107819]

Mr. Ingram: At 1 February 2000, 684 officers were serving in the Special Branch and 809 in the Criminal Investigation Department of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to make the Chief Constable of the RUC responsible for assessing the security situation; how often he will be required to make this assessment; and in what form his findings will be made public. [107808]

Mr. Ingram: The Chief Constable has been and continues to be the Secretary of State's principal security adviser. The Chief Constable gives his assessment to the Secretary of State on a regular and confidential basis.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 410W, what communication he has received from bodies other than the US Congress about US-sponsored training and exchange programmes; and what response the RUC will make to fulfil conditions that will be imposed upon joint training and exchange programmes. [107822]

Mr. Ingram: I have received no communication from other bodies about US sponsored training and exchange programmes. The Royal Ulster Constabulary will make every effort to fulfil any conditions that may be imposed upon US joint training and exchange. It is the RUC's policy that officers are selected solely on the eligibility criteria applicable to any proposed training/exchange programme. In keeping with the Royal Ulster Constabulary equal opportunities policy, officers are selected purely on merit.

Disqualifications Bill

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) oral and (b) written representations he has received from members of the House of Commons and the Northern Ireland Assembly on the subject of the Disqualifications Bill, indicating in each case the date on which representations were received; and if he will place all written representations in the Library. [107638]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 January 2000]: Disqualification issues have been discussed with the Irish Government, the UUP, Sinn Fein and the SDLP. I have a large number of contacts with these and other parties at which disqualification and numerous other issues arise and I am unable to supply an exhaustive list of such.

On 20 December, prior to the introduction of the Disqualification Bill, I wrote to the Northern Ireland parties represented in the Commons and the Home Secretary wrote to the leaders of the Conservative and Liberal parties, notifying them of the Government's intentions with regard to the Disqualification Bill. No response, written or oral, has yet been received.

The only written representation I have received on the subject is a letter, dated 14 December 1999, from the right hon. Member for Upper Bann (Mr. Trimble). As a result of this and subsequent discussions the Bill was amended.

It is a matter for the right hon. Member for Upper Bann whether he wishes to publish this letter in the House Library.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals there are to amend the Northern Ireland Office Departmental Expenditure Limit and running costs limit for 1999–2000. [109974]

Mr. Ingram: As the result of Devolution of the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for Northern Ireland shown in table 3.1 of Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1999–2000 has been split into two, one for the Northern Ireland Office £995,487,000 and the second for Northern Ireland Departments £4,856,247,000.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XV, Vote 1 the Northern Ireland Office Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £29,790,000 from £995,487,000 to £1,025,277,000. The running costs limit will be increased by £7,783,000 from £193,523,000 to £201,306,000. The increase is the net effect of take-up of end year flexibility of £15,545,000 and an additional £5,868,000 for the Bloody Sunday Inquiry. Other changes to the DEL include £8,144,000 from Northern Ireland Departments and £233,000 from the Home Office.

The increase will be offset by a charge on the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

BNFL

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library copies of the material supplied by BNFL to members of the Fukui Regional Assembly regarding the problems with their MOX fuel. [106714]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 3 February 2000]: I understand that BNFL did not pass any information to the Fukui Regional Assembly.

Export Licences

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many licences to export goods to Iran have been (a) granted and (b) refused, in the last 12 months; [108474]

(2) how many applications for licences to export goods to Iran have been rejected in the past 12 months on the grounds that there was an unacceptable risk that the goods might be diverted to a weapons of mass destruction programme. [108475]

Dr. Howells: The entry in the relevant legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating. The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated. Between 1 January 1999 and 28 January 2000, 91 Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) and one Open Individual Export Licence (OIEL) were issued covering the export to consignees or end-users in Iran. During the period 18 applications for a SIEL and no applications for an OIEL were refused. Individual applications and licences may cover a range of goods with various ratings (and OIELs may also cover a range of countries). Where this is so, the licence is included in the table in the total for all of the relevant ratings.

Standard Individual Export Licences issued and applications refused for such licences between 1 January 1999 and 28 January 2000 covering the export to Iran of goods entered in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, commonly known as the Military List

The one OIEL issued covered goods with the rating 5A002.

The paper records for the 18 applications for a SIEL that were refused have been examined and seven were refused because of concern that the goods would be diverted to programmes relating to weapons of mass destruction. I am disclosing this information in accordance with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. This information should be considered in light of the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 307–08W.

Coal Mining

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last discussed state aid for the UK deep coal mining industry with DG VII; and if he will make a statement. [109021]

Mrs. Liddell: Officials in the Department are in regular contact with the European Commission on issues concerning the coal industry and the European Coal and Steel Community State aid regime that applies to it.

Natural Gas

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the life span of British natural gas resources at the current rate of depletion, and taking into account the consents for gas-powered electricity generating stations which have been granted but not implemented. [109115]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 8 February 2000]: Estimates of the United Kingdom's remaining recoverable reserves of gas are given in the Department of Trade and Industry's "Development of the Oil and Gas Resources of the United Kingdom 1999", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. This shows that discovered reserves could yield 1,795 billion cubic metres (bcm). This is equivalent to 18 years of production at current rates. If the full potential from as yet undrilled structures were to be realised, this could raise discovered reserves to 3,625 bcm. Estimates of reserves are, however, not constant over time and exploration may add to these estimates.

Whether production from these reserves will fully meet UK demand for any future period depends on a number of variables such as the timing of commencement and cessation of production in particular fields. As the Government indicated in their Energy White Paper in October 1998 (Cm 4071), it is likely that some gas imports would be required by the end of this decade.

Metric and Imperial Measures

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidance he has given to enforcement officials in respect of sales of goods sold from loose stock by measured weight in metric and imperial units. [109442]

Dr. Howells: Local authorities have an independent statutory responsibility to enforce weights and measures legislation. As with the earlier stages of metrication, DTI has encouraged the local authorities to provide small traders with information and advice about the change to metric weights for the sale of loose goods, and to recognise the difficulties that some small traders have had in changing to metric weights by 31 December 1999.

DEFENCE

Correspondence

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Falkirk, West, dated 17 December 1999, referring to an unanswered letter from the Trident Ploughshares campaign, dated 31 August 1999. [105908]

Mr. Spellar: I replied to my hon. Friend on 22 January.

Punishment Warrants

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of summary trials resulting in punishment warrants in the Royal Navy in (a) 1995, (b) 1996, (c) 1997, (d) 1998 and (e) 1999. [107869]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 1 February 2000]: The information requested is as follows:

Land Mine Clearance

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effectiveness of methods currently in use for anti-personnel land mines clearance. [108633]

Dr. Moonie: My Department has not conducted any recent research specifically on the effectiveness of methods currently in use for anti-personnel land mine clearance. However, we have carried out limited trials on commercially produced hand held metal detectors.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received concerning the Dervish anti-personnel land mines clearance project. [108632]

Dr. Moonie: Since 1997, my Department has received a number of representations concerning the Dervish anti-personnel land mines clearance project and the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) has been in correspondence with the head of the project team. The Dervish device is intended for area clearance of anti-personnel mines and while it may have a role in humanitarian mine clearance, the system does not currently meet the requirements of the Armed Services.

Project Horizon

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of the UK's decision to pull out of Project Horizon on the future integration of European defence (a) policies and (b) industries. [109036]

Dr. Moonie: In April 1999, the participating nations—UK, France and Italy—decided not to proceed with the tri-national Horizon programme upon completion of its Project Definition phase in October 1999. We are, however, continuing to develop collaboratively the Principal Anti-Air Missile System.

The continuing commitment of European nations to strengthen their military capabilities, and to develop the means for undertaking crisis management, was demonstrated in the conclusions of both the European Council and North Atlantic Council meetings of Defence and Foreign Ministers in December 1999.

The Government remain committed to facilitating European defence industrial restructuring. We have negotiated a Framework Agreement with European partner nations designed to remove unnecessary obstacles to defence restructuring and hope to sign this Agreement shortly.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

European Charter on Human Rights

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Council if, pursuant to her answer of 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 532W, concerning the proposed European Charter of Human Rights, she will list the meetings which the hon. Members for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) and for Eastleigh (Mr. Chidgey) and the Baroness Howells have (a) attended or (b) plan to attend; and if a Minister will report to the House on progress in the work of the drafting body prior to its submission to the European Council. [108754]

Mr. Vaz: I have been asked to reply.

There have been two meetings of the Charter of Rights Convention: on 17 December 1999 and 1–2 February 2000. The two parliamentary delegates were present at both. The next Convention session is an informal meeting on 24–25 February. The individual delegates and alternates are best placed to say which future meetings they plan to attend.

The House will have several opportunities to discuss the Charter, for example in the six-monthly debate before the June 2000 European Council.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ukraine

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the approximate expenditure to date of the European Union in respect of the Partnership Agreement with the Ukraine; how much is budgeted for 2000; what (a) proposals and (b) reports concerning such expenditure have been compiled; and whether each of these has been made public. [105083]

Mr. Vaz: There is a wide range of Community and bilateral programmes which support the EU/Ukraine Partnership and Co-operation Agreement. The main Community programme is TACIS, from which over 600 million euro was committed between 1991–98. The TACIS 2000 budget for Ukraine has not yet been decided. Since 1991, Ukraine has also benefited from EU grants towards the closure of Chernobyl (210 million euro), EU macro-financial loans (565 million euro) and humanitarian aid (12 million euro). In addition EU member states have provided bilaterally some 2.5 billion euro in loans and grants between 1991 and 1997. The European Commission's proposals for TACIS spending appear in its Country Strategy Papers, which are not made public. Reports of TACIS expenditure are, however, published annually. An independent evaluation of TACIS in Ukraine was published in 1998.

Middle East

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest developments in the middle east peace process. [109053]

Mr. Hain: We are greatly concerned by the recent escalation of violence in Lebanon and the suspension of Permanent Status Talks between the Israelis and Palestinians.

We urge all parties in Lebanon to exercise restraint and to respect the April 1996 Understandings. These incidents confirm the pressing need for renewed efforts to achieve a comprehensive negotiated peace in the region, including implementation of UNSCR 425.

We have high-level contact with all the parties to the peace process and offer what help we can in the search for agreement.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to attend the 2000 Review Conference of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. [109175]

Mr. Hain: I represent my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at the NPT Review Conference and deliver the UK address to the plenary session. I would welcome any thoughts my hon. Friend might have on the matter.

Indonesia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy in relation to the sectarian conflict in Maluku; what discussions he has had with the Indonesian President on this issue; and if he will make a statement. [109109]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary and I discussed the sectarian conflict in Maluku with President Wahid and his Foreign Minister when they were in London on 1 February. We expressed our concerns to President Wahid about the violence and loss of life. President Wahid reaffirmed his commitment to secure lasting peace between the two communities. We shall support him vigorously in his efforts and stand ready to help him in any way possible.

NATO

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will deposit in the Library a copy of the Wilton Park Conference report on NATO's role in maintaining European security. [109051]

Mr. Vaz: This report has now been placed in the Libraries of the House. All reports of Wilton Park Conferences are publicly available, including on the Wilton Park website (www.wiltonpark.org.uk.).

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 (a) the number and (b) the total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that (i) were put out to competitive tender, (ii) were not put out to competitive tender and (iii) were let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109263]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 9 February 2000]: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. FCO procurement policy requires goods and services to be acquired by competitive tender unless there are compelling reasons to the contrary or they are below £500 in value. Sole source and single source procurement is subject to special safeguards.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number and value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109449]

Mr. Hain: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Hong Kong

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will publish the next report to Parliament on Hong Kong and the Sino-British Joint Declaration. [109973]

Mr. Battle: The sixth report in this series, covering the period July-December 1999, was published today and copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House. A copy of the report is also available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website (www.fco.gov.uk). The report includes a foreword by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary. I commend the report to the House.

Gibraltar

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements will be made in the interval between the departure of the Governor of Gibraltar and his successor taking up his appointment; and if he will make a statement. [109505]

Mr. Vaz: During the interval between the departure of the present Governor of Gibraltar and the arrival of his successor, the Deputy Governor will be Acting Governor.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reason there has been a delay in announcing the appointment of the new Governor of Gibraltar; and when he expects the announcement to be made. [109506]

Mr. Vaz: There has been no delay. The announcement of the appointment of the next Governor of Gibraltar will be made in the near future.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

30. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the background of the Crown Prosecution Service inspectorate. [107913]

The Solicitor-General: The CPS Inspectorate was established in 1997 to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the CPS. The Glidewell report recommended that the Inspectorate should be retained and that its role should be expanded. There were also recommendations for introducing a more substantial lay element. These recommendations have been accepted, but the Government have gone further and wishes to place the Inspectorate on an independent statutory basis. This House will shortly be asked to consider the CPS Inspectorate Bill.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Solicitor-General what proportion of the files referred to the Crown Prosecution Service by the Police do not lead to prosecution in (a) England and Wales and (b) West Yorkshire. [109054]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service records case outcomes in terms of the number of defendants whose case was handled by the Service, rather than in terms of the number of files dealt with. During the year ending December 1999, a prosecution did not proceed in respect of 250,738 defendants in England and Wales, representing 18.4 per cent. of completed cases. In CPS West Yorkshire, a prosecution did not proceed in respect of 15,635 defendants, representing 18.5 per cent. of completed cases.

Young Offenders

31. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Solicitor-General what assessment he has made of the Crown Prosecution Service's performance in Merseyside on speeding up the process towards the trial of young offenders. [107915]

The Solicitor-General: When I visited CPS Merseyside in September last year, I observed at first hand the efforts made by the CPS and other local agencies to reduce the time it took to prosecute persistent young offenders. The Area, in conjunction with other criminal justice agencies in Merseyside, is implementing practices that should make further significant reductions for all young offenders.

Financial Crime

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Solicitor-General what recent discussions he has had with the Financial Services Authority about tackling serious financial crime. [107912]

The Solicitor-General: As my hon. Friend is aware, the Law Officers do not have statutory Ministerial responsibility for the Financial Services Authority. I have visited the Financial Services Authority, although not in the recent past, and was given a general introduction to their work, including enforcement work. The Financial Services Authority share responsibility for tackling serious financial crime with the police, Department of Trade and Industry, Serious Fraud Office, DPP in Northern Ireland and the Crown Office in Scotland. Officials are developing guidelines on the co-ordination of the work of these bodies in relation to suspected financial crime. It is proposed to publish these guidelines when they have been agreed.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the potential conflict of interest in the practice of further education colleges (a) employing and (b) receiving on secondment, staff from companies engaged as the college's auditors; and if he will discuss this matter with the Further Education Funding Council prior to issuing guidance on practice. [107972]

Mr. Wicks: It is for individual colleges to determine whether to use auditors for other services. Audit arrangements in FE have been strengthened by the requirement that auditors cannot be responsible both for internal and external audits. The Further Education Funding Council for England require all colleges to disclose in their accounts remuneration to auditors for their services.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many further education colleges have employed external consultants to advise on unit farming; and if he will make a statement. [107973]

Mr. Wicks: This information is not held centrally. But in designing the new funding systems that will be employed by the Learning and Skills Council, subject to the passage of legislation, we intend that arrangements should be simpler to understand, administer and audit than current arrangements.

New Deal

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide a breakdown of the total expenditure on each of the new deal schemes. [109279]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have been asked to reply.
The allocation of the Windfall Tax receipts between the New Deal programmes, as currently estimated, is set out in Table 4.1 of the 1999 Pre Budget Report.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firearms have been misappropriated over the last five years from (a) the police, (b) the Ministry of Defence police, (c) the Atomic Energy Authority police and (d) the armed forces. [108825]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information on the misappropriation of firearms from the police service is not collected centrally, but inquiries of 41 police forces in England, Wales and Scotland indicate that firearms have been misappropriated from the police in only one incident over the past five years.

On 24 January 1997, an MP5 carbine was misappropriated when the police vehicle in which it was carried was hi-jacked by armed criminals. The vehicle and the weapon were recovered two days later.

No firearms are recorded as having been misappropriated from the Ministry of Defence police or the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary during the period concerned.

Dangerous Weapons

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further restrictions he will place on the sale and possession of swords and bayonets. [108755]

Mr. Charles Clarke: It is an offence under section 1 of the Prevention of Crime Act 1953 for any person to have with them an offensive weapon in a public place, including private premises to which the public have access. In addition the Criminal Justice Act 1988 banned the manufacture, sale and importation of 14 bladed, pointed and other offensive weapons in addition to flick knives and gravity knives, the sale of which was already banned under the Restriction of Offensive Weapons Act 1959.

We are currently considering the appropriateness and feasibility of amending this legislation.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total number of asylum seekers registering in each EU country (a) in the last 10 years, (b) in each of those years and (c) in total for each country ranked by number of asylum seekers per 1,000 of population. [109182]

Mrs. Roche: Information on asylum applications received by each European Union country is collated by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. The annual figures for 1990 to 1999 for each European Union country are given in table 1.

Table 2 shows the number of asylum applications per 1,000 of population within each European Union country.

Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has taken to ensure that current overstayers will not lose the right to a suspensive appeal against a decision to remove them taken after 1 October. [109670]

Mrs. Roche: I refer my hon. Friend, to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Gerrard) on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 167W.

Sexual Offences

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Sex Offences review will report; when the consultation period will commence; and when consequent legislation will be introduced. [109091]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Sex Offences Review hopes to report to Ministers in the spring. Its proposals will be published for consultation in the summer. The timing of any subsequent legislation has yet to be decided.

Racial Harassment

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were reported to the police alleging racial harassment in (a) Cleveland, (b) Northern Region and (c) the United Kingdom in each of the last three years; and how many in each category resulted in a conviction. [109459]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of alleged racial harassment cases reported to the police is not available. The number of offences of racially aggravated harassment recorded by the police in the six months ending September 1999 is given in the table. This offence has been recorded separately by the police since 1 April 1999.

	Number
Cleveland	5
North East Government Region	110
England and Wales	5,385

No details of the convictions for this offence are currently available for this time period.

Child Abuse

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were reported to the police alleging child abuse in (a) Cleveland, (b) Northern Region and (c) the United Kingdom in each of the last three years; and how many in each category resulted in a conviction. [109460]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of alleged child abuse cases reported to the police is not available. Recorded crime data do not give information about victims unless this is implicit in the description of the offence. The offences of gross indecency with a child, unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 13, and unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 16 are the only sexual offences recorded which explicitly involve children as victims. Offences of violence against the person which explicitly involve children as victims include cruelty to and neglect of children, abandoning a child under two years, and child abduction. There are many other violent and sexual offences which could involve children as victims. Cruelty to and neglect of children has been a recorded crime since 1 April 1998. The recorded crime figures for the other five offences given, and cruelty to and neglect of children, are as follows:

Year ending	Cleveland	North East Government Region	England and Wales
March 1997	19	119	3,080
March 1998	23	106	2,999
March 1999[1]	12	129	3,125
Cruelty to and neglect of children
March 1999[1]	8	89	2,300

[1] Compiled under the revised counting rules in force from 1 April 1998.

Conviction data, taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database, are not directly comparable with recorded crime figures, as they relate to individuals found guilty rather than offences. The number of persons convicted for the five offences given above from 1996 to 1998 (calendar years) are as follows:

	1996	1997	1998
Cleveland	5	3	7
North East Government Region	25	28	46
England and Wales	475	451	546

The number of persons convicted for cruelty to or neglect of children from 1996 to 1998 (calendar years) are as follows:

	1996	1997	1998
Cleveland	3	1	4
North East Government Region	19	21	14
England and Wales	293	390	390

Domestic Violence

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were reported to the police alleging domestic violence in (a) Cleveland, (b) Northern Region and (c) the United Kingdom in each of the last three years; and how many in each category resulted in a conviction. [109461]

Mr. Boateng: "Domestic violence" is not a specific offence, but a means of describing a number of offences when committed in particular circumstances. This means that the available information is derived not from the usual recorded crime statistics but from specific returns submitted by police forces in England and Wales to Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary. The figures are set out in the table.

The definition of domestic violence used for these returns was:

"Any form of physical, sexual or emotional abuse which takes place within the context of a close relationship. In most cases, the relationship will be between partners, married, co-habiting or otherwise; or ex-partners".

Unfortunately, this definition was interpreted in differing ways by different police forces, for instance because some forces included child abuse. This prevented proper statistical comparisons or a clear understanding of what the returns indicated. From 1 April 1999, the definition of domestic violence for the purpose of statistical returns to Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary has been:

"The term 'domestic violence' shall be understood to mean any violence between current or former partners in an intimate relationship, wherever and whenever the violence occurs. The violence may include physical, sexual, emotional or financial abuse".

Home Detention Curfew Scheme

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe) of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 596W, how many curfewees charged with an offence while on home detention curfew were charged with an offence similar in character to that for which they were serving a sentence of imprisonment prior to being released on the curfew. [109509]

Mr. Boateng: According to Prison Service records, of the 174 curfewees referred to in the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe) on 2 February, who have been charged with a further offence while subject to Home Detention Curfew, 69 have been charged with an offence similar to that for which they were serving a sentence of imprisonment prior to being released on curfew. In one case it has not been possible, in the time available, to confirm whether the further offence is similar in nature to the original offence. I will write to the hon. Member when this information is available.

Human Rights Act 1998

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of extending the requirement for a certificate of compatibility with the Human Rights Act 1998 to private legislation. [107914]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Human Rights Act 1998 applies equally to Public and Private Bills, once they are enacted. Under the Human Rights Act 1998, Acts of Parliament will have to be interpreted compatibly with the Convention rights if possible. Where this is not possible, a higher court will be able to issue a declaration of incompatibility. This applies to all primary legislation as defined by the Human Rights Act, which includes private Acts, 1998.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 493W, when the hon. Member for Torbay will receive a reply. [109448]

Mrs. Roche: I wrote to the hon. Member on 9 February. I am sorry for the delay.

Drugs

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend his policy on (a) cannabis and (b) class B controlled drugs; and if he will make a statement. [109507]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government have no plans to amend their existing policy in relation to cannabis and other Class B controlled drugs.

Racially Aggravated Offences

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will publish figures for race hate crimes committed in each year between 1990 and 1999 as a proportion of all reported crime; [109464]

(2) if he will publish figures for successful prosecutions of race hate crimes committed in (a) the Thames Valley police area, (b) the Metropolitan police force area and (c) England in each year between 1990 and 1999; [109463]

(3) what were the annual police figures for reported race hate crimes in (a) England, (b) the Thames Valley police area and (c) the Metropolitan police area in each year between 1990 and 1999. [109462]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information is available on the new racially aggravated offences which were introduced under the Crime and Disorder Act in October 1998. The latest information indicates that 10,982 offences were recorded by all police forces in England and Wales for the period 1 April 1999–30 September 1999, 218 in Thames Valley and 7,473 in the Metropolitan police.

Additional information is also available on the number of racist incidents that were recorded by the police which is wider in definition than crimes. Information covering 1993–94 to 1998–99 was published in December 1999 in Statistics on Race and the Criminal Justice System, a copy of which is in the Library. Owing to the broader definition of such offences than those covered by the recorded crime statistics it would be misleading to compare the two figures. It is currently not possible to say what proportion of such offences resulted in successful prosecutions.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many licence applications involving the administration of tobacco smoke to conscious animals were granted in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998; how many animals, broken down by species, were involved in the research in each year; into which severity banding the research fell; and how many animals died as a result of the research in each year; [109078]

(2) what account he took of section 5(4) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 before deciding to grant project licence applications PPL/70 04972 and PPL/70 04956; and if he will make a statement; [109079]

(3) how many animals broken down by species were involved in PPL 170 04972 and PPL170 04956; how the tobacco smoke is administered to the animals; how many convulsive spasms each animal is expected to suffer; into which severity banding his research falls; how many animals have died to date as a result of the research; and if he will make a statement. [109077]

(4) if he will make it his policy to ban live testing for the effects of tobacco smoke; and if he will make a statement; [109080]

(5) if he will withdraw licences authorising companies to conduct live animal testing into the effects of tobacco smoke; and if he will make a statement. [109076]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government stand firmly by their ban on the testing of tobacco products which was announced in November 1997. There will be no approval for any such tests. Two recently approved applications are for programmes that do not test the effects of tobacco smoke, but enable the development of treatments for chronic obstructive pulmonary diseases such as bronchitis and emphysema, which seriously debilitate many people. These health problems derive mainly from smoking, including passive smoking, as well as occupationally related lung diseases, such as those caused by the inhalation of coal dust. Tobacco smoke is the only test material to model reliably the effects that will enable a better understanding of the disease processes and improved medical treatments. The licensed research programmes are to investigate medical treatments, not the safety approval of tobacco products.

The Inspectorate and the Animal Procedures Committee have advised that the licences are justifiable and that the benefits to man and animals would outweigh the costs to the animals involved. As with all project licence applications, these two licences were issued only after a full and careful assessment, including whether there were alternatives which replace animal use, reduce the number of animals needed or refine the experimental design to minimise suffering.

Strict conditions were made in authorising these two programmes of research. The maximum number and species of animal that may be used per year are 1,100 mice and 1,100 guinea-pigs in one; and 2,000 mice, 1,000 rats and 1,000 guinea-pigs, in the other. Tobacco smoke is to be administered by placing the animals in inhalation chambers for set periods. They are not expected to suffer convulsive spasms. the severity bands for both project licenses are classed as moderate. To date, no animals have died as a result of the research.

Table 5a of the Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals shows the number of animals used in non-toxicology procedures each year. Figures for the use of tobacco as a pharmacological tool or standard are not separated out, but there were no instances where tobacco smoke was administered to conscious animals in 1996, 1997 and 1998. No licenses were issued for the administration of tobacco smoke to conscious animals and no animals were used for tobacco research in any of these three years.

Table 10a of the annual statistics gives details of the number of animals used in toxicology (safety) testing. In submitting the data for this table, licensees are instructed to include tests on tobacco alternatives with data for protocols that have used tobacco in any form. Again, the tables show that no animals were used for the safety testing of tobacco of tobacco substitutes during 1996, 1997 and 1998.

Evaluating research proposals involving the use of animals is difficult and requires a delicate moral balance to be struck. Scientific developments have saved many human lives and cured many illnesses and have contributed to the health of animals and the protection of the environment. Much knowledge has come from experiments on animals. To have failed to allow that work may have resulted in many humans dying and suffering where instead they have been cured or helped. The Government want to prevent unnecessary experiments involving animals but it would be immoral, in our view, to deny victims of diseases like bronchitis and emphysema the assistance that new scientific knowledge could bring from work such as projects PPL 70/04972 and PPL 70/04956.

Hillsborough Inquiry

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when copies of the information which formed the background to the Hillsborough inquiry will be moved to Liverpool; and where in the city they will be made available for public access. [109342]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Copies of the evidence considered by Lord Justice Stuart-Smith were placed in the Library following the scrutiny of the Hillsborough disaster. In response to earlier representations by my hon. Friend the Member for Crosby (Mrs. Curtis-Thomas), it was confirmed the House is willing to loan the material to a nominated library in Liverpool.

HEALTH

Quality Protects Initiative

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the time currently taken by each police force to make police checks under the Quality Protects Initiative. [108214]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have been asked to reply. Separate information in the form requested is not available centrally.

Geriatric Care

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the weekly cost of keeping an elderly person (a) in an NHS ward and (b) in a residential home; and if he will make a statement. [109477]

Mr. Hutton: The cost per week of patients using a bed for the medical speciality of geriatrics was estimated to be £903 in 1998–99.

The weekly cost of keeping an elderly person in a residential home during 1997–98 is estimated to have been £252. Figures for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 are not available.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prostate cancer operations there were in each health authority in each of the past 10 years. [102592]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Influenza

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (a) how many cases of influenza per 100,000 there have to be for an influenza outbreak to be defined as an epidemic and (b) how many cases of influenza per 100,000 there were on 11 January. [105677]

Yvette Cooper: The epidemiologists' definition of an epidemic is an increase in the frequency of occurrence of a disease in a population above its baseline level for a specified period of time. The term epidemic can be used when describing the pattern of either infectious or chronic diseases in the population.

Administrative definitions can be set for diseases in which an arbitrary threshold is selected above which the term "epidemic" is applied. In the case of influenza, the Department introduced in 1996 an administrative definition of an "epidemic" for a rate of consultation (with a sample of general practices) of 400 per 100,000 population in a week.

Such influenza activity in England is thus monitored through the Royal College of General Practitioners (RCGP) sentinel surveillance scheme. This records the number of first visits to a general practitioner with influenza-illness. Other respiratory illnesses prevalent at this time of year are recorded separately.

This system does not and cannot measure the real incidence of influenza since it is restricted to those people who visit their general practitioner. This year a major campaign was run to encourage people to choose their own remedy, to consult a pharmacist and to use NHS Direct, as alternative sources of advice.

The severity of the disease itself can also vary from year to year. This year the elderly have been particularly affected by the complications of influenza. The level of cases of acute bronchitis, a serious complication of influenza, is the highest the RCGP surveillance system has seen for 15 years. In describing epidemics some other countries formally include measures of severity in the definition of an epidemic. For example, the United States declares an epidemic when the proportion of deaths due to pneumonia and influenza passes a certain threshold.

The latest confirmed figures from the RCGP show an overall rate of consultation of 236 per 100,000 for England for the week ending 16 January 2000.

Priority Health Targets (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress made by Shropshire Health Authority on the Government's priority health targets of cancer, coronary heart disease, mental health and accidents. [105529]

Yvette Cooper: Shropshire Health Authority is making good progress in relation to these four priority areas.
The local trend in premature mortality from all cancers has been declining over the past decade. Data for September 1999[1] show that all referrals for breast cancer are being seen within the standard two weeks at both the Royal Shrewsbury Hospitals National Health Service Trust and the Princess Royal Hospital NHS Trust.

The health authority is well on course to meet its target to reduce the death rate from coronary heart disease and stroke in people under 75 by at least 40 per cent. by 2010. The health authority is hopeful that it will meet the target in 2006.

The mental health target is to reduce the death rate from suicide and undetermined injury by at least 20 per cent. by 2010. Shropshire has one of the lowest rates of suicide in the West Midlands and there is a downward trend in the figures.

Shropshire has identified a need to focus on preventing serious and fatal casualties from road traffic accidents. Particular attention is being placed on the 15–24 years age group and the health authority is planning several actions to take this forward.

BCG Vaccinations

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on how stocks of BCG vaccine are allocated on the basis of clinical need; who makes the applications; and who determines the allocation. [105193]

Yvette Cooper: BCG vaccine is currently being made available at the request of clinicians who have determined, on the basis of clinical need and in accordance with existing recommendations, that an individual is at higher risk from tuberculosis and that immunisation with BCG vaccine is necessary. The Department is advised on BCG vaccination policy by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation. The recommendations are contained in the Health Departments' handbook, "Immunisation against Infectious Disease". Those at higher risk of tuberculosis include health service staff who may have contact with infectious patients or their specimens; veterinary and other staff who handle animal species known to be susceptible to tuberculosis; staff of prisons, old people's homes, refugee hostels and hostels for the homeless; contacts of cases known to be suffering from active pulmonary tuberculosis; and, immigrants from countries with a high prevalence of tuberculosis and their children and infants wherever born.

Vaccine is distributed through Farillon who are the national distribution agent of all vaccines supplied as a part of the routine childhood immunisation programme. While supplies are limited, orders are accepted only for those at high risk; ultimately, the distributor has to trust the integrity of those placing orders.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the routine BCG vaccination programme for school children in the parliamentary constituency of Brentwood and Ongar will recommence. [105194]

Yvette Cooper: The schools BCG vaccination programme will recommence in England once we have assurance that uninterrupted vaccine supply can be guaranteed. The problem with the supply of BCG has been due to manufacturing problems with Medeva Pharma who provide the only licensed source of BCG vaccine. The assurances we have received so far do not allow us to give a date for restarting the programme.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many school children in the Brentwood and Ongar constituency are waiting to receive BCG vaccination. [105191]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available centrally.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the categories of children at greatest clinical risk from tuberculosis ranked in order of risk. [105176]

Yvette Cooper: The categories of children at greatest risk from tuberculosis are as listed in Chapter 32 of the 1996 edition of the health departments handbook "Immunisation against Infectious Disease", copies of which are available in the Library.

Vaccines

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the availability of vaccines to GP surgeries and community health clinics, with particular reference to triple vaccines and TB vaccines. [105519]

Yvette Cooper: The only childhood vaccine that is currently in short supply to general practitioner surgeries is the pre-school Diphtheria/Tetanus (DT) booster vaccine. A new manufacturer has recently had its DT vaccine licensed for use in the United Kingdom and the first batches are likely to be released and available at the end of February 2000. This should resolve the recent shortages of this vaccine.

TB vaccines are normally used in hospitals, chest clinics and at schools sessions, and are not usually ordered by GPs. Both BCG and Tuberculin PPD vaccines have been in short supply over recent months, but continue to be available for high-risk patients.

Clinical Staff (Temporary Contracts)

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to offer temporary contracts in the United Kingdom to Canadian consultants, doctors and other clinical staff. [109114]

Ms Stuart: None. Current arrangements give health authorities and National Health Service trusts flexibility to offer contracts without term (i.e. permanent), fixed term contracts (i.e. short fixed term) and fixed term rolling contracts as appropriate to the circumstances of a particular appointment.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mrs. J. Duffy

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will pay compensation to Mrs. J. Duffy of Kingsbridge, following the outcome of her appeal against the Benefits Agency on 6 October 1999 and the reinstatement of her benefit. [108995]

Mr. Bayley: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 9 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question if he will pay compensation to Mrs. J. Duffy of Kingsbridge, following the outcome of her appeal against the Benefits Agency on 6 October, 1999 and the reinstatement of her benefit.

Mrs. Duffy's case has been carefully considered and an award of £50.00 consolatory special payment has been made for gross inconvenience. Mrs. Duffy has been invited to submit evidence to allow consideration of further ex-gratia payments for her out of pocket expenses.

Compensation by way of interest on delayed arrears of Disability Living Allowance is not payable in Mrs. Duffy's case as she has not been deprived of benefit as a result of clear and unambiguous official error or exceptional delay. Guidelines for which are laid down in the Department's "Financial Redress for Maladministration" manual.

I hope this is helpful.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number and value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109454]

Mr. Rooker: There have been no contracts let by the Department to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes during the period May 1997 to date.

New Deal (Lone Parents)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the reason for the numbers of ethnic minority interviewees on the New deal for lone parents who are subsequently found to be ineligible for the caseload. [109508]

Angela Eagle: All lone parents on income support are eligible to join the New Deal for Lone Parents (NDLP). The rate at which lone parents from ethnic minorities agree to participate in NDLP following an initial interview is in line with the equivalent figure for all lone parents (currently 90 per cent. and 89 per cent. respectively).

The latest results show that 6.7 per cent. of all leavers from the NDLP caseload left because they became ineligible for the programme. The equivalent figure for ethnic minority lone parents is 5.1 per cent.

Notes:

1. Ethnic group is recorded for only 62 per cent. of clients at present.
2. Lone parents on the NDLP caseload may become ineligible owing to a change in circumstance, for example lone parents who re-partner.

Incomes

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people of working age lived in (a) households with incomes below (i) 50 per cent., (ii) 60 per cent. and (iii) 70 per cent. of median household income, and (b) households with incomes below (x) 40 per cent., (y) 50 per cent. and (z) 60 per cent. of average household income, (1) before and (2) after housing costs in (A) 1997–98 and (B) 1998–99, with median and mean household incomes fixed at their 1996–97 value in real terms. [109346]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

Proportion of working age people, in 1997–98, living in households below various income thresholds defined as percentages of 1996–97 averages in real terms

AHC	14	19	24	13	19	25

[1] Thresholds are calculated as percentages of 1996–97 averages in real terms

Notes:

1. The information comes from the 'Households Below Average Income' (HBAI) series. The estimates are presented on household income both Before Housing Costs (BHC) and After Housing Costs (AHC) in line with HBAI conventions. All the estimates in the table relate to adults in families where the adult male is of working age, or the adult single female is of working age.

2. Estimates are derived from the Family Resources Survey for 1997–98, and relate to Great Britain. All estimates are subject to sampling error.
3. Information for 1997–98 is the latest year available.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children lived in (a) households with incomes below (i) 50 per cent., (ii) 60 per cent. and (iii) 70 per cent. of median household income and (b) in households with incomes below (x) 40 per cent., (y) 50 per cent. and (z) 60 per cent. of mean household income, (1) before and (2) after housing costs in (A) 1997–98 and (B) 1998–99, with median and mean household income fixed at their 1996–97 value in real terms. Notes:
1. The information comes from the 'Households Below Average Income' (HBAI) series. The estimates are presented on household income both Before Housing Costs and After Housing Costs in line with HBAI conventions.
2. Children are defined as an individual aged under 16 or an unmarried 16 to 18-year-old on a course up to and including 'A' level standard or 'Highers' in Scotland.
3. Estimates are derived from the Family Resources Survey for 1997–98, and relate to Great Britain. All estimates are subject to sampling error.
4. Information for 1997–98 is the latest year available.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many adults aged under 60 years were in families in which they or their partner had been in receipt of (a) income support and (b) income based jobseeker's allowance for two years or more in (i) May 1998 and (ii) May 1999. [109348]

Mr. Bayley: The information is in the table:

Caseloads of claimants and partners who are aged under 60 and have been in receipt of IS/JSA(IB) for two years or more in May 1998 and May 1999

Thousand

Date	Benefit	Number of claimants	Number of partners
May 1998	Income Support	1,364	210
May 1999	Income Support	1,330	210
May 1998	Income Based JSA	213	50
May 1999	Income Based JSA	181	41

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Figures are based on cases where either the claimant or their partner or both are aged less than 60 years.
3. Income based JSA figures may include cases which have entitlement to benefit via the contributory route.
4. Based on a 5 per cent. sample, therefore subject to sampling error.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the median income for the bottom quintile of (a) single pensioners and (b) pensioner couples (i) before housing costs and (ii) after housing costs in (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99, with median household income fixed at the July 1996 value in real terms. [109343]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the table.

Median net income of the bottom quintile of the net income distribution—1997–98

Income distribution	Median income of the bottom quintile
Net income before housing costs
Pensioner couples	122
Single pensioners	66
Net income after housing costs
Pensioner couples	102
Single pensioners	52

[1] July 1996 prices

Notes:
1. Estimates are derived from the Family Resources Survey for 1997–98, and relate to Great Britain. All estimates are subject to sampling error.
2. Single pensioners are defined as single (non-cohabiting) people over State pension age (65 for men, 60 for women); pensioner couples are defined as couples (married or cohabiting) where the man is over State pension age.
3. All estimates are expressed in July 1996 prices and are rounded to the nearest £ per week, although they are not necessarily accurate to that degree.
4. The distribution of income has been calculated separately under the before housing costs and after housing costs measures of income. The distribution of income is also calculated separately for each group, i.e. estimates for pensioner couples show the median income for the bottom quintile of the pensioner couples' income distribution.
5. Information for 1997–98 is the latest year available.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners in (a) households with incomes below (i) 50 per cent., (ii) 60 per cent. and (iii) 70 per cent. of median household income, and (b) households with incomes below (x) 40 per cent. of average household income, (y) 50 per cent. of average household income and (z) 60 per cent. of average household income, (1) before and (2) after housing costs in (A) 1997–98 and (B) 1998–99. Housing Benefit

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to ensure that local authorities collect accurate and verifiable information to meet the reporting requirements of the housing benefit best value performance indicators numbers 176–180 for 2000–01. [109191]

Angela Eagle: Best value performance indicators will from this April be the main yardstick against which local authorities' performance is judged. Authorities are required to set out each year in published best value performance plans details of past performance against the indicators and challenging targets for future improved performance. These plans and the performance information they contain are subject to statutory audit.

Auditors are responsible for ensuring that authorities have adequate systems in place for producing accurate performance data. In addition, the Department has made arrangements for performance data to be reported periodically by authorities as part of the normal provision of housing benefit management information.

Guidance on the Housing Benefit indicators and revised statistical forms were issued by the Department to all authorities in December last year. The Benefit Fraud Inspectorate will also test the robustness of local authority performance data both as part of its on-going cycle of inspections of housing benefit administration and in its role as a best value inspectorate.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has made of the cost of making the disability living allowance mobility component available to children aged two and under. [109385]

Mr. Bayley: The mobility component of Disability Living Allowance is payable at two rates. The higher rate is payable to people who are unable or virtually unable to walk and the lower rate is paid to people who need guidance and supervision out of doors on unfamiliar routes.

Currently both components are payable to children from the age of five years. From April 2001, we are extending the higher rate of the mobility component to severely disabled children aged three and four years old in recognition of the fact that many children are able to walk reasonable distances unaided by the age of three years.
Estimating the cost of extending either component to children aged two and under would not produce a meaningful result. This is because all children of this age have limited walking ability and will require constant guidance and supervision whilst out of doors.

Minimum Pension Guarantee

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects (1) the review of the minimum funding requirement to reach a conclusion; [109349]

(2) the review of the minimum funding requirement for the minimum pension guarantee to reach a conclusion. [108965]

Mr. Rooker: The review of the minimum funding requirement is being carried out by the Faculty and Institute of Actuaries in partnership with the Department of Social Security. It is due to report in spring this year. We will then consider what changes should be made. There will be full consultation with the pensions industry on any changes.

Housing Benefit Fraud

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which local authorities (a) did not submit information to his Department about fraudulent Housing Benefit cases for input into the Housing Benefit Management System in 1997–98, (b) have not installed the verification framework and (c) do not use non-redirection of benefit post powers. [107454]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 31 January 2000]: The local authorities (LAs) in the following list did not submit any information regarding fraudulent Housing Benefit cases in Great Britain for the period 1997–98 as outlined in the Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit management information system guide.

We have made it clear to all LAs that an additional £100 million was available to enable them all to implement fully the Verification Framework (VF) by March 2001. At 7 February 2000, 237 authorities have already been funded or accepted the offer of funds to implement fully the VF and we are processing a further seven recent applications for funding. Of the remaining authorities, some have started to implement parts of the VF or are operating their own local versions and others have not yet informed us of their intentions to implement. It would be inaccurate to describe such authorities as not implementing the VF.

The following list names those authorities that have either already been funded or have accepted a recent offer of funds or have submitted an application for funding which is currently being processed.

The Royal Mail has advised that as at the end of January the 248 local authorities in the following list have implemented in full the Royal Mail "do not redirect" service. Of the remaining 161 authorities, a number are preparing to implement the service and some are operating their own local arrangements. It would be inaccurate to describe such authorities as not operating "non-redirection" of post. However, information on which authorities fall into these categories could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Iran

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 24 January 2000, Official Report, column 4W, what discussions he has had with the Government of Iran concerning the supply of heroin from Afghanistan to the United Kingdom via Iran. [108234]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 7 February 2000]: I did not discuss this issue with Dr. Kharrazi during his recent visit, but the subject was covered by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary. Co-operation between the United Kingdom and Iran to stem the flow of drugs from Afghanistan forms an important part of the developing UK/Iran relationship. We have provided nearly £1.5 million over the past year for anti-drugs projects in Iran, and with our EU Partners will continue to support Iranian efforts to counter this mutual problem.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Prime Minister who will represent the United Kingdom at the conference on nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament in April and May 2000. [109107]

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office will deliver the UK address to the Plenary Session of the Non Proliferation Treaty Review Conference.

Benefit Payment Methods

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 1036, what arrangements will be made to ensure that those who wish it may continue to collect their benefits in cash. [109504]

The Prime Minister: We are moving to automated credit transfer from 2003 as a modern, more secure and efficient method of paying benefits. As I made clear in my reply of 2 February, I expect that by then the Post Office will have developed more agency arrangements with banks to provide banking services—it already has arrangements with Alliance and Leicester, Lloyds TSB and the Co-operative Bank. This will enable benefit recipients to withdraw the full amount of their entitlement in cash at the Post Office if they want.

In addition, the Post Office is planning to install 3,000 cash machines in local Post Offices.

Council of Europe

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 2000, Official Report, columns 673–74W, on the Council of Europe, if he will list each case relating to an Independent Commonwealth State heard by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the past five years, and the sums received in reimbursement of the United Kingdom's costs of hosting the appeals, including the costs of the judges. [109242]

The Prime Minister: The table shows the numbers of appeals and petitions for leave to appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council from independent Commonwealth countries in each of the last five years. No direct contribution to the costs of running the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is made by the countries concerned as such, save that certain countries, especially New Zealand, provide (at their own expense) serving judges to sit as members of the Judicial Committee from time to time. However, court fees are payable by the parties to proceedings, which in some cases are the governments or other public authorities of the countries concerned. The table also shows the total fee income of the Judicial Committee in each of the last five years, the greater part of which will have been paid in respect of petitions and appeals from independent Commonwealth countries.

Year	Appeals heard	Petitions heard	Total fee income (£)
1995	42	55	35,439.59
1996	51	62	67,914.10
1997	46	60	70,715.36
1998	42	74	71,421.45
1999	44	77	31,228.90

SCOTLAND

Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, columns 385–86W, what restrictions were placed on contractors carrying out research projects funded by his Department in 1999 in respect of them discussing their findings with journalists (a) before and (b) after publication. [108199]

Dr. Reid: The various Departments within the Scottish Executive have their own devolved research programmes and strategies. While there are some differences in the precise detail of contracts relating to each programme, generally researchers are actively encouraged to publish their work.

The Scottish Executive's standard Conditions of Contract do however specify that consultants cannot disclose the results of research they are working on without the prior approval of the commissioning body. This is consistent with HM Treasury guidance on procurement and the use of confidentiality clauses (CUP Guidance 59D).

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to amend the Scotland Office departmental expenditure limit and running costs limit for 1999–2000. [108700]

Dr. Reid: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XIII, Vote I Scotland and Transfers to the Scottish Consolidated Fund, the Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £74,385,000 from £14,123,448,000 to £14,197,833,000.

The change consists of: increases of £21,500,000 for the 2000 Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances Scheme; £4,852,000 for local authority funding of Kosovan evacuees; £26,440,000 for the cost of the Lockerbie trial (which are to be met from the Reserve); £32,583,000 from a draw forward of ERDF funds; £13,857,000 for clinical negligence costs (announced in the Chancellor's pre-budget report); £3,980,000 transferred from the Home Office (Class IV Vote I) for the costs of grants to Asylum Seekers; £1,500,000 from the Department of Education for Northern Ireland for tuition fees for students domiciled in Northern Ireland undertaking courses of higher education in Scotland; and £3,600,000 from the DEL reserve for additional support to the Forestry Commission; a decrease of £35,000,000 for a transfer to the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Class III, Vote 6) for the bus fuel duty rebate scheme; and other minor transfers giving rise to a net increase of £1,073,000.

These increases will be offset by transfers to and from other Departmental Expenditure Limits or be treated as a charge on the DEL reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number and value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109453]

Dr. Reid: My Department's competitive tendering processes are overseen by officials. Specialist external support is commonly obtained in connection with such exercises, for example, to provide professional advice on construction projects or specialist technical advice on IT projects. Information on contracts placed for external advice in connection with competitive tendering exercises is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 (a) the number and (b) the total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that (i) were put out to competitive tender, (ii) were not put out to competitive tender and (iii) were let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109267]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 9 February 2000]: It is Government policy that all goods and services, including consultancy, should be acquired on the basis of value for money and therefore on a commercial basis, following competition, unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary. Information regarding the breakdown between contracts which were, and which were not, awarded following competition is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Secondees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff were seconded from the private sector to his Department in (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [109294]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 9 February 2000]: Secondments and attachments are part of the Interchange Initiative, which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the Civil Service and other organisations. The Private sector inward secondments to The Scottish Office for the periods requested are as follows:

Private sector secondments

	May 1997 to April 1998	May 1998 to April 1999	May 1999 to June 1999
Balfouf and Manson (Solicitors)	2	2	1
Bank of Scotland	1	1	—
BP	1	—	—
Fife Careers Ltd.	1	1	—
Project Management International PLC	1	1	—
Shepherd and Wedderburn (Solicitors)	—	1	—

There have been no inward secondments in my Department since 1 July 1999.

TREASURY

Pensions Mis-selling

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average time taken for the Government Actuaries Department to complete the headroom check where a pensions mis-selling case involves excess contributions; and if he will make a statement. [109220]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The information requested cannot be obtained without disproportionate cost. The Government Actuary's Department (GAD) has no general responsibility for work on compensating victims of pensions mis-selling, but it does provide actuarial services to a number of public service pension schemes whose members were mis-sold personal pensions in the past. In most of the main public service pension schemes the number of cases involving excess contributions is relatively small, and the normal procedures for carrying out headroom checks have been applied without causing delay. In the Teachers' Pension Scheme there has been a large number of such cases and new procedures are being implemented to allow the scheme administrators (Capita Teachers' Pensions) to carry out most of the calculations using tables supplied by GAD. This should allow speedier processing.

Tobacco Tax

Mr. Barron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue was raised from each of the taxes payable on each category of tobacco products in the last year for which figures are available. [109100]

Dawn Primarolo: Excise duty receipts for each category of tobacco products are shown in HM Customs and Excise Annual Report 1998–99, table E2. The VAT received on cigarettes is estimated at £1,655 million in 1998–99, and the VAT on all other tobacco products is estimated at £115 million. VAT has been estimated from Office for National Statistics figures for household consumption on cigarettes and other tobacco products. No separate figures are available for VAT on cigars, hand-rolling and other smoking and chewing tobacco.

Child Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 1 February 2000, Official Report, column 579W, if he will estimate the yield from tapering away child benefit in the hands of the highest earner in a couple according to the thresholds and tapering mechanism envisaged for children's tax credits, whereby benefit would be tapered away from couples containing a higher rate tax payer. [108616]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government will introduce a new Children's Tax Credit from April 2001. To ensure that support for the family is increased in the fairest way, it will be tapered away from families where there is a higher rate taxpayer. The long-term goal is to bring together the different strands of support for children in Working Families Tax Credit, Income Support and the Children's Tax Credit to create an integrated and seamless system of financial support, building upon the foundation of universal Child Benefit.

However, if Child Benefit were to be tapered away from families where there is a higher rate taxpayer along the lines envisaged in the hon. Member's proposal, the estimated yield would currently be £600 million in a full year.

Working Families Tax Credit

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what are the (a) gross earnings, (b) earnings after income tax and national insurance contributions and (c) entitlements to the working families tax credit of a dual-earner couple with two children under the age of 11 years, both earning the minimum wage and where one works full-time and the other 16 hours a week; [107801]

(2) what are the (a) gross earnings, (b) earnings after income tax and national insurance contributions and (c) entitlements to the working families tax credit of a single parent with two children under the age of 11 years, earning the minimum wage and working (i) full-time and (ii) 16 hours a week. [107739]

Dawn Primarolo: The figures requested are given in the table.

£/week

	Couple, one working full-time, one working 16 hours a week	Lone parent working full-time	Lone parent working 16 hours a week
Gross earnings	183.60	126.00	57.60
Earnings net of income tax and National Insurance Contributions	175.33	117.73	57.60
Amount of Working Families Tax Credit	56.12	87.80	92.00

Childcare Tax Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the responses he has so far received to his consultation on an integrated child credit set out in the Treasury Paper, "Supporting Children Through the Tax and Benefit System". [108753]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury receives Budget representations and letters on a range of topics, including the Integrated Child Credit. As is usual practice, it is not our intention to publish them.

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the steady-state cost of providing the childcare tax credit to all households with a child below the age of one year on the current tapers, irrespective of whether anyone is in work, assuming that households with a mother in the first (a) 18 and (b) six weeks of maternity leave are not included. [107651]

Dawn Primarolo: The childcare tax credit is available to families in receipt of the Working Families' Tax Credit or Disabled Persons's Tax Credit who meet the work requirements and have eligible child care costs. There are no plans to make it available to families where no-one is in work.

If a separate weekly credit of £70 were to be given to all families with a child under one, subject to a taper of 55 per cent. for net income over £90 per week, the estimated cost for 2000–01 would be about £800 million. If households with a mother in receipt of statutory maternity pay are not included, the cost would reduce by about £30 million for the first 18 weeks of maternity pay and by about £10 million for the first six weeks of maternity pay.

It has been assumed that the start of maternity pay coincides with the birth of the child, and that those mothers on Income Support would still receive the £70 credit, since statutory maternity pay is taken into account when calculating Income Support.

Children (Merseyside)

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children aged 15 years or under live in (a) the Birkenhead constituency and (b) at Merseyside constituencies in total. [109350]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger, on behalf of Dr. Holt, to Mr. Frank Field, dated 10 February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question asking for the number of children aged 15 years or under who live in a) the Birkenhead constituency and b) Merseyside constituencies in total. I am replying in Dr Holt's absence.

Mid-year population estimates are not compiled for areas such as parliamentary constituencies. The lowest level at which these are available is the local authority level. Each local authority in Merseyside Metropolitan County is made up of at least two parliamentary constituencies. Data is therefore unavailable for the parliamentary constituencies within the county, one of which is Birkenhead. The table provided shows the numbers of children aged 15 years or under resident in each local authority in Merseyside as well as Merseyside as a whole. Also shown is how the local authorities are made up of parliamentary constituencies. These estimates are the mid-1998 population estimates which are the most recent available.

Mid-1998 population estimates for the number of children aged 15 or under in Merseyside and its constituent local authorities

County/local authority	Number of children aged 15 and under	Parliamentary constituencies contained in each local authority
Merseyside	294,400
Knowsley	37,000	Knowsley, North and Sefton, East[1] Knowsley, South
Liverpool	98,600	Liverpool, Garston Liverpool, Riverside Liverpool, Walton Liverpool, Wavertree Liverpool, West Derby
St. Helens	35,700	St. Helens, North St. Helens, South
Sefton	56,400	Bootle Crosby Knowsley, North and Sefton, East[2] Southport
Wirral	66,800	Birkenhead Wallasey Wirral, South Wirral, West

Birth Statistics

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the annual figures from 1970 until the present for the overall number of births outside of marriage by teenagers as a percentage of the overall number of births by teenagers in the United Kingdom. [109466]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger, on behalf of Dr. Holt, to Mr. Shaun Woodward dated 10 February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the annual figures from 1970 until the present for the overall number of births outside of marriage by teenagers as a percentage of the overall number of births by teenagers in the United Kingdom. I am replying in Dr Holt's absence.

The attached table shows the percentage of live births for teenagers (aged under 20) outside marriage from 1970 to present in the UK.

1970	25.2
1971	25.6
1972	26.9
1973	27.6
1974	29.6
1975	31.4

Year	Percentage of births outside marriage
1976	33.3
1977	35.8
1978	37.5
1979	39.5
1980	41.5
1981	45.5
1982	50.6
1983	55.1
1984	59.7
1985	63.9
1986	68.4
1987	72.4
1988	75.6
1989	78.2
1990	80.2
1991	83.0
1992	83.9
1993	85.2
1994	85.9
1995	87.2
1996	88.6
1998	89.7

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the annual figures from 1970 until the present for the overall number of births outside of marriage (1) for teenagers of ethnic minority groups as a percentage of the overall number of ethnic minority teenage births in the UK; [109465]

(2) for ethnic minority groups as a percentage of the overall number of ethnic minority births in the UK. [109467]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger, on behalf of Dr. Holt, to Mr. Shaun Woodward, dated 10 February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions on the percentage of births outside marriage by ethnic minority. I am replying in Dr. Holt's absence.

The current form of birth registration does not include ethnicity. Figures on live births by country of birth of mother are available in Birth Statistics 1998, FM1 which is available in the House of Commons Library. However, it should be noted that birthplace does not necessarily indicate ethnic origin or race. More information on these statistics can be found in an article in Population Trends 52, 1988.

WALES

Nurses' Pay

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what talks he has had concerning nurses' pay with (a) other departments and (b) the First Secretary; and if he will make a statement. [108827]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I recently met my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health to discuss health issues generally and health issues in Wales in particular. I also meet regularly with the First Secretary to discuss health issues in Wales.

On 17 January, the Department of Health and the National Assembly for Wales accepted the Review Body recommendations for nurses pay.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals there are to amend the Wales Office departmental expenditure limit for 1999–2000. [108699]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XIV, Vote 1 (The Welsh Office, the Wales Office and payments to the National Assembly for Wales) the Welsh Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £8,285,000 from £7,217,489,000 to £7,225,774,000. The increase is a result of net transfers to other Government Departments of £74,000 and additional funding of £7,939,000 and £420,000 for Health and Agriculture respectively.

There is an increase in the provision of Welfare to Work of £548,000 as a result of end-year flexibility entitlement of £300,000 and additional funding of £248,000 announced in the Pre-Budget Report.

Transfers are from Class 1 Vote 1 (£200,000), Class 2 Vote 1 (£11,000), Class 3 Vote 2 (£113,000), Class 3 Vote 3 (£150,000), Class 18 Vote 1 (£300,000) and to Class 2 Vote 1 (£177,000), Class 10 Vote 2 (£260,000) and Class 4 Vote 1 (£411,000). The balance will be met by a charge on the Departmental Expenditure Limit Reserve for the increases announced in the Pre-Budget Report and the Aid Package for farmers and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sheep Premium

11. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the farming industry to discuss the levels of sheep annual premium; and if he will make a statement. [107890]

Ms Quin: We regularly meet representatives of the farming industry who raise many topics including the sheep annual premium.

Pig Industry

12. Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce further measures to support exports of pigmeat. [107892]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have made representations to the Agriculture Commissioner in Brussels to increase export refunds as a way of proving additional support to the pig sector.

18. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on state aid to the pig sector. [107899]

Ms Quin: We are well aware of the representations that continue to be made for some form of aid to be introduced as compensation for what the industry sees as the imposition of unfair additional costs as a result of BSE. This matter has been discussed many times with the pig industry. The points they are making are well understood, but this is not an easy issue. The cost would be considerable and it would have to conform with strict EU rules. Communications with the European Commission have shown how difficult this would be. This is an issue which Ministers have looked at very closely and will continue to do so. As the Prime Minister said on 1 February any investment by Government must be linked to long-term change in the structure of the industry. It must also be part of an agrees overall strategy; to this end, my officials are in touch with the National Pig Association and others.

19. Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions has he had with (a) producers and (b) others on the problems facing the United Kingdom pig industry. [107900]

Ms Quin: Ministers are in frequent contact with a number of organisations representing producers and others to discuss the state of the UK pig industry. We have also discussed this matter with the European Agriculture Commissioner.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress made towards an EU-wide ban on the stall and tether system for raising pigs. [108601]

Mr. Morley: The EU Commission's proposals for a new Directive on pig welfare are well overdue. Its Scientific Veterinary Committee's report, on which these proposals must be based, was published in 1997, and we lose no opportunity to remind the Commission of the need for progress in this area.

Horticulture

13. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the horticulture industry. [107893]

Ms Quin: My right hon. Friend the Minister met a wide cross-section of the horticultural industry when he opened Hortex 2000 at Telford on 18 January.

Common Agricultural Policy

15. Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to promote the institutional reform of the common agricultural policy. [107896]

Mr. Nick Brown: We will pursue opportunities created by anticipated market pressures, the reviews contained within the Agenda 2000 agreement and the existing commitment to review the sugar regime by 2001 to push for the reform process started at Berlin to be completed.

Mobile Abattoirs

16. Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to encourage the introduction of mobile abattoirs. [107897]

Ms Quin: Mobile abattoir facilities can have attractions for a range of interests and may provide welfare benefits. MAFF have recently awarded a grant to the Humane Slaughter Association to support the development of a mobile slaughtering service in central southern England. MAFF Veterinary Meat Hygiene Advisers are available to advise those interested in developing mobile abattoirs.

Organic Farming

17. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the level of financial support for organic farming. [107898]

Mr. Morley: A review of aid for conversion to organic farming is in progress. The results of the review will provide the basis for a revised organic aid scheme under the England Rural Development Programme, for which I have announced an allocation of £140 million over the life of the programme.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the environmental benefits of organic farming. [107902]

Mr. Morley: Evaluation of the environmental impact of organic farming is one of the three main objectives of the Ministry's organic R&D programme, for which £2.1 million has been allocated for 1999–2000. Field studies on biodiversity and soil fertility on organic farms, following earlier desk studies and a study of nutrient cycling are in progress. Work on nitrates and ammonia emissions has recently been completed.

Meat Inspection

20. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will report progress on implementing a new system of meat inspection. [107901]

Ms Quin: The Meat Industry Red Tape Working Group recommended in its report published on 13 December 1999 that the current meat inspection rules be replaced by a risk-based system of checks applying Hazard Analysis Critical Control Points (HACCP) principles. We have accepted this recommendation, but a new meat inspection system to replace existing controls will entail changes to EU legislation. We strongly support the Commission's initiatives to review and modernise meat hygiene controls and will be pressing for early progress.

Food Chain Group Report

21. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received following the publication of the report of the Food Chain Group. [107903]

Ms Quin: The Food Chain Group report has been welcomed by many interests across the supply chain as a significant contribution to the drive to improve agri-food competitiveness. Over 1,000 copies have been sent to interested parties. We intend to review progress in the summer.

Labelling

22. Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to promote compulsory country of origin labelling within the European Union. [107904]

Ms Quin: Following consultation with industry and enforcement authorities we published revised guidance on origin labelling on 1 February making it clear that origin labels on food must be clear and unambiguous. This is an important step forward in our drive for better labelling and more informed choice. We will encourage the European Commission to take similar steps at EU level and raise the issue for wider international discussion at the forthcoming meeting of the Codex Committee for Food Labelling in Ottawa in May.

Regional Development Agencies

23. Dr. George Turner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the English regional development agencies on strengthening the regional aspects of policies and programmes for supporting agriculture. [107905]

Mr. Morley: I met Vincent Watts, Chairman of the East of England Development Agency, and Rural Board Members and officials from the other RDAs on 27 January. We had a useful discussion about the England Rural Development Plan 2000–06 among other issues. The ERDP contains proposals for supporting the rural economy of each region, tailored to meet specific regional needs, which were drawn up in full collaboration with the RDAs and other regional partners.

Farming (Government Support)

24. Mr. Flight: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount of financial support provided to farmers by the Government in the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [107906]

Ms Quin: The total value of EU and UK Exchequer funded subsidies for farming paid in the UK in 1997–98 was £3,582.8 million. This includes market support measures which are not paid directly to farmers, but which benefit them indirectly.

Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of animal welfare organisations to discuss progress on the Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill. [107895]

Mr. Morley: I am in regular contact with representatives of animal welfare organisations on a wide range of issues. It is of course true that their concerns on fur farming would be met by the proposed ban, although the basis of the ban is that fur farming is wrong in itself, apart from any considerations of animal welfare.

Organophosphates

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the Minister of State's letter of 16 December, reference 133662, when he expects to receive advice from the Veterinary Products Committee in relation to organophosphorous sheep dips; and if he will make a statement. [104398]

Ms Quin [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The Veterinary Products Committee (VPC)'s report was published on 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 446W. Following consideration of reports from the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT) and the Institute of Occupational Medicine (IOM), the VPC advised the temporary withdrawal from the market of all organophosphorous sheep dips pending the introduction of improved containers for concentrated dip. That advice was accepted and action has been taken on implementation. Copies of the VPC's and COT's reports are in the Library of the House.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what pesticide approvals for glufosinate ammonium have been given in respect of trials of genetically modified crops carried out under Part B of Council Directive 90/220 on the deliberate release into the environment of genetically modified organisms. [109221]

Ms Quin [holding answer 8 February 2000]: To date we have granted four experimental approvals under the Plant Protection Products Regulations 1995 (as amended) for the use of glufosinate ammonium on genetically modified crops. These would permit uses in trials of genetically modified crops carried out under Part B of Council Directive 90/220.

Details of experimental approvals have not been published for reasons of commercial confidentiality. We have initiated a review of the current arrangements to see if there is scope for greater openness and transparency.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the antibiotic marker genes, and the antibiotics to which they convey resistance, that have been used in the genetic modification of crops from which genetically modified foods available in the United Kingdom have been produced in the last five years. [108624]

Ms Quin: The only foods available in the UK which have been produced from GM crops containing antibiotic marker genes are highly processed products in which all the genetic material, including antibiotic marker genes, has been rendered inactive through extensive degradation. The two marker genes, in either a complete or disrupted form, that have been used in these crops are kanamycin and ampicillin resistance genes. The intact genes convey resistance to aminoglycoside antibiotics including kanamycin, neomycin and geneticin; and narrow spectrum . lactam antibiotics such as ampicillin and amoxycillin respectively.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent research has been undertaken into the possible effects of antibiotic resistance gene markers retained in foods produced by the genetic modification of crops on (a) humans and (b) animals; and if he will make a statement. [108620]

Ms Quin: MAFF is funding the following research into the possible effects of antibiotic resistance gene markers retained in foods produced by the genetic modification of crops, all of which are due to be completed in 2001.

Project code	Title	Contractor
FSO225	Evaluating the risk of the transfer or DNA between micro organisms in the gut and between micro organisms and gut cells	Newcastle University
FSO227	Assessment of the risks of transferring antibiotic resistance determinants from transgenic plants to micro-organisms	Leeds University

Over-30-months Scheme

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement setting out the criteria employed by the Intervention Board in determining the selection of slaughterhouses to carry out the requirements of the over 30-months-scheme; [105292]

(2) if he will make a statement setting out the reasons why the Interventions Board terminated its contract with the Nottingham processing company for the over-30-months scheme. [105299]

Ms Quin [holding answer 19 January 2000]: OTMS slaughter contracts, effective from 4 January 2000, have been awarded to 20 abattoirs. Decisions were reached following a competitive tender under which bids were evaluated against previously published objective criteria, including quality of service, price, ability to offer a dedicated service, ease of supervision, throughput and location.

All the bids for a particular area of the country were scored against each of the criteria and aggregate scores were compared. Nottingham Processing Company scored well, but their aggregate score was less than the scores of the five successful companies in the Midlands region.

Beef Sales

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to promote the sale of beef to non-EU countries. [107562]

Ms Quin: I am currently leading efforts to persuade the Governments of those countries that the trade have identified as key potential markets, to lift restrictions on the import of British beef. The programme includes direct approaches to these administrations by our local Posts, and continuing liaison between veterinary authorities; Ministers on visits abroad are briefed to raise the issue as appropriate and similar opportunities are identified when Ministers for relevant countries are in the UK. I am also in touch with their relevant overseas representatives in London.

Furthermore, promotion of British meat generally at home and abroad is the responsibility of the Meat and Livestock Commission. The Department routinely works with them and other interested organisations to try to open up new (and expand existing) markets and to promote exports via trade fairs and other events world wide. A number of such events are planned.

Food Surpluses

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the sales of food surpluses from the European Union to countries outside the union during the last 12 months. [108013]

Ms Quin: Details of UK intervention stocks sold outside the European Union during the 12 months of 1999 are:

Commodity	Tonnes
Beef	0
Barley	687,916
Wheat	25,346
Butter	0
Skimmed milk powder	'0

[1] Although no skimmed milk powder was "sold" outside the European Union in 1999, 15,000 tonnes was supplied to Russia under a Community food aid scheme.

Figures for similar sales from other member states are not yet available.

Oath of Allegiance

Mr. Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many letters he has received since 1 May 1997 on (a) constituency matters and (b) other matters of Government policy from each of those Members of the House who have not taken the Oath of Allegiance. [108404]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 3 February 2000]: I am unable to provide this information. Details of correspondence between Members of the House and my Department—including the number received—must be treated in confidence.

Correspondence

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed dated 16 November 1999, concerning the transfer of responsibility for the private water supply at Harwood Village. [108626]

Mr. Nick Brown: I replied to the letter from the right hon. Member on 7 February 2000.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed dated 27 October concerning the Government's policy on organic farming. [108627]

Mr. Nick Brown: I replied to the letter from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed on 31 January 2000.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Minister of State will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire of 16 November 1999 about leaf minors. [109008]

Mr. Nick Brown: A letter to the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire was sent on 4 February 2000 by my noble Friend Baroness Hayman.

Badger Culling

Mr. Reed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of the Randomised Badger Culling trial; [108571]

(2) how many of the badger culling trials are fully operational. [108572]

Ms Quin: Six triplets have so far been enrolled into the badger culling trial. Culling has taken place in three of these, and surveying has started in the others. Work is currently suspended in one triplet. We expect to announce the remaining triplets this year.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost of TB compensation paid to farmers (a) within the Krebs Trial areas and (b) outside the trial areas during 1998–99; and what is his provision for compensation payments in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02. [108377]

Ms Quin [holding answer 3 February 2000]: The cost of TB compensation paid within the Krebs trial areas is not separately recorded.

The TB compensation paid to farmers in England in 1998–99 amounted to £3.775 million. The estimated outturn for 1999–2000 is £5.0 million, and the provisional allocation for 2000–01 is £5.99 million. The provision for 2001–02 has yet to be determined.

Beef Special Premium Scheme

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the most common reasons for rejecting claims made under the Beef Special Premium Scheme. [108483]

Ms Quin: The most common reasons for rejecting claims as a percentage of the total rejections are as follows:

1. Beef cattle stocked more intensively than two livestock units per hectare (58 per cent.).
2. Significant claimant errors which cannot be disregarded under EU regulations (10 per cent.).
3. Discrepancies discovered during inspection (5 per cent.).

Departmental Secondees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff were seconded from the private sector to his Department in (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [109290]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 9 February 2000]: The information requested is as follows:

(a) May 1997-April 1998: One, duration three months, Royal Bank of Scotland;

(b) May 1998-April 1999: One, duration three weeks, Manor Bakeries;

(c) May 1999-January 2000: None.

Cattle

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each of the last two years for which records are available (a) the total number of cattle slaughtered for food in the UK and (b) their gender. [109338]

Mr. Morley: The requested figures are shown in the table. The gender of slaughtered calves is not collected.

(a) UK cattle slaughtered for human consumption[1]

(Th. head)

	1998	1999[2]
Adult cattle	2,297	2,217
Male	1,445	1,338
Female	853	879
Calves	32	75

[1] Excludes cattle slaughtered under the over thirty months scheme and the Selective Cull and calves slaughtered under the Calf Processing Aid Scheme

[2] Provisional

Animal Slaughter

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will meet his French counterpart to discuss the Eid el Kebir festival and the steps being taken by the French Government to enforce the law relating to animal slaughter; and if he will make a statement; [108651]

(2) if he will prevent the export of sheep destined for the festival of Eid el Kebir; and if he will make a statement. [108650]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The Government have no legal power to ban the export of livestock to another member state (in this case France) because of the way they may be treated there. The French authorities are responsible for enforcement of EU welfare rules in France, and we have drawn their attention to the very serious breaches of welfare rules that have occurred during this festival in recent years.

As the European Commission have responsibility for ensuring that member states implement and enforce the rules my right hon. Friend the Minister has written to the Commissioner for Health and Consumer Protection pressing very hard for suitable action to be taken.

Redundant Agricultural Buildings

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what grants his Department makes available to farmers to help them convert redundant agricultural buildings; and if he will make a statement. [108710]

Mr. Morley: The England Rural Development Plan sets out my Department's proposal to run a new Rural Enterprise Scheme, under Article 33 of the Rural Development Regulation, to aid farm diversification and other activities. These grants would cover the conversion of redundant agricultural buildings, subject to planning permission being granted. The Plan proposes expenditure of £152 million between 2000 and 2006, subject to the Spending Review 2000 and approval from the European Commission.

Flooding

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many leaflets that describe flood risks to a specified area of the UK have been produced by the Environment Agency; and how many members of the public have (a) contacted the Environment Agency's Flood Line and (b) been sent such leaflets. [109003]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is responsible only for England and Wales. As part of its national flood awareness campaign launched last October, the Agency published 160 local flood warning information leaflets detailing local flood warning arrangements and contact numbers. In addition, approximately 311,000 flood kits, comprising a waterproof reusable bag and the relevant local flood information leaflet, were mailed to homes and businesses in England and Wales. The campaign marked the launch of Flood Line which, as at 28 January, had received a total of 57,211 calls. Of these, some 30,000 were received over the Christmas period when severe weather affected the south and south west of England.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate how many houses are at risk from flooding in the UK; and what estimate he has made of how many houses will be at risk from flooding in (a) five, (b) 10, (c) 15, (d) 20, (e) 25, (f) 50 and (g) 100 years; and what assumptions he has made in determining whether a house is at risk from coastal and river flooding. [109005]

Mr. Morley: UK figures are not available as flood and coastal defence is a devolved responsibility. The Environment Agency is continuing its work to estimate the number of properties within the natural flood plains of England and Wales. Based on the best available scientific and forecasting knowledge, this figure was last year estimated to be 1.6 million.

There are no forecasts for future years as it is not possible to predict where development will take place, nor what decisions will be made about future defences. The Government will be issuing revised guidance in support of its policy of discouraging inappropriate development in areas at risk of flooding. In addition, the Agency is working with local planning authorities to ensure that its "Policy and Practice for the Protection of Floodplains" guidance is implemented to reduce the likelihood of new houses being built in flood risk areas in the future.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many times the Environment Agency and his Department have given advice to (a) individuals, (b) local councils, (c) building societies and (d) any others to desist from building new houses in floodplains and other areas at risk from flooding; whether the Environment Agency and his Department have discussed with insurance companies, their trade associations and similar corporate entities the risks of insuring such properties in such areas at risk from flooding; and whether exchange of data, estimates, calculations and assessments with regard to flood risks in the UK has taken place between his Department and the Environment Agency and such bodies since May 1997. [108996]

Mr. Morley: Government policy is to discourage inappropriate development in areas at risk of flooding. Advice to English local planning authorities is contained in DoE Circular 30/92 entitled "Development and Flood Risk". This guidance is currently being revised and a consultation document is expected to be issued shortly.

Neither MAFF nor DETR have been directly involved in specific advice to desist from building new houses in floodplains. However, in 1998–99 the Environment Agency received 77,502 requests for information for England and Wales, but this total is not broken down into individual categories. An individual can receive information on flood risk by visiting the Agency's offices or through correspondence. The Agency also dealt with 23,896 searches from solicitors, which would include information on flood risk if relevant.

The Agency commented on 110,764 planning applications, which include information on flood risk. In line with new Government targets, the Agency will, from June 2000, be reporting on their response to planning applications, identifying cases where:

1. the Agency sustained objections on flood risk grounds; and
2. final decisions, either by the LPA or on appeal, were in line with, or contrary to Agency advice.

My Department, the DETR and the Environment Agency have fairly regular contact with the insurance industry about flood risks. This includes sharing the results of a number of R&D projects undertaken by the insurance industry, and attendance at seminars about managing flood risk. The information in the Agency's flood risk maps is being made publicly available and so may be used by the insurance industry.

The insurance industry generally continues to offer flood risk cover, in all areas, as part of ordinary household policies.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many uninsured properties have been flooded since 1990 in the United Kingdom; what records he keeps of individual incidents; and if he will open those records to public scrutiny. [109002]

Mr. Morley: No records are available on uninsured properties that have been flooded since 1990. The industry estimate that some 65–70 per cent. of domestic properties have household and building insurance which generally includes flood cover.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average cost of building and maintaining one kilometre of flood defences in the UK for (a) coastal areas and (b) river basin areas in the last 12 months; what percentage of these costs will be borne by (i) central Government and (ii) local government; and what (1) were the total costs in the United Kingdom of building and maintaining flood defences for coastal and river basin areas for each year since 1990 and (2) are the projected costs for 2000 and 2001. [108997]

Mr. Morley: Full UK figures are not available, as flood and coastal defence is a devolved responsibility. Also, figures are not readily available for local authorities or Internal Drainage Boards. This reply covers England and Wales figures as provided for the Environment Agency only.

The average cost of building and maintenance of one kilometre of flood defences for coastal areas is £2.5 million and £0.65 million for river basin areas. The costs will vary according to the location of the defence, with higher costs for exposed coastal regions and heavily urbanised areas in river basins.

In 1998–99, the income raised for flood defence totalled £252 million, with the Government providing direct grants of £34 million; £203 million was provided through the levy from local government and the remainder from Internal Drainage Boards and other sources. Local Authorities are reimbursed in the following year through the Revenue Support Grant mechanism.

The total flood defence expenditure from 1989–90–1998–99 and planned expenditure for 1999–00–2001–02 is as follows:

£ million

	Capital	Revenue	Total
1989–90[1]	74.6	92.9	167.5
1990–91[1]	93.1	103.0	196.1
1991–92[1]	116.8	114.1	230.9
1992–93[1]	110.8	120.2	231.0
1993–94[1]	105.7	124.0	229.7
1994–95[1]	113.9	126.8	240.7
1995–96[1]	131.1	119.0	250.1
1996–97[1]	131.4	125.1	256.5
1997–98[1]	136.5	137.1	273.6
1998–99[1]	117.7	144.1	261.8
1999–2000[2]	124.5	147.8	272.3
2000–01[2]	133.8	152.9	286.7
2001–02[2]	131.4	154.1	285.5

[2] Planned

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish maps produced by the Environment Agency of the Floodline programme of flood risks that threaten houses at (a) regional and (b) other levels. [109006]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency's 24-hour Floodline telephone information service was launched on 18 October 1999 as part of an integrated public awareness campaign to raise awareness of flood risk and flood warning. The service covers England and Wales and enables the public to find out what flood warnings are in force, to report flooding and to request an information pack about how to prepare for floods.

As a separate exercise, the Agency has released Flood Plain Maps to local authorities in England and Wales for development control and emergency planning purposes. The Agency is developing proposals to place the maps on its web site to make them freely accessible to the public. Paper copies can also be supplied upon request.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the guidance given by (i) his Department and (ii) the Environment Agency to maritime district councils and county councils to deal with sea level rise and flooding from climate change; and if he will specify the funds directed to (a) coastal defences, (b) the UK climate change impact programme and (c) public awareness campaigns aiming at reducing greenhouse gas emissions in the years 1995 to 2000; how much will be made available over the next three years; and what plans he has to increase the amounts spent on such items. [108998]

Mr. Morley: Since 1990 my Department has issued allowances for sea level rise to be taken into account by flood and coastal defence operating authorities in planning future defence options. These allowances, which take account both of the predicted impact of climate change coupled with the effect of long term geological "tilt", are as follows:

Environment agency region	Allowance (mm per year)
North East (South of Flamborough Head), Anglian, Thames, Southern	6
South West, Wales	5
North West, North East (North of Flamborough Head)	4

These allowances are intended to be applied to defences with a design life up to 2030. Defences with an expected life beyond this period should be adaptable to allow for any future change in predictions.

These allowances have been published by the Ministry in a number of documents, including our Project Appraisal Guidance Notes for flood and coastal defence operating authorities and in the Ministry's Strategy flood and coastal defence. They also appear in DoE Circular 30/92 entitled "Development and Flood Risk" which was aimed at local planning authorities.

These predictions have been reviewed against the climate change scenarios for the UK, published in October 1998 by the UK Climate Impacts Programme (DETR). Preliminary indications are that, if extreme events follow the predicted pattern of global sea level rise, these allowances should be adequate to the middle of the next century.

MAFF has provided grants to operating authorities in England for new and improved sea and tidal flood defences and coast protection defences as follows:

Year	£ million
1995–96	71
1996–97	75
1998–99	51

Figures are not yet available on this basis for the current and next three years, but the total provision available for Ministry funding (both grant and Supplementary Credit Approvals) of all flood (including inland) and coastal defence is as follows:

Year	£ million
1990–2000	71
2000–01	77

These plans reflect the increased provision announced following the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review. The provision available beyond 2002 will depend on the outcome of this year's Spending Review.

The UK Climate Impacts Programme was established in April 1997. DETR have allocated £930,764 to the Programme Office until 1 April 2000. They have also funded the production of climate change and socio-economic scenarios for the UK to underpin the work of the Programme. For the next two years the Programme's total budget is set at £918,852. Decisions on support for the Programme beyond this will be made in the light of on-going reviews of its work.

DETR's main environmental public awareness initiatives have been "Wasting Energy Costs and the Earth" and, more recently, "Are you doing your bit?". One of the key aims of the latter campaign is to encourage people to make simple lifestyle changes to fight global warming by using energy efficiently and by changing their travel habits. The budget figures for these campaigns are:

	£ million
Wasting Energy Costs the Earth
1995–96	[1]3.6
1996–97	[1]2.0
Are you doing your bit?
1997–98	[1]1.3
1998–99	[1]1.7
1999–2000	[2]6.5
2000–01	[2]7.7
2001–02	[2]7.7

[1] UK figures.

The future campaign budget beyond 2002 will depend on the outcome of the Spending Review 2000.

The DETR also provides grant funding to the Energy Saving Trust (EST) which runs a number of programmes designed to promote the efficient use of energy including information on energy efficiency matters for the public. EST spend on public awareness campaigns funded by DETR is:

Year	£ million
1997–98	3.1
1999–2000	4.4

The figures include England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland up until devolution. Post-devolution DETR have retained responsibility for all budgets except Scotland. Expenditure on public awareness campaigns by the EST funded by the Scottish Executive is £0.4 million for 1990–2000. EST Budgets for 2000–01 and 2001–02 have yet to be set.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if farmers in Objective 1 areas are eligible to apply for rural development regulation money; and if he will make a statement. [108747]

Mr. Morley: Farmers in Objective 1 areas will be eligible to apply for the Rural Development Regulation measures which the Government proposes to use. Those proposals are set out in the England Rural Development Plan and the Single Programming Document for Cornwall and the Scilly Isles. Both documents are subject to approval from the European Commission. Funding arrangements are subject to the Spending Review 2000.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what child care provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by (i) his departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department; what was the cost to parents of this child care; and how many parents used the facilities. [108834]

Mr. Morley: Departmental and agency staff had access to 130 nursery places at six sites during 1998–99 and the subsidised cost to parents was £56 to £85 per week depending upon location. Due to shared use of some places by part-time staff, at some sites the number of users was higher than the number of places available.

During the same period, holiday playscheme places were available to departmental and agency staff working at 10 sites and the subsidised cost to parents was £3.50 to £9 per day depending upon location. The number of users varied at each site and for each school holiday period.

It is not possible to give separate figures for departmental and agency staff: facilities are used by both, and uptake fluctuates.

Energy Crops

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evaluation he has made of the environmental benefits of energy crops. [107885]

Ms Quin: When used instead of fossil fuels energy crops can bring about significant reductions in emissions of carbon dioxide, one of the main greenhouse gases. Studies have also indicated a range of other positive effects including benefits to biodiversity.

Italian Abattoirs

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received on compliance with EU directives regarding abattoirs in Italy; and if he will make a statement. [R] [107474]

Ms Quin: It is for the European Commission to monitor individual member States' compliance with EU Directives. The Commission's Food and Veterinary Office (FVO) carries out regular programmes of inspection visits to all member states, including visits to abattoirs and other meat plants. The last mission to Italy to check on controls in fresh meat establishments took place from 4 to 8 May 1998.

We do not receive copies of FVO reports, on inspection visits, other than those to the UK, but have access to them on the European Commission's website on the Internet in the same way as anyone else. The index for the Commission's inspection mission reports is:

http://europa.eu.int/comm/dg24/health/vi/reports/index en.html.

We publicise the availability of such reports in our monthly Meat Hygiene Enforcement Report.

Specified Risk Material

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which European Commission measures relate to sheep in respect of the regulations that require the removal of specified risk material. [107239]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 27 January 2000]: No such measures are in force. A Commission Decision has been adopted (97/534 of 30 July 1997, on the prohibition of the use of material presenting risks as regards transmissible spongiform encephalopathies), which defines certain sheep tissues as specified risk material. Its date of application has however been repeatedly postponed and it is not currently due to enter into force until 30 June 2000.

Written Answers to Questions

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109786]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My Department's caterers are required to comply with all legal requirements and relevant regulations governing the procurement and preparation of food and related activities.

Rough Sleepers

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made in reducing rough sleeping in London since he last published an estimate of numbers. [110298]

Ms Armstrong: The most recent evidence on the number of people sleeping rough in London comes from single night street counts carried out in 11 boroughs on the night of 20 January 2000 (27 January in Lambeth).

We have previously estimated that as at June 1999 there were 635 people sleeping rough in Greater London. Using the January 2000 counts to update that figure where possible, our best estimate is that there were 420 people sleeping rough in Greater London as at January 2000.

Vehicle Emissions

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to complete his evaluation of the pilot programme under the Road Traffic (Vehicle Emission) (Fixed Penalties) Regulations, which was completed in February 1999. [107351]

Mr. Hill: The Motorists' Forum, representing a range of interested parties including motor manufacturers and motoring organisations, has been invited to consider the experience of the pilot programme of roadside vehicle emission checks, and the work undertaken to date by the Cleaner Vehicle Task Force. A further announcement will be made in due course.

Road Accidents (Yeovil)

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the accident blackspots on roads within the Yeovil constituency for each year since 1995, with the date and details of each accident that has occurred on them; and if he will list the date and location of road accident fatalities in the area since 1995. [108745]

Mr. Hill: The assessment of local accident blackspots is a matter for the relevant highway authorities in an area. However, data on road accident fatalities are available and the dates and locations of those in the Yeovil local authority area from 1995–1998 are listed in the table.

Tram System

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the cost of the Croydon tram system; and how much was provided by the Government. [108728]

Mr. Hill: The Government contributed £125 million grant towards the estimated capital costs of £200 million for the construction of Tramlink in recognition of the system's non-user benefits. Tramtrack Croydon Ltd., the consortium of private sector companies responsible for designing, building and operating Tramlink, have raised the remainder of the cost and will run the system without public subsidy.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to what extent repairs and maintenance to equipment used by National Air Traffic Control Ltd. will be determined by (a) need and (b) cost; and if he will make a statement. [108528]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 8 February 2000]: All equipment operated by NATS is subject to safety case analysis and approval by the Safety Regulation Group. Repairs and maintenance are, therefore, undertaken primarily on the basis of need. NATS does, however, have an obligation to ensure that it obtains the best price at all times for such services.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many meetings she has had with the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs since 1 January. [109193]

Clare Short: I have had no formal meetings, apart from the Cabinet Committee, but many informal meetings with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs since 1 January.

Overseas Employees

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many were employed by her Department in offices overseas on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) 1 February 2000. [109194]

Clare Short: Eighty-nine UK-appointed staff were working in the Overseas Offices of the Overseas Development Administration as at 1 January 1997 (the closest date to 1 May 1997 for which figures are available). The figure for 1 January 2000 (the latest date available) is 132 staff.

Figures for staff appointed in-country were not collected centrally in 1997. The figure for staff appointed locally by the Department's Overseas Offices on 1 January 2000 was 314.

Pakistan

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions her Department has had with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office concerning the resumption of direct development aid to Pakistan. [109195]

Clare Short: We frequently discuss our policy on Pakistan with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office colleagues, which is aimed at helping secure firm commitment to action by the Pakistani administration on poverty reduction—requiring early transition to democracy, better economic management and measures to tackle corruption. We have made it clear to the administration that, given satisfactory assurances, we should be ready to consider supporting them in pursuing fundamental reform. Meanwhile, our assistance to the poor continues through non-governmental channels.

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109777]

Clare Short: All food served at departmental official functions is obtained from our caterer's list of approved suppliers, all of whom meet the standards of production required of UK domestic producers.

Aid Recipients

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the countries which receive British bilateral aid whose Governments are not elected by way of universal suffrage. [109203]

Clare Short: Information on universal suffrage is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Arms Sales

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what representations her Department made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer concerning the decision to ban Export Credits Guarantee Department cover for arms sales to the world's 62 poorest countries; [109196]

(2) what recent discussions she had with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office regarding the decision to ban 62 of the world's poorest countries from receiving Export Credits Guarantee Department cover for arms sales. [109197]

Clare Short: As part of the on-going Review of the Export Credits Guarantee Department's Mission and Status, the scope of the productive expenditure initiative is being considered, and my Department is contributing actively to that work. A copy of our Department's position paper on the role of ECGD, which was submitted to the Review in December 1999, has been placed in the Library of the House, with a copy of the supporting consultancy study.

Birth Control Projects

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list (a) the number and (b) aggregate costs of each birth control project funded by her Department. [109202]

Clare Short: In line with the principles agreed at the 1994 Cairo International Conference on Population and Development, we support programmes to improve the full breadth of reproductive health for people. This includes enabling people to choose whether and when to have children through voluntary family planning. The following table lists currently active projects and programmes which, wholly or in part, provide for family planning services or commodities.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) her Department, and (ii) executive agencies under the control of her Department, (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (i) time-range and (ii) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [109235]

Clare Short: I am unable to provide an answer to this question as the information is not held in an easily extractable form and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost to the Department.

TREASURY

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109938]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We have no record of any contract or payment to Remploy during the last three years.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each constituency the number and percentage of adults in full-time work who received a wage increase in April 1999 as a consequence of the introduction of the national minimum wage. [109686]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 1 February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question regarding the number of full-time adults who received a wage increase in April 1999 as a consequence of the introduction of the national minimum wage. I am replying in Dr. Holt's absence.

Estimates on the number of adults who received a wage increase as a consequence of the national minimum wage are not available since the ONS does not capture information on why or when pay increases are awarded.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Land Mines

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assistance his Department is giving to the development of new technology for the clearance of anti-personnel land mines; [108592]

(2) what recent research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effectiveness of methods currently in use for anti-personnel land mines clearance; [108596]

(3) what research and development work has been funded by his Department since May 1997 into anti-personnel land mines clearance devices. [108593]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence on 10 February 2000, Official Report, column 244W, and the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development on 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 91W.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet representatives from Edinburgh University to discuss the funding of the Dervish anti-personnel land mines clearance project. [108595]

Dr. Howells: I have no such plans. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development on 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 91W.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received concerning the Dervish anti-personnel land mines clearance project. [108594]

Dr. Howells: Any such representations received in this Department would be passed to the Ministry of Defence or the Department for International Development.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures his Department has taken to enforce the conditions of telecommunications licences that operators provide details of the expected locations of all telecommunications apparatus before giving notice of the installation of any apparatus in a particular planning authority area; what penalties are applicable when this condition is breached; and if he will list the instances in which this condition has been broken in each of the last five years, by each operator. [108501]

Ms Hewitt: Enforcement in relation to these conditions is a matter for local planning authorities. Failure to pre-notify expected locations of apparatus to the local planning authority would deprive the operator of permitted development rights under Part 24 of Schedule 2 to the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 and would subject him to normal planning law. The local planning authority would then be responsible for taking action under normal planning enforcement procedures. Remedies could include a requirement to remove the apparatus concerned. As this is a matter for planning authorities, DTI does not receive details of breaches.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who is responsible for monitoring the level of power densities produced by telecommunications masts; what proportion of masts were checked in 1999; and if he will list by operator the masts found to produce power densities in excess of the limits set by the NRPB in each of the last three years. [108496]

Ms Hewitt: The responsibility for monitoring the level of power densities produced by telecommunications masts rests with the operators of the masts in accordance with their duties under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. The Health and Safety Executive requires operators to prevent access by members of the public to areas, usually within a couple of metres of the antennae, where power densities may exceed NRPB guidelines.

The Radiocommunications Agency will investigate complaints about emissions from telecommunications masts, though the cost of any report on a particular site must be borne by the complainant. To my knowledge, no mast has been found where members of the public are exposed above NRPB guideline limits. No information is held on the proportion of masts checked in 1999.

E-commerce

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to assess the energy and environmental implications of the development of e-commerce and greater use of teleworking and video conferencing. [108686]

Ms Hewitt: As I announced last week, my Department, with the DETR, is supporting a year long inquiry into the environmental and social impacts of the development of e-commerce. This project, called "Digital Futures", will be managed by Forum for the Future and has the support of business as well as Government. It will report in early 2001.

The Government continue to develop and keep under review their information about the nature of energy consumption and projections of future energy demand, taking into account a range of social and economic trends, including e-commerce, teleworking and video conferencing.

Regeneration Partnership Programme

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those local authorities or partnership schemes which have recently been awarded support under the RECITE-II regeneration partnership programme, giving the size of each award and the main focus of the scheme supported. [108687]

Mr. Caborn: RECITE II is a Community Initiative run by the European Commission. The programme is aimed at encouraging and promoting co-operation between regional and local authorities.

A table showing the projects which have been awarded support and the size of each project grant is being placed in the House of Commons Library.

Departmental Secondments

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff were seconded from the private sector to his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [109070]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 8 February 2000]: From the information that is held centrally within the Department, the details we have on inward secondments are as follows:

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if all regulatory proposals relating to the introduction of stakeholder pension schemes will be scrutinised by the Chief Executive of the Small Business Service to ensure that they are (a) easy to understand, (b) easy to comply with and (c) difficult to evade. [107921]

Ms Hewitt: The Government's approach is to regulate only where it is necessary to achieve the desired effect. An important aim is to minimise the burden that would be placed on small firms. Therefore, the Chief Executive of the Small Business Service will be consulted by Government Departments on all regulatory proposals that affect small firms. The process of making regulations easy to understand, easy to comply with and difficult to avoid will, of course, include the proposals relating to the introduction of stakeholder pension schemes.

Waste Tyres

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many waste tyres were produced in the United Kingdom in the last year; and by what means they were disposed of. [109685]

Ms Hewitt: The Used Tyre Working Group, a joint Government/Industry initiative established to consider used tyre disposal issues, estimated that around 465,000 tonnes of tyres were disposed of in 1998. Of this total, it is estimated that value was recovered from approximately 330,000 tonnes. The table provides a breakdown:

	Tonnes
Exports of used casings	35,000
Re-used as part-worn tyres	29,000
Other reuse (silage clamps, dock fenders, etc.)	20,000
Retreaded tyres	86,000
Materials recovery	49,000
Energy recovery	84,500
Landfill engineering	25,500

It is estimated that a significant proportion of the outstanding balance of some 135,000 tonnes was disposed of in landfill, either in whole or shredded form or as automotive shredder residue.

The Used Tyre Working Group is currently in the process of collecting used tyre disposal statistics for 1999.

The EU Landfill Directive will ban the disposal of almost all tyres to landfill during 2006, requiring the development of further tyre recovery facilities to handle those tyres that would otherwise have gone to landfill. The Government will continue to work closely with industry on this issue.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fire Service

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what targets he is setting for the employment of women in the operational fire service. [110283]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I am today announcing targets for the recruitment, retention and career progression of women in the fire service. By 2009, the Government expect 15 per cent. of the operational fire service (whole-time and retained firefighters and their officers) in England and Wales to be women and for them to remain in the service and be promoted at the same rate as their male colleagues.

At present, the number of women in the whole-time operational fire service is only 1 per cent. A recent report from Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Fire Services has conformed that there is no possible justification for such low numbers. The target is deliberately challenging and will require brigades to take steps to encourage a more open inclusive culture and to revise procedures and practices which the Chief Inspector's thematic review found to be potentially discriminatory.

Parole Board

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends to review the work of the Parole Board. [110302]

Mr. Boateng: The Parole Board is an executive Non-Departmental Public Body, established on 1 July 1996. The Government are committed to regular review of Non-Departmental Public Bodies, and have decided to conduct a review of the Board during the current year. The review will incorporate the requirements of the 'Quinquennial Review' process. The review will also look at the scope for improvements in the efficiency and effectiveness of the Parole Board and the wider parole process (for both determinate and life sentenced prisoners).

The review has the following terms of reference:

Within the context of a required Quinquennial Review of Parole Board functions, and the requirements of Better Quality Services and the Civil Service modernisation programme:

to identify the key issues facing the parole and lifer review processes and the Parole Board over the next five years; and as part of the Quinquennial Review programme, to consider whether the functions of the Parole Board continue to be required, and, if so, whether a Non Departmental Public Body is the best option for delivery.

to recommend changes to the parole and lifer processes which ensure that:

existing procedures are made as efficient and effective as possible;

new casework is dealt with efficiently and effectively and that demanding performance targets and measures are established with clear plans for delivery stated; wider developments, including advancements in information technology, are integrated successfully into the parole and lifer review processes.

to recommend necessary changes to the Parole Board's status, organisation, structure and funding.

Either-way Offences

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the current either-way criminal offences; and if he will make a statement. [109879]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There is no readily available list of triable either-way offences. Appendix 4 of the annual Command Paper "Criminal Statistics England and Wales" lists just over 370 triable either-way offence codes which are used for statistical purposes. Each code may cover more than one offence and these codes cover approximately 700 offences. Other triable either-way offences are grouped together under one 'ad hoc' code. Copies of the Command Paper are available in the Library.

Fines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fines for criminal offences were issued in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; what was the average fine (a) for each category of offence and (b) overall; and if he will make a statement. [109880]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is given in the following table.

Number of offenders fined[1] and average fine given at all courts by type of offence, England and Wales, 1988–98

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the public service agreement commitments made by his department since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [109882]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office Public Sector Agreement, together with those for the Criminal Justice System and Action against Illegal Drugs which also include targets for the Home Office and the services for which it is responsible, were published in the White Paper "Public Services for the Future: Modernisation, Reform, Accountability" in January 1999.

Performance Targets

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many performance targets have been set by his Department, agencies and non departmental public bodies since May 1997 on (a) prisons policy, (b) police policy, (c) fire and emergency planning policy, (d) probation policy, (e) immigration, asylum and nationality policy, (f) constitutional policy, (g) reducing crime, (h) the prevention of terrorism and the reduction of organised and international crime, (i) sentencing, (j) youth justice policy, (k) crime prevention policy, (l) policy relating to victims and witnesses and (m) community and voluntary sector policy; how many of those targets have been (i) amended, (ii) revoked and (iii) achieved since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [109881]

Mr. Straw: Following the Comprehensive Spending Review, key performance targets were published in the White Paper "Modernisation, Reform, Accountability" in January 1999. Those to be delivered by the Home Office and the services for which it is responsible were detailed within the Home Office, Public Service Agreement (PSA) as well as the Public Service Agreements for the Criminal Justice System and Action against Illegal Drugs. These targets, together with other key targets and milestones for the Home Office, were brought together within the 1999–2000 Business Plan for the Home Office, a copy of which I have placed in the Library.

These targets and milestones are based on outcomes required rather than functional inputs. The Business Plan, therefore, groups them according to the published Aims of the Home Office. These are as follows:

Aim 1: Reduction in crime, particularly youth crime, and in the fear of crime; and the maintenance of public safety and good order—38 targets or milestones.

Aim 2: Delivery of justice through effective and efficient investigation, prosecution, trial and sentencing, and through support for victims—42 targets or milestones.

Aim 3: Prevention of terrorism, reduction in other organised and international crime, and protection against threats to national security—22 targets or milestones.

Aim 4: Effective execution of the sentences of the courts so as to reduce re-offending and protect the public—30 targets or milestones.

Aim 5: Helping to build, under a modernised constitution, a fair and prosperous society, in which every one has a stake, and in which the rights and responsibilities of individuals, families and communities are properly balanced—33 targets or milestones.

Aim 6: Regulation of entry to and settlement in the United Kingdom in the interests of social stability and economic growth, and facilitation of travel by United Kingdom citizens—32 targets or milestones.

Aim 7: Reduction in the incidence of fire and related death, injury and damage, and ensuring the safety of the public through civil protection—23 targets or milestones.

In addition, 64 targets or milestones were separately identified within the Business Plan for the support directorates of the Home Office.

Performance against each of the Business Plan targets will be reported in the Home Office Annual Report which will be published in April 2000.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what authority applicants for criminal injuries compensation on the pre-statutory scheme are being required by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board to pay the compensation to a trust, with any balance repayable on the applicant's death; at what levels of compensation cases are affected by this policy decision; how many cases have been caught by this policy decision; what is the total amount of compensation involved; and if he will make a statement. [109370]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The 1990 criminal injuries compensation scheme gives the Board discretion to make special arrangements for the administration of a compensation award, including the establishment of a trust. The exercise of that discretion in individual cases is a matter for the Board, not Ministers. I understand from the Board that it operates no rigid policy in this area, but exercises its discretion on the facts of each case. I understand also that the Board does not keep statistics in the form requested.

Crime Prevention (Oxfordshire)

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives are in place in Oxfordshire for (a) support for victims and (b) prevention of racial harassment and violence. [109124]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 9 February 2000]: Comprehensive information on these subjects is not readily available. However, the National Association of Victim Support Schemes (NAVSS) is represented in Oxfordshire by a county scheme, providing voluntary support for victims of crime. The scheme is administered at local level within the county with branch offices at Banbury, Oxford and Didcot/Wallingford. Home Office funding has recently been approved for Victim Support to develop a witness support service at magistrates courts in the country.

Local police initiatives in Oxford with the lesbian and gay community have raised reporting levels of homophobic and 'hate-crimes' with the establishment of informal community support networks for victims.

As regards tackling racial harassment and violence, all police areas in the county now have dedicated Community and Race Relations officer to work closely with external bodies and communities. The Oxford Multi-Agency Approach to Racial Harassment has existed in Oxford for over 10 years at a senior officer and caseworker level, acting as a third-party and referral agency for victims of racial harassment and violence. Through local private support and Single Regeneration Budget funding, this group has been expanded to become Agencies Acting Together, Tackling Racial Harassment in Oxfordshire.

Later this month, Oxfordshire Race Equality Council will be organising a conference entitled 'Stephen Lawrence—One Year On' which will bring together leaders from Police, Education, Health, Courts, the Crown Prosecution Service and voluntary organisations, and will draw up a set of specific actions to be achieved within the next 12 months. The focus will be on the 70 recommendations of the Stephen Lawrence inquiry, and will culminate in the public signing of a joint declaration to fight racism in Oxfordshire.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 the number and total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that have (a) been put out to competitive tender, (b) not been put out to competitive tender and (c) been let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109063]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The information requested is not immediately available in the form requested. I am arranging for the information to be collated and will write to the hon. Member when it is available.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much in total it has cost London authorities to support asylum seekers from the time when benefit was withdrawn to 31 January. [108796]

Mrs. Roche: The Home Office assumed responsibility for the budget for supporting asylum seekers in April 1999. This includes reimbursing costs, within unit cost and overall cash limits, incurred by local authorities for supporting asylum seekers under the National Assistance Act 1948 and the Children Acts. Responsibility for reimbursing local authorities by grant in respect of supporting asylum seekers previously rested with the Department of Health.

Information on the total cost of supporting asylum seekers through local authorities for the period in question is currently not available. But the Department of Health made grant payments to London boroughs of £66 million in 1997–98 and £161 million in 1998–99 in respect of costs incurred in supporting asylum seekers. The figure for 1996–97 is not available in the form requested and the figure for the period 1 April 1999 to 31 January 2000 is not yet known.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated total expenditure by London authorities on asylum seekers in 2000; and how much of this expenditure will not be covered by Government grants. [108795]

Mrs. Roche: The Home Office assumed responsibility for the budget for the costs of supporting asylum seekers in April 1999 and has a provisional allocation of £300 million for support for the financial year 2000–01. Estimates for the costs expected to be incurred in 2000–01 are currently under review.

Those costs are sensitive to a range of factors, including the number of asylum applications, the speed of processing and take up rates. For the London authorities, in respect of which an estimate of total expenditure on asylum seekers in 2000 is not available, a further factor will be the extent to which asylum seekers are dispersed to other locations.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109770]

Mr. Ingram: All catering contracts the NIO awards include a clause to ensure they conform to current legislative standards.

Police

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers currently serving in the RUC Criminal Investigation Department have served on the force (a) less than five years, (b) more than five and less than 10 years, (c) more than 10 years and less than 15 years and (d) more than 15 years. [107820]

Mr. Ingram: At 1 February 2000, there were two officers attached to the Criminal Investigation Department with less than five years' service in the Royal Ulster Constabulary: 43 officers with more than five years' but less than 10 years' service; 119 officers with more than 10 years' but less than 15 years' service; and 645 officers with more than 15 years' service.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers currently serving in the RUC Special Branch have served on the force (a) less than five years, (b) more than five and less than 10 years, (c) more than 10 and less than 15 years, (d) more than 15 years. [107821]

Mr. Ingram: As at 1 February 2000, there were no officers attached to Special Branch with less than 5 years' service in the Royal Ulster Constabulary; 18 officers with more than 5 years' but less than 10 years' service; 74 officers with more than 10 years' but less than 15 years' service; and 592 officers with more than 15 years' service.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 (a) the number and (b) the total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that (i) were put out to competitive tender, (ii) were not put out to competitive tender and (iii) were let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109266]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 February 2000]: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Outsourcing (Company Credit Ratings)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the credit rating of companies seeking to tender for services provided by his Department is checked before the contract is awarded. [107743]

Mr. Rooker: For DSS contracts the financial viability of prospective suppliers is always checked. This is usually conducted at a pre-qualification stage and before companies are formally invited to submit an offer. On most occasions companies are required to provide three years accounts. This information is professionally appraised in consideration of the expected value and relative risk of the contract.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how often the credit rating of companies supplying services to his Department is checked. [107747]

Mr. Rooker: Once a contract has been let, it is not usual practice to conduct detailed reappraisals of financial information on suppliers unless there is reason to believe that the financial standing of a supplier has changed significantly since the contract was let.

Child Support

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give (a) the target time between receipt of an application for support from the Child Support Agency and the serving of papers on the absent parent and (b) the actual average time for this process in the most recent year for which the information is available. [109181]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Tom Levitt, dated 10 February 2000:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency.

You ask about the target time for the serving of papers on a non-resident parent following an application for child maintenance. The serving of papers has been taken to mean either the initial contact with a non-resident parent or the taking of enforcement action. In view of this I have covered both of these aspects in my reply.

When a parent with care makes an application for child support, a maintenance enquiry form is issued to the non-resident parent named on the application form. This is to establish the non-resident parent's financial and domestic circumstances. There is no target time for this procedure as much depends on the information provided by the parent with care and whether tracing the non-resident parent is necessary.

Although there is no target for the issue of a maintenance enquiry form the Secretary of State has set the Agency a target time for clearing 65% of maintenance applications within 20 weeks. This is a challenging target to which the Agency only achieved 50% (December 1999), however this can be viewed against a 25% increase of applications made during the last three months of 1999.

We continually strive to meet all targets set by the Secretary of State.

Once an assessment is made and payment is received it is passed to the parent with care within 10 working days of receipt in 98.6% of cases.

The Agency's policy is that, if necessary, it should use the powers given by Parliament to enforce payment of child maintenance. Where normal collection arrangements fail and arrears accrue, the Agency will take firm and prompt enforcement action if the non-resident parent does not make an acceptable offer to pay. There is no target time for this action to be taken as each case is considered on its merits and the Agency will take account of the likely effect of enforcement action on the welfare of any children involved. The benefit to the child of payment being made may also be a deciding factor.

Under provision of the Child Support Act 1995 the Agency has been able to arrange for liability orders granted by magistrates' courts to be entered in the County Court Register of Judgements. This register is used extensively by credit reference agencies when establishing an individual's creditworthiness. Entries in the register may result in credit being refused, a particular deterrent for self employed Non-Resident Parents. In the last reporting year, April 1998 to March 1999, the Agency applied for 3,968 liability orders.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Benefit

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many parents in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Scotland who are in receipt of lone parent premium receive payment of child benefit by way of order book; and of those how many are in receipt of income support; [109112]

(2) how many people in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Scotland receive payment of child benefit by way of order book; and of those how many are in receipt of (i) job seeker's allowance, (ii) invalidity benefit and (iii) income support. [109113]

Angela Eagle: The administration of child benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alasdair Morgan, dated 10 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about how many parents in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Scotland who are in receipt of lone parent premium receive payment of child benefit by way of order book; and of those how many are in receipt of income support, and how many people in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Scotland receive payment of child benefit by way of order book; and of those how many are in receipt of (a) jobseeker's allowance, (b) invalidity benefit and (c) income support.

Due to the differing formats for storing data it is not possible to supply all the information as requested.

I am able to advise that the number of people in Great Britain (England, Scotland and Wales) who are in receipt of Child Benefit (Lone Parent) by way of order book totals 747,000 of which 81,000 live in Scotland.

The number of people receiving Child Benefit (Lone Parent) who also receive Income Support is unknown. However, the number of people in receipt of Income Support as lone parents and are also in receipt of Child Benefit total 926,000 in Great Britain of which 87,000 live in Scotland.

The number of people in Great Britain (England, Scotland and Wales) who receive payment of Child Benefit by way of order book totals 4,489,000, of which 410,000 live in Scotland. Details of the number of those who are also in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance or Invalidity Benefit or Income Support are not available.

Information on Incapacity Benefit assessments which include an increase for a child is not available by receipt of Child Benefit.

However, the total number of Income Support recipients with Child Benefit in Great Britain, totals 1,217,000, of which 117,000 live in Scotland.

The total number of Jobseeker's Allowance recipients with Child Benefit in Great Britain totals 138,000, of which 10,000 live in Scotland.

I hope this is helpful.

Automated Credit Transfer

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 333W, on automated credit transfer, if he will break down his estimate of the £400 million per year anticipated savings from paying benefits and pensions directly into bank accounts rather than through post offices to show the proportion of these savings which result from (a) reduced payments to post offices, (b) reduced paper and printing costs and (c) other sources; and if he will make a statement. [109481]

Mr. Rooker: It is not appropriate to give a full breakdown of how the overall savings figure is calculated as part of the costs are commercially confidential between the Benefits Agency and its suppliers.

Fraud

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of benefit fraud were identified by post offices and sub-post offices each year since 1990; in how many of these cases a compensation payment has been made to post offices as a reward for reducing fraud; and if he will make a statement. [109480]

Mr. Rooker: The Benefits Agency does not maintain records on the number of cases of benefit fraud identified by post offices and sub-post offices since 1990. However, aggregated statistics on applications, payments and rejections since the introduction of the Post Office Rewards Scheme are detailed in the table. These figures do not include instances of fraud prevention by post office staff in compliance with their normal contractual obligations.

Post Office staff are required to make contractually agreed security checks before the encashment of order books and girocheques. One of the initiatives to combat fraud at the point of encashment is the Post Office Reward Scheme, which offers financial incentives to Post Office staff who impound instruments of payment beyond their contractual requirement. This scheme was introduced nationally in October 1995. Post Office staff can be paid a reward of £10.00 (£25.00 in exceptional cases).

Pensions

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much pensioners would have received this year if the award had been related to earnings rather than inflation; and what weekly increase they would have received this year. [109590]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the table.

Amount of basic retirement pension payable to pensioners if increased by earnings for April 2000

	Amount of basic retirement pension	Weekly increase
Single pensioner	69.75	3.00
Married couple	111.50	4.80

Notes:
1. Average earnings index whole economy (non seasonally adjusted) as published by the Office of National Statistics.
2. The rate has been calculated assuming 100 per cent. entitlement to basic retirement pension.

Basic State Pension

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he intends to increase the 25 pence age addition on the basic state pension awarded to those aged 80 years; and if he will make a statement. [109599]

Mr. Rooker: We have no plans to increase the 25 pence age addition on the basic state pension to those over aged 80 or over. Our priority has been to help the poorest pensioners and to help all pensioner households with the fuel bills that are most difficult to pay.

We have recently announced that in addition to raising the state pension we are increasing the Minimum Income Guarantee for pensioners in line with earnings. With Winter Fuel Payments, changes to VAT on fuel, the Minimum Income Guarantee and introducing free TV licences, the oldest, poorest pensioners will gain over £500 a year.

HEALTH

Pseudomonas

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many cases of pseudomonas have reported to his Department in each of the last five years in each health authority in England and Wales; [105882]

(2) how many hospitals have notified his Department of problems relating to pseudomonas in each of the last five years; [105883]

(3) how many people have died as a result of pseudomonas contracted (a) in NHS hospitals and (b) elsewhere in each of the last five years; [105884]

(4) what guidance he gives hospitals on pseudomonas; and if he will make a statement; [105885]

(5) what guidance he has issued to health authorities and hospital trusts on combating pseudomonas on NHS premises. [105886]

Yvette Cooper: Pseudomonas species can cause infections of the urinary tract, chest and blood stream. The most relevant data available centrally about cases of pseudomonas are those for bactaermia (blood infections) caused by pseudomonas species as reported by National Health Service laboratories to the Public Health Laboratory Service. Information for the years 1995–99 by NHS regions is given in the following table. Information on NHS hopital inpatient activity is available from Hospital Episode Statistics (HES). This data includes admissions to hospital with pseudomonas but not those cases contracted within hospitals.

Pseudomonas do not have a distinct code within the International Classification of Diseases used for encoding death registration data at the Office for National Statistics. There are therefore no centrally-held statistics on deaths from this cause.

All NHS trusts should have an infection control team which has primary responsibility for, and reports to the chief executive on, all aspects of surveillance, prevention and control of infection, including pseudomonas. A range of initiatives are underway to strengthen hospital infection control arrangements, including issue of comprehensive new standards to the NHS on 22 November 1999 as part of the National Controls Assurance launch. Acute NHS trusts must assess themselves against these standards by March 2000. Compliance will be monitored by the Commission for Health Improvement and the Audit Commission.

Meningitis

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the second stage of the meningitis C vaccination programme for one to five-year-olds will commence. [105892]

Yvette Cooper: Roll-out of the meningococcal Group immunisation programme is dependent on satisfactory vaccine supply. Those children at highest risk of meningococcal disease are being offered immunisation first. The "catch-up" programme to immunise all children under the age of two years began this month and is planned to be completed by the end of March.

Immunisation of other children under five years will commence as quickly as vaccine supplies become available. Parents will be told when their children are to be called for immunisation. All children and young people under 18 should have been offered vaccine by the end of 2000.

Kosovo

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice the UK National Radiological Protection Board has given to travellers to Kosovo. [106928]

Yvette Cooper: The National Radiological Protection Board has given the following advice to travellers to Kosovo in an information sheet issued in July 1999 on Depleted Uranium:

> "People visiting or working in Kosovo, for example press and relief agencies, should seek advice from appropriate authorities on the disposition of damaged vehicles or areas of DU contamination and avoid disturbing these areas. If access to potentially contaminated areas is deemed essential, then advice should be sought from the Ministry of Defence or the Foreign Office on any protective measures required."

This information may be found on the NRPB's website.

Breast Cancer Screening

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of women in the age brackets (a) 18 to 30, (b) 30 to 40, (c) 40 to 50, (d) 50 to 65 and (e) 65 years and over were routinely offered screening for breast cancer on a call and recall basis in each of the last five years; [106997]

(2) what is the survival rate for women whose breast cancer is discovered (a) through breast screening on a call and recall basis and (b) by other means; [106998]

(3) how many women aged (a) 18 to 30, (b) 30 to 40, (c) 40 to 50, (d) 50 to 65 and (e) 65 years and over (i) died from breast cancer in each of the last five years and (ii) were screened for breast cancer on a call and recall basis in each of the last five years. [106996]

Yvette Cooper: The number of women who died from breast cancer in the last five years is shown in the table:

Deaths from cancer of the female breast [1], years of occurrence, England and Wales

[1] International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision, code 174.
[2] There were no deaths from female breast cancer at ages 18 and 19 in the years in question.

Information about women screened is available for the target age group for the National Heath Service breast screening programme, which is 50 to 64. Some women over the age of 65 continue to be called for screening under the programme, for example to follow up questions raised by a previous mammogram. Information about those women screened on a call and recall basis in each of the last five years is shown in the table.

Similarly, information about women invited for screening is available for the target age group and those recalled after the age of 65. Information about those women invited for screening on a call and recall basis in each of the last five years is shown in the table. The screening programme operates on a three-year cycle, and these figures represent one third of the eligible population in each year.

An audit of screen detected breast cancers for the year of screening April 1997 to March 1998, published jointly by the NHS breast screening programme and the British Association of Surgical Oncology in April 1999, reported that the five-year breast cancer survival rate for women screened in England, Wales and Northern Ireland in 1992–93 was 92.5 per cent. Comparable data are not available for women whose cancers are detected in other ways.

DTP Boosters

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the production and availability of DTP boosters. [107510]

Yvette Cooper: Diphtheria, tetanus (DT) vaccine rather than diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis vaccine is used as a booster in the United Kingdom immunisation programme. DT has been in short supply due to the inability of Medeva, one of the two UK licensed sources, to supply contracted vaccine. A third manufacturer, Behring, has now obtained a product licence for its DT vaccine to be used in the UK and the first batches are due for release at the end of February 2000. This should give the UK enough stock to allow GPs and clinics to catch up on any deferred appointments for immunisation.

Fluoride

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the advice given by the World Health Organisation on the addition of fluoride to the water supply. [107728]

Yvette Cooper: Recommendation 7 on page 35 of the World Health Organisation Technical Report Series 846 "Fluorides and Oral Health: Report of a WHO Expert Committee on Oral Health Status and Fluoride Use" (1994) is that:

> "Community water fluoridation is safe and cost-effective and should be introduced and maintained wherever it is socially acceptable and feasible. The optimum water fluoride concentration will normally be within the range 0.5–1.0 mg/l."

We will have regard to the World Health Organisation's views in developing policy in this area following the results of the review of fluoridation being undertaken by the University of York.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the proportion of ingested fluoride that is retained in the body of a healthy adult. [107612]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has not undertaken any such assessment. One recent review (United States National Research Council "Health effects of ingested fluoride" 1993) noted that > "Approximately 75–90 per cent. of the fluoride ingested each day is absorbed from the alimentary tract. Of the fluoride absorbed by the young or middle-aged adult each day, approximately 50 per cent. will be associated with calcified tissues within 24 hours and the remainder will be excreted in urine".

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has received on the relationship between incidence of Down's syndrome and the fluoridation of water. [107611]

Yvette Cooper: The independent expert advisory Committee on Mutagenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment considered fluoride in 1987, 1990 and 1995 and advised that > "there is sufficient evidence from the available data to conclude that the consumption of fluoridated water would not constitute a mutagenic hazard to man through the induction of heritable abnormalities in the germ cells."

This implies that there is no biological basis for suspecting any relationship between fluoridation and the incidence of Down's syndrome. Epidemiological studies by Rapaport in the 1950s claimed to have shown an association, but were flawed and not supported by later epidemiological studies by others. An evaluation of the epidemiological studies will form part of the expert scientific review of fluoride and health in progress at the National Health Service Centre for Reviews and Dissemination at the University of York.

Selenium

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has for publicising the value of selenium in the diet in reducing incidence of cancer. [107662]

Yvette Cooper: Selenium is an essential trace element which is particularly important in protecting the body against oxidative damage of the cells. Such damage is linked to diseases such as cancer and heart disease. It is therefore hypothesised that increasing selenium in the diet may decrease the risk of cancer.

The influence of diet and nutrition on the incidence of cancer was considered by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy in its 1998 report entitled "Nutritional Aspects of the Development of Cancer"[1] which stated that there was not enough evidence to reach conclusions for any specific links between selenium in the diet and cancer. We are funding research into the role of antioxidants, including selenium, in health and disease.

We have made reduction in death rates from cancer one of our four headline targets in our health strategy "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation". Action towards this target includes promoting a healthy and balanced diet, that is one which is varied and rich in cereals, fruit and vegetables.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what obligation he has placed on primary care trusts which wish to change their governance arrangements in a manner that departs from the guidance recently issued by his Department to consult with (a) users and (b) staff likely to be employed by the such trusts and their representatives. [107668]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 31 January 2000]: The membership structure of each primary care trust is set out in its establishment order and must be in accordance with the Primary Care Trust (Membership, Procedure and Administration Arrangements) Regulations 2000. The Primary Care Trusts (Consultation on Establishment, Dissolution and Transfer of Staff) Regulations 1999 provide that before an establishment order is amended so as to alter the membership of the trust then the health authority must consult the trust concerned. There is however no obligation under the regulations to consult users or staff. This mirrors the existing situation for NHS trusts.

None the less, the Primary Care Trusts (Consultation on Establishment, Dissolution and Transfer of Staff) Regulations 1999 set out the consultation requirements which must be complied with before an order establishing a PCT is made. The regulations state that the health authority within whose area the primary care trust is to be established must consult, among others, the local community health council, bodies that represent health care professionals, any voluntary organisations that represent patients or their private carers, and any other persons considered appropriate. Also Health Service Circular 1999/167, "PCTs: the Application Process", stated that those to be consulted on proposals for PCTs should include, among others, trade unions, and other staff or professional representative groups.

Hospital Admissions (Children)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children under the age of 16 years were admitted to hospital as a result of severe unintentional injury resulting in a stay longer than three days for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99, (i) in absolute terms and (ii) expressed as a rate per thousand people. [108347]

Yvette Cooper: The Hospital Episode Statistics database indicates that, in 1997–98, 10,457 children under the age of 16 were admitted to hospital as a result of an unintentional injury that resulted in a stay longer than three days. This translates into a rate per thousand people of 1.04. Figures for 1998–99 are not yet available.

Fiscal Measures (Foods)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will investigate the advantages and disadvantages of fiscal measures to encourage or discourage the purchase of certain foods, with particular reference to those containing a high proportion of saturated fatty acids. [109101]

Yvette Cooper: The White Paper "Our Healthier Nation" recognised that unhealthy diets are a risk factor for coronary heart disease, stroke and for some cancers. Therefore, everyone can reduce the risk by reducing their intakes of fat and saturated fatty acids, increasing carbohydrate intakes and increasing consumption of fruit and vegetables.

The theory that selected fiscal measures would have a significant effect on saturated fatty acid intakes of particular population groups is still unproven. It depends on basic assumptions about the strength of relationships between prices and purchases which would require much further testing before their validity could be accepted and further investigations justified.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will investigate the advantages of general screening of men over a certain age for prostate cancer; and if he will make a statement. [109120]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The National Screening Committee, which advises the United Kingdom Health Departments about changes to screening policy, advised Ministers in 1997 that screening for prostate cancer, with current techniques for diagnosis and treatment, showed no evidence of benefit and could cause considerable harm. A report from the International Network of Agencies for Health Technology Assessment, published in January 1999, stated that mass screening for prostate cancer does not fulfil the ethical requirements and principles to avoid harm and do good. We have asked the Programme Director for the National Screening Committee, the National Cancer Director and the Director of Research and Development to keep this under active review.

NHS Staff

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish a pay review body for ancillary staff in the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [108901]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 8 February 2000]: "Agenda for Change" set out proposals for modernising National Health Service pay which included placing staff on one of three pay spines: one for doctors and dentists covered by the Doctors and Dentists Review Body, one for staff covered by the Nursing and Professions Allied to Medicine Pay Review Body and one for other staff. Confidential talks are continuing with NHS Unions about which staff groups may join an expanded NPRB without changing its fundamentally professional nature. The "Joint Framework of Principles and Agreed Statement on the Way Forward" proposes that a single pay negotiation council be established to negotiate pay uplifts for groups not covered by the Pay Review Bodies.

MRSA

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many outbreaks of MRSA have been reported to the Public Health Laboratory Service in each (a) month and (b) year of the last three years; what information is collected by the PHLS of the number of patients affected; and if he will establish central records of each patient affected by MRSA. [109017]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 9 February 2000]: MRSA is the antibiotic resistant form of 'Staphylococcus aureus', a bacterium which is carried harmlessly on the skin by at least a third of the population. About 80 per cent. of people who acquire MRSA similarly carry it harmlessly on the skin and do not suffer from any infection. Neither the number of hospitals recording MRSA outbreaks nor the total number of patients in National Health Service hospitals who have MRSA are recorded centrally. The Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) compiles aggregate data on numbers of incidents of MRSA which are voluntarily reported by NHS trusts. The available data on the incidents of MRSA are given in the table. We are working with PHLS on improving surveillance systems so as to provide more complete data on MRSA. This includes reviewing the Nosocomial Infection National Surveillance Scheme in order to increase the numbers of hospitals which participate.

Incidents of[1] MRSA in England and Wales 1994–1998

1997	[2]2,364

[1] An incident is three or more patients infected or colonised by the same strain of MRSA in the same month from the same hospital.
[2] The figures for 1997 and 1998 reflect the new NHS.
[3] The criteria for submission of isolates for specialist tests were revised in December 1997.

NHS Doctors

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of doctors who will qualify and join the NHS in each of the next five years. [109258]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The forecast output from medical schools in any one year cannot be accurately predicted.

Although most undergraduate medical courses are five years in length, some last for six years and many students on five-year courses delay their year of qualification by studying for an intercalated Honours degree. In addition, from 1999, some graduates will be admitted to shorter four-year medical degrees.

The latest figures from the Higher Education Funding Council for England, show that in July 1999 3,097 doctors qualified from English medical schools. The medical school intake figures from the last five years suggest that by July 2004 the output from medical schools will have increased by some 10 to 15 per cent. above the 1999 position.

NHS Professional Staff

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will estimate the numbers of doctors who will leave the NHS in each of the next five years before reaching the age of retirement; [109259]

(2) if he will estimate the number of (a) nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff and (b) NHS staff who are members of professions allied to medicine who will leave the NHS over the next five years before reaching the age of retirement. [109261]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 10 February 2000]: Information on the numbers of doctors, nurses, midwives and health visitors and the professions allied to medicine likely to leave the National Health Service before reaching the age of retirement is not available centrally and is a matter for National Health Service trusts.

Private Practice

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Chief Medical Officer's proposals for appraising doctors, set out in "Supporting Doctors, Protecting Patients", will (a) involve examination of the amount of private practice carried out by doctors and (b) make NHS employers responsible for monitoring the amount of private work carried out by consultants. [109884]

Ms Stuart: The aim of appraisal is a positive one; to help a doctor develop and progress as a health professional. In the National Health Service the appraisal process will include consideration of the achievement of the doctor's contractual obligations.

It is for employers and employees to agree the balance between consultants' private and NHS work. Consultants' responsibilities for the clinical care of their NHS patients must come first.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what responsibility NHS employers have for monitoring consultants' private practice. [109883]

Ms Stuart: The vast majority of our consultants work hard for the National Health Service and more than fulfil their contractual duties.

NHS terms and conditions of service requires hospital consultants and the general manager responsible for the management of their contract to agree a job plan for the performance of duties under their contract of employment.

A whole time consultant is permitted to have private practice earnings of up to 10 per cent. of their gross NHS salary. If asked by their employer, they must provide fully audited accounts showing their gross income from private practice. If their private practice income exceeds 10 per cent. of their NHS salary in two consecutive years, they have the option of a maximum part-time contract, which means that the consultant foregoes one eleventh of whole time salary, in return for the removal of the restrictions on private practice earnings. However whether on a whole time or maximum part time contract there is a clear contractual obligation to devote substantially the whole of their professional time to their NHS duties.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Correspondence

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will reply to the letter from the Right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed dated 23 September, relating to the non-availability of the meningitis vaccination in Berwick-upon-Tweed in September. [107288]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health replied to the right hon. Member on 2 February 2000.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109779]

Mr. Chris Smith: All food served at my Department's official functions is provided by contractors who meet the standards of production required of domestic producers.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 14 December 1999, Official Report, column 131W, concerning contracts with Dome sponsors, if all documentation has now been signed; what outstanding matters remain to be resolved; and if he will make a statement. [104601]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 13 January 2000]: Seven contracts were outstanding at 14 December and reported to the House in my reply to the hon. Member of that date. Four of these contracts have now been signed and three remain to be signed at 10 February—Boots, Mars Confectionary and BSkyB. While NMEC had hoped that they would all have been completed at this stage, one or two matters of detail remain subject to discussion between the respective parties. The company has every confidence that the contracts will be signed.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Pakistan

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken since 12 October 1999 to restrain or restrict the export to Pakistan of military or dual-use goods for which a valid licence is in force. [106648]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 24 January 2000]: In view of the changed circumstances in Pakistan following the coup, case by case consideration of new licence applications for military or dual-use goods has taken time to process under our own strict criteria and the EU Code of Conduct. No new licences have been approved since 12 October. However, some exporters with valid licences agreed before then may have completed deliveries under these licences.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received concerning the sale of British arms to Pakistan. [108879]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 8 February 2000]: We receive representations from a number of individuals and organisations about arms sales to many countries, including Pakistan. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) on 20 January 2000, Official Report, column 578W.

Angola

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Angola. [109340]

Mr. Hain: Although Angolan government forces appear to be in the ascendency Savimbi undoubtedly retains the capacity to wage a prolonged guerrilla war. We do not believe military action will bring a satisfactory resolution to the conflict. Only a political solution will bring a lasting peace. But Savimbi's word cannot be trusted. We urge UNITA to replace Savimbi as leader. With a different leadership UNITA can be part of a negotiated settlement and be as much part of the solution as it has been part of the problem.

We strongly support UN sanctions against UNITA and the work of the UN Angola Sanctions Committee. We are encouraging UN member states to ensure tighter implementation of all sanctions. We are also keen to make humanitarian assistance available to all Angolans.

We are concerned at allegations that oil revenues may be being diverted for corrupt purposes. I raised this with President dos Santos when I met him in New York on 24 January. It is in Angola's long term interest to spend her oil revenue on building up her skills base, rehabilitation and infrastructure.

Departmental Secondees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff were seconded from the private sector to his Department in (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [109289]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 9 February 2000]: My department has an active Interchange Programme with the private sector. The Modernising Government White Paper has committed us to increasing this activity.
Details of staff seconded from the Private Sector to the FCO including British Trade International are as follows:

(a) May 1997 to April 1998

Number of secondees: 23

Organisations: AMEC; Bank of England (2); BP Amoco (2); China British Trade Group; Civil Aviation Authority; European Investment Bank; HSBC; Halcrow, Independent Consultants (2); Keele University (2); Rolls-Royce; Levit Bernstein Associates, Midland Bank, National Westminster Bank; PriceWaterhouseCoopers; Quantel; Standard Chartered Bank (2).

(b) May 1998 to April 1999

Number of secondees: 20

Organisations: BBC; BNFL, Bank of England; BP Amoco (2); Brown and Root; China British Trade Group; Civil Aviation Authority; Coopers and Lybrand; European Investment Bank; Gifford and Partners; Greater London Enterprise; Hyder; Independent Consultant; MTL Instruments Group; Mouchel; Moscow Narodny Bank; PricewaterhouseCoopers; Standard Chartered Bank; Taylor Woodrow;

(c) May 1999 to date

Number of secondees: 26

Organisations: AEA; Argo Interactive; BNFL (2); BP Amoco (2); Baker Hughes International; Barrow International; Barclys; CBI (2); China British Trade Group; Civil Aviation Authority; Electric Switch; European Investment Bank; Independent Consultants (4); Linklaters & Alliance, MTL Instruments Group; Ove Arup; PriceWaterhouseCoopers; Rolls-Royce; Standard Chartered Bank; Wirea Sussex.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Jobseekers

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to review the procedures undertaken when a jobseeker fails to attend the fortnightly review of their jobsearch at their local jobcentre; and if he will make a statement. [107857]

Ms Jowell: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Alasdair Morgan, dated February 2000:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply direct to your question about what plans he has to review the procedures undertaken when a jobseeker fails to attend the fortnightly review of their job search at their local Jobcentre. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Jobseekers are required to attend their local Jobcentre each fortnight in order to show that they are continuing to satisfy the conditions for receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance. If a jobseeker fails to attend an interview they have five days to show what is termed "good cause" for not attending. If they fail to show good cause within the five day limit their claim is terminated. If a jobseeker fails to attend their interview but subsequently attends within five days, they are asked to provide their reasons for the failure to attend in writing. Their reasons are then sent to an Employment Services Decision Maker who, after obtaining any further information they may require, makes a decision as to whether the jobseeker had good cause for their failure to attend the interview.

These procedures were amended slightly in October 1999 to give staff in our Jobcentres the facility to treat some circumstances as straightforward and not to have to refer the case to a Decision Maker. This new procedure will be evaluated later in the year, but there are no other plans in place to review the overall procedures.

I hope this is helpful.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if there are proposals to amend the Departmental Expenditure Limit and gross running costs limit for 1999–2000. [110299]

Mr. Wills: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates for Class I, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services and Vote 3 (the Employment Service), the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for 1999–2000 (excluding Welfare to Work) will be increased by £268,380,000 from £15,792,190,000 to £16,060,570,000.

This overall increase is made up of DEL increases on Votes 1 and 5 (Sure Start) of £330,887,000 and £1,000 respectively, decreases to DEL on Votes 3 and 4 (Office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in England) of £21,758,000 and £5,000,000 respectively and a decrease of £35,750,000 in non-Voted expenditure. As a result, the Voted element of the Departmental Expenditure Limit (excluding Welfare to Work) will be increased by £304,130,000 from £14,547,638,000 to £14,851,768,000 and the non-Voted element will be reduced by £35,750,000 from £1,244,552,000 to £1,208,802,000.

The changes in Vote 1 are the result of the take up of £282,114,000 of the end-year flexibility entitlement announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393W; a net switch from non-Voted credit approvals of £15,750,000; transfers of £5,000,000 from Class I, Vote 4 (OFSTED) towards teaching materials for Thinking Skills, Early Years Learning and Education Action Zones, of £1,000,000 to Class IV, Vote 1 (Home Office) as a contribution to the Youth Inclusion Programme, of £653,000 from the Northern Ireland Departments for changes in the funding of Oxbridge colleges, of £2,000,000 to Class XI, Vote 1 (Department for Culture, Media and Sport) for the Dance and Drama Interim Funding Scheme, of £442,000 to Class XII, Vote 1 (Department of Social Security—central Government administered social security benefits and other payments) in respect of severe hardship payments to those young people who would normally be receiving Bridging Allowance, of £95,000 to Class VI, Vote 1 (Ministry of Defence—operational and support costs, logistic services and systems procurement and research) in respect of MOD Modern Apprentices, of £180,000 to the Scottish Executive in connection with educational qualifications, of £32,000 from Class XVII, Vote 1 (Property Advisers to the Civil Estate) in respect of Qualifications and Curriculum Authority premises, of £60,000 to Class II, Vote 2 (Department of Health administration, miscellaneous health and personal social services, England) as a contribution to the staffing costs of the Teenage Pregnancy Implementation Unit, of £200,000 to the National Assembly for Wales for fees charged by external bodies, of £12,260,000 from Class I, Vote 3 (the Employment Service) for Employment Zones, external reprographic services, and ONE marketing and policy; of £945,000 to Class 1, Vote 3 for salary costs of surplus staff and travel costs incurred by a member of the ES; and the draw down of £20,000,000 from the Department's non-Voted Departmental Unallocated provision (DUP).

The Employment Service provision has decreased by the net transfer of £11,315,000 to Class 1, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services) to cover work on Employment Zones now undertaken by DfEE and the marketing of ONE, and the net transfer of £10,443,000 to Class XII, Vote 3 (Department of Social Security: administration) for costs associated with ONE JSA related activities and to cover work on Employment Zones now undertaken by DSS.

The Departmental running costs limit (excluding Welfare to Work) will be decreased by £10,294,000 from £1,060,748,000 to £1,050,454,000 as a result of the transfer of £9,062,000 to the DSS, of £60,000 to the Department of Health, the net movement of £1,497,000 out of running costs into programme provision and an increase of £325,000 on the EU PHARE twinning project offset by matching receipts. The Supplementary estimates also include a net transfer of £740,000 of running costs from Vote 1 to Vote 3 which does not affect the running costs limit.

The Department's Welfare to Work provision is being increased by £1,454,000 from £1,388,373,000 to £1,389,827,000. The increase is made up of changes on Votes 1 and 3 of £276,000 and £1,178,000 respectively. The change on Vote 1 is as the result of the take up of £241,000 of end-year flexibility, and a transfer of £35,000 of running costs from Vote 3. The change on Vote 3 is as a result of the take up of £1,000,000 end-year flexibility for New Deal Partners; the transfer of £213,000 from Class XII, Vote 3 (Department of Social Security: administration) for New Deal for Lone Parents and New Deal for 50 plus; and the transfer of £35,000 to Vote 1 for New Deal for Disabled People pilots.

The Departmental Welfare to Work running costs limit will be increased by £1,575,000 from £162,321,000 to £163,896,000 as a result of the take up of £1,030,000 of end-year flexibility, the movement of £340,000 from programme money into running costs and a net transfer of £205,000 form Vote 3 to the Department of Social Security.

The increases are the result of transfers or will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

New Deal (Personal Advisers)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide a breakdown of the number of persons who have been taken on by the Employment Service as personal advisers on the new deal from each of the new deal schemes; and at what cost. [109284]

Ms Jowell: From April 1998 to February 2000, the Employment Service has not recruited anyone into the organisation to work as a New Deal personal adviser through the New Deal schemes. Employment Service New Deal employees are recruited to work in the administrative grades (Pay Bands 8 and 9). Personal advisers in the Employment Service are employed at a higher level which reflects the complexities and nature of their role.

Leeds LEA

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much funding was allocated to Leeds Local Education Authority in the financial years 1996–97 to 1999–2000 for (a) reduction in infant class sizes, for revenue and capital costs, (b) national grid for learning, (c) literacy, (d) numeracy, (e) books for schools, (f) truancy and behaviour measures, (g) school security, (h) improving school effectiveness, (i) excellence in cities, (j) New Deal for Schools, (k) voluntary aided schools capital grant, (l) energy efficiency, (m) education standard spending assessment and (n) music. [109047]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested is as follows:

[1] GEST/Standard fund includes both central and local government contributions. 1990–2000 allocations not yet final.
[2] Allocated through a programme account, not GEST.
[3] Literacy includes the summer school and key stage 3 intervention programmes.
[4] Numeracy includes the summer school programme.
[5] Other literacy and numeracy includes year 6 booster classes and playing for success. Expenditure on each subject is for local decision and therefore it can not be disaggregated.
[6] School effectiveness grant became school improvement grant from 1999–2000.
[7] Excellence in cities funding is broken down into £47,630 start up costs, £1,363,727 learning mentors and learning support units and £625,495 for gifted and talented children (excludes other national programmes such as beacon and specialist schools).
[8] The new deal capital figures represent the LEA's total allocation announced in each year—in some cases, these may be spent over several years.
[9] To aid comparability, the education SSA figure for 1997–98 has had nursery voucher funding added. The SSA figure excluding nursery voucher funding was £254 million

Employment Statistics

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have left the New Deal for long-term unemployed people aged 25 and over for jobs lasting less than 13 weeks but have been included in the number leaving for sustained employment as a result of not having returned to jobseeker's allowance. [105700]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 18 January 2000]: We define sustained jobs as those where the employee does not return to claim jobseeker's allowance (JSA) within 13 weeks. If they do return to JSA we drop them from the sustained jobs figure. Using this definition, under the New Deal for long term unemployed people aged 25 or over, 25,240 have found sustained employment. We are not at present able to measure how many, if any, will have left these jobs within 13 weeks and chosen not to claim JSA.

DEFENCE

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the changes made to the Tornado GR/1 midlife upgrade programme initiated by MLU93. [107463]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 1 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the right hon. and learned Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 11 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence in which you asked what changes have been made to the Tornado GR/1 midlife upgrade programme initiated by MLU93. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The MLU93 programme includes the following changes to the Tornado GR/1 aircraft:

Upgraded avionics & weapons control software
Night Vision Goggles (NVG)
Forward Looking Infra Red (FLIR)
Mil Std 1760 Weapons Databus
Mil Std 1553 Avionics Databus
Global Positioning System (GPS)
Covert Radar Altimeter (CRA)
A new wide angle Head up Display (HUD)
A new Front Cockpit Digital Map
TIALD integration
Laser-guided munitions
Defensive Aids Sub System

In addition, the wiring changes (databuses) and software enabled later integration of a wide range of advanced weapons. Indeed, the MLU programme now comprises further advanced systems, including Hands on Throttle and Stick (HOTAS), Havequick II (electronically protected radios), Identification Friend or Foe Mk 12 and the fleet-wide fit of the Thermal Imaging Airborne Laser Designator (TIALD).

The number of aircraft to be upgraded was however reduced from 161 to 142 and the Terrain Referenced Navigation system was removed from the original programme.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado GR/1s have been successfully upgraded to GR/4; how many are in upgrade servicing; how many are awaiting upgrade; and what is the estimated completion date of the upgrade programme. [107465]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 1 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the right hon. and learned Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 11 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence in which you asked how many Tornado GR1s have been successfully upgraded to GR4; how many are in upgrade servicing; how many are awaiting upgrade; and what is the estimated completion date of the upgrade. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Fifty Tornado GR1s have been successfully upgraded to GR4 standard, twenty-one are currently in upgrade servicing and a further seventy-one aircraft are awaiting upgrade. The Tornado MLU programme is due to be completed in February 2003.

Incremental acquisition is a key component of the Tornado MLU programme. For instance, the first 24 aircraft delivered to the RAF were equipped to an initial standard, but have also been fitted to receive further planned upgrades. From aircraft 25 Identification Friend or Foe Mark 12 system and electronically protected radios are being fitted and from aircraft number 61 the full clearance for the Paveway III Laser Guided Bomb, a new Laser Initial Navigation System, Global Positioning System and a Ground Proximity Warning system are added.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total estimated cost per unit of the Tornado GR/1 midlife upgrade programme, including development and production. [107464]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 1 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the right hon. and learned Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 11 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence in which you asked what the total estimated cost per unit of the Tornado GR1 midlife upgrade programme is, including development and production. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The estimated unit cost of the Tornado GR1 midlife update programme, including development and production, at current prices, is £6.8m.

TIALD System

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the (a) total estimated cost and (b) unit cost of the TIALD system included in the Tornado MLU programme specifying in each case the proportion of costs incurred by (i) development and (ii) production; and if he will make a statement. [107547]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 2 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the right hon. and learned Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 11 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence in which you asked for details of the total estimated cost and unit cost of the TIALD system included in the Tornado MLU programme specifying in each case the proportion of cost incurred by development and production. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Integration of the TIALD system onto Tornado GR4 is but one element of the MLU93 firm price contract placed with PANAVIA (industrial consortium comprising BAE, DASA and Alenia) via the Tornado tri-national project office in 1994. Within the total contract value we are not able to identify the costs specifically associated with TIALD integration, a task which is essentially software integration and involving minimal production cost. The TIALD pods used on Tornado are common to a number of different aircraft types including Harrier GR7, Harrier T10, Tornado GR1 and Tornado GR4; and were procured as part of a separate equipment programme. A total of 23 pods have been procured at a total development cost of £23m and a production cost per pod of £1.7m (both at 1999 prices).

Fuel Allocations

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flying hours per year were provided for in RAF fuel allocations for (a) Tornado GR1/4, (b) Tornado F3, (c) Harrier, (d) Jaguar, (e) Nimrod, (f) Sentry, (g) Tristar, (h) Puma, (i) Sea King and (j) Chinook in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [107550]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 2 February 2000]: The requested information is in the following table which shows projected flying hours made at the beginning of each year by the squadrons concerned. The fuel allocation is then based on these projections, not the other way round.

Tornado GR1/4	33,303	33,623	33,716	33,615	28,756
Tornado F3	32,183	30,440	31,049	30,343	25,694
Harrier	16,157	16,688	17,588	17,870	15,895
Jaguar	14,037	13,839	13,911	13,735	13,413
Nimrod	14,298	13,759	15,339	13,313	12,936
Sentry	4,446	4,446	4,446	4,446	4,446
Tristar	9,456	9,456	9,456	9,560	9,560
Puma	12,987	14,103	15,128	16,523	15,450
Sea King	11,013	12,051	12,622	12,093	10,859
Chinook	9,970	11,881	12,199	14,323	12,617
Totals	157,850	160,286	165,454	165,821	149,626

The reduction in projected hours in the fast jet categories in 1999–2000 reflects the net reduction of 36 aircraft as a result of SDR.

Land Mine Clearance

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what technology his Department is developing to assist in the clearance of anti-personnel land mines; [108630]

(2) what research and development work has been funded by his Department since May 1997 into anti-personnel land mines clearance devices. [108631]

Dr. Moonie: Since May 1997 my Department has conducted research into the following mine detection technologies for military purposes:

Ground penetrating radar
Polarised thermal imaging
Metal detection
Quadruple resonance
Ultra-wide band radar
Ultra-wide bank synthetic aperture radar

Research is also being conducted on the following technologies for the neutralisation of mines for military purposes:

Projectile attack
Shaped charge attack
Lasers
Pyrotechnic torch
Disruptors
Mechanical extraction.

We are also conducting research toward a vehicle-based route clearance system; the removal of anti-personnel land mines might be an aspiration for a later enhancement of this system.

The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency have recently developed a pyrotechnic torch, commercially known as the Fireant, to destroy anti-personnel and anti-vehicle mines once they have been located. This is currently being trialled on operations.

Military Exercises

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the military exercises that have been cancelled in the last 12 months, stating in each case the reason for cancellation and whether it was a national or international exercise. [109187]

Mr. Spellar: The information requested is set out in the tables. The lists do not include international exercises where UK forces were to have participated but which were cancelled by other nations.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the (a) number and (b) value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109306]

Dr. Moonie: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Integrated Project Teams

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people from industry are currently (a) leading and (b) are members of integrated project teams; and if he will make a statement. [109694]

Dr. Moonie: The principle of involving industry within Integrated Project Teams has become a reality. Two candidates from industry successfully competed for and are now leading Integrated Project Teams. Industry membership of IPTs takes a variety of forms depending on individual project circumstances and the stage of each project in the acquisition cycle. Industrial membership is growing as new IPTs are progressively established, and industry is already represented as an integral part of many high profile IPTs. A key feature of the standard IPT transition process is the 'industry day', used to initiate closer participation with industry. The level of industry representation in IPTs will be assessed following completion of the current transition phase.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many integrated project teams cover single projects; and if he will make a statement. [109695]

Dr. Moonie: Of the 135 Integrated Project Teams, 41 are regarded as managing single projects.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many integrated teams have been created to date; how many it is intended to create; and if he will make a statement. [109698]

Dr. Moonie: On 14 February 2000, the final 18 Integrated Project Teams will commence their roll out, bringing the total number of IPTs to 135. This constitutes the final phase of the Smart Procurement programme to move to an IPT-based structure. In the future, I anticipate new IPTs will be formed as a result of further restructuring in the Defence Logistics Organisation and through the normal process of project conception.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many procurement projects are to be covered by integrated teams; and if he will make a statement. [109697]

Dr. Moonie: The intent is that all Defence equipment projects, covering platforms, systems and sub-systems will be managed throughout their lives by Integrated Project Teams. 135 such teams are currently identified to manage a population of over 1,000 individual projects, from those currently in the initial procurement phase, as well as those already in-service.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many integrated teams cover clusters of more than one project; and if he will make a statement. [109696]

Dr. Moonie: Of the 135 Integrated Project Teams, 94 have responsibilities for more than one project.

Smart Procurement

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the target for cost reduction on the year-by-year defence equipment procurement budget to be achieved as a result of the Smart Procurement Initiative; and if he will make a statement. [109699]

Dr. Moonie: We are on track to deliver the £2 billion of reductions in spending on defence equipment procurement that we aimed to achieve on the merit of the Smart Procurement Initiative. These savings are not set out as a target for year by year reduction, as expenditure profiles may vary on individual projects, but are assessed as the sum of reductions made in successive planning rounds, for the 10 years from 1998–99 to 2007–08.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the time needed for the Smart Procurement initiative to be understood, and implemented within his Department; and if he will make a statement. [109692]

Dr. Moonie: The implementation phase of the Smart Procurement Initiative concludes on 1 April 2000, when the main structural changes will be complete. A recent survey across much of the Department and defence industry has shown that the case for Smart Procurement has been made, and that it is understood and accepted. There can be no reversion to the old ways of doing business. We will continue to reinforce the message to sustain the momentum of the initiative as the tangible benefits come to fruition.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements are in place to ensure that the proprietary information and expertise of competitors in defence procurement projects are protected under the Smart Procurement initiative; and if he will make a statement. [109691]

Dr. Moonie: In order that the maximum value can be obtained from Smart Procurement, we are looking to industry to be full participants in open discussion with the Department. The maintenance of confidentiality in respect of commercially sensitive and proprietary information has always been fundamental to the defence procurement relationship. The introduction of Smart Procurement has not changed this principle, and we continue to restrict the disclosure of such information, except where a contractor has specifically approved release.

Practical working arrangements are necessary to allow contractors to conduct dialogue within the acquisition teams in a framework which encourages the generation of ideas without disclosing commercially sensitive or proprietary information to competitors. The measures taken to protect such information vary according to circumstances, but can include formal Confidentiality Agreements or limiting the number of individuals having access to sensitive information, drawing from existing codes of practice as appropriate.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how co-operation with industry after contract signature under Smart Procurement differs from post-signature supplier co-operation under the previous procurement system; and if he will make a statement. [109693]

Dr. Moonie: Prior to the Smart Procurement Initiative our relationships with suppliers did not always maximise opportunities for joint approaches to problem solving, and arms-length interaction could hamper fully effective communications. One of the key elements of Smart Procurement is an improved relationship with industry, under which we seek to derive maximum benefit from better working practices and shared objectives. We are promoting a culture of greater openness and trust: a "no surprise" culture where co-operation, consultation and the sharing of data will facilitate success. Following contract signature therefore, and in the context of this more open approach, the MOD and industry will remain jointly focused on the delivery of the defence equipment capability to agreed performance parameters, within cost and on time.

There is no conflict between robust contracting and mutually beneficial team working.

Correspondence

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Northavon dated 26 February 1999, acknowledged on 5 March 1999 (Ref. 00964/1999), relating to nursery provision at his Department's establishment at Abbey Wood. [109532]

Dr. Moonie: I have replied today.

Nancekuke

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the letter of 8 February from the Chief Executive of DERA to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, whether records of personnel who worked at Nancekuke in the 1960s and 1970s are held at Llangennech. [109595]

Dr. Moonie: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 31 January 2000, Official Report, columns 412–13W.

Food Sourcing

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food regarding the sourcing from within the United Kingdom of meat for the armed forces. [R] [109813]

Dr. Moonie: Over the past two years, officials in my Department have had regular discussions with their counterparts at the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in order to ensure that all opportunities to source British meat for the Armed Forces at competitive prices are explored. One outcome of these discussions has been that MOD secured access to stocks of British intervention beef, with the result that 100 per cent. of beef for the Armed Forces in the UK is currently of British origin.

Courts-Martial (Royal Navy)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of courts-martial for Royal Navy ratings in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998 and (d) 1999. [107868]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 1 February 2000]: The information requested is as follows:

1996: 44
1998: 52
1999: 49.

Aircraft Maintenance

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average number of maintenance man-hours per flying hour for (a) Tornado GR1/4, (b) Tornado F3, (c) Harrier, (d) Jaguar, (e) Nimrod, (f) Sentry, (g) Tristar, (h) Puma, (i) Sea King and (j) Chinook in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [107549]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 2 February 2000]: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

RAF Pilots

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of training an RAF pilot to operational standard. [108101]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 2 February 2000]: The cost of training RAF pilots varies according to the aircraft to be flown and the individual. However, in recent years it has cost approximately £2.8 million to train a fast jet pilot, £2.4 million to train the pilot of a transport or other multi-engined aircraft and £1.1 million to train a helicopter pilot.

Imphal Barracks

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the manning figures were for Building 107 of Imphal Barracks, York, in (a) April 1981 and (b) April 1994; and what are the projected figures for April 2001. [109445]

Mr. Spellar: Records are not held of manning figures for Building 107 of Imphal Barracks for April 1981 and April 1994. A total of 332 staff are expected to occupy the building by April 2001.

CABINET OFFICE

Corporate IT Strategy

Valerie Davey: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made towards achieving the target of publishing a Corporate IT Strategy by March. [110300]

Mr. Ian McCartney: As part of our Modernising Governing commitment to publish a Corporate IT Strategy in March, we have published a draft of the strategy for comment on the Information Age Government website at www.iagchampions.gov.uk and have placed copies in the Libraries of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parades Commission

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of the individuals involved in undertaking the review of the Parades Commission. [110049]

Mr. Ingram: No. This was an internal review carried out by officials of the Northern Ireland Office.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a list of individuals and organisations who (a) have been invited to make submissions, (b) have made written submissions and (c) have made oral submissions to the review of the Parades Commission. [110048]

Mr. Ingram: We invited, through a press release, comments from anyone who felt they had a contribution to make. It is not Government practice to publish lists of contributors.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons he is to conduct a second review of the Parades Commission. [110042]

Mr. Ingram: There are no plans to conduct any review of the Parades Commission other than that announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Redcar (Marjorie Mowlam) on 8 October last year.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish the report of the review of the Parades Commission; and if he will make a statement. [110047]

Mr. Ingram: In accordance with the undertaking given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Redcar (Marjorie Mowlam), the Secretary of State will make an announcement on the outcome of the review. There are no plans to publish the report.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the current review of the Parades Commission will be completed prior to the appointment of new members and a new Chairman to the Commission. [110046]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will simultaneously announce the outcome of both the review and the competitions to appoint new members and a new Chairman to the Commission later in the week.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Local Transport Plans

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the costs incurred by each local authority in England in preparing provisional local transport plans. [109700]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The move to a five-year planning cycle will produce administrative savings for local authorities (by offering greater certainty of future funding and removing the need to prepare plans annually). The wider public participation, more effective partnership working and better monitoring associated with local transport plans will lead to some additional costs, but we have no information on which to base an estimate of their scale.

Driving Licences

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 27 January 2000, Official Report, column 278W, on driving licences, if he will state (a) what details, confirmed by the Immigration and Nationality Department are accepted as identification for driving licence application purposes and (b) in what form such confirmation would be acceptable. [108007]

Mr. Hill: My officials have recently reached agreement with the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) on a scheme under which original documents (passports or birth certificates) held by them will be returned for a limited period on request to those awaiting processing to allow them to make an application to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency for a driving licence.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if when an application for a driving licence is made by someone whose papers are awaiting processing by the Immigration Service, DVLA will consider accepting as proof of identity the standard acknowledgement letter issued by the Immigration Service. [108431]

Mr. Hill: DVLA was advised by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) in August last year that Standard Acknowledgement Letters are not evidence of identity and should not be accepted in support of an application for a driving licence.

DVLA and IND have recently reached agreement on a scheme under which original identity documents held by the Immigration Service will be returned for a limited period to those awaiting processing so that an application for a driving licence can be made to DVLA.

Workplace Car Parking Charges (West Midlands)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to (a) encourage less frequent use of cars and (b) allow local authorities to levy workplace car parking charges, in the west midlands. [109565]

Mr. Hill: Our integrated transport White Paper, "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone", set out a new approach to meeting local transport needs and reducing dependency on the car by improving alternative modes of transport and providing greater transport choice.

The Transport Bill currently before Parliament will enable local authorities to levy a charge on workplace parking to tackle traffic congestion as part of a Local Transport Plan. Local authorities in the West Midlands, with the exception of Coventry and Solihull, have joined our Charging Development Partnership and are actively considering a workplace parking levy scheme.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with other EU Ministers about exchanging information on good practice regarding the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions; and if he will make a statement. [110005]

Mr. Meacher: EU Environment Ministers regularly discuss the importance of introducing effective national, co-ordinated and Community level policies and measures to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. In October 1999, the Council agreed that it was essential for further common and co-ordinated policies and measures to be implemented rapidly and asked the Commission to put forward a priority list as early as possible in 2000. Discussion on any new measures proposed will be informed by best practice in Member States.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions have taken place within the Council of Ministers regarding meeting the legally-binding targets for greenhouse gas emissions by 2010; and if he will make a statement. [110006]

Mr. Meacher: The Council regularly discusses climate change issues and restates its determination to delivering the reductions in greenhouse gas emissions to which the European Community and its Member States are committed under the Kyoto Protocol.

The revised Council Decision on monitoring emissions of greenhouse gases requires the Commission to prepare annual assessments of the progress of the Community and its Member States towards delivering the Kyoto targets and to report to the Council and the European Parliament. The Commission is due to produce its first report in October, providing an opportunity for further Council discussion.

Road Haulage Forum

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the names of the members of the Road Haulage Forum with the names of the organisations and regions they represent; and if he will make a statement. [110112]

Mr. Hill: The Road Haulage Forum was established in March 1999. Its current membership is:

Members
Minister for Transport	The right hon. Lord Macdonald of Tradeston CBE
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, DETR	Lord Whitty
Minister of State, DTI	Patricia Hewitt MP
Financial Secretary to the Treasury	Stephen Timms MP
Freight Transport Association	Lawrence Christensen CBE (President) David Green (Director General)
Road Haulage Association	John Bridge OBE (Chairman)
Transport and General Workers' Union	Danny Bryan, Ron Webb (National Secretaries)
Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders	Christopher Macgowan (Chief Executive)
Independent Members	Stuart Archbold (of Archbold Freightage, Leeds) John Harvey CBE (of Tibbett and Britten, Enfield)

The Director General of the Road Haulage Association is also a member of the Forum, but this post is currently vacant.

Euratom

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish the consultation document on the regulatory changes required to implement the Basic Safety Standards Directive 96/29/ on Euratom. [110303]

Mr. Meacher: After consultation with interested parties last year, I have today published the proposals on the regulatory changes required to implement aspects of the Basic Safety Standards Directive 96/29/Euratom concerned with the control of radioactive waste. The proposals involve the minimum of change to the existing regulatory framework under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 (RSA 93) and fulfil the Government's commitment that implementation of the Directive would not lead to a weakening of existing controls. Copies of the document, entitled "The Proposals for the Radioactive Substances (Basic Safety Standards) (England and Wales) Regulations 2000 and the Radioactive Substances (Basic Safety Standards) (England and Wales) Direction 2000" can now be found in the Library.

The proposed Regulations made under Section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972 will provide controls on the disposal of certain types of old clocks and watches using radioactive luminising material, which are currently exempt from regulation. The proposed Direction to the Environment Agency made under Section 40 of the Environment Act 1995 will put a number of their existing administrative practices, in discharging their duties under RSA 93, into legally binding obligations.

Parallel measures are to be taken in Scotland and Northern Ireland, which will be the subject of separate consultations in due course.

Council Tax (Derbyshire)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the council tax payable in the area of Derbyshire Dales District Council for bands A-H for the last five years. [110078]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The table shows the gross council tax liability on properties in the bands A-H over the last five years.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110187]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The FSC label is accepted by buyers as demonstrating that timber and timber products have come from sustainably managed sources. However, it is not practicable to require that all paper and timber products purchased by the Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council because this might discriminate against any equally valid schemes and therefore be against public procurement rules. It might also result in us failing to meet our full requirements as currently only a tiny percentage of timber products are FSC certified. This is why DETR's Greening Operations policy statement suggests that evidence of sustainability might take the form of a certificate issued under a credible, preferably independent, verification scheme; or other documents which demonstrate the operation of an environmental management system incorporating forest management criteria that conform with internationally recognised principles such as the Helsinki Guidelines.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110186]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Among the key aims of DETR's Greening Operations policy statement are: to conserve resources and minimise waste by reducing our reliance on virgin materials and ensuring that any products derived from wildlife—such as paper and timber—are from sustainable sources and comply with EU and international trading rules such as the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species. The Department's policy statement also requires the purchase of 100 per cent. recycled paper for non-specialist use comprising at least 80 per cent. genuine post consumer waste with any virgin pulp coming from sustainably managed woodlands. It also promotes the purchase of sustainably produced timber and timber products by, for example, requiring buyers to specify in orders and contracts that:

> "suppliers provide documentary evidence (which has been, or if necessary can be, independently verified) that the timber has been lawfully obtained from forests and plantations which are managed to sustain their biodiversity, productivity and vitality, and to prevent harm to other ecosystems and any indigenous or forest-dependent people".

More guidance is given to buyers on these and other options in DETR's Green Guide for Buyers which is readily available on the Internet. The Department monitors its performance on these and other aspects of its operations and publishes an annual report showing progress made. It has also set up an inter-departmental buyers' timber group to raise awareness and promote best practice across Government.

Correspondence

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Broxbourne of 19 July, 1 September, 6 October, 3 November, 30 November, 4 January and 8 February relating to Mrs. Antonia Skielhorn, a constituent. [109960]

Mr. Hill: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State replied to the hon. Member for Broxbourne's letters on 10 February, expressing his apologies for the delay in so doing.

Fishing Vessel Accidents

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will issue the Government's response to the consultation paper entitled "Fishing Vessel Accidents and the Recovery of those Lost at Sea", published on 23 July 1998; and if he will make a statement. [109567]

Mr. Hill: The analysis of the responses to the consultation paper was published on 9 February 1999. The Government's response to the paper has been delayed because we are awaiting the results of Roger Clarke's investigation into why no search was made for the fishing trawler Gaul, following her disappearance in 1974. Mr. Clarke's investigation examines a number of issues raised in the consultation paper and we wish to take his findings into account before we issue the response.

Marine Freight Facilities Grant

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the allocations made under the marine freight facilities grant over the last five years, (b) their amount and (c) to whom the awards were made. [109566]

Mr. Hill: Inland Waterway Freight Facilities Grants awarded under section 36 of the Transport Act 1981 and section 140 of the Railways Act 1993 over the past five years are:

Year	Grants awarded	£
1995	—	—
1996	Medway Shipping Ltd.	71,563
1997	J. J. Prior (Transport) Ltd.	105,210
1998	RMC (London) Ltd.	118,500
	Aram Resources plc	1,057,900
	Bayford & Co.	223,790
1999	K. D. Marine (UK) Ltd.	126,000
	J. R. Rix & Sons Ltd.	884,917
	Baldwins Industrial Services Ltd.	1,500,000
	Pioneer Willment/	38,828
	Medway Bulk Powders	46,693
	Waterflow Transport Systems	9,785
	RMC (London) Ltd.	1,105,811
	Barking Stone Ltd.	3,636,316
	Waste Oil Services Ltd./	20,752
	T. & S. Rix Ltd.	100,746

Interest in grant for inland waterway schemes has historically been low. However, recent publicity drives by my Department have resulted in an increased interest in moving freight by inland waterway.

We intend to consult on the details of a scheme to extend to freight grants regime to coastal and short sea shipping.

Highways Agency

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Highways Agency will publish its annual report and accounts for 1998–99. [110403]

Mr. Hill: The Highways Agency annual report and accounts 1998–99 will be published tomorrow by the Stationery Office and copies placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies will also be available from the Vote Office for Members.

Energy-efficient Lighting

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he intends to take to ensure that those non-profit organisations which currently benefit from the Energy Saving Trust's successful lightswitch scheme will be assisted by the proposed climate change levy energy efficiency fund in order that they can install energy efficient lighting. [108720]

Mr. Meacher: We have invited comments on the scope of the proposed energy efficiency fund through our document "Consultation on Energy Efficiency Measures Under the Climate Change Levy Package". The consultation period closed on 4 February.

Following evaluation of the responses, it is anticipated that the Chancellor will make further announcements in the 2000 Budget.

Air Pollution

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many tonnes of carbon equivalent were released into the environment as a result of the use by the UK industry of (a) kerosene and (b) gas oil in the last year for which figures are available. [108713]

Mr. Hill: The last available figures are in the 1997 National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory. In 1997 the combustion of kerosene in UK industry generated 2,473 kilotonnes of carbon equivalent, while the combustion of gas oil in UK industry generated 10,472 kilotonnes of carbon equivalent. The UK total emission was 684,510 kilotonnes of carbon equivalent.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the contribution to UK emissions of pollutants covered by the air quality strategy by the industrial use of (a) kerosene and (b) gas oil. [108714]

Mr. Hill: The contribution to UK emissions of pollutants covered by the Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland from the industrial use of (a) kerosene and (b) gas oil is set out in the table.

Pollutant	Kerosene	Gas oil	UK total
Carbon monoxide (thousand tonnes per year)	0.13	18.33	5,090
Nitrogen oxides (thousand tonnes per year)	2.22	50.77	1,835
Lead (tonnes per year)	0.05	0.64	1,308
Particulate matter less than 10 micron diameter (thousand tonnes per year)	0.01	1.79	184
Sulphur dioxide (thousand tonnes per year)	0.47	8.95	1,660
Volatile organic compounds[1] (thousand tonnes per year)	0.07	6.54	2,130
Benzene (thousand tonnes per year)	0.00	0.13	38

[1] Volatile organic compounds are not an Air Quality Strategy pollutant, but are precursors of ozone

No figures are available for emissions of 1,3 butadiene from these sources, but they are expected to be small relative to other sources and in absolute terms.

The figures are from the 1997 National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory. It can be viewed on the internet at http://www.aeat.co.uk/netcen/airqual

DVLA

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will write to the hon. Member for Doncaster, Central about the results of his investigation into the supplying by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency of drivers' names and addresses to wheel clamping companies. [107304]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The Agency has conducted a review of the circumstances in which vehicle keeper details can be released from the register. This has identified a number of areas where a tighter interpretation might be applied to the regulations providing for the release of information, including certain aspects of car parking enforcement. In view of the sensitivities of the issues further legal advice has been sought. Once this has been considered, I will write to my hon. Friend.

HFC Emissions

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take into account the HFC emissions forecasts contained in the 1998 United Nations Environment Programme report in his own forecasts for United Kingdom emissions of HFCs to be included in the Government's revised Climate Change Strategy. [109330]

Mr. Meacher: In 1998 the United Nations Environment Programme published a report relevant to HFC use globally and this has been taken into account in developing the UK projections of HFC emissions.

Tax Discs

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to encourage the DVLA to prosecute drivers who are found to have no tax disc on their cars; and if he will make a statement. [109368]

Mr. Hill: Where vehicles are used or kept unlicensed on the public road, the detection is carried out by police and traffic wardens, who pass offence reports to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) for enforcement action.

Last year, DVLA took successful action against 475,000 evaders, bringing in £57.9 million in fines and penalties from out of court settlements or prosecution. A further 125,000 evaders or potential evaders relicensed their vehicles as a direct result of this enforcement activity, bringing in a further £15 million which would not otherwise have been paid. There are indications that for the first time the level of VED evasion is starting to fall.

We have significantly increased the number of joint DVLA/police campaigns against VED evaders. In addition the scheme to wheelclamp and impound unlicensed vehicles is now operating nationwide. A new pilot scheme to use automated number plate readers to detect and deter VED evaders will start this summer.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what restrictions there are on sitting councillors serving on regional development agencies. [109436]

Ms Armstrong: Although RDA boards are business led, they also need the effective involvement of local government. To that end, appointments to four of the twelve board positions are made from local councillors in the region. In order to maintain this balance, where the four positions reserved for councillors are already filled, sitting councillors will not normally be appointed to posts reserved for the business sector and other groups active in the region. There are no other restrictions.

Repetitive Strain Injury

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will (a) list the publicly funded studies into repetitive strain injury published in the last 10 years and (b) place such reports in the Library. [109299]

Mr. Meacher: The following studies of upper limb disorders (the preferred term for the group of conditions that includes "repetitive strain injury"), funded by the Health and Safety Executive, have been published in the last 10 years:

Title/subject	Publication details
Work related upper limb pain syndromes: origins and management. Contractor: Birmingham University	Report (Harrington et al, 1996) has not been formally published, however copies have been available in HSE Information Centres since 1997.

Decision aids for the medical assessment of WRULDs. Contractor: Aberdeen University	Conference paper published: Sinclair D. T., Graves R. J., Watt M., Ratcliffe B., Doherty S. Feasibility of developing a decision aid for initial medical assessment of ULDs. In S. A. Robertson ed., Contemporary Ergonomics 1997, (Taylor and Francis, London).
Development and evaluation of aids for initial medical assessment of upper limb disorders. Contractor: Aberdeen University	Conference paper published: Sinclair D. T., Jamieson D. W., Graves R. J., et al. Evaluation of a decision support aid for upper limb disorders in general practice. In M. A. Hanson, E. J. Lovesy and S. A. Robertson, ed., Contemporary Ergonomics 1999, (Taylor and Francis, London).
Surveillance case definitions for upper limb pain syndromes. Contractor: Birmingham University	Paper published: Harrington J. M., Carter J. T., Birrell L., Gompertz D. Surveillance case definitions for work related upper limb pain syndromes. In Occupational and Environmental Medicine. 55(4) 264–271. April 1998.
Epidemiological and ergonomic study of occupational factors associated with symptoms of upper limb disorders in keyboard operators. Contractor: Institute of Occupational Medicine	Report published by the Institute of Occupational Medicine, October 1999.

I am placing copies in the Library.

In addition, a number of studies were published during the period on musculoskeletal disorders generally, and on display screen equipment work. Those relevant to upper limb disorders include:

Title/subject	Publication details
Musculoskeletal disorders in supermarket cashiers. Contractor: HSE/Health and Safety Laboratory	Report published by HSE Books, 1998.
Display screen equipment health problems. Contractor: Systems Concepts	Published as HSE Contract Research Report No. 198/1998.
Musculoskeletal disorders among users of floor cleaning machines. Contractor: Surrey University	Published as HSE Contract Research Report No. 215/1999.
R55.053 Evaluating exposure to risk of musculoskeletal disorders: A practical tool. Contractor: Surrey University	Published as HSE Contract Research Report No. 251/1999.

M4 Corridor Study

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on the M4 corridor study; and when he will make an announcement on the outcome of the study. [109688]

Mr. Hill: Consultants will be appointed in February 2000, with an announcement on the outcome due in late 2001.

Council Rents (Wakefield)

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the impact on council house rental levels in Wakefield of the negative housing subsidy regime. [109768]

Mr. Mullin: Wakefield Metropolitan District Council is not affected by negative housing subsidy.

PRIME MINISTER

Post Offices

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister further to his statement on 4 February 2000, that the Government intend to promote the installation of cash machines at rural post offices, how franchises for these will be awarded; and what estimate he has made of the cost per transaction for the use of such machines. [109377]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 February 2000]: Decisions on the installation of cash machines at post offices are an operational and commercial matter for the Post Office. They are currently in the process of assessing all existing post office outlets for the suitability of a cash machine. Cost estimates are a commercial issue for the Post Office in conjunction with its partners and are currently being developed.

EU Defence

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2000, Official Report, column 5W, for what reason he is not prepared to place a synopsis of Mr. Liddle's speech in the Library. [109511]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my previous answers.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Smoking Policy

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he is taking to reduce smoking in his Department. [105795]

Dr. Reid: In my Department, smoking is permitted in designated areas. Advice and guidance is available to any staff who wish to give up smoking.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

North-east Regional Investment Fund

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the regional investment fund for the north-east has been temporarily closed for applications; and if he will make a statement. [108506]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The Regional Investment Fund for the north-east has not yet been opened. Preparations are underway for the launch of the fund in March 2000.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if enterprises in (a) the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, (b) Tweedmouth, and (c) Spittal will be eligible to apply to the regional investment fund for the north-east. [108504]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The north-east regional investment fund has been supported by European funding as part of the region's Objective 2 Programme for 1997–99. As the Berwick-upon-Tweed area did not have Objective 2 status under this programme, enterprises in that part of the region can not qualify for assistance. However, the area will enjoy Objective 2 status under the Programme for 2000–06. It will be for the north-east regional partnership to determine whether a similar project should be included in the new Programme.

British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) international and (b) national quality assurance standards British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. have received from independent accreditation agencies; when each of these standards was awarded; which plants or processes were awarded these standards; which accreditation agencies awarded the standards; which accreditations have now lapsed; when and at which plants; and under which standards corrective action is currently being implemented. [109334]

Mrs. Liddell: These are matters for BNFL. I have asked the Company Secretary of BNFL to write to my hon. Friend with the information he requires and will arrange for a copy of his reply to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received a copy of the report by Lloyd's Register Quality Assurance Ltd. on British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.'s MOX demonstration facility; and if he will place a copy of that report in the Library. [109337]

Mrs. Liddell: I have not received a copy of the report. This is a matter between BNFL and Lloyd's Register Quality Assurance.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what modifications BNFL is planning to make to the MOX Demonstration Facility as a result of recommendations made by Lloyd's Register Quality Assurance Ltd.; what will be the cost of those modifications; and if any of these modifications will also be required in the Sellafield MOX Plant. [109335]

Mrs. Liddell: I understand that BNFL are implementing a programme of remedial action which will be verified by Lloyd's Register Quality Assurance in further visits. The details are a matter between BNFL and Lloyd's Register Quality Assurance.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has received regarding the falsification and manipulation of fuel quality control data in respect of BNFL MOX fuel supplied to Switzerland; and if he will make a statement. [106711]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 1 February 2000]: I understand from BNFL that, since the falsification of quality control data relating to Japanese fuel was discovered, BNFL have investigated all quality data for MOX fuel supplied to Switzerland. A data anomaly affecting one lot of fuel pellets supplied in February 1997 was identified but a further investigation by BNFL and its customers concluded that the fuel met the required specification.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the national minimum wage in (a) Coventry, South, (b) the west midlands and (c) the United Kingdom. [109553]

Mr. Alan Johnson: We asked the independent Low Pay Commission to report on the impact of the introduction of the minimum wage and the Commission's report, with the Government's response, will be published shortly. Definitive estimates of the number of people who had benefited from the national minimum wage are not yet available. But the latest Office for National Statistics figures indicate that at least 700,000 employees in the United Kingdom, 70,000 of them in the west midlands, had already had their pay raised above the national minimum wage rates in spring last year. However, these data were gathered before the full effect of the new law had been felt (March-May 1999).

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to review the level of the minimum wage; and if he will make a statement. [109576]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I have made no decision on future changes to the level of the national minimum wage. The Government have always made it clear that there would be no automatic uprating mechanism for the national minimum wage. Any future changes to the national minimum wage rates will be made sensibly, taking account of the prevailing economic circumstances and feedback on the effects of the new law since April 1999. The Low Pay Commission's second report, which the Government will publish shortly, considers its impact in great detail.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations he has received in the last 12 months asking him to uprate the minimum wage annually in April. [109687]

Mr. Alan Johnson: We have received 11 representations in the past year requesting that the national minimum wage be uprated annually in April.

Gas Industry

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to encourage the regulator to examine the gas industry in the north-west. [109577]

Mrs. Liddell: I have no plans to do so but, under the terms of the Gas Act 1996, the Director General for Gas Supply may investigate any matter that is drawn to his attention by those with interests in the matter.

Vibration White Finger

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when a medical test centre for Vibration White Finger will be established to meet the needs of ex-miners in north Staffordshire. [109922]

Mrs. Liddell: A Vibration White Finger test centre will be established in Hanley on 1 March 2000.

Gas-powered Generating Stations

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made, in mega watts and kilowatt hours, of the amount of gas-powered electricity generating capacity which has not been proceeded with as a result of the introduction of the moratorium on the approval of licences for new gas-powered generating stations. [109359]

Mrs. Liddell: 15 proposals amounting to some 6 GW of new gas-fired capacity have been refused clearance under the stricter consents policy. It is not possible to say for certain how many of these proposals would have proceeded to construction had consent been granted, nor how much electricity would have been generated by them.

If all the proposals had proceeded to development and expected to reach 80 per cent. load factor, then they would have produced some 42,000 million kilowatt hours per year once they reached full operation. This is about the maximum output these proposals could have produced.

Pakistan

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidelines have been given to officials regarding the issuing of export licences for defence equipment to Pakistan. [109731]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs my hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) on 20 January 2000, Official Report, column 578W.

Polish Coal

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he has taken to stop the dumping of Polish coal on the UK market; and if he will make a statement. [109020]

Mrs. Liddell: The UK coal industry have made representations to the Government about the imports of Polish coal at prices that appear to be below the cost of production.

Trade relations with third countries such as Poland fall within the competence of the European Communities. The Government have written to the Commission highlighting the difficulties being experienced by the UK coal industry due to Polish coal imports and urging them to address this problem.

In this regard the Government are exploring with the European Commission as a matter of urgency whether there is any possibility of resolving this issue through the EU-Poland Europe Agreement.

In addition to this, Ministers and officials have emphasised to the Polish Administration the importance that we place on having a fair and competitive market for coal in the UK.

It is the European Commission's responsibility to investigate allegations of unfair dumping or subsidy. The Government are urging the European Commission to investigate any complaints from the UK industry as rapidly as possible.

Coalfields Enterprise Fund

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the establishment of the Coalfields Enterprise Fund. [108730]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.
The Coalfields Task Force Report "Making the Difference" set out a programme of actions to combat the deprivation now faced by the coalfield communities. One of the recommendations was the creation of a fund to provide loans and equity investment to Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs), with high growth potential in the coalfields.

On 1 December 1998, at a Coalfields Conference in Peterlee, County Durham, the Deputy Prime Minister agreed to this recommendation and set aside £15 million to invest in the Coalfields Enterprise Fund.
The development of the Fund, by English Partnerships on behalf of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is well advanced and the target is for the Fund to be operational in the spring.

Wireless Telegraphy Deregulation

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the economic impact on business associated with (a) the Deregulation (Wireless Telegraphy) Order 1996 (S.I., 1996, No. 1864) and (b) the Contracting Out (Functions in Relation to the Management of Crown Lands) Order 1998 (S.I., 1998, No. 215). [108807]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 7 February 2000]: I have been asked to reply in view of my Department's responsibility for the two statutory instruments in question. As I said in reply to my hon. Friend on 27 January 2000, Official Report, columns 301–02W, the 1996 Order was estimated to have saved TV dealers £10,000 a year each. The impact on business in general of the 1998 Order has not been estimated, but will have been negligible; the benefits to Exchequer funding by grant-in-aid is however estimated to be a saving of £7 million per year.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Solicitor-General if the CPS will advertise all temporary acting-up posts of more than four weeks duration. [109374]

The Solicitor-General: On 31 January 2000 the Employment Tribunal promulgated its decision on the remedy in the case of Bamieh v. Crown Prosecution Service (Case number 2202655/98). The Tribunal recommended that with effect from one month after the promulgation of its decision and for a period of 12 months, all temporary acting-up posts as Prosecution Team Leader of more than four weeks' duration (i.e. not simply covering on holidays) should be advertised by the CPS by notice or circular letter to all staff who might be qualified as candidates. The CPS is considering how this recommendation should be met.

In the meantime, absences of more than three months will be covered by temporary promotion arrangements in which expressions of interest will be sought from staff in response to details circulated by management. A panel will be convened to decide who should be appointed.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the decision in the case of Bamieh v. Crown Prosecution Service (Case No. 2202655/98) in the Employment Tribunal, on 31 January. [109375]

The Solicitor-General: The Tribunal decided that Ms Bamieh was entitled to compensation totalling £38,358.22 for the loss of opportunity for promotion, injury to feelings (including an element of aggravated damages) and interest. Arrangements are in hand for the payment to be made.

The Tribunal also recommended that with effect from one month after promulgation of this decision and for a period of 12 months, all temporary acting-up posts as Prosecution Team Leader of more than four weeks' duration (i.e. not simply covering on holidays) should be advertised by the CPS by notice or circular letter to all staff who might be qualified as candidates.

A revised CPS temporary promotion procedure came into effect on 31 January 2000. The CPS is considering how the Tribunal's recommendation can be met and whether further changes to that procedure should be made.

DEFENCE

Territorial Army

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what will be the total cost to his Department of redundancy and associated entitlement moneys paid to servicemen from the Non-Regular Permanent Staff of the Territorial Army made redundant under the terms of the Strategic Defence Review; and if he will make a statement; [101921]

(2) how many members of the Non-Regular Permanent Staff of the Territorial Army are due to be made redundant under the terms of the Strategic Defence Review; and if he will make a statement. [101922]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 13 December 1999]: A total of 449 Non-Regular Permanent Staff (NRPS) posts have been removed from the Territorial Army as a result of the Strategic Defence Review. Some incumbents of these posts will be found other jobs but the sizeable remainder will regrettably be made redundant. As at 1 February, 321 NRPS have been made redundant at a total cost of approximately £8.8 million. The total redundancy bill will only be known when all those affected have left because payments are calculated on an individual basis, depending on length of service and rate of pay on discharge.

Aircraft

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Nimrod aircraft are (a) serviceable and (b) unserviceable; [107047]

(2) how many Tornado aircraft are (a) serviceable and (b) unserviceable. [107048]

Mr. Spellar: The information requested is set out in the table. This represents a snapshot in time at 8 a.m. on 26 January.

	Tornado	Tornado F3	Nimrod MR2
Number of aircraft allocated to front-line[1]	119	86	23
Serviceable[2]	94	79	16
Undergoing servicing at 2nd line	25	7	3
Undergoing servicing at 3rd/4th line	6	11	4
Undergoing upgrade	48	16	5
Aircraft on trials	1	1	0
Fleet size	174	114	28

[1] The allocation to front-line units is made up of all aircraft which are serviceable or are at 1st or 2nd line maintenance (and 3rd and 4th line maintenance for the Nimrod) as this servicing work is undertaken at the station. RAF fleet size is made up by totalling all aircraft.

[2] Includes aircraft that are undergoing 1st line servicing.

The operational serviceability of front-line aircraft fluctuates each day according to the maintenance that is required. 1st line servicing tasks are those which can generally be rectified in a matter of hours. 2nd line servicing tends to be scheduled servicing and can take a number of weeks. In many cases aircraft can be recovered earlier if required for operations. Some of the aircraft in 3rd/4th line maintenance and undergoing upgrade to improve their overall capability could be made available operationally in the event of a major crisis requiring the deployment of large numbers of aircraft.

TIALD System

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado GR/4's have a fully operational TIALD system; what percentage of the GR/4 fleet this represents; what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the TIALD system; and if he will make a statement. [107546]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 2 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the right hon. and learned Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 11 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence in which you asked how many Tornado GR4s have a fully operational TIALD system; what percentage of the GR4 fleet this represents; and what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of the TIALD system. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

TIALD is a fully operational and very effective system fitted to a proportion of the Tornado GR1 fleet. Technical problems have delayed completion of the integration of TIALD onto GR4 aircraft but full operational clearance is expected to be achieved in late 2000.

Imphal Barracks

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the cost of the works for making safe The Keep, Imphal Barracks. [109443]

Mr. Spellar: The Keep is currently unoccupied, although some basement rooms are used for storage. It is safe for the light foot traffic that the building is restricted to, and therefore needs no additional work other than routine maintenance. As for the cost of maintaining the building, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 7 February 2000, Official Report, column 29W.

Thiepval Barracks, Lisburn

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the feasibility study carried out on behalf of his Department for the provision of married quarters at Thiepval Barracks in Lisburn. [110043]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 164W, to the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) .

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details of the contract awarded to Waldwin Ltd. under the PFI scheme for the provision of married quarters at Thiepval Barracks in Lisburn. [110044]

Dr. Moonie: The contract for the provision of married quarters at Lisburn has not yet been signed.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to sell off land within Thiepval Barracks in Lisburn for (a) public and (b) private housing development. [110045]

Dr. Moonie: There are no plans to sell off land within Thiepval Barracks for public or private housing development.

Altcar Rifle Range

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Territorial Army Voluntary Reserve rifle range at Altcar is Crown property. [106450]

Dr. Moonie: The West Lancashire Territorial Association purchased Altcar Ranges in July 1912. The Reserve Forces are considered an integral part of MOD, therefore the land owned and occupied by TAVRA and used for military purposes is regarded as Crown land.

Anti-ballistic Missile Treaty

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which member states, associate member states, associate partner states and observer states of the Western European Union are parties to the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. [109760]

Mr. Hoon: None.

Computers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 590W, on computers, what type of classified information was accessed by his Department's staff in each hacking incident; and what grades or type of staff would normally have access to this information. [109458]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: Internal hacking incidents are categorised into eight different types of misuse and the classification of the information involved may not be relevant to the type of incident. During the past two years, none of the internal hacking incidents involved the theft or disclosure of classified information. Access to classified information is determined by the post held by the staff member and also on a need to know basis. The grade of the staff member is not relevant.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 590W, on computers, what action has been taken to reduce the number of internal incursions into computer files containing classified information. [109457]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: My Department is continuously reviewing, and seeking ways to improve, both the procedural and electronic security of its systems. Electronic measures include the identification and authentication of users and audit of user activities. Before any IT system is allowed to operate it must obtain a security approval known as accreditation. All MOD staff are required to read and agree to comply with the Security Operating System for the system that they will use.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 590W, on computers, how many of his Department's staff have been disciplined for hacking incidents; and what disciplinary action was taken in each case. [109456]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The incident recording system in use for the past five years does not carry details of disciplinary action taken. The recording system has however recently been modified to record when disciplinary action has been initiated but not the precise details of that action.

Accommodation (Royal Navy)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of cost-efficiency comparisons between conventional build and PFI contracts for the planned junior ratings accommodation in HMS Nelson [109475]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: I have not yet received advice on any rebuild of junior ratings single living accommodation in HMS Nelson.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of the standard of accommodation provided for junior ratings and other ranks in Her Majesty's Royal Naval Shore Establishments in the retention of these personnel in the Royal Navy. [109473]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: We are conscious that dissatisfaction with living accommodation may have an effect on retention and so we have in place a programme of improvements to single living accommodation for all service personnel, including naval ratings.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the condition and fitness for purpose of accommodation provided for junior ratings in each of Her Majesty's Royal Naval Shore Establishments. [109500]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The Strategic Defence Review recognised that the Armed Forces' single living accommodation estate should be improved. As a result, all junior naval ratings single living accommodation has been assessed against a common standard in order to determine what improvements are needed and in what order of priority the improvements should be addressed.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when a new accommodation project for junior ratings at HMS Nelson was first approved; and when contracts for construction, operation and maintenance will be let. [109476]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The junior ratings single living accommodation forms part of the establishment of HMS Nelson, which incorporates a number of wider functions as a Fleet Accommodation Centre. My Department is currently undertaking a study into the means of delivery of a number of functions in HMS Nelson, including the junior ratings accommodation. The further prospect of a wider PFI within the Naval Base as a whole is also a consideration. I have yet to receive advice on this work and no decisions have been taken.

South Atlantic

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which warships are currently deployed in the South Atlantic; and what plans he has to replace them at the end of their tour of duty. [109865]

Mr. Spellar: The Type 23 Frigate HMS Somerset is currently returning from the South Atlantic via the West African coast. Her replacement as the Falkland Islands Guardship is the Type 42 Destroyer HMS Southampton, which will arrive in Falkland Islands waters shortly.

The ice patrol ship HMS Endurance and the Offshore Patrol Vessel HMS Dumbarton Castle are currently deployed in the South Atlantic. HMS Endurance will return to the UK at the end of the austral summer, as is normal practice, and will redeploy to the South Atlantic in austral summer 2000–01. HMS Dumbarton Castle is scheduled to remain in the South Atlantic until 2001 when she will be relieved by her sister ship HMS Leeds Castle.

Naval Manpower (South Atlantic)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of naval manpower is deployed in the South Atlantic. [109863]

Mr. Spellar: The proportion of naval manpower currently deployed in the South Atlantic represents less than 1 per cent. of the Naval Service Trained Strength.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total annual cost is of maintaining and manning the Falkland Islands military base. [109862]

Mr. Spellar: The cost to the Ministry of Defence of the Falkland Islands Garrison in financial year 1999–2000 is expected to be approximately £73 million.

This figure relates to the costs incurred by the Commander British Forces Falkland Islands only. It does not include the costs of the RAF airbridge to the Falkland Islands, nor the cost of naval deployments to the South Atlantic. These costs fall to other budgets and are not separately identified.

Lloyd's Register

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact the new Lloyd's Register rules will have on the readiness and functioning of Royal Navy ships; and if he will make a statement. [109674]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence has operated Royal Fleet Auxiliary Ships in an appropriate Lloyd's Register Class for many years with no significant impact on the required readiness and functioning of these ships. The new Lloyd's Naval Ship Rules, developed in full consultation with the Ministry of Defence, provide planned and monitored standards for Royal Navy warships that will ensure availability, functionality and sustained readiness. Care has been taken to ensure that Lloyd's Rules are at least as effective as current MOD Naval Standards.

Nepal

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was to his Department of participating in the multinational peacekeeping exercise in January 2000 in Nepal; which units took part and for how long; and if he will make a statement. [109800]

Mr. Spellar: My Department did not participate directly in Exercise Shanti Prayas, the South Asian multinational peacekeeping exercise held in Nepal from 16 to 30 January 2000.

However, at the invitation of the Nepalese Army, the Ministry of Defence sent two observers to part of the exercise at an additional cost of around £500.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bilateral meetings were held between his Department and its Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what was discussed at each meeting since May 1997. [109874]

Mr. Hoon: Since 1995 the following senior-level bilateral meetings were held between representatives of the Ministry of Defence and its Austrian counterpart:

Year	Number of meetings
1996	0
1997	5
1999	0

In addition, a number of low-level or informal meetings will have been held but details of such meetings are not held centrally. Discussions will have covered a wide range of issues of defence co-operation.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what level of profit his Department permits contractors to make on non-competitive contracts; and if he will make a statement. [109967]

Dr. Moonie: The level of profit included in prices negotiated for non-competitive government contracts is calculated in accordance with the Government Profit Formula. Copies of the Reports on the Annual Reviews and triennial General Reviews of the Government Profit Formula for Non-Competitive Contracts, produced by the Review Board for Government Contracts (a non-departmental public body), are available in the Library of the House. These advise on the appropriate calculation of profit on non-competitive contracts for the year in which the contract is priced.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many non-competitive contracts, to what aggregate value, were let during the last year for which records are available; and if he will make a statement. [109966]

Dr. Moonie: The total number of contracts placed by the Ministry of Defence during Financial Year 1998–99 was 55,496, of which 8,616 were non-competitive. The total value of the contracts was £7.09 billion, of which the non-competitive element was worth £2.3 billion. These figures exclude Local Purchase Orders, the average value of which is less than £500.

Making the best use of competition at prime and sub-contract level, is the MOD's preferred means of supplier selection, for achieving value for money in the delivery of defence capability. Where competition is not practicable, or is dispensed with on value for money grounds, contract placement is normally accompanied by price agreement at the outset.

Procurement (Capability Working Groups)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of capability working groups in the defence procurement system. [109968]

Dr. Moonie: Capability working groups are being established as part of our Smart Procurement reforms. Such groups bring together key stakeholders to develop the broad strategy for the capability area concerned, and to assess options to meet capability gaps. The groups thus inform and support the work of the Defence Procurement Agency teams responsible for managing equipment projects.

Service Discipline

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each country where HM forces are deployed (a) the nature of the deployment, (b) the numbers deployed, by service, and (c) the numbers of civil servants, their dependants and the civilian dependants of service personnel who may be tried under the service discipline Acts. [110009]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Declaration of Principles

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the Declaration of Principles he signed with the US Secretary for Defense on 5 February. [109732]

Mr. Hoon: A copy of the UK/US Declaration of Principles has been placed in the Library of the House.

Challenger 2

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money, and over what time scale, he intends to save by purchasing a new track for Challenger 2; and if he will make a statement. [109734]

Dr. Moonie: The whole-life costs of all weapons systems are being examined as part of the Department's Smart Procurement initiative. Challenger 2, which only entered service in June 1998, is no exception. It is too early to say with absolute accuracy what savings will be achieved from on-going studies into the running costs of the vehicle.

TRACER

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effect the recent changes to the US Army budget plan will have on the TRACER/Future Scout and Cavalry System; and if he will make a statement. [109733]

Dr. Moonie: The UK and USA have entered into a joint Project Definition phase for TRACER/FSCS under the terms of a Memorandum of Understanding. This commits both nations to an equal share of the cost of this stage of the project. There is no commitment, by either nation, to proceed beyond the Project Definition phase and, therefore, no agreement to fund any further development beyond this stage. The UK contribution to the cost of the collaborative Project Definition contracts for TRACER is some £90 million. My officials are in close touch with their US counterparts over the TRACER/FSCS programme.

Armed Forces Legal Branches

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the official establishments of each of the armed forces legal branches. [110007]

Mr. Spellar: The Royal Navy does not have a legal branch but there are 21 established legal posts. The establishments of the Army and Royal Air Force legal branches are 100 and 37 respectively.

Royal Military Police

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are (a) the official establishment figures for the Royal Military Police, (b) the current manpower and (c) forecast manpower levels for the next three years. [110008]

Mr. Spellar: As at 1 February 2000, the RMP currently has 1,961 serving personnel and has a manpower planning target of 2,007. The current manpower planning target is not expected to change significantly in the next three years. That target includes the small number of posts that will be needed to meet the provisions of the Armed Forces Discipline Bill.

Smart Procurement

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what stage in the Smart Procurement process the defence industry will become involved; what impact such involvement will have on the policy of competitive procurement; and if he will make a statement. [109690]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Under Smart Procurement, the industry is involved in procurement projects from the outset. However, the nature and level of its involvement will vary according to the stage of the project, from initial studies, procurement, through-life support and disposal. This does not affect MOD policy on competition. Making the best use of competition at prime and sub-contract level remains the MOD's preferred means of supplier selection for defence requirements and achieving value for money. Industry understands this principle.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the President of the Council how many parliamentary questions have been tabled by right hon. and hon. Members, pursuing delays on the part of Government departments in replying to correspondence since May 1997; and if she will indicate how many were tabled by (a) Conservative, (b) Labour and (c) other hon. Members. [110079]

Mrs. Beckett: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Responsibility for replying to parliamentary questions and correspondence from hon. Members lies with the relevant Minister.

HEALTH

Departmental Press Releases

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press releases were issued by his Department in each year since 1995. [105915]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is in the table, which represents all press releases issued by the Department's press office for the period 1995 to 1999. The Department's press office issues press releases on behalf of the Medical Devices Agency, Medicines Control Agency, National Health Service Pensions Agency, National Health Service Estates and some non-departmental public bodies.

Year	Total
1996	366
1997	406
1998	556
1999	742

BCG Vaccination

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 January 2000, Official Report, column 143W, how much of the new money for support of health authorities dealing with meningococcal Group C was a transfer of money from under-used resources in the BCG vaccination programme. [105902]

Yvette Cooper: The £9 million being made available to health authorities to support the meningococcal Group C immunisation programme referred to in my Answer of 11 January is new money and has not come from the BCG programme. Funding for the meningococcal Group C immunisation programme has come from a separate source to that used to fund the BCG immunisation programme.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 January 2000, Official Report, column 143W, how the resources allocated to the BCG vaccination programme are being used. [105903]

Yvette Cooper: Funding for the central purchase of BCG vaccine remains available for when vaccine supplies are reinstated. The redeployment of the health workers, especially school nurses, involved in delivering BCG vaccine, is a matter for individual health authorities and trusts but we are aware that some of these staff are currently involved in the meningococcal Group C immunisation programme in schools.

Death Rates

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to reduce the death rate from (a) cancer and (b) coronary heart disease among people aged under 75 years by 2010. [106159]

Yvette Cooper: The "Saving Lives-Our Healthier Nation" White Paper was published in July last year and set targets to reduce death rates from cancer by at least a fifth and from coronary heart disease (CHD) and stroke and related diseases by at least two fifths in those under 75 by 2010. This requires policies on primary prevention, early detection and treatment and the White Paper recommends a partnership between Government, local players and individuals. Since then the National Priorities Guidance to the National Health Service has identified cancer and heart disease as key priorities, a National Cancer Director has been appointed and the National Service Framework on CHD will be published shortly.

Sickle Cell and Thalassaemia

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much public money was allocated to research to find a cure for sickle cell and thalassaemia in each of the last 10 years. [106195]

Yvette Cooper: Government expenditure on directly commissioned research projects on sickle cell disease and thalassaemia since 1994–95 is as follows:

1994–95: £550,000
1995–96: £964,000
1996–97: £988,000
1997–98: £930,000
1998–99: £884,000

Figures for the total spend in previous years is not available.

Most of this support has been provided through the Medical Research Council (MRC), which is the main agency through which the Government support research into the causes and treatment of disease. The MRC receives most of its income via grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Project funding from the Department and the Department for International Development is also included in the figures.

In addition to directly commissioned projects, the Department of Health supports research in the NHS funded by research councils and charities. It is not possible to estimate exactly how much is spent on sickle cell research, but three London Hospitals alone estimate that they are spending £450,000 per annum of Department funding on research related to sickle cell and thalassaemia. A detailed breakdown for the last 10 years is not available as research spending is devolved for much of the period. Details of projects can be found on the National Research Register which is available in most medical libraries on CD Rom and on the internet: http:/www.doh.gov.uk/nrr.htm. The NRR contains a number of projects relating to sickle cell and thalassaemia.

We also make considerable investment in genetics and gene therapy research which will inform sickle cell and thalassaemia.

The MRC has been actively seeking opportunities to strengthen sickle cell research in the United Kingdom.

MRSA

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to instruct NHS trusts to notify the Public Health Laboratory of cases of MRSA. [106755]

Yvette Cooper: The Report on Resistance to Antibiotics by the Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology drew attention, among other things, to proposals that National Health Service laboratories should be asked to report causative organisms such as MRSA to the Public Health Laboratory Service. In response, the Government accepted the need to increase the effectiveness of laboratory reporting. This could include the reporting of organisms such as MRSA. An overall Communicable Disease Strategy is now being developed by a working group chaired by the Chief Medical Officer.

Notifiable Diseases

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria are employed by his Department in designating diseases as notifiable diseases. [106754]

Yvette Cooper: The precise term "notifiable disease" is defined in section 10 of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 as being one of five specific diseases. Regulation 3 and Schedule 1 of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Regulations 1988 list further diseases "which are required to be notified". The first criterion which determines that a disease is required to be notified is that it is subject to the International Health Regulations. If not in those Regulations, the criteria would depend on expert assessment of the impact of the disease.

This statutory notification applies to registered medical practitioners and not to diagnostic laboratories, and to diseases rather than to causative organisms.

Radiation (Sellafield)

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what figures were used to represent concentrations of uranium in air in the calculations of radiation doses from plutonium to the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of people aged up to 25 years resident in the village of Seascale in Cumbria, which were supplied by the National Radiological Protection Board to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment; [106816]

(2) what figures were used to represent concentrations of plutonium in air in the calculation of radiation doses from plutonium to the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of people aged up to 25 years resident in the village of Seascale in Cumbria, which was supplied by the National Radiological Protection Board to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment; [106811]

(3) what (a) theoretical modelling of plutonium concentrations and (b) post mortem measurements of plutonium were used in the calculation of radiation doses from plutonium to the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of people aged up to 25 years resident in the village of Seascale in Cumbria, which was supplied by the National Radiological Protection Board to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment; [106815]

(4) what (a) theoretical modelling of uranium concentrations and (b) post mortem measurements of uranium were used in the calculation of radiation doses from uranium to the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of people aged up to 25 years resident in the village of Seascale in Cumbria, which was supplied by the National Radiological Protection Board to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment; [106810]

(5) what figure was used to represent the mass of the tissue considered to be the target organ in the calculation of radiation doses from plutonium to the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of people aged up to 25 years resident in the village of Seascale in Cumbria, which was supplied by the National Radiological Protection Board to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment; [106814]

(6) what air intake particles were used as the basis for the calculation of radiation doses from plutonium to the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of people aged up to 25 years resident in the village of Seascale in Cumbria, which was supplied by the National Radiological Protection Board to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment; [106812]

(7) what figures were used to represent the radioactivity of (a) plutonium, (b) uranium and (c) other man-made isotopes, incorporated within the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of people aged up to 25 years resident in the village of Seascale in Cumbria, in the calculation of doses from plutonium to the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of those people which was supplied by the National Radiological Protection Board to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment. [106813]

Yvette Cooper: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Drugs and Alcohol (Women)

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what specialist services are available for (a) women with children and (b) other women who are drug and alcohol misusers. [107126]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, lists of agencies offering a range of specialist services for women with children and other women who are drug and alcohol misusers are available in directories published by the Standing Conference On Drug Abuse and Alcohol Concern.

Haemorrhoid Treatment

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were treated for haemorrhoids in the NHS in 1970, 1980, 1990 and 1998. [107489]

Mr. Denham: The information available is set out in the table. It shows the number of cases treated in hospital, either as ordinary admission or day cases. Figures for each year were collected on a slightly different basis and are not therefore directly comparable.

Year		Number
1970	England and Wales	24,609
1980	England	20,100
1990–91	England	28,727
1997–98[1]	England	38,133

[1] Figures for 1997–98 are provisional and no adjustments have been made for shortfalls in data

Cancer Operations

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS cancer operations have been cancelled since 1 November 1999. [107491]

Yvette Cooper: We do not collect data on cancelled operations by specialty. Quarterly reports of figures for all cancelled operations in England, which arise on the day a patient was due to come into hospital, or after they have been admitted, are available in the Library.

Irish Community

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to (a) identify and (b) address the specific health needs of the Irish community in Britain. [107585]

Yvette Cooper: The 1999 Health Survey for England focused on the health of ethnic minorities (including Irish people) and its report will be published later this year. The 2001 Census includes questions on health and will for the first time ask for and separately classify those people who describe themselves as of Irish ethnic origin. The "Saving lives—Our Healthier Nation" White Paper, published last year has inequalities in health as one of its main themes and will address the needs of all the population including Irish people.

Credit Ratings

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how often the credit rating of companies supplying services to his Department is checked. [107746]

Yvette Cooper: Where companies supplying services to the Department are awarded contracts as a result of a formal tender exercise, Departmental guidelines require all such companies to be assessed as to their financial viability prior to the award. In some instances this will include a credit rating check. The Department does not, as a matter of routine, carry out financial assessments or credit rating checks either on small value contracts or on its existing suppliers except as part of another tender exercise.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the credit rating of companies seeking to tender for services provided by his Department is checked before the contract is awarded. [107744]

Yvette Cooper: Departmental guidelines require short-listed companies, seeking to tender for services provided by the Department, to be assessed for financial viability prior to the award of any contract. In some cases this will include a credit rating check.

Mouth Cancer

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS of treating mouth cancers in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [107619]

Yvette Cooper: This information is currently unavailable. Work is, however, under way to develop a system for collecting treatment cost data for oncology services, including mouth cancers. It is hoped that these data will become available next year.

Nurse Vacancies

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies for nurses there are (a) in the NHS, (b) St. Helier Hospital and (c) for each national health trust in the country. [107927]

Mr. Denham: The Department's "Recruitment, Retention and vacancies Survey" showed that in National Health Service trusts in England there were 16,190 whole time equivalent (wte) nursing and midwifery posts vacant on 31 March 1999. The St. Helier Trust reported a total of 70 wte vacancies. As St. Helier Hospital is part of this trust, separate figures are not available. Total vacancy figures for all trusts in England have been placed in the Library.

Cervical Smears

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health further to his answer of 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 54W, on cervical smears (1) if he will take into account the information on the effectiveness of the Neopath/Tripath Autopap system in the USA and Europe in making his decision on introducing it in this country; [108150]

(2) if, for the testing and introduction of the Neopath/Tripath Autopap machine for cervical screening tests, he will prioritise areas which have particular shortages of trained staff or long delays in their cervical screening programme. [108149]

Yvette Cooper: We welcome any new technology that would improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the cervical screening programme. However, before any technology is introduced, we must be sure that it is safe and effective, and that quality standards can be maintained.

The Advisory Committee on Cervical Screening (ACCS) held preliminary discussions on the Tripath Autopap system (previously Neopath Autopap system) as part of a wider discussion on automated screening procedures at their meeting in June 1999. The ACCS advised that further evaluation was necessary. An evaluation is underway, partly funded by the National Health Service cervical screening programme, and a report is expected later in the year. Information on the effectiveness of the system in the United States of America and Europe will be taken into account.
Decisions on the introduction of this new technology will be taken if and when it is proved to be effective.

Harold Shipman

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of patients of Dr. Harold Shipman whose deaths were considered suspicious by the internal investigation conducted by Manchester Health Authority; and how many of these were women. [108298]

Mr. Denham: The investigation of alleged crimes is a matter for the police.

The internal inquiry conducted by West Pennine Health Authority focused on existing monitoring arrangements available to a health authority, and not on the specific circumstances of individual cases.

I understand that, at the time that West Pennine undertook its review of monitoring arrangements, the police were investigating the deaths of some 129 people who had been patients of Dr. Shipman, some of which were suspicious. Charges of murder were brought in respect of 15 of these patients, all of whom were women.

Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 565W, what restrictions were placed on contractors carrying out research projects funded by his Department in 1999 in respect of them discussing their findings with journalists (a) before and (b) after publication. [108196]

Yvette Cooper: Copies of model contracts for the Department's policy research programme and the National Health Service research and development programme are in the Library.

The Department actively encourages contractors to publish the findings of research which it has funded.

In common with most research funders, the Department actively discourages the discussion of research findings with journalists prior to adequate peer review: in many areas publication in a scientific journal is a key part of the peer review process.

No restrictions are placed on researchers after publication. Again in common with most other funders, the Department asks researchers to work closely with its press office.

Influenza

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of intensive care beds have been taken up with influenza and influenza-related illnesses each month for the last 10 years. [108165]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available centrally.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new cases of tuberculosis have been recorded in the United Kingdom in the last year. [108332]

Yvette Cooper: The total number of newly notified cases of tuberculosis in the United Kingdom in 1999 is 6,757. This figure is provisional and uncorrected. Correction usually results in a reduction in the provisional figure.

Sources:

1. Public Health Laboratory Service, Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre (CDSC) for England and Wales

2. CDSC(NI) for Northern Ireland

3. Scottish Centre for Infection and Environmental Health for Scotland).

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to prevent an increase of tuberculosis in the United Kingdom. [108331]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 19 October 1999, Official Report, columns 468–69W.

Recycling

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy on the recycling of material produced by his Department. [108473]

Yvette Cooper: The Department fully supports the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. coming from recycling or composting, in 2000–01. This target has recently been incorporated into the Department's environmental strategy and a waste audit has recently been commissioned to review our recycling schemes to ensure the target is met.

Our associate bodies are being asked to support the Department's environmental strategy and adopt the Green Ministers' target.

In-patient Statistics

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of in-patients are aged over (a) 65, (b) 70, (c) 75 and (d) 80 years. [108161]

Mr. Denham: The table shows numbers of admissions by age and are expressed as a proportion of all admissions in NHS hospitals in England for the financial year 1997–98.

Number of admissions shown by age and expressed as a proportion of all admissions in NHS hospitals, England, 1997–98.

Age group (years)	Admissions	Proportion of all admissions
Over 65	3,061,773	29.3
Over 70	2,393,274	22.9
Over 75	1,679,226	16.0
Over 80	1,003,300	9.6
All ages	10,463,971	100.0

The information is extracted from the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) system. HES contains details of patients admitted to, and treated in, NHS hospitals in England.

The HES data shown are the number of admissions to hospital. It is not yet possible to count each individual patient once and once only.

Figures for 1997–98 are provisional as no adjustments have yet been made for missing records or invalid/unknown diagnoses.

Patient Records

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in (1) what circumstances health authorities may gain access to patient records held by general practitioners without compromising confidentiality; [108611]

(2) if he will examine ways of preventing doctors retrospectively changing the computer records of patients. [108612]

Mr. Denham: Under their terms of service, general practitioners are currently required to

"keep adequate records of the illnesses and treatment of his patients on forms supplied to him for the purpose by the HA" and to

"forward such records to the HA on request as soon as possible".

It is generally accepted that patients who disclose information to a doctor do so on the understanding that information may be used by the National Health Service to monitor and improve the standards of care through research, clinical audit and the maintaining of registers. We have said that we intend to press ahead with the proposals for mandatory clinical audit in the Chief Medical Officer's consultation paper "Supporting Doctors, Protecting Patients", and that clinical governance will apply to all doctors. This will introduce accountability, promote high care standards, and ensure that an individual doctor's pattern of practice is not hidden.

Medical records are also routinely referred to by designated health authority staff for Post Payment Verification purposes, using a process agreed with Local Medical Committees so as not to contravene patient confidentiality.

It is essential that computer-based records must have a robust audit trail so that any changes to, or deletions from, the medical record are fully recorded so that it is always possible to re-create the record in the form in which it would originally have appeared.

The Department has published minimum standards to which general practice computer systems should conform and these include a detailed requirement for such an audit trail. These requirements are periodically reviewed to keep pace with changing technology and the latest version was published in October 1999.

Hepatitis B

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce a national immunisation programme for hepatitis B, with particular reference to intravenous drug users. [108610]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has had a policy of immunisation against hepatitis B since 1988 for those who are at increased risk of infection. We have made available additional funds for key objectives in its anti-drugs strategy, one of which is to enable health authorities to increase hepatitis B immunisation of drug misusers.

Waiting Times

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the average waiting times for out-patient appointments for East London and the City Health Authority in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [108441]

Mr. Denham: The average waiting times for outpatients' appointments in East London and the City Health Authority for the years requested are shown in the table:

Year	Average Outpatient Wait (weeks)
1997–98	8.95
1998–99	8.72

Miscarriages

Audrey Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) miscarriages occurred in pregnancies of at least 13 and less than 24 completed weeks of gestation in England and (b) women (i) who were admitted to hospital and (ii) cared for by a general practitioner without admission to hospital following such miscarriages in each of the last 10 years. [108680]

Yvette Cooper: There are no reliable data held by the Department about the number of miscarriages where care was provided by a general practitioner. Information about the number of women requiring hospital treatment for miscarriages is available from the Hospital Episode Statistics but not by period of gestation. The latest information for the number of women diagnosed as receiving hospital care for miscarriage from 1989–90 to 1997–98 are in the table.

1989–90	48,500
1990–91	50,600
1991–92	53,100
1992–93	52,400
1993–94	51,300
1994–95	48,700
1995–96	43,900
1996–97	44,500
1997–98	[1]41,800

[1] Provisional

Hospital Episode Statistics

The information in the table is obtained from the Hospital Episodes Statistics system. The data are ungrossed and therefore have not been adjusted to allow for missing, incomplete or inaccurate records.

Data extracted were those with the diagnosis code O03 (ICD-10) Spontaneous Abortion.

Births

Audrey Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the number of births in hospitals in England which were (a) spontaneous, (b) by Caesarean section, (c) by forceps, (d) by vacuum extraction and (e) otherwise, broken down by social class of the babies' fathers for births which were (i) within marriage and (ii) outside marriage and registered jointly by both parents and (iii) outside marriage registered by the mother alone; [108679]

(2) what was the number of births in hospitals in England which were (a) spontaneous, (b) by Caesarean section, (c) by forceps, (d) by vacuum extraction and (e) otherwise, broken down by social class of the babies' mothers, in the most recent year for which the information is available. [108678]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available in the form requested. The numbers of births by type of delivery are collected by the Department on the Hospital Episode Statistics system. The numbers of births by social class of father and mother, and inside/outside marriage including sole registration are collected by the Office for National Statistics through the birth registration system. These two systems are not linked and the information requested cannot be provided.

The latest statistics on births by social class of father and type of registration (inside/outside marriage) for England and Wales for 1998, published by the Office for National Statistics, is contained in the Series FM1 volumes Birth statistics. Copies are in the Library.

The latest information on the number of maternities by method of delivery are preliminary estimates for 1997–98 and are in the table.

Method of delivery	Percentage	Number (thousand)
Spontaneous	71	412
Caesarean	17	99
Forceps	4	23
Vacuum extraction	6	35
Other (including breach)	2	12
Total maternities	100	580

Source:
Hospital Episode Statistics (Maternity) and the Office for National Statistics

Audrey Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of births of babies born to residents of England weighing (a) under 1,000g, (b) 1,000–1,499g, (c) 1,500–2,499g and (d) 2,500g and over, who have been diagnosed as having cerebral palsy by the age of (i) two years and (ii) five years in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [108677]

Yvette Cooper: There are no centrally collected data on the numbers of children in England with cerebral palsy. We are aware however that the risk of cerebral palsy among babies born weighing less than 1,500 grammes is 70 times higher than among babies weighing 2,500 grammes or more at birth.

New Variant CJD

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what help he is giving to those caring for the victims of New Variant CJD; and if he will make a statement. [108751]

Yvette Cooper: I refer my hon. Friend to the statements made by my hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham), the Minister of State in the adjournment debate on the care of variant CJD (vCJD) patients which took place in Westminster Hall on 1 December 1999, Official Report, columns 109–16WH, in which he set out the measures in place or planned to improve the care provided for new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease patients.

Fluoridation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 20 January 2000, Official Report, column 584W, when he expects the expert scientific review of fluoride and health to be completed. [108988]

Yvette Cooper: The review is expected to be complete in the spring.

Diabetics

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to provide needles for use by diabetics free of charge; and if he will make a statement. [108715]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas) on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 199W.

Infectious Diseases (Immunisation)

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department will reprint the booklet, "Immunisation against Infectious Disease"; and if he will ensure that the booklet is made available at clinics to parents who request it. [109030]

Yvette Cooper: "Immunisation against Infectious Disease" is published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office (ISBN 011321815X), priced at £6.95. Parents can ask to see a copy of the book at their doctor's surgery. Copies of the current edition are still available to any member of the public wishing to buy one. A new edition is expected within the next year.

Child Labour

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to propose changes in child labour legislation; and if he will make a statement. [109492]

Mr. Hutton: The report on the review of child employment legislation, completed last year, is being considered with ministerial colleagues in all interested Departments. We expect to agree a way forward in the near future.

Care Leavers

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of children left local authority care at 16 years of age or older with at least one GCSE or GNVQ qualification in (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999. [110080]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available for the specified years. Figures on the educational qualifications of children aged 16 or over who left local authority care during the year ending 31 March 2000 will be published for the first time in autumn 2000.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) manual and (b) powered wheelchairs were purchased by the NHS in each of the last four years. [109962]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected. However, estimates based on the numbers of wheelchairs issued by the National Health Service wheelchair service in the years 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1998–99 have been made, as follows:

Year	Manual wheelchair	Powered wheelchair
1995–96	83,632	5,000
1996–97	81,607	5,068
1997–98	75,090	6,268

No information is available for 1997–98.

The figures for 1995–96 and 1996–97 were obtained from information compiled by the Government Statistical Service giving the total number of wheelchairs issued. The figures for 1998–99 were obtained from a NHS Supplies exercise requesting data from trusts regarding wheelchair purchases and issues.

Nurses

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has issued on the purchasing of equipment to nurses employed in the NHS whose salary is paid for by a commercial organisation. [109961]

Mr. Denham: The Department expects all staff, when purchasing on behalf of the National Health Service, to adhere to existing guidelines published in January 1993—Standards of business conduct for NHS staff (Health Service Guidance (93)5), copies of which are available in the Library.

Consultation has recently taken place on updated guidance which we expect to be available shortly.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 January 2000, Official Report, column 332W, on asset sales, if he will list those capital assets valued at more than £1 million that his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies plan to sell in the current financial year. [110004]

Yvette Cooper: Information on individual sales of assets disposed of by the Department, its agencies and associated public bodies is not held centrally.

For the Department's civil estate, the only disposal valued at more than £1 million expected to realise in 1999–2000 is the administrative transfer to the Home Office of the former youth treatment centre at St. Charles, Brentwood.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Leavers (Cambridgeshire and Peterborough)

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of school leavers went into (a) further education and (b) vocational training, and what percentage of each group went on to higher education in (i) Cambridge, (ii) Peterborough and (iii) Cambridgeshire in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [109537]

Mr. Wicks: We are committed to a step change in participation and attainment rates for all 16 and 17-year-olds. The Learning and Skills Bill sets out reforms in post-16 education and training which we believe will make a significant impact. We have recently announced details of our new coherent and comprehensive advice, guidance, information and support service for all 13 to 19-year-olds, whatever their needs and circumstances—the Connexions Service.

The table shows for those years for which data are available the proportion of 16-year-olds entering FE in Cambridgeshire LEA, and entering FE and Government Supported vocational training in Greater Peterborough TEC. Data on school leavers destinations for Cambridge and Peterborough, or on the proportion leaving FE or Government Supported vocational training for HE, are not available.

Sure Start

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when invitations will be issued to submit bids for the next round of Sure Start programmes. [109796]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Ministers are hoping to announce the next round of Sure Start in early summer. It is expected that the updated version of the Index of Local Deprivation will be a key tool in informing the selection of areas, and this is due for publication in late spring.

Student Incomes

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the average income of full-time students in higher education in England in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms for each year since 1979. [109352]

Mr. Wicks: The available data from the Student Income and Expenditure Surveys for 1988–89, 1992–93 and 1995–96 are as follows. Income covers both public and private sources and includes grants, loans, parental contributions, earnings and other sources. Survey results for 1998–99 are currently being analysed and will be available later in the year.

Medical School Places

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the number of medical school places for doctors in England and Wales for the last five years and the projected numbers for the next five years. [108801]

Mr. Wicks: The available information is as follows:

Medical school places in England and Wales

	Number
Actual
1994–95	3,778
1995–96	3,778
1996–97	3,686

2003–04	4,787

The increase in the number of places reflects the recommendation of the Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee.

Dental School Places

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the number of dental school places in England and Wales for each of the last five years and the projected number for the next five years. [108800]

Mr. Wicks: There have been 660 dental school places in England and Wales since 1994–95. There are no plans to change this number. Information is listed in the following table.

University Tuition Fees

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the cost of abolishing university tuition fees in England and Wales, for each of the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [108865]

Mr. Wicks: We estimate that the cash cost of abolishing fees would be £110 million in 2001–02. The full economic cost, taking account of lower loan repayments in future years (on a resource accounting and budgeting basis), would be £270 million as the assessed contribution towards students' tuition fees would instead be taken into account in determining the level of student loan a student could apply for. Both costs are in current day prices. Figures beyond the end of the current CSR period would depend on student numbers on which decisions have not yet been made.

Class Sizes (Witney)

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the average class sizes were for (a) 11, (b) 10, (c) 9, (d) 8, (e) 7, (f) 12, (g) 13, (h) 14, (i) 15, (j) 16, and (k) 17 year olds in each school in the Witney constituency over the past three years; and what were the national averages in the same period. [109093]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information on class sizes for individual schools is not normally published. Where individual school information is published, as in the School Performance tables, the information is first checked with the schools concerned.

The available information on class sizes in the parliamentary constituency of Witney, and in England, is shown in the table. In Witney parliamentary constituency, the large majority of classes in maintained primary schools involve mixed year groups so these have also been shown for completeness.

New Deal

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the (a) New Deal for Lone Parents programme and (b) New Deal for Disabled People programme. [108514]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The New Deal for Lone Parents programme is working well. Since October 1998, 112,570 lone parents have attended an initial interview with a personal adviser and 89 per cent. of those parents have agreed to participate further. At the end of November 1999, 32,710 had found jobs.

The New Deal for Disabled People is still in the pilot stage and continues to make encouraging progress. Since the pilots began in autumn 1998, 13,539 people on incapacity benefits have attended initial interview or applied for innovative schemes, around two out of three participated further, and as a result 1,911 have found jobs.

An interim evaluation report was published in December 1999, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library. We are actively considering the way forward.

Educational Qualifications

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of the residents of (a) Wakefield District and (b) Hemsworth constituency have degree-level educational qualifications. [109055]

Mr. Wicks: The available published data from the 1991 Census of Population show that the proportion of people aged 18 and over with higher education qualifications was 13.3 per cent. in Wakefield, and 10.3 per cent. in Hemsworth. A higher education qualification is defined as any academic, professional or vocational qualification above A-level standard. The published census data do not separately identify persons who have degree-level qualifications. Similar data will be available when the results of the 2001 Census are published.

University Staff

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the numbers of academic staff leaving British universities for posts abroad in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [109022]

Mr. Wicks: The available data are given in the table. There has always been some academic recruitment across national boundaries and the numbers for the most recent years represent only around 5 per cent. of all staff who leave the higher education sector.

Mature Students

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of mature students (a) entering and (b) graduating from higher education in each of the last five years. [108516]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The latest available data are given in the tables. Mature students are defined as postgraduates aged 25 and over and undergraduates aged 21 and over. 1997 entrant numbers may have been inflated because entrants were influenced by the knowledge that fees would be introduced with effect from 1998. Comparable data for entrants and graduates in 1999–2000 will be published by the Higher Education Statistics Agency in April 2000 and February 2001 respectively.

Information published by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS), covering full-time and sandwich undergraduate courses only, shows that the number of applicants (young and mature combined) accepted for entry increased by 1.5 per cent. between autumn 1998 and autumn 1999.

University Degrees

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how he monitors the variability in criteria used in awarding degrees in UK universities; and if he will make a statement. [109029]

Mr. Wicks: Each institution with degree awarding powers is responsible for the quality and standards of the degrees it awards. The Quality Assurance Agency assesses the quality of provision in its subject reviews and the rigour of the quality mechanisms in the institutions in its institutional reviews.

The Quality Assurance Agency has published, for consultation, draft subject benchmark statements setting out expectations of student attainment at honours degree level in 22 subject areas. A further 20 such statements will be published by 2001. The Agency is developing the qualifications framework proposed in the Dearing Report, and will publish proposals shortly. These reference points will be used by the Agency in the reviews it carries out.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 the number and total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisors that have (a) been put out to competitive tender, (b) not been put out to competitive tender and (c) been let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109068]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 8 February 2000]: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the role of further education colleges in supporting new curriculum developments in vocational education for 14 to 16-year-olds; and if he will make a statement. [107971]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 9 February 2000]: The Schools Standards and Framework Act 1998 allowed Further Education colleges to provide secondary education at key stage 4. In addition, regulations made under section 363 of the Education Act 1996 allow schools to disapply parts of the key stage 4 National Curriculum for certain pupils to enable them to spend more time on work-related learning.

Many schools are now working in partnership with colleges and taking advantage of this flexibility to deliver work-related learning and vocational courses. For example, we have launched a programme to support local work-related learning projects. There are over 180 projects, and around two-thirds of these include school-college links. Such links can: help pupils acquire the skills and knowledge needed in employment; enable schools to enhance their curriculum with vocational options (G/NVQs and Key Skills); and make Further Education facilities and teaching expertise available to schools. Further measures are being introduced to promote work-related learning through college links with Fresh Start schools.

The Department has commissioned the National Foundation for Education Research to carry out an evaluation of how the regulations are being used in practice. The evaluators will interview schools, FE colleges and others involved in delivering extended work-related learning and vocational courses. The final evaluation report is due at the end of 2000.

Higher Education Staff

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will make a statement on ethnicity in employment patterns in the higher education sector; [109307]

(2) what representations he has received concerning employment patterns in the higher education sector in the last 12 months. [109303]

Mr. Wicks: Ministers met the Chairman of the Commission for Racial Equality in October 1999 to discuss the Commission's report on ethnicity and employment in higher education. Most of the recommendations are for higher education institutions and their representative bodies. Ministers have asked the funding and representative bodies, who co-sponsored the report, to consider what more they can do to encourage institutions to make progress towards greater equality of opportunity for all groups of staff.

Class Sizes (Key Stages)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the link between class sizes and overall pupil performance at Key Stages 1 to 4. [109806]

Ms Estelle Morris: The evidence, including from Ofsted, indicates that class size is most important at Key Stage 1. That is why we have pledged to reduce the size of infant classes. The pledge will ensure that all children benefit from infant classes of 30 or below, and will help to give young pupils the important start they need.

Dartford West High School for Boys

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will announce his decision on the future of Dartford West High School for Boys; and if he will make a statement. [109552]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend expects to make a decision within the next couple of weeks.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps the Government are taking to tackle age discrimination in employment against men between the ages of 60 and 65 years. [109684]

Ms Hodge: On 14 June 1999 we published a Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment, developed with key partners such as the TUC, CBI and Age Concern. It covers all aspects of employment, for men and women of all ages, including men aged between 60 and 65. It has sections covering recruitment, selection, training, development, redundancy and retirement, and provides detailed guidance and case studies to help employers to tackle age discrimination in their organisations. This is being backed by a publicity campaign and practical help for employers wanting to adopt the principles set out in the Code. The effectiveness of the Code is being evaluated through a large scale research project which looks in detail at employer policies and practices in recruitment and employment and the impact this has on age diversity in their work force. The results of the evaluation will be published early in 2001.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much teachers will be able to earn once they have passed the performance pay threshold. [109681]

Ms Estelle Morris: Teachers who are successful at the threshold will receive a salary increase of £2,000, and will be placed on the new upper pay range. Teachers on point 9 of the pay scale and currently earning £23,193 will see their salary rise to £25,959 in September if they pass the threshold—a rise of 11.9 per cent. In future years, teachers who have passed the threshold will have opportunities to gain a further four points on the upper pay range, worth approximately £1,000 each. This could take their salary to over £30,000 for high performance in the classroom. Taking on additional responsibilities could take a teacher's salary to over £37,000.

A-levels

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of the population in (a) rural and (b) urban areas have at least two A-levels at grade E or above. [109753]

Mr. Wicks: Information from the Labour Force Survey indicates that, in 1998, 38.6 per cent. of economically active working age adults in urban areas in England had at least two A-levels at grades E or the equivalent, compared with 40.6 per cent. of economically active working age adults in rural areas.

Remploy

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many employees at Remploy were (a) able-bodied, (b) disabled and factory-based and (c) disabled and on Interwork, in each year since 1980. [109598]

Ms Hodge: The table shows the numbers of both disabled and non-disabled employees in both Remploy Factories and Interwork since 1980.

Supported Employment

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total budget for supported employment expressed (a) in cash terms and (b) at December 1999 prices in each year since 1980. [109596]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The information is not available for years prior to 1989. The figures for 1989–90 onwards are as follows:

HOME DEPARTMENT

Closed Circuit Television

17. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications he has received for portable (a) closed circuit and (b) open circuit TV units in the last year; and how many have secured grant aid from his Department. [108251]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Under the first round of the Crime Reduction Programme Closed Circuit Television Initiative, 45 proposals were solely for portable or mobile CCTV schemes, although many of the 748 outline applications received contained a mobile element. Applications for open circuit systems are outside the scope of the CCTV Initiative.

So far, we have awarded £627,000 to seven proposals for mobile systems. A further 16 proposals for mobile schemes to a potential value of £2.3 million are currently under further consideration.

Further bids for mobile systems can be submitted under the next phase of CCTV funding, details of which will be announced in the near future.

39. Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications he has received for portable CCTV units in the past year; and how many have secured grant aid from the Home Office. [108273]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Under the first round of the Crime Reduction Programme Closed Circuit Television Initiative, 45 proposals were solely for portable or mobile CCTV schemes, although many of the 748 outline applications received contained a mobile element.

So far, we have awarded £627,000 to seven proposals for mobile systems. A further 16 proposals for mobile schemes to a potential value of £2.3 million are currently under further consideration.

Further bids for mobile systems can be submitted under the next phase of CCTV funding, details of which will be announced in the near future.

Crime (Sussex)

18. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has in respect of fighting crime in Sussex; and if he will make a statement. [108252]

Mr. Boateng: The Government issued in November our strategy for reducing crime. One of the key elements in this is ensuring that the local crime and disorder reduction partnerships—in Sussex as elsewhere—perform to their maximum potential.

Police (Surrey)

19. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide extra resources for Surrey police to reflect increases in crime and in their responsibilities. [108253]

Mr. Boateng: Funding for Surrey Police in 2000–01 will increase by 22.7 per cent. to £112.8 million. This large increase takes account of the expansion of the Surrey police area as a result of the boundary changes with the Metropolitan police in April. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced on 9 February the allocation of funding under the Crime Fighting Fund for the recruitment of extra police officers over and above the number that would otherwise have been recruited over three years. Surrey police will receive funding to enable in total 78 extra officers to be recruited.

Community Beat Officers

20. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies his Department has carried out into the effectiveness of community beat officers in preventing crime. [108254]

Mr. Charles Clarke: While there has been no Home Office research solely addressing the effectiveness of community beat officers in preventing crime, research has demonstrated the important role that community beat officers can play in fighting crime, whether by identifying and tackling local crime problems, providing intelligence, or combating fear of crime. Further, the contribution of community beat officers will be an important factor in some of the projects being funded under the crime reduction programme.

Unauthorised Camping

21. Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in agreeing the operational guidelines with the Association of Chief Constables to deal with unauthorised camping. [108255]

Mr. Straw: Following consultation with the Government, revised operational guidelines on police powers to deal with unauthorised camping were approved by the Association of Chief Police Officers' Council on 28 April 1999 and issued to forces in early May. I have, however, commissioned a review of the joint Home Office/Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' guidance on managing unauthorised camping, in order to ensure that problems associated with these encampments are being tackled as effectively as possible.

27. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in agreeing the operational guidelines with the Association of Chief Constables to deal with unauthorised camping. [108261]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Following consultation with the Government, revised operational guidelines on police powers to deal with unauthorised camping were approved by the Association of Chief Police Officers' Council on 28 April 1999 and issued to forces in early May. We are, however, commissioning a review of the joint Home Office/Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' guidance on managing unauthorised camping, in order to ensure that problems associated with these encampments are being tackled as effectively as possible.

Clandestine Immigrants

23. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many lorries have been stopped by the police which contained clandestine immigrants in the last six months. [108257]

Mrs. Roche: The police do not keep records of that information. However, I can tell my hon. Friend that the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's records show that 11,500 clandestine illegal entrants to the United Kingdom were identified between July and December 1999.

Anti-social Behaviour Orders

24. Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of councils have used their powers to impose anti-social behaviour orders. [108258]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Anti-social behaviour orders are imposed by the courts upon application by either the local authority or the police. Information about the number of orders which have been granted is not held centrally, but we believe that about 20–25 are currently in force, involving about 15 different areas.

Prisons (School Links)

25. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will support initiatives by which prisons develop links with schools. [108259]

Mr. Boateng: The new draft National Standards for prisoners under 18-years-old require prisons to develop links with the home education authority.

The Prison Service is happy to co-operate with targeted crime reduction activities where these are developed with the police and others locally.

Crime and Disorder

26. Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with his counterparts in the Department for Education and Employment about ensuring that schools are fully involved in local partnerships to combat crime and disorder. [108260]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Schools are designated as bodies which must co-operate with partnerships in the development and implementation of local crime and disorder reduction strategies. One of the strands of the Crime Reduction Programme is an investment of £12 million in projects designed to combat truancy and exclusions.

Prisoners

28. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the amount of purposeful activity undertaken by prisoners. [108262]

Mr. Boateng: During the period April 1999 to December 1999 the average amount of purposeful activity undertaken by prisoners was 23.0 hours per prisoner per week.

These data are provisional and subject to validation by prisons.

Crime Reduction

29. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contribution neighbourhood watch schemes can make to his objective of crime reduction under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. [108263]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Community involvement is essential if we are to achieve our aim of creating a safe, just and tolerant society. Neighbourhood Watch is a successful example of community involvement with around 155,000 schemes covering 5.5 million households. That is why the Government required the crime and disorder reduction partnerships to invite Neighbourhood Watch to participate in their work.

Asylum Seekers

30. Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what minimum arrangements for social, welfare and cultural support he will require from agencies and local authority consortia wishing to place asylum seekers before agreeing to their dispersal. [108264]

Mrs. Roche: Contracts with providers for accommodation specify that the provider will facilitate access for asylum seekers to health and education services. The need for wider social and welfare provision to be available will be taken into account in discussion with local authorities about appropriate cluster areas for asylum seekers.

Voluntary sector bodies funded under Section 111 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 will be required to provide a range of services as part of the one stop services for asylum seekers envisaged under the new asylum support scheme.

33. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Government have to restrict the number of asylum seekers entering the United Kingdom. [108267]

Mrs. Roche: The Government will continue to honour their obligations under the 1951 United Nations Convention relating to the Status of Refugees to consider all applications for asylum made in the United Kingdom or at our ports. But we are taking tough measures to curb abuse of the asylum process. The Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 introduces fundamental changes, including measures to discourage unfounded asylum applications, while continuing to provide protection for those who need it.

34. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the dispersal of asylum seekers. [108268]

Mrs. Roche: I and my officials have received numerous representations concerning the dispersal of asylum seekers, in response to proposals which we published last year as part of our consultation process. Some have been from voluntary bodies and local authorities by way of formal response to the original Asylum Seeker Support document published in March last year and to the consultation document on the regulations for the scheme published last November. Others have been received in the form of letters to Ministers from Members of Parliament, voluntary bodies and local authorities.

The representations have been concerned with a range of matters including the minimum standards of accommodation to be provided to asylum seekers and access to legal representatives in dispersal areas.

The National Asylum Support Service has also been in extensive talks with the Local Government Association about the operation of the dispersal scheme.

37. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average length of time for applications from asylum seekers (a) with children and (b) without children to be decided in the last month for which figures are available. [108271]

Mrs. Roche: Of the total asylum decisions made in December 1999, the average length of time since the application had been made was 13 months. A breakdown for asylum seekers with and without children is not available in this format. Of families with children who applied for asylum in November 1999, most had a decision made on their application within two months.

Immigration Advisers

31. Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in curbing unscrupulous immigration advisers. [108265]

Mrs. Roche: Part V of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 makes provision for a scheme to regulate immigration advisers and service providers. Under the scheme the provision of immigration advice or services will be prohibited unless a person is registered with the Immigration Services Commissioner, authorised to practise by a designated professional body or exempt under the terms of the scheme.

We are currently in the process of appointing the Immigration Services Commissioner who will lead the body to administer the scheme. Our aim is to have the regulatory body established and ready to receive applications for registration and exemption by 2 October 2000, with a view to full roll-out of the scheme by April 2001.

Kosovo Refugees

32. Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to take to help return to their homes those refugees from Kosovo granted exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom during the conflict. [108266]

Mrs. Roche: All the evacuees under the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Humanitarian Evacuation Programme (HEP) were given 12 months' exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom. We have made it clear that there will not be a general extension of leave for those granted exceptional leave under the Kosovan concession.

Kosovans are expected to make arrangements to return to Kosovo once their current leave to remain expires.

The voluntary return programme for Kosovans from the United Kingdom began on 26 July 1999 and is open to those who arrived under the HEP and as independent arrivals. The Government are also running an Explore and Prepare (E and P) scheme to enable heads of households and community leaders with exceptional leave here to return to Kosovo to make advance preparations for the permanent return of their families. To date 1,570 Kosovans have returned under these programmes (1,388 permanent returnees {1,092 HEP and 296 non-HEP} and 182 E and P returns {176 HEP and 6 non-HEP}).

We have provided funds to the Refugee Council to publish a regular newsletter to keep Kosovans informed about the situation in Kosovo and have funded a voluntary returns office to provide help and information.

Police (Costs)

35. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the annual cost of employing a police constable; and if he will make a statement. [108269]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As at 19 March 1999, the annual cost of a police constable serving in a provincial force, based on average salary for the rank, is £35,081, inclusive of Earnings-Related National Insurance Contribution, notional pension costs and housing allowance.

An officer serving in London will additionally receive London Allowance of £1,011 and London Weighting of £1,662.

Racism

36. Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the efforts made by police forces to stamp out racism. [108270]

Mr. Charles Clarke: "Race and the Criminal Justice System 1999" published on 9 December 1999 gives a comprehensive picture of how people from minority ethnic backgrounds fare under the criminal justice system, including the police service. The key findings for 1998–99 include a substantial increase by 66 per cent. of the number of racist incidents recorded by the police; against a history of under-recording of racist incidents this appears to reflect improved recording practices by the police and the higher priority the service is giving to its response to racist crime. Black people were, on average, six times more likely than white people to be stopped and searched by the police. The Department has set in hand a wide-ranging programme of research to help broaden understanding of these powers and how their use can be improved. The report found under-representation of ethnic minorities in the police service as in other parts of the criminal justice system. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has set targets for forces on recruitment, retention and progression of ethnic minority officers and has published a 25 point action plan to help forces meet them.

Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary's report of the inspection of the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS), which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary directed should be carried out in response to recommendation 4 of the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry, was published on 10 January. The inspectors found significant progress within the MPS in their response to the community and race relations issues raised in the Inquiry's report, and while there were still areas to be addressed there were grounds for confidence that there would be significant improvements when the inspectors return in 12 months' time.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary undertook during the debate on the report of the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry last March that I would publish an annual report on progress of the implementation of the Action Plan I published in response to the Inquiry's report; my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will publish the first such report shortly.

Crime (London)

38. Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in developing local partnerships against crime in London. [108272]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Partnerships were set up in all the London boroughs and the City of London, making 33 in all, as part of the work under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 which places a statutory requirement on the boroughs to produce a joint strategy to reduce crime and disorder. The detail of these and the way in which they are being taken forward varies to some extent but they all actively engaged in the work against crime and disorder.

Police Officer Recruitment

40. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to increase the total number of police officers in England and Wales. [108274]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Burgon), on 9 February 2000, Official Report, columns 172–74W.

Trial by Jury

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to limit trial by jury. [108242]

Mr. Straw: We have already announced our intention to introduce in this House, as soon as possible, a Bill which will give the courts the power to determine which either-way cases should be tried in the Crown Court.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the numbers of police officers in the Metropolitan police force. [108249]

Mr. Straw: It is for the Metropolitan Police Commissioner to determine overall police numbers within the resources available.

The strength of the Metropolitan Police fell by 2,060 officers between 1992 and 1998 under budgets set by the previous Administration. Numbers fell by a net 209 between March 1998 and September 1999.

We announced on 9 February that the Metropolitan Police has been allocated funds from the Crime Fighting Fund for 2000–01 which will enable them to recruit and train 1,113 officers over and above the levels planned for financial years 2000–03. This includes 242 officers in the next financial year and the Commissioner tells me that in the light of this, he hopes to maintain police officer numbers at a constant level through 2000–01.

Home Security

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the impact of local initiatives to reduce domestic burglaries and improve home security. [108256]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Reducing Burglary Initiative, a major component of the Crime Reduction Programme, is expected to prevent 15,000 burglaries by 2002 and 25,000 burglaries in the longer term.

In addition, the scheme to provide improved security to low-income pensioners should prevent 2,500 burglaries and, just as importantly, will reduce the fear of crime.

Crime Reduction Targets

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what crime reduction targets police authorities will be expected to set over the next five years under the Best Value regime. [110301]

Mr. Charles Clarke: All police authorities and police forces have been told that statutory guidance under the Best Value regime (Section 5(7) of the Local Government Act 1999) will indicate that specific targets should be set by all police authorities for domestic burglary and for vehicle crime. In addition, five forces are being asked to set a target for robbery.

The table shows the five-year targets for each force area, based on our latest information. It will be for each police authority to decide what targets should finally be set and published.

Criminal Records Bureau

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 28 January 2000, Official Report, column 362W, on the Criminal Records Bureau, if he will name the shortlisted bidders invited to take part in the technical design study for the Criminal Records Bureau. [109441]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Following evaluation of the six bids received, the following three bidders have been shortlisted and invited to take part in a technical design study:

Capita Business Services

PriceWaterhouseCoopers

e.CRES, a consortium led by SERCO.

Homicide Weapons

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by type the weapons used in homicides in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years for which records are available. [109327]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following table gives the information requested in relation to firearms for England and Wales:

Homicides initially recorded by the police in which a firearm was reported to have been used, by type of weapon, England and Wales, 1994–98

	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998

Information on other types of weapon used in homicides, such as sharp and blunt instruments, is published in Chapter 4 of Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, a copy of which is in the Library. (Figures on homicides by shooting contained in Chapter 4 will differ from the figures shown mainly because they are based on currently rather than initially recorded homicides).

Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the respective Secretaries of State.

Firearms Offences

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of firearms offences in the UK in each of the last five years for which records are available. [109341]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following table gives the information requested for England and Wales:

Notifiable offences recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been used, England and Wales 1994–98

	Number
1994	13,167
1995	13,434
1996	13,876
1997	12,410
1998	[1]13,671

[1] Changes in the counting rules and coverage of recorded crime took place from 1 April 1998, and there may be some discontinuity in this figure

Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the respective Secretaries of State.

Murders

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out, on a comparable basis, the number of murders recorded in the United Kingdom in each of the past 30 years. [109364]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The available information relates to initially recorded offences of homicide (murder, manslaughter and infanticide) in England and Wales and is given in the table. Those offences subsequently decided at court to be murder are also shown.

Offences of homicide initially recorded by the police and those subsequently decided at court to be murder, England and Wales, 1969–1998

[1] Not applicable

The initially recorded figure includes all homicides because when an offence is discovered and recorded by the police, it is not generally known whether an offence of murder, manslaughter or infanticide has been committed.

Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matter for the respective Secretaries of State.

Corporate Liability

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department has made on consideration of the inter-departmental working party report on corporate liability. [109371]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We are continuing to consider the conclusions of the inter-departmental working group of officials which has been examining the recommendations made in the Law Commission's report no. 237 "Legislating the Criminal Code: Involuntary Manslaughter". The Law Commission's report included a recommendation that there should be a new offence of corporate killing.

We are consulting our colleagues on how to take the matter forward and expect to publish our conclusions for consultation.

Freemasons

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in England and Wales are freemasons. [109440]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There is no requirement for this information to be provided by police officers. Most forces in England and Wales are compiling statistics of freemasonry membership among officers and civilian staff from information provided on a voluntary basis, and the following figures are currently available for 26 forces. Of the 38,875 individuals who made returns, 417 indicated that they were freemasons.

Security Industry

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to establish a private security industry authority. [109361]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Our White Paper, "The Government's Proposals for Regulation of the Private Security Industry in England and Wales", published last year set out plans to establish an authority to be responsible for maintaining and improving standards within the industry, and for licensing people employed in the industry. We intend to introduce legislation as soon as Parliamentary time permits.

Interception of Communications

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long, on average, he has taken to scrutinise each warrant issued under the Interception of Communications Act 1985. [110041]

Mr. Straw: I consider very carefully each application for a warrant submitted to me under the Interception of Communications Act 1985. The average time taken for this scrutiny, depends on the complexity of the application. An average would not be meaningful. The Interception of Communications Commissioner, currently Lord Nolan, stated in his annual report for 1998 that he had found no case where I had issued or renewed a warrant without adequate justification.

Correspondence

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for West Chelmsford will receive substantive replies to his letters concerning his constituents (a) Mr. A. Camp, written on 2 September 1999, (b) Mr. Sobarten, written on 29 September 1999, (c) Mr. S. Tennant, written on 2 September 1999 and (d) Mr. J. M. Braouli, written on 4 August 1999. [109738]

Mrs. Roche: I wrote to the hon. Member about Mr. Camp's case on 11 February 2000. I wrote about Mr. Tennant's case on 10 November 1999 and 14 February 2000, and about Mr. Braouli's case on 14 February 2000. We have no record of correspondence from the hon. Member about Mr. Sobarten. I assume the hon. Member is referring to his letter of 29 December about Mr. Sisawo Jobarteh to which I replied on 14 February 2000. I am extremely sorry for the delays in replying.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the hon. Member for South-East Cambridgeshire's letter on behalf of a constituent, Mrs. Anna Newton, which was acknowledged by his Office on 2 November 1999 (Reference 21142/99); and what steps he is taking to improve the timeliness of replies from his Office. [110140]

Mrs. Roche: I replied to the hon. Member on 14 February 2000.

Every effort is made to provide timely answers to letters sent to Ministers. Unfortunately, as in the present case, delays sometimes occur. I have reminded my officials of the need to ensure that the required priority is given to dealing with ministerial correspondence.

Somalia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people from Somalia have entered the United Kingdom in each of the last five years, indicating the number who are (a) asylum seekers, (b) dependants seeking family reunion, and (c) visitors; and of those how many have been (i) accepted, (ii) informed and are appealing and (iii) refused and removed. [109489]

Mrs. Roche: The available information is given in the tables.

Table 1: Admissions and refusals of nationals of Somalia 1995–99

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999[1]
Total admissions[2]	5,720	5,560	4,490	4,900	1,460
Of which:
Visitors	1,820	1,470	1,470	1,780	870
Dependants[3]	350	280	270	390	110
Passengers refused and removed	63	76	99	190	99

[1] January to June only.
[2] Persons, including port asylum seekers, given leave to enter. Excludes persons given temporary admission.
[3] Family members coming for settlement.

Table 2: Asylum applications received in the United Kingdom (excluding dependants), initial decisions[1] on applications, appeals and removals and voluntary departures[2] of Somalia

[1] Excluding the outcome of appeals or other subsequent decisions.
[2] Includes voluntary departures up to and including notification of the decision on the asylum application for port applicants. Includes only those voluntary departures taking place after the initiation of enforcement action for in-country applicants.
[3] Provisional data.
[4] January to May only.
[5] Includes 15 cases decided under pragmatic measures aimed at reducing the pre-1996 Act asylum backlog.
[6] Not available.
[7] 1998 figure is estimated.

Senator Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to which (a) Ministers, (b) officials, (c) lawyers and (d) foreign Governments information concerning the medical condition of General Pinochet has been made available. [110117]

Mr. Straw: I informed the House on 12 January 2000, Official Report, columns 277–78, of the conclusions of the medical report on Senator Pinochet which I had commissioned. I have passed a copy of the report to my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department with responsibility for extradition matters, Lord Bassam, and another copy to my hon and learned Friend, the Solicitor-General. The report has also been copied to the Government's Chief Medical Officer; the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP); a member of the Treasury Solicitor's Department; and the separate sets of officials and Counsel advising the Solicitor-General, the DPP (in his capacity as domestic prosecuting authority) and me on this case. I sent a copy to Senator Pinochet's legal representatives on 11 January. I have not disclosed the report to any foreign Government.

I have also received medical information, from Senator Pinochet's legal representatives when I was considering the first Authority To Proceed in the case in December 1998, and from the Embassy of Chile in 1999. I have made this material available within the Government on the same basis as the report I commissioned. The material from the Embassy of Chile was passed to me by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and therefore was also seen by officials advising on the case and in some cases by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and other Ministers.

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will make a decision in the case of Senator Pinochet. [106936]

Mr. Straw: I will do so as soon as possible, but not before the High Court gives judgment in the current judicial review proceedings. I propose to give notice to the parties to the case, on the day before I expect to make my decision, and will notify the parties and this House immediately when the decision has been taken. It also remains my intention to make a full oral statement to the House when I am clear that it is appropriate to do so.

Terrorism Bill

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) the Scottish Executive, (b) Scottish bodies and (c) the Scottish Parliament regarding the impact of the Terrorism Bill on devolved areas of responsibility. [109563]

Mr. Straw: Under Section 30 and Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998, responsibility for the special powers and other special provisions for dealing with terrorism is reserved. Six organisations representing Scottish interests offered responses to the Government consultation paper "Legislation Against Terrorism" and their views, along with those of all other contributors, were taken into account in preparing the Terrorism Bill. Officials from this Department have been in regular contact with officials from the Scottish Executive about the contents of the Terrorism Bill.

I am regularly in touch with the First Minister and the Minister for Justice about a wide range of issues, and I greatly value the co-operative spirit in which these discussions take place.

Race Relations (Amendment) Bill

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the legislation within the competence of the Scottish Parliament which falls to be amended by the Race Relations (Amendment) Bill. [109564]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Race Relations (Amendment) Bill does not contain any provisions which are within the legislative competence of the Scottish Parliament.

Fire Service College

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account has been taken of Scottish interests in drawing up the proposal to merge the Moreton and Manstone Fire Service establishments. [108430]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary gave to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Eccles (Mr. Stewart) on 20 December 1999, Official Report, columns 370–71W. Scottish fire service interests were fully consulted during the course of the Fire Service College Prior Options Review. We will continue to consult them in reaching decisions on the review's findings, including the further evaluation of the feasibility of the proposal to join up the activities of the Fire Service College at Moreton-in-Marsh and the Ministry of Defence Fire Services Central Training Establishment at Manston.

Afghan Hijacking

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost to date to public funds of the hijacking of the Ariana Airlines aircraft. [109819]

Mr. Straw: It is not possible to make an estimate at this stage.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy not to entertain asylum applications from the hijackers of the Ariana Airlines aircraft; and if he will make a statement on the status of applications for asylum by hijackers who arrived in the UK during the last five years. [109818]

Mr. Straw: The United Kingdom is bound to entertain asylum applications made here under the 1951 United Nations Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees, a legally binding international agreement. However, we also have the clearest possible obligations in respect of the prevention and deterrence of hijacking and other international terrorism. We condemn all hijackings unequivocally. The United Nations Convention provides that those convicted of or suspected of being involved in certain criminal acts shall be exempt from its provisions.

Asylum applications made by the Iraqi hijackers of the Sudanese Airbus in August 1996 remain under consideration.

HMP Manchester

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how HMP Manchester has performed against its Service Level Agreement and key performance indicators in each year of the Agreement; and if he will make a statement. [109885]

Mr. Boateng: The Manchester Service Level Agreement (SLA) commenced on 7 March 1994. The SLA was revised in August 1995 and October 1996. The information set out in the table outlines the target set by the SLA and the performance reached. SLA targets equate to national Key Performance Indicators.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors underlay the decision to subject HMP Manchester to market testing; and if he will make a statement. [109886]

Mr. Boateng: The purpose of market testing Manchester prison is to drive up standards and obtain maximum value for money from the successful bidder.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the timetable for the competition for the operation of HMP Manchester; and if he will make a statement. [109887]

Mr. Boateng: The intended timetable for the market test of Manchester prison is for the Invitation To Tender to be issued by 30 March, the receipt of Best and Final Offers by 15 June and the selection of the preferred supplier by October.

Prison Tenders

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 19 January 2000, Official Report, columns 456–57W, on prison tenders, what conclusion was reached in respect of the application of the rules governing business appointments to the former Prison Service Director of Security; what advice was given by the Cabinet Office in relation to the former Director of Security; and if he will make a statement. [109888]

Mr. Boateng: The matter is still under consideration.

Royal Parks (Trading Bill)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers the Metropolitan Police have used in the last 30 years, which are still in force and which replicate the powers contained in the Royal Parks (Trading) Bill in respect of highways and public areas adjacent to St. James's Park; and if he will make a statement. [109392]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner tells me that the powers under which his officers deal with illegal traders operating in areas adjacent to St. James's Park are those contained in the City of Westminster Act 1999. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport has informed me that the Royal Parks (Trading) Bill will provide the Royal Parks Constabulary and the Metropolitan police with similar powers in the Royal Parks.

Curfews (Drugs Offences)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department of those prisoners released to date under the home detention curfew scheme, how many convicted of drugs offences were convicted of (a) unlawful supply and (b) possession with intent to supply unlawfully, for each type of controlled drug; and what was the average sentence (i) received and (ii) served in each case. [109592]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Of those prisoners released up to 7 February 2000 under the Home Detention Curfew scheme, 876 were convicted of drugs supply and 1,138 were convicted of drugs possession with intent to supply. Information is not held centrally about the type of controlled drug in respect of these convictions.

The average sentence received for drugs supply was 21.7 months, and the average time spent in custody before release on Home Detention Curfew was 9.2 months. The average sentence received for possession with intent was 20.1 months, and the average time spent in custody before release on Home Detention Curfew was 8.4 months.

Animal Experiments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people holding his Department's licences to perform experiments on animals are employed in the NHS. [109519]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The most recent figures available record 11 National Health Service (NHS) hospitals as holding Certificates of Designation under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 with a total of 307 personal licence holders at these hospitals.

A further three Certificates of Designation are held by public health laboratories, with a total of 53 personal licence holders at these establishments.

Our records are not held in a way which allows us to confirm whether these personal licence holders are employed in the NHS. Similarly, they do not show whether personal licence holders, working in other designated establishments, are NHS employees.

Immigration Rules

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 he has used his powers to instruct immigration officers to disapply, and in respect of how many persons (a) any part of the immigration rules, (b) any of the restrictions in paragraph 320 of the immigration rules and (c) the restrictions in sub-paragraph 18 of paragraph 320 of the immigration rules. [107030]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 27 January 2000]: Under paragraph 1(3) of Schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971 the power of the Secretary of State to give instructions to Immigration Officers is limited to instructions which are not inconsistent with the Immigration Rules. In addition, the Secretary of State may give advice to Immigration Officers which they would take into account when exercising their power to grant or refuse leave to enter outside the Immigration Rules. No record is kept of the number of occasions on which such instructions or advice are given and this information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost, but I can personally recall only two occasions where I have given a specific instruction under paragraph 1(3).

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 349W, what restrictions were placed on contractors carrying out research projects funded by his Department in 1999 in respect of them discussing their findings with journalists (a) before and (b) after publication. [108206]

Ms Quin: The Department's approach to the release of research information was set out in the reply to the hon. Member on 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 349W. This approach applies equally to discussion of findings with journalists both before and after publication of results.

Beef Special Premium Scheme

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money was available for the United Kingdom from the European Union for the Beef Special Premium Scheme in each year from 1990. [108481]

Ms Quin: The Beef Special Premium Scheme was introduced in 1993. Payments are fully funded, but claims are restricted by a UK regional ceiling of 1,419,811 for bulls and first premium payment on steers; there is no ceiling on the second premium payment for steers. The payments made in the UK since the Scheme started are:

Year	£
1993	100,876,973
1994	129,572,732
1995	161,402,817
1996	179,175,135
1997	179,117,456
1998	169,699,784
1999[1]	153,273,789

[1] Forecast

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many claims under the Beef Special Premium Scheme were rejected in each year from 1990 broken down by each Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food regional office. [108482]

Ms Quin: The present Beef Special Premium Scheme was introduced in 1993. The table shows the information requested.

Baby Foods

Ms Shipley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will lower the advised sugar content included in his guidance on packaged baby food. [108584]

Ms Quin: MAFF has not issued advice on the sugar content of packaged baby foods as statutory controls are laid down in the Processed Cereal Based Foods and Baby Foods for Infants and Young Children Regulations 1997. These Regulations implement European rules and any amendments would need to be agreed at Community level.

Farmer Incomes

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers have sources of income from part-time employment in addition to farming. [108782]

Ms Quin: For farmers and spouses on full-time farms in England, it is estimated that around 20 per cent. had income from employment or self-employment outside the farm in 1998–99.

Pigmeat

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has requested meat-purchasing Government agencies to buy British pigmeat or only pigmeat produced to standards of animal welfare equivalent to those of the United Kingdom. [108733]

Ms Quin: In respect of pigmeat, we have sought to persuade public authorities that buying to British welfare and other standards (eg meat and bonemeal-free feed regimes) offers good value and meets the needs of their "customers". To back up this message, my right hon. Friend the Minister has written to a number of Government Departments and to local councils and health authorities in England to emphasise the importance of sourcing to British standards.

Responses received so far (over 100) indicate that those public authorities who do not currently source to British standards are looking to change the specifications in their tendering procedures.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Austria

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the rise of the Freedom Party in Austria and its implications for Austria's relations with the United Kingdom. [109185]

Mr. Vaz: We have made very clear over the last two weeks our deep concern and distaste at the inclusion in the Austrian Government of a far-right party which appeals to xenophobia. We have welcomed the fact that the new Austrian Government have committed themselves to abiding by the common obligations and values of EU membership, to combating all forms of discrimination, and to dealing constructively with the country's Nazi past, but we will be watching them closely and judging them on whether they fulfil the commitments they have made.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under which provisions of the European Treaties the (a) Commission and (b) European Presidency are seeking to influence the composition of the Government of Austria. [109028]

Mr. Vaz: The Portuguese Government on behalf of 14 members of the EU have made clear our concern on developments in Austria. The European Commission has also voiced its concern. The measures agreed by the 14 partners were not decided upon and are not being implemented within the framework of the EU or EC treaties, and Austria will continue to participate in EU business. For our part, I have made clear our deep concern and distaste at the inclusion in the Austrian Government of a far-right party which appeals to xenophobia. We will be judging the new Austrian Government carefully on whether they fulfil the commitments they have made in their Declaration to abide by all common obligations and values of EU membership.

Departmental Staff

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of his Department, (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (i) time-range and (ii) mean time; (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [109238]

Mr. Hain: The Department is committed to facilitating the early return to work of staff who take maternity leave. Flexible working arrangements are available for women who do not wish to return to work full-time after giving birth. The detailed information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pakistan

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects on the armed forces in Pakistan of the recent suspension of British arms sales to Pakistan. [108905]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 8 February 2000]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) on 11 February 2000, Official Report, column 336W.

Kosovo

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom police officers have been deployed (a) in Pristina and (b) throughout Kosovo in the last 12 months. [109713]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 11 February 2000]: In July 1999, five UK police officers transferred from the International Police Task Force in Bosnia to assist the United Nations Interim Administration in Kosovo with the establishment of a Police Headquarters in Pristina. Their mission finished at the end of October 1999.

52 UK police officers were also members of six successive UK Scenes of Crime Teams, who were gathering forensic evidence from war graves throughout Kosovo over periods of three weeks at a time, from July to October last year.

Since August 1999, 32 UK police officers have been in Vucitrn at the OSCE Police Training School. This number is shortly to rise to 40 officers.

In addition, 60 RUC officers were deployed in early November 1999 to the UN International Police in Kosovo. Of these 60, 32 are based in Pristina, and the remaining 28 have been deployed to small towns in the British Sector surrounding Pristina.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Kosovo Albanian prisoners are detained in Serbia. [109717]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The International Committee of the Red Cross, which is in regular contact with the Belgrade authorities, has visited a total of around 1,570 Kosovo Albanians currently detained in Serbia.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions have been taken by (a) UNMIK, (b) the EU and (c) the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, to (i) secure the release of the Kosovo Albanian prisoners detained in Serbia and (ii) ameliorate the conditions of their detention. [109718]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The International Committee of the Red Cross is in regular contact with the authorities in Belgrade about the situation of the Kosovo Albanians held in Serbia. We remain in close touch with the ICRC. Several hundred of those detained last year have been released in recent months. We hope that all those still being held are either released or have their cases processed quickly. It is unacceptable that people should be detained without trial for so long.

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the diplomatic messages to (a) Chile, (b) Spain, (c) France, (d) Belgium and (e) Switzerland concerning General Pinochet since 1 October 1998. [110116]

Mr. Battle: It is not possible to provide a fully comprehensive list without incurring disproportionate costs. However I assure my hon. Friend that the matter has been frequently raised.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list meetings between (a) ministers, (b) embassy staff and (c) officials and representatives of the Governments of (i) Spain, (ii) Chile, (iii) France, (iv) Belgium and (v) Switzerland at which the subject of General Pinochet has been raised, since 1 October 1998. [110115]

Mr. Battle: It is not possible to provide a fully comprehensive list of all the meetings at which the subject of Senator Pinochet has been raised since 1 October 1998 without incurring disproportionate costs. The matter has, inevitably, been raised on innumerable occasions.

Bahrain

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held by Her Majesty's Government's representatives with the Government of Bahrain concerning the restoration of the constitution; and if he will make a statement. [109485]

Mr. Hain: Although Bahrain's Parliament is suspended, the constitution remains in place. We take every opportunity to encourage the trend towards greater participation in the government of Bahrain. We welcome the Amirs' National Day statement in which he announced municipal elections with votes for women and expressed hopes that the Shura Council will develop in order to deepen popular participation in decision making.

Somalia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions have been taken by United Kingdom representatives at the United Nations to promote a peace process in Somalia. [109486]

Mr. Hain: In recent years the UN Secretary-General has regularly reported to the Security Council on Somalia. After the most recent report in August last year, the UK representative repeated our full support for the Secretary-General's efforts to promote peace in Somalia and encouraged him to review the role of the UN in Somalia, including exploration of possible support for civil society as a means of increasing the chances of achieving a comprehensive and lasting settlement. The Security Council imposed a mandatory arms embargo in its Resolution 733 of 23 January 1992. We have consistently called for it to be properly enforced.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the backlog of outstanding cases of entry clearance applications for Somali nationals, broken down by the diplomatic posts which received them. [109490]

Mr. Vaz: Detailed information on the nationality of entry clearance applicants is not collated centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures his Department is taking to assist peace processes in Somalia; and if he will make a statement. [109491]

Mr. Hain: Together with the rest of the international community, we have supported the efforts of regional and other interested states and regional organisations, including the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD), the Organisation of African Unity and the Arab League, to facilitate the peace process in Somalia.

The President of IGAD, Djibouti President Ismael Omar Guelleh, is in the process of putting together new peace proposals. We welcome this initiative and look forward to seeing these proposals in detail, but the ultimate responsibility for achieving national reconciliation and for restoring peace in Somalia rests with the Somali people themselves.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the Minister of State's oral statement of 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 29WH, on Iraq, if he will list the food sold by Iraq to Syria in 1999–2000. [110039]

Mr. Hain: We have reliable eyewitness reports from as early as 1998 of Iraqi foodstuffs including dates, honey, rice and cooking oil being exported to and sold in Syria. Some of the goods were clearly labelled as having been donated to Iraq by third countries. The concern of those governments for the well-being of the Iraqi people is not shared by the Iraqi regime.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the Minister of State's oral statement of 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 30WH, what reports he has received from Christine Gosden about disease in the Basra area. [110087]

Mr. Hain: I met Christine Gosden on 26 November 1999 to discuss her findings about disease in northern Iraq, as a result of the murderous attacks on Halabja by Saddam Hussein's forces. We did not discuss disease in the Basra area.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received since 1 January 1999 from (a) Iran, (b) Jordan, (c) Turkey, (d) Saudi Arabia and (e) the Gulf States about Iraq being a threat to regional peace. [110038]

Mr. Hain: The GCC, in the communiqué issued after its twentieth summit last year, renewed its call for the need for Iraq to prove its peaceful intentions in word and deed towards its neighbours. Contacts with other regional states confirm that they too remain concerned about the threat posed by Iraq.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the Minister of State's oral statement of 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 31WH, on Iraq, what is the location of the vast regional wetland to which he refers. [110040]

Mr. Hain: In the early 1970s the southern marshes of Iraq covered 5,200 square km west of the Tigris river. Following concerted efforts by the Iraqi government to drain the wetland, including the construction of an east-west dam and a north-south canal, by 1993 very little standing water remained in the area. I have arranged for photographs of the area in 1972 and 1993 to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the Minister of State's oral statement of 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 29WH, on Iraq, if he will seek an explanation from the Iraqi Government of their reasons for the purchase of bank note counting machines. [110036]

Mr. Hain: No. The distribution plan for "oil for food" is drawn up by Iraq and approved by the UN Secretary-General. Iraq's last three distribution plans have included allocations for bank note counting machines. On each occasion the Secretary-General has refused to approve this allocation on the grounds that bank note counting machines are not consistent with the objectives of "oil for food".

Lebanon

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Israeli Government concerning their recent bombing of power stations in Lebanon. [109963]

Mr. Hain: We have raised our concerns about the escalation of violence in Lebanon with the Israeli government. We urge all parties to exercise restraint and respect the April 1996 Understanding. These incidents confirm the urgent need for renewed efforts to achieve a comprehensive peace in the region, including implementation of United Nations Security Council Resolution 425.

Angola

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with oil companies operating in Angola about restricting oil revenues from funding the war and corrupt politicians. [109253]

Mr. Hain: I met London representatives of major oil companies active in Angola on 30 November. I made it clear that I was concerned that Angola's oil revenues should be used for the benefit of all the people of Angola. I am particularly concerned that such revenues contribute to enhancing the Angolan skill base and reconstructing her shattered infrastructure.

I made the same point when I met President Dos Santos of Angola in New York on 24 January. I intend to reinforce it when I visit Angola, I hope in the first half of this year.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made with De Beers to restrict the sale of Angolan diamonds that may be funding the purchase of armaments. [109254]

Mr. Hain: I and my officials are in regular touch with De Beers about the problems of the illicit diamond trade funding the UNITA movement in Angola. I welcomed De Beers' statement on 5 October 1999 that they would not buy diamonds from Angola beyond those they were contracted to from the Angolan Government, and I have asked for both their views and those of other diamond traders on how an effective certification scheme could be implemented to stop the sale of diamonds in breach of UN sanctions. This statement should send a clear message to UNITA that the international community condemns their return to conflict.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the British Ambassador in Angola about stepping up sanctions against Angola. [109255]

Mr. Hain: I and my officials are in regular touch with the Ambassador in Luanda and her staff about all aspects of the current situation in Angola, including the need to ensure rigorous implementation of UN sanctions against the UNITA rebel movement and the identification of individual and corporate sanctions breakers. There are no sanctions targeted against the Government of Angola.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with the Ukrainian Government about restricting the supply of tanks and other arms to Angola; and what was the outcome. [109256]

Mr. Hain: UN Security Council Resolution 864 of 15 September 1993 imposed an embargo on the sale of arms and petroleum products to Angola except through specific entry points named by the Government of Angola. The aim of this was to prevent arms from reaching the UNITA rebel movement. Ukraine has made clear its commitment to increasing the effectiveness of UN sanctions. It is currently a member of the UN Security Council. We have been in regular touch with the Ukrainian authorities, both in London and Kiev, about the problems of equipment of Ukrainian origin reaching the UNITA rebel movement in Angola. Ukrainian Government sales of equipment to the Angolan Government are not covered by the UN sanctions against UNITA. I am sending a team of officials to Kiev between 14 and 17 March for detailed discussions with the Ukrainian authorities on how we can co-operate to prevent this.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what activities are being undertaken by the United Nations to bring about a political solution in Angola. [109257]

Mr. Hain: Between 1993 and 1998, the United Nations Security Council adopted a range of targeted sanctions against UNITA to reduce Savimbi's ability to rebuild his military capability and encourage him to return to the negotiating table. To ensure the sanctions are as effective as possible, UNSCR 1237 of 7 May 1999 established two expert panels to investigate reports of violations of the arms and oil embargoes, diamond ban and freeze on UNITA funds. They will submit their findings shortly, including recommendations on tightening implementation of these measures.

On 15 October 1999 the Security Council adopted Resolution 1268 to establish a UN office in Angola (UNOA) to liaise with the political, military, police and other civilian authorities with a view to exploring effective measures for restoring peace, assisting the Angolan people in the areas of capacity building, humanitarian assistance, the promotion of human rights and co-ordinating other activities. And the Secretary-General has appointed Ibrahim Gambari as his special adviser on African issues, whose responsibilities include Angola. The UN has been working closely with the Government of Angola to agree the Status of Mission Agreement to establish UNOA as mandated by the Resolution. We expect the head of UNOA to be appointed in the near future.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Locally Employed Staff (Wages)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her policy on paying her Department's employees overseas the British minimum wage. [106331]

Clare Short: DFID pays staff appointed in-country overseas according to good employer practice in the conditions prevailing in local labour markets. Pay rates are established by wage surveys among embassies, high commissions and major international companies and organisations. The UK minimum wage was set in relation to UK conditions and has no particular relevance in the overseas context—especially in those economies where inflation may be substantially greater than the low rates prevailing in Britain and where fluctuating exchange rates would make any sterling benchmark figure a continuously variable target.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the salary is for her Department's locally employed staff in (a) Harare, (b) Dhaka, (c) Nairobi and (d) Jura. [106642]

Clare Short: The information requested is as follows:

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many of her Department's locally employed staff in (a) Harare, (b) Dhaka and (c) Pretoria are paid below the British minimum wage. [106326]

Clare Short: My Department pays its staff appointed in country in accordance with good employer practice and the conditions prevailing in local labour markets. The UK minimum wage has no particular relevance in those contexts—especially in those economies where inflation may be substantially greater than the low rates prevailing in the UK. Because of the effect of fluctuating exchange rates, the figure requested cannot be determined in absolute terms. Somalia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the projects in Somalia supported by her Department as part of (a) multilateral and (b) bilateral projects; and if she will make a statement. [109487]

Clare Short: We do not have a bilateral aid programme to Somalia. Humanitarian projects currently funded by DFID are as follows:

Action Contre La Faim: "Emergency Nutritional Intervention in Gedo and Bakool Regions" (£96,122)

AMREF UK: "Luuq District Health Programme" (£288,735)

World Vision: "Primary Health Care in Juba" (£281,703)

World Vision: "Agricultural Rehabilitation Programme, Middle Juba" (£198,230)

In addition the following Civil Society Fund Projects are funded:

Action Aid: "Pastoralism and Peace Building" (£440,896)

Africa Educational Trust: "Educational Incentives—Girls/Young Ex-Militia Men" (£83,411)

Africa Education Trust: "Organisation/Skills Training in Community Schools" (£51,660).

There is currently one multilateral project funded by DFID: UNICEF "Supplementary Feeding Programme, Bardera" (£00,000). Britain also supports the work of other multilateral agencies in Somalia including the World Food Programme. In addition we are contributing £4.38 million as our contribution to a Euro 47m EC Rehabilitation Programme.

We are monitoring the humanitarian situation in Somalia closely and will continue to respond to urgent needs as they arise. Many of the problems facing the Somali people are, directly or indirectly, the result of political instability. We believe the problems of Somalia as a whole must be resolved by the Somalis themselves and we fully support the current initiative of the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) to promote a peaceful solution.

Child Employment

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures her Department is taking to help reduce the employment of child workers. [109333]

Clare Short: We are strongly committed to the elimination of child labour. We have actively supported the development of the International Labour Organisation's (ILO) new Convention on Worst Forms of Child Labour. We are providing core and project funding to ILO's International Programme for the Elimination of Child Labour (IPEC).

Activities to end child labour need to address the main cause—poverty. Parents do not let their children work in dangerous and exhausting industries by choice. Any sustainable solution will have to include alternative income-earning opportunities for poor families. However, in many places finding alternative forms of income is difficult. The best outcome for many children may be to combine work with education. This may be the first step in breaking the inter-generational cycle of poverty.

Much of our work is aimed at promoting economic growth, improving access to education and increasing job opportunities. We are also supporting a number of initiatives which focus specifically on child labourers and their families including significant programmes in both India and Pakistan and, through ILO, in Indonesia. We are developing a strategic approach to child labour in Asia which will look at key international, regional and national stakeholders with interests in or influence on child labour. These strategies are looking at not just child worker specific projects but also the need for special efforts in wider education, rural livelihoods and urban-based programmes, to include children who work. We hope through these projects to develop successful approaches which can be replicated elsewhere. However, in the long term it is through a comprehensive process of sustainable development that change will come about.

Pakistan

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will give a breakdown of the humanitarian aid being directed through non-Governmental organisations to Pakistan in 1999–2000, listing for each project (a) the NGO concerned, (b) the recipient organisation, (c) the sum involved and (d) the purpose of the project. [109336]

Clare Short: As the information is lengthy, it has been placed in the Library.

Angola

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the current situation in Angola concerning the need for humanitarian aid and the supply of such aid. [109251]

Clare Short: The UN estimate 3.7 million people will require humanitarian assistance in 2000. Two million of these are internally displaced. The conflict has caused large numbers of others to move to neighbouring countries to escape the conflict. The humanitarian status of one third of the population, in inaccessible areas, remains unknown.

The UK has committed about £7.5 million since the beginning of 1999 to international Non Governmental Organisations and UN Agencies. This includes US$6.2 million (some £3.8 million) for food aid through the World Food Programme. In addition, we contribute through our membership of the European Community.

The United Kingdom has called on all concerned to help facilitate safe passage for humanitarian personnel and the delivery of emergency assistance in areas under their control.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development to what extent the situation in Angola permits the provision of development aid as well as humanitarian aid; and if she will list the current provision of such aid. [109252]

Clare Short: The on-going civil war in Angola is a severe constraint to sustainable development. The quality of public expenditure and corruption are both serious concerns. Britain does not have a bilateral aid relationship with the Government of Angola. However, we provide humanitarian assistance to those in need and are also supporting the Luanda Urban Poverty Programme, which started in 1999, working through international Non Governmental Organisations to tackle the needs and priorities of the urban poor in Luanda.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits Agency Doctors

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to ensure that (1) training for Benefits Agency doctors draws attention to the need for sensitivity in their dealings with vulnerable claimants; [109032]

(2) benefit claimants doctors receive appropriate training in the working of the benefit system. [109033]

Mr. Bayley: Training for Benefit Agency doctors is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jim Dobbin, dated 11 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about what plans he has to ensure that training for Benefits Agency doctors draws attention to the need for sensitivity in their dealings with vulnerable claimants, and that they receive appropriate training in the working of the benefit system.

All examining doctors, employed by Sema Group and engaged by Nestor Disability Analysis (NDA), receive training in the Professional Standards of Medical Services. These standards include a requirement for doctors to be accessible, punctual, reliable, presentable, approachable, courteous, and friendly. Other specified standards include the requirement for the doctor to introduce him or herself to the person to be examined; to allow the claimant time to give their history, asking any questions in a non-adversarial manner; to explain the purpose of the examination; and to carry out the examination gently to avoid any unnecessary discomfort to the claimant.

The Chief Medical Advisor to the Department is responsible for setting the standards which all doctors, undertaking medical examinations, must achieve, and approves all training material.

The subject of professional standards is discussed during initial training and the standards are listed in full in the guidance notes that are given to each doctor. The training currently in place, ensures that all examining doctors are fully aware of the need for sensitivity whilst carrying out medical assessments on vulnerable claimants with disabilities.

As part of their training doctors are made aware of how their role fits into the overall benefit process. However, they do not make decisions on benefit claims nor do they offer advice on the technical details of the benefit concerned, these are matters for the Benefits Agency Local Offices.

I hope this is helpful.

Fraud

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many members of BASIS's Business Development Team are (a) under investigation for suspected fraud and (b) not discharging duties for some other reason. [108960]

Mr. Rooker: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Frank Field, dated 11 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many members of BASIS's Business Development Team are (a) under investigation for suspected fraud and (b) not discharging duties for some other reason.

The Business Development Team provides a number of support services for the rest of BASIS and currently has 27 staff.

All allegations and suspicions of fraud on the part of Benefits Agency (BA) staff are properly considered and fully investigated. Whilst some investigations do unearth irregularities on the part of the staff and result in various penalties for those involved, many establish that the individuals have acted with propriety and are not involved in inappropriate activities.

It is important that investigations of this kind remain confidential, not only to protect innocent staff, but also to avoid alerting fraudulent staff to the fact that their activities are being examined.

I hope you will accept therefore that it would be inappropriate to provide you with any details of investigations of suspected fraud by BA staff that may currently be underway. Information on fraud detected on the part of BA staff is available in Her Majesties Treasury Return published in January 2000.

There are no members of the BASIS's Business Development Team that we would regard as not discharging their duties.

I hope this is helpful.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the 10 (a) best and (b) worst performing local authorities in England in terms of (i) average time taken to process a claim for housing benefit and (ii) the number of housing benefit awards reviewed and subsequently found to be incorrect. [108984]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available.

We aim to transform the delivery of Housing Benefit so that local authorities provide their communities with a faster, more accurate service which is more secure against fraud and error, and which provides value for money and takes account of the views and needs of clients. Best value performance indicators will target these key areas from this April. Local authorities will be required to set and meet challenging targets against the indicators and demonstrate that they are achieving continuous improvements in the standards of service they provide.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of housing benefit claimants who are (a) tenants of registered social landlords and (b) tenants of private landlords are affected by the four weeks in arrears rule; and what is the average weekly level of housing benefit paid to tenants in both of those groups. [109366]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

Housing Benefit recipients, tenants of registered social landlords and private landlords, Great Britain—May 1998

	Tenants of registered social landlords	Tenants of private landlords
All recipients	840,000	971,000
Paid four weeks in arrears	242,000	352,000
Proportion paid four weeks in arrears—percentage	29	36
Average weekly amount of Housing Benefit	£54.50	£61.10

Notes:

1. Figures are the latest available.
2. The number of recipients are rounded to the nearest thousand, proportions to the nearest whole per cent. and average amounts of benefit to the nearest ten pence.
3. Recipients refer to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.

Housing Benefit Management Information System, annual 1 per cent. sample inquiries taken on the second Thursday in May 1998.

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in the pilot local authorities taking part in the review of housing benefit procedures; and if he will make a statement. [109034]

Angela Eagle: Local authorities are involved in a number of initiatives aimed at improving the administration and delivery of Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit, including several pilots. Through initiatives such as the pilot ONE service, local and central government are working together to streamline the operation of the benefit system and help clients move from welfare into work.

A range of benefits for clients of working age, including Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit, are assessed via a single point of contact as part of the ONE service. This offers an opportunity to move away from the duplication and inefficiency of the present system, with customers providing information only once. Clients take part in a work-focused interview where they receive in-depth, individual help from a personal adviser. This puts work, and helping people overcome barriers to work, at the heart of the benefit system.

Twelve pilots are testing three variants of the ONE service over three years. The first four basic model pilots were launched on 28 June 1999. A further eight pilots, four assessing the use of call centre technology and four led by private and voluntary sector organisations, commenced on 29 November 1999.

Fifty-six local authorities are working in partnership with the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service to trial this new way of working. Local authority involvement in ONE is important not only because of the authorities' responsibilities for delivery Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit, but also because of their expertise in providing a wide range of local services and information. Local authorities have also provided valuable input to the design and development of the ONE service.

While it is too early to measure the degree of success we have had in helping people move into sustainable employment, the improved level of customer service and the focus on individual needs have been well received by our clients.

Verification Framework

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what systems are in place to scrutinise the effectiveness of verification framework practices; and when the results of that scrutiny will be published. [109367]

Angela Eagle: We will use information from a range of sources to monitor the effectiveness of the Verification Framework (VF) in helping local authorities to improve accuracy and reduce fraud and error from entering the Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit system. We have monitored the live running of the VF from its launch and have already made several improvements to the VF in the light of operational experience to enable LAs to focus more on the outcomes that we require rather than specifying detailed process requirements.

The information we will use includes: management information provided by individual local authorities on a quarterly basis; information and reports from representative groups and individuals; inspections made by the BFI and checking compliance with the VF through external auditors at the same time as the normal audit of administration subsidy.

We have also commissioned an independent research company to conduct in depth research with local authorities to evaluate the implementation and operation of the Verification Framework. We plan to publish the findings in early 2001.

We will continue to monitor the VF and will consider further improvements when we have analysed information from the range of sources available.

Disregards

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the capital and income disregards for the benefits for which his Department is responsible indicating (a) the increases in levels of disregard for each year since 1997 and (b) the increases that would have been required to match the rate of inflation since 1996. [108824]

Simplification Project

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish the findings of the Simplification Project. [109365]

Angela Eagle: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Havant (Mr. Willetts) on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 210W.

Data Protection

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the implications of the Data Protection Act 1986 for his plans to issue combined forecasts of state and private pension entitlements. [109843]

Mr. Rooker: In developing our plans for combined pension forecasts we have considered carefully the data protection implications and consulted the Data Protection Registrar.

We intend to include a measure in the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill which will provide that details of State pension rights can be passed to employers and pension scheme providers unless individuals have indicated that they do not want such information disclosed. This measure will include safeguards to ensure that individual rights are properly protected while minimising the administrative burden on employers and pension providers of providing the new service.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to prevent sellers of stakeholder pensions from declining to make their products available to certain categories of employees. [109841]

Mr. Rooker: Stakeholder pension schemes set up under a trust will be able to restrict membership based on employment with a particular employer, or membership of a given trade or organisation. However, they will not be able to limit access using financial criteria. Details for alternative governance schemes are currently being developed and we will be making an announcement regarding them shortly.

Appeals

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals were heard by the Independent Tribunal Service and the Appeals Service in (a) May 1997 to April 1998 and (b) May 1998 to April 1999; how many of the appeals in each of the years were successful; what was the total amount paid in benefit arrears arising from those appeals for each of those years; and if he will make a statement. [109820]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

An enhanced computer system that allows the Appeals Service to record appeals and produce statistical information became operational at the end of 1997.

Number of appeals heard by the Independent Tribunal Service/Appeals Service during the period 1 May 1998 to 30 April 1999 and the number of those appeals which decided in the appellant's favour

Period	Number of appeals heard and decided	Decided in appellant's favour	Proportion of successful appeals (%)

The limited information available for the period 1 May 1997 to 30 April 1998 is included in the following table.

Period	Number of appeals heard and decided	Decided in appellants favour	Proportion of successful appeals (%)
1 May 1997 to 30 April 1998[1]	97,620	30,985	31.7
1 July 1997 to 31 December 1997[2]	59,044	18,787	31.8

[1] Information obtained from GAPS system introduced at the end of 1997. Some cases processed before GAPS became operational, and not recorded on other systems, were input to GAPS.
[2] This information has been obtained from clerically maintained quarterly statistical reports of Social Security Appeals Tribunals that were kept until the introduction of the GAPS system.

Information about the amount of benefit arrears paid following appeals that found in favour of appellants is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will reply to the letter of 5 November 1999 from the hon. member for Banff and Buchan regarding benefit payments and rural post offices. [110011]

Mr. Rooker: A reply was issued to the hon. Member on Friday 11 February.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when claim forms for the winter fuel payments will be made available. [109821]

Angela Eagle: The decision to extend the Winter Fuel Payment scheme to people aged 60 and over will mean that some of those who are newly eligible will need to claim. It is therefore necessary to devise a claims process to enable these people to make their claims. The Benefits Agency are currently working on this and other operational issues to determine the best way to deliver the payments.

There is no need for anyone who believes they may now be eligible for a payment to contact the Benefits Agency at present. A further announcement will be made as soon as we are ready to set out how people should claim.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Music Library Services (North-West)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions he has had with Manchester City Council on the provision of music library services in the north-west. [109320]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 2000]: Officials in my Department have been in contact with their opposite numbers at Manchester City Council to discuss their proposed reorganisation of the Central Library and its effect on the Henry Watson Music Library. I understand that no final decisions have been taken by the Council but, under the proposals, the Henry Watson collection would remain intact.

Museums, Libraries and Archives Council

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the Funding Agreement between his Department and the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council. [110118]

Mr. Chris Smith: A copy of the Funding Agreement of the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council (MLAC) will be placed in the Library of the House, and will also be published on the Department for Culture, Media and Sport's website when it is concluded and available. Mainstream Funding begins to flow to MLAC in the next financial year.

Funding Agreements

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the funding agreements between his Department and each of the non-departmental public bodies and national museums and galleries which are sponsored by the Department. [110109]

Mr. Chris Smith: Copies of the funding agreements between my Department and its non-departmental public bodies were placed in the Library of the House on 26 May 1999. They are also available on my Department's website—www.culture.gov.uk.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the number and value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109451]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 2000]: My Department has let one contract specifically for such services at a value of £3,000 per annum.

Burma (Olympic Games)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make it his policy to support measures to bar Burma from participating in this summer's Olympic Games; and if he will make a statement. [109804]

Kate Hoey: It is the responsibility of the International Olympic Committee and the Games organisers to set the rules for participation in the Olympics.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he last visited the Millennium Dome. [109469]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 2000]: I attended the Dome Opening Celebration on 31 December 1999.

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the date by which all of the Dome's sponsors will have signed contracts with NMEC. [104432]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 13 January 2000]: Seven contracts were outstanding and reported to the House in my reply to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 14 December 1999, Official Report, column 131W. Four of these contracts have now been signed and three remain to be signed at 10 February—Boots, Mars Confectionary and BSkyB. While NMEC had hoped that they would all have been completed at this stage, one or two matters of detail remain subject to discussion between the representative parties. The company has every confidence that the contracts will be signed.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if (a) he and (b) other Millennium Commissioners, were consulted about the appointment of the new Chief Executive of the New Millennium Experience Company. [109471]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chairman of the Commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Subtitling

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent figures he has collated on the level of subtitling on (a) BBC1, (b) BBC2, (c) ITV, (d) Channel 4 and (e) Channel 5; and if he will make a statement. [106969]

Janet Anderson: It is for the BBC Governors to monitor the levels of subtitling on BBC services and the Independent Television Commission to monitor the levels of subtitling on ITV, GMTV, Channel 4 and Channel 5. The most recent information available from the BBC is that 63 per cent. of BBC1 and 53 per cent. of BBC2 is subtitled. The latest figures available from the ITC, published in the Commission's Annual Report 1998, is that the level of subtitling of programmes in that year was 61 per cent. on ITV; 42 per cent. on GMTV; 60 per cent. on Channel 4; and 27 per cent. on Channel 5.

Public Service Broadcasting

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions he has had with the EU Commission regarding the definition of public service broadcasting, with special reference to the system of public funding. [109321]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 2000]: Officials from my Department met officials from the Commission, Competition Directorate General, on 26 January. The purpose of this meeting was primarily to discuss the decision of the Commission on the matter of BBC 24 Hour News.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if there are proposals to amend his Department's departmental expenditure limit and running costs limit for 1999–2000. [110379]

Mr. Chris Smith: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XI, Vote 1, the DCMS Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for 1999–2000 will be increased by £6,181,000 from £995,858,000 to £1,002,139,000.

This is to provide for increased expenditure of £8,600,000, partly funded by draw down of £2,761,000 of Departmental Unallocated Provision, for meeting the settlement of final accounts on the completion of the St. Pancras building; a transfer of £2,000,000 from the Department for Education and Employment (Class I, Vote 1) for awards to dance and drama students; a transfer of £592,000 from the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Class III, Vote 1) for the maintenance of Marlborough House; increased expenditure of £400,000 on DCMS gross running costs offset by an increase in refunds of eligible deductible input VAT; and to provide for the receipts of £3,200,000 from the National Lottery operator's licence fees and from the National Lottery Distribution Fund to meet the administrative costs of the National Lottery Commission to be appropriated in aid of the Vote.

The increases will be offset by transfers, savings or a charge on the DEL Reserve, and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Orchestras

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the grant-in-aid from public funds for orchestras for each year since 1990 in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms. [109730]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Grant-in-aid allocated by the Arts Council of England to the nine subsidised English orchestras is shown in the table.

Year	Cash terms	Real terms
1990–91	6,721,000	8,657,066
1991–92	7,721,600	9,365,191
1992–93	9,014,461	10,583,086
1993–94	9,511,500	10,877,744
1994–95	8,869,000	10,000,112
1995–96	8,933,000	9,789,374
1996–97	9,133,000	9,696,255
1997–98	9,133,000	9,431,020
1998–99	9,133,000	9,133,000
1999–2000	9,902,880	9,684,968

Media Releases

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in the last 12 months. [108892]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 8 February 2000]: DCMS Press Releases are distributed via the Central Office of Information (COI).

In 1999 the Department for Culture, Media and Sport issued 315 press releases. The average cost of distributing a press release via the COI was £50.76, including post, fax, packing, copying, and stationery costs.

DCMS, in common with all other Government Departments, also contribute to the upkeep of the Central Office of Information's 'electronic news distribution system. In 1999 that contribution, which is a standing charge and is not related to the number of press releases issued by the Department, totalled £15,862.52.

TREASURY

Cambridgeshire Statistics

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the wards in (a) Peterborough and (b) Cambridge ranked by average earnings. [109533]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mrs. Helen Brinton, dated 14 February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question regarding the average earnings of the wards in Peterborough and Cambridge. I am replying in Dr Holt's absence.

The New Earnings Survey (NES) can only provide ward level earnings data based on where people work, rather than where they live. Additionally we can only provide data where we have a sufficiently large sample of employees, and have an acceptable level of accuracy.

I have provided the only available data in the table below. These are based on the 1999 NES, the latest survey for which data are available.

New earnings survey, April 1999 (GB)

All full-time employees	Average (£)
Cambridge	—
Trumpington	407.8
Newnham	377.4

Notes:

Employees on adult rates, whose pay for the survey period was unaffected by absence. Gross weekly earnings (including overtime).

The NES is based on a one per cent sample of employees in the PAYE system and is therefore likely to under-represent relatively low paid staff earning below the tax threshold and in particular those who work part-time.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the population in (a) Peterborough and (b) Cambridge are from ethnic minority groups. [109534]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mrs. Helen Brinton, dated 14 February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the percentage of the population in Peterborough and Cambridge who are from ethnic minority groups. I am replying in Dr Holt's absence.

The percentages of the resident population in ethnic groups other than 'White', from the 1991 Census are:

	Percentages
Peterborough district	7.42
Cambridge district	5.89

These figures were published in Table 5 of the report 1991 Census Key Statistics for Local Authorities laid before Parliament in 1994. This report is available from the House of Commons Library.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many job vacancies currently exist in (a) Peterborough and (b) Cambridge. [109536]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mrs. Helen Brinton, dated February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on how many job vacancies currently exist in Peterborough and Cambridge. I am replying in Dr. Holt's absence.

In December 1999 the number of unfilled vacancies held by Jobcentres, unadjusted for seasonal patterns, was 1,317 in the Peterborough Jobcentre area and 920 in the Cambridge Jobcentre area. Jobcentre vacancies do not represent the total number of vacancies available in the economy. Latest estimates suggest that about a third of all vacancies nationally are notified to Jobcentres.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in (a) Peterborough and (b) Cambridge have been unemployed for longer than (i) six months, (ii) 12 months and (iii) 24 months. [109535]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mrs. Helen Brinton, dated February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the number of people in (a) Peterborough and (b) Cambridge who have been unemployed for longer than six months, twelve months and twenty four months. I am replying in Dr. Holt's absence.

The ONS publish a monthly count of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. The claimant count consists of all people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or National Insurance credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made.

The information requested is in the table below.

Unadjusted claimant count by duration (computerised claims only)[1] December 1999

	PCA Peterborough[2]	PCA Cambridge[2]
Over 6 months	602	584
Over 12 months	317	330
Over 24 months	85	151

[1] Claimant count flows are available for computerised claims only and do not include claims which are processed clerically, which make up about 1 per cent. of the total Claimant count.

Rural Areas (GDP)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those of the 10 areas with the lowest gross domestic product per head of population which are rural areas. [109891]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Colin Breed, dated 14 February 2000:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on which of the 10 areas with the lowest gross domestic product (GDP) per head of population are rural.

The ONS does not publish estimates of GDP per head specifically for rural areas. The most detailed estimates of GDP per head that ONS publishes are for UK NUTS-3[1] areas. These are based on local government administrative areas, which may cover both urban and rural communities.

ONS last published estimates of GDP per head at the NUTS-3 level in October 1998, including estimates for 1996. The NUTS-3 areas with lowest GDP per head for 1996, presented in the form of an index where UK=100, are given in the attached table.

[1] All UK NUTS (Nomenclature of Units for Territorial Statistics) areas were defined in an ONS News Release published in June 1998 (ONS(98)199—European Classification of UK Geographic Areas)

NUTS-3 Area	1996 GDP/head (UK=100)
East Lothian and Midlothian	56
Sefton	63
Wirral	63
Central Valleys	64
West and South of Northern Ireland	66
Barnsley, Doncaster and Rotherham	66
South Nottinghamshire	67
East and West Dunbartonshire, Helensburgh and Lomond	67
Isle of Anglesey	68
Outer London—East and North East[1]	69
Outer Belfast[1]	69
Blackpool[1]	69

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which heavily indebted poor countries have produced poverty reduction strategy papers in partnership with the IMF and World bank; and which countries are in the process of developing such papers. [109528]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers (PRSPs) are to be national strategies, drawn up by the countries themselves, in consultation with civil society and the World Bank and IMF. Interim PRSPs have been produced by the three countries (Uganda, Bolivia and Mauritania) who recently reached decision point under the enhanced HIPC Initiative.

Work is currently underway to produce PRSPs in the remaining countries currently in the HIPC process. The Department for International Development and NGOs are providing important technical assistance to countries in that regard. Many countries already have some form of poverty reduction strategy and it is clearly important to build on this to ensure the first principle of the new approach to poverty reduction, that of country ownership.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those previously planned meetings and their subject, between his Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109900]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A joint statement issued by Portugal, the current holder of the EU presidency, on 31 January 2000, stated that Austria's 14 member state partners in the EU

> "will not promote or accept any bilateral official contacts at political level with an Austrian Government integrating the FPO [Freedom Party]."

No bilateral ministerial meetings were scheduled between the Chancellor and Austrian Ministers.

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what action Her Majesty's Customs and Excise is taking to monitor products imported from Israel into Britain to ensure full compliance with (a) Article 38 and (b) other Articles of the Origin Rules Protocol of the EC Trade Agreement with Israel; [109543]

(2) what investigations Her Majesty's Customs and Excise has conducted and what conclusions it has reached concerning products wholly or substantially processed in Israeli settlements in occupied territories which have been imported into the Community under the EC Trade Agreement with Israel in violation of (a) Article 38 and (b) other Articles of that Agreement's Origin Rules Protocol. [109541]

Dawn Primarolo: Following receipt of information indicating that products wholly or substantially processed in Israeli settlements in occupied territories may have been imported into the United Kingdom in violation of both Article 38 and the provisions of the Protocol on Rules of Origin of the EC Trade Agreement with Israel, Customs and Excise has examined a number of documents presented in the past in support of products entered for customs clearance as of Israeli origin. Scrutiny of those documents has failed to substantiate the alleged non-compliance with the provisions of the Agreement. Customs and Excise is considering further options for checking the validity of such declarations.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action Her Majesty's Customs and Excise is taking on violation by Israel of the Origin Rules Protocol of the EC Trade Agreement with Israel in respect of imports to Britain. [109542]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs and Excise is participating in a European Commission initiative to establish the true origin of goods which have been exported to the United Kingdom under the provisions of the Interim Agreement on trade and trade related matters between the European Community and the State of Israel.

Personal Services (Tax Avoidance)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from the Chartered Institute of Taxation and from the Institute of Chartered Accountants, concerning his proposals for countering tax and national insurance contribution avoidance in the provision of personal services; and if he will make a statement. [109557]

Dawn Primarolo: Both organisations have played a full part in consultations on the proposals. Recently they have been consulted on draft guidance on the application of the employment status rules in typical consultancy situations. The guidance has now been published and can be found on the Inland Revenue website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/ir35

Ivory

Angela Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much elephant ivory was seized by HM Customs and Excise in the years (a) 1998, (b) 1999 and (c) 2000 to date; and (i) where each shipment originated, (ii) where each shipment was destined, (iii) which shipments were (1) in transit through the United Kingdom and (2) had the United Kingdom as the final intended destination, and (iv) what indication in each of these was of whether the ivory was less than one year old when seized. [109574]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs seized 378 items of ivory in 1998 and 15 items of ivory in the first nine months of 1999. Figures for the latter part of 1999, and the first part of this year are not yet available. The following tables set out the number of individual items of ivory seized in each category for the years in question. Customs do not hold central statistics on the age of the ivory when seized, or the number of ivory items found illegally in transit through the United Kingdom, though items in transit would normally be seized.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people who have claimed Working Families' Tax Credit received it (a) in the wage earner's wage packet and (b) as a benefit via the Post Office. [109363]

Dawn Primarolo: The Working Families' Tax Credit (WFTC) will become payable to employees by their employer along with their wages or salary from April 2000. Couples applying for WFTC are able to choose which partner applies for and receives their tax credit. From April 2000, if they opt for a partner who is self-employed, or not working, to receive the tax credit, they will be paid direct by the Inland Revenue.

National Insurance

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many self-employed people have been unable to make their national insurance contributions due to the operating problems of the NIRS2 computer system. [109447]

Dawn Primarolo: The vast majority of 3.3 million self-employed people have been able to pay National Insurance Contributions without difficulty. The periodic collection of self-employed contributions, by monthly direct debit or quarterly billing arrangements, have been in place since March 1999.

We have experienced some difficulties by new and current customers, under 5,000 people are currently affected and urgent action is being taken to resolve these cases.

Health Expenditure

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate by how much (a) tax and (b) public sector borrowing would have to rise in order to raise health expenditure to 8 per cent. of GDP on the assumption that no changes are made to other expenditure predictions outlined in the 1999 Budget report. [110111]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Decisions on NHS expenditure will be taken in the spending review.

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate the Treasury has made of the consequences for inflation of a rise in NHS expenditure over five years to the EU average if funded by additional taxation. [110107]

Mr. Andrew Smith: It is the task of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee to set interest rates to ensure the Government's inflation target is met. Decisions on future NHS expenditure will be taken in the forthcoming Spending Review.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 17 January 2000, Official Report, column 353W, on asset sales, if he will list the asset sales planned in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02 by (i) central Government, (ii) local government and (iii) public corporations; and if he will set out the method by which he calculated the estimates in his answer of 17 January. [110012]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Details of individual assets to be sold are not held centrally. The projections of aggregate receipts from asset sales given on 17 January are based on returns made by Departments.

Training Allowance

Mr. Colman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will investigate the accuracy of the information given on the Inland Revenue web page on the training allowance for 16 and 17-year-olds. [110226]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue makes strenuous efforts to ensure that the information on its website is as accurate and up to date as possible.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid Board

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans the Government have to alter the current system of rewards to Legal Aid Board managers who process claims quickly. [110019]

Mr. Lock: The terms and conditions of the Legal Aid Board's staff are determined by the Board, with the approval of the Lord Chancellor and the consent of the Treasury.

The current system of performance-related pay awards to Legal Aid Board staff is based upon a comprehensive appraisal of overall performance in terms of achievement of targets, standards and personal competency. The Government maintain a general overview of pay structures in non-departmental public bodies. There are no proposals at this time to alter the Board's current performance-related pay system.

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action he plans to take to ensure transparency and public accountability in the workings of Legal Aid Board offices, with particular reference to the Reading Area Office. [110013]

Mr. Lock: As a non-departmental public body, the Legal Aid Board is required to comply with Government Accounting standards in its management of public funds. The Board provides information about its activities in its Annual Report and Accounts, which are laid before Parliament and published, and in accordance with the principles in the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Members of the Board are appointed by the Lord Chancellor, and have responsibility for ensuring high standards of corporate governance, including openness.

I am prepared to consider carefully and refer to the Board as appropriate any evidence of misconduct or breakdown of these arrangements at the Reading area office.

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the ability of the current management of the Legal Aid Board, with particular reference to the Reading Area Office, to implement planned changes to legal services. [110014]

Mr. Lock: I have confidence in the ability of the current management of the Legal Aid Board to deliver the legal aid reforms successfully. My view is supported by the work of Mr. Victor Benjamin, who agreed in December 1998 to act as the Lord Chancellor's Independent Business Adviser on Legal Aid Reform. Mr. Benjamin was asked to form a view of the Board's ability to develop the managerial and strategic systems to implement the new arrangements and monitor them in the future. Mr. Benjamin visited a number of the Board's area offices, including Reading, and has expressed confidence in the ability of the Board to deliver the reformed scheme.

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will invite past, present, temporary and permanent staff at the Reading Area Legal Aid Board office to comment anonymously about practices at the centre. [110016]

Mr. Lock: I am, of course, willing to listen to any concerns by past, present, temporary and permanent staff about allegations of impropriety at any of the Board's offices. Where such complaints give rise to matters of legitimate concern, I will ensure they are properly investigated within the constraints inherent in anonymous complaints. The Board has in place established procedures for staff to raise concerns regarding any illegal, improper or unethical behaviour within the Board. These procedures provide for concerns to be raised in confidence with the Board's Head of Internal Audit.

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the measures in place at Legal Aid Board offices to prevent computer fraud and consequent abuse of public funds. [110018]

Mr. Lock: The Chief Executive of the Legal Aid Board, as Accounting Officer, is responsible for ensuring that an adequate control framework is in place to ensure that public funds are suitably protected from fraud and abuse. The Legal Aid Board's Annual Accounts, which are published in its Annual Report, contain a statement by the Accounting Officer giving assurance on the Board's system of internal financial control.

Access to the Board's computer systems is controlled through the use of passwords, and a detailed auditable trail of all transactions undertaken is provided.

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the Legal Aid Board's compliance with section 38 of the Legal Aid Act 1988. [110020]

Mr. Lock: Section 38 of the Legal Aid Act prevents disclosure of information concerning an application for legal aid to any unauthorised third party. On the information before me at present, I am satisfied that the Board takes its responsibilities seriously and is careful to comply with section 38.

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will investigate the activities of the Reading area office and committee of the Legal Aid Board. [110001]

Mr. Lock: My hon. Friend has raised concerns about the operation of the Reading legal aid area office with me and my predecessor. The Board is responding to these concerns. If evidence of impropriety on the part of any office of the Board came to light, the Lord Chancellor would, if appropriate, authorise an independent inspection of the Board's systems and activities and seek explanations from the Board where necessary.

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures he plans to take to ensure the Legal Aid Board prevents double payments and payments to fraudulent and fictional clients. [110017]

Mr. Lock: The Board has in place controls to reduce the risk of duplicate or fraudulent payments being made. The Chief Executive's statement on internal financial control, which is informed by the ongoing work of the Board's internal and external auditors and executive managers, has provided assurance to the Government and Parliament that the procedures being operated give an adequate level of control over the Board's financial systems. The Government will remain vigilant to ensure that every reasonable step is taken to prevent double payments and payments to fraudulent and fictional clients.

Mr. Salter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will investigate reports that staff at the Reading Area Legal Aid Board office are required to make up missing details on legal aid application forms. [110015]

Mr. Lock: The Board's computer system provides a facility for the collection of a great deal of information, not all of which is essential for the purposes of assessing legal aid applications. Where supervisors are otherwise satisfied about the validity of an application or claim, and where the cost of obtaining any missing information could not be justified they may authorise certain information not to be entered. For example, in some cases where the client's date of birth is omitted from a form, staff may be authorised to enter a notional date on the computer, but only where this will not compromise proper control over legal aid expenditure.

Rail Crash (Paddington)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has in relation to the Paddington rail crash inquiry, to include coroners' inquest powers in those of the inquiry therein, pursuant to the Access to Justice Act 1999. [109372]

Jane Kennedy: Section 71 of the Access to Justice Act 1999 came into force on 1 January. Under the new powers, once identification and pathological evidence have been dealt with, the Lord Chancellor will formally direct the coroner to adjourn the inquest and allow Lord Cullen to start his inquiry into the train crash.

Conditional Fee Agreements

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he will publish the rules on the extension of conditional fee agreements due to come into effect on 1 April 2000, (a) in draft form and (b) in final form; what plans he has to consult with professional bodies on the rules in draft; and if he will make a statement. [109376]

Mr. Lock: The Government have already consulted professional bodies and others. We published our consultation paper "Conditional Fees: Sharing the Risks of Litigation" on 23 September 1999. The paper sought views on the regulations and rules of court required to give effect to its policy on conditional fee agreements. It received 91 responses. These included responses from consumer groups, the Civil Justice Council, the Association of District Judges, the Senior Costs Judge, the legal professional bodies (including those with a specialist interest in conditional fees such as the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers), the trade unions and their legal representatives, individual judges, practitioners and the insurance industry. On 1 February, in the light of responses to that consultation paper, the Government published a report entitled "The Government's Conclusions Following Consultation on Conditional Fees: Sharing the Costs of Litigation". The report announced the principles to be set out in regulations applying to conditional fee agreements. The report also contained recommendations to the Civil Procedure Rule Committee concerning the detailed guidance in rules of court governing the recovery of success fees under conditional fee agreements and premiums for after the event insurance policies. Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The regulations giving effect to the changes announced in the report will be laid before Parliament in time for them to be approved and come into force on 1 April. The Rule Committee will, before making rules of court, consult such persons as they consider appropriate.

Indemnity

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the indemnity principle in the light of the court decision in the case of Geraghty vs Awwad; and if he will make a statement. [109373]

Mr. Lock: The issue in Geraghty and Co. vs Awad Awwad was whether an oral agreement between a solicitor and client to charge a reduced fee if the case was lost and the normal charging rate if the case was won, was enforceable. The Court held that the agreement (at the time at which it was made) was unlawful and in breach of the Solicitor's Practice Rules 1990. Geraghty vs Awwad considered the position as it stood in 1993. Since then amendments have been made to the legislation and to the Solicitor's Practice Rules and further amendments will come into force on 1 April 2000 as a result of the commencement of section 27 of the Access to Justice Act. After 1 April 2000 agreements to work for no, or a lesser, fee if unsuccessful and a normal or higher fee if successful will be enforceable, provided they comply with the regulations currently being drafted.

No consideration of the indemnity principle, relevant to the present position took place in Geraghty vs Awwad. The Government are conscious of the impact the indemnity principle can have on the recovery of costs, and had, prior to Geraghty vs Awwad, included a provision in the Access to Justice Act to amend section 51 of the Supreme Court Act 1991.

Freemasons

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) magistrates and (b) judges in England and Wales are freemasons. [109439]

Mr. Lock: The latest provisional figures available for full-time and part-time judges and judicial office-holders and lay magistrates are given in the following table. These figures are subject to revision in the light of further analysis and changes in the composition of the judiciary.

	Professional Judiciary [1]	Lay Magistracy [2]
Masons	268	1,207
Non-masons	4,894	20,308
Not disclosed	75	597
Not replied/not recorded	470	2,852
Total	5,707	[3]24,964

[1] Position for post-holders as at 30 September 1999. These figures include both responses to the voluntary questionnaire sent to serving office-holders in July 1998 and information provided on initial appointment.

[2] Position for post-holders as at 1 October 1998. These figures relate to the voluntary questionnaire.

[3] Excludes Justices of the Peace in the Duchy of Lancaster.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the (a) number and (b) value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109304]

Mr. Lock: The information requested is as follows:

(a) the number of contracts is 10

(b) the value of the contracts is £1,415,385.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 the number and total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that have (a) been put out to competitive tender, (b) not been put out to competitive tender and (c) been let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109064]

Mr. Lock: The information available is broken down in the table. In the time available the Public Records Office has only been able to provide the total number and value of the contracts let in each of the categories concerned.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 15 February 2000

PRIME MINISTER

Public Bodies (Fees)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister which fees his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies collect; how much has been raised and will be raised from each of these fees from 1989–90 to 2004–05; and which of these fees count as negative expenditure. [107974]

The Prime Minister: For the purposes of this question, this answer includes my Office and the Cabinet Office, together with its agencies and associated public bodies. A fee is a charge made under legislative authority. My Office, the Cabinet Office, its agencies and associated public bodies collect no fees.

Privy Council (Judicial Committee)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answers of 7 February 2000, Official Report, columns 3–4W, (1) which judges have served on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, who were nominated on the advice of a head of Government of another Commonwealth country in the past twenty years; [109383]

(2) if he will list the people from other countries of the Commonwealth who have been accorded membership of the Privy Council in the past 20 years; which of these were eligible for membership of the Judicial Committee; and which served on the Judicial Committee subsequently. [109384]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 February 2000]: I understand that of those persons appointed to the Privy Council in the last 20 years the following have actually served on the Judicial Committee by virtue of holding or having held judicial office in a superior court outside the United Kingdom:

Privy Councillor
Sir Gordon Bisson	New Zealand Court of Appeal
Sir Maurice Casey	New Zealand Court of Appeal
Sir Thomas Eichelbaum	New Zealand Court of Appeal
Sir Thomas Floissac	East Caribbean Supreme Court
Thomas Gault	New Zealand Court of Appeal
Telford Georges	Bahamas Court of Appeal
Sir Michael Hardie Boys	New Zealand Court of Appeal
John Henry	New Zealand Court of Appeal
Sir Duncan McMullin	New Zealand Court of Appeal
Edward Zacca	Supreme Court of Jamaica

Of course, some Privy Councillors appointed prior to 1980 will also have served on the Judicial Committee.

In the last 20 years, the following people from countries of the Commonwealth other than the UK have been accorded membership of the Privy Council:

Privy Councillor
Duncan MacIntyre	New Zealand
Lancelot Raymond Adams-Schneider	New Zealand
Sir Duncan McMullin[1]	New Zealand
Edward Phillip George Seaga	Jamaica
Sir Julius Chan	Papua New Guinea
Allan Louisy	Saint Lucia

[1] Judges who are or were eligible for membership of the Judicial Committee

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the previously planned meetings, and their subject, between him and the Prime Minister of Austria which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109868]

The Prime Minister: I had no previously planned meeting with the Chancellor of Austria before the measures of the 14 member states were implemented.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his letter of 8 February to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, if he will set out the conditions which Iraq must fulfil to have made real progress on disarmament. [109601]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 February 2000]: Security Council Resolution 1284 sets out the conditions which Iraq must fulfil. The Executive Chairman of UNMOVIC and the Director General of the IAEA will identify the key remaining disarmament tasks to be completed by Iraq. The resolution states that what is required of Iraq for the implementation of each task should be clearly defined and precise.

Central and Regional Government

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Prime Minister when the Performance and Innovation Unit's report on the role of central Government at regional and local level will be published. [110419]

The Prime Minister: The Performance and Innovation Unit's report "Reaching out: the role of central Government at regional and local level" is being published tomorrow.

Copies will be available from the Vote Office.

Review Body on Senior Salaries

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the report and recommendations of the Review Body on Senior Salaries. [110420]

The Prime Minister: The 2000 report of the Review Body on Senior Salaries, which makes recommendations about the pay of the senior civil service, senior military personnel and the judiciary, together with the annual uprating of Parliamentary salaries, is being published today. Copies are available from the Vote Office. I am grateful to the Chairman and members of the Review Body for their work.

The main recommendations of the Review Body are:

an increase from 1 April 2000 of 2.9 per cent. in the minimum and maximum values of each of the pay bands for the senior civil service. Within the bands, departments and agencies will determine individual awards on the basis of performance. A further 0.4 per cent. of the total senior civil service paybill should be made available to fund additional performance awards for the most senior staff, whose pay has fallen well behind comparable remuneration elsewhere. Promotion to and within the senior civil service should be recognised by a move to a higher pay band and an increase of not less than 10 per cent.;

an increase from 1 April 2000 of 3.3 per cent. in judicial salaries, with additional increases for seven senior members of the judiciary as a result of changes in the salary structure at those levels in recognition of their increasing responsibility for judicial leadership and the supervision of the judicial system; an increase from 1 April 2000 of 3.3 per cent. in the maxima of the pay ranges within which individual salaries are set for senior military personnel.

The Government have decided to accept these recommendations. Their cost will be met within existing Departmental Expenditure Limits.

Pay increases for Members of Parliament and Ministers are linked automatically to the increase in pay bands for the senior civil service. Their pay entitlement will therefore increase from 1 April 2000 by 2.9 per cent.

House of Lords Reform

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to bring forward proposals for reform of the House of Lords; and on what timescale. [110336]

The Prime Minister: The Government have made it clear that they wish to give proper consideration to the recommendations of the Royal Commission. That process is still continuing.

Proportional Representation

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister when he intends to hold a referendum on whether proportional representation should be introduced for elections to the United Kingdom Parliament. [110335]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the Leader of the Opposition in the House on 12 January 2000, Official Report, column 274.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Police Service

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria relating to minor criminal records will govern entry into the proposed Police Service for Northern Ireland; what class of criminal conviction is a barrier to recruitment to the RUC; and what plans he has to change the criteria. [107815]

Mr. Ingram: A note setting out the current criminal convictions criteria has been placed in the Library. It is also available on the Royal Ulster Constabulary's website.

The criteria will be reviewed in light of the recommendations on recruitment in the Patten Report.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Hull, North of 24 January 2000, Official Report, column 5W, if he will list the responsibilities of the Chief Constable of the RUC when he was a detective superintendent at RUC Headquarters. [108429]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 February 2000]: While I was content to answer the previous question from my hon. Friend for Hull, North, I do not consider it appropriate to answer questions relating to the operational responsibilities of individual members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Construction Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assistance his Department gives to aid the development of the construction industry. [107848]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department operates a sponsorship programme to support the technical and commercial development of the construction industry.

We invest approximately £25 million a year in research and dissemination of best practice to help and encourage the industry to improve its competitiveness and its performance on such issues as sustainability, diversity, health and safety, training etc. This includes over £8 million to support collaborative research with industry.

From within this total, the Department contributes funds to support the work of the Construction Industry Board, the Construction Best Practice Programme, the Movement for Innovation Board and the Housing Forum, on their work to improve the industry's performance.

The Department also provides support for external and internal trade missions to promote UK interests in overseas markets.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much funding he has provided to support the (a) Movement for Innovation, (b) Construction Industry Training Board, (c) Construction Best Practice programme and (d) Housing Forum for the years (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000. [R] [108707]

Ms Beverley Hughes: DETR funding has been as follows:

Financial year	1998–99	1999–2000
Movement for Innovation
M4I Board/Local Government Taskforce/Change the Face of Construction/other publicity and conferences	110	615
Housing Forum	0	100
Construction Industry Board (including National Construction Week)	140	155
Construction Best Practice Programme	1,300	2,000

Please note that because a number of expenditures are expected to arise at around the turn of the financial year, out-turns for the current financial year may vary from the above estimates.

Housing (Elderly People)

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to increase the availability of suitable housing to the elderly. [109247]

Mr. Mullin: Over the lifetime of this Parliament, we are providing nearly £5 billion of extra resources for investment in housing in England. Most of these resources are being directed through local authorities who are key to the delivery of our housing policies. £2.1 billion has been allocated to local authorities in 2000–01, through the Housing Investment Programme—48 per cent. more than was available in the current year.

We believe that local authorities are best placed to decide on the needs and priorities of their areas and their investment decisions for these additional resources should be based on robust local assessments of the housing needs of all groups within the community, including addressing the needs of the elderly.

In particular, grants are available through local authorities, to help elderly and disabled people to carry out adaptions and improvements that enable them to remain in comfort and safety in their own homes. Provision for disabled facilities grants is due to increase by a quarter over the current expenditure period, and this is expected to pay for over 10,000 additional adaptations.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many regional development agency boards have more than one member with expertise in rural matters. [109810]

Ms Beverley Hughes: All RDA boards have at least one member with rural expertise. Yorkshire Forward and the East of England RDA have two board members with rural expertise.

Brownfield Sites

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many brownfield sites his Department has identified in (a) rural and (b) urban areas; and what is the total area of such sites in each category. [109766]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Provisional results from the first phase of the National Land Use Database (NLUD), published in May last year estimated that, in 1998, there were about 33,000 hectares of previously developed vacant and derelict land in England. An additional 23,000 hectares of land are potentially available through reuse of vacant commercial buildings, land currently in use but allocated in plans for redevelopment or with planning permission for housing, and other sites expected to become available for redevelopment. These results were compiled from information on more than 30,000 previously developed sites.

This information is not available for urban and rural areas separately.

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish a list of brownfield sites in England. [110235]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Sittingbourne and Sheppey (Mr. Wyatt) on 28 January 2000, Official Report, column 357W.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the United Kingdom is on target to meet the level of carbon dioxide reduction agreed at Kyoto. [109575]

Mr. Meacher: The UK has a legally binding target under the Kyoto Protocol of reducing its greenhouse gas emissions to 12.5 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2008–12. Our emissions of the six greenhouse gases covered by the Kyoto Protocol fell by almost 9 per cent. between 1990 and 1997 and is on target to meet our commitment. The Government will shortly be publishing a draft UK climate change programme for consultation. The draft programme will show how the UK plans to meet its legally binding Kyoto target and move towards the domestic goal of a 20 per cent. cut in carbon dioxide emissions below 1990 levels by 2010.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many bilateral meetings were held between his Department and its Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what was discussed at each meeting since May 1997. [109872]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Any records of bilateral meeting between the DETR (or the former DOE or DOT) and its Austrian counterpart are not held centrally. It would therefore involve a disproportionate cost in trying to retrieve the information.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those previously planned meetings and their subject, between his Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109899]

Ms Beverley Hughes: There were no previously planned meetings between DETR and its Austrian counterpart when the new Austrian Government was formulated.

Tree Felling (Croydon)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the outcome of his review of the proposal by Croydon Council to fell trees at Gravel Hill, Croydon. [109510]

Mr. Mullin: The Secretary of State received on 12 January a request to make a tree preservation order in respect of trees at Gravel Hill, Croydon. This request and subsequent submissions are currently being considered. I will write to the hon. Member when a decision has been made.

Housing Associations (Borrowing)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is (a) the value of borrowing by housing associations to finance investments in housing stock and (b) the average length of the term for repayment. [109545]

Mr. Mullin: According to information from the Housing Corporation at 31 March 1998 committed loan facilities of £13.5 billion had been arranged by housing associations and other registered social landlords, of which £10.6 billion had been drawndown. Whilst the vast majority of this funding was to finance the purchase, development or improvement of housing stock, it is not possible to identify separately that element which was raised to meet other costs.

The average length of term for repayment is not available. Typically long term funding may be for periods of 25 to 35 years. Short-term funding may be up to five years.

Planning Applications

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when he will announce his decision on the planning application for the cement works at Holborough, Kent; [109551]

(2) when he will announce his decision on the planning application for Stone Lodge Park, Dartford; and if he will make a statement. [109550]

Mr. Raynsford: On the Holborough application, we are considering the Inspector's report and will issue a decision as soon as possible.

On the Stone Lodge application, it was necessary to seek further representations from the parties on the question of need for the facilities proposed. We are analysing the responses and will issue a decision shortly.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance is being given to those responsible for implementing the provisions of the Single Programming Documents for Objective 1 funding in (a) Merseyside, (b) South Yorkshire and (c) Cornwall, with regard to issuing draft programme Complement and Guidelines in advance of the final approval of the SPD, to enable project sponsors to move ahead with their projects without delay. [109556]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My Department has issued guidance to programme managers on the implementation of Objective 1 programmes. This will be updated as new policy and other developments arise. We are very keen to avoid any delay in the implementation of these programmes, to enable partners to maximise the opportunities afforded by the new programmes.

Biodiversity

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what representations he has received on whether biodiversity action planning should be placed on a statutory footing; [109991]

(2) what plans he has to provide a statutory basis for biodiversity action planning. [109992]

Mr. Mullin: A number of representations on whether the biodiversity action plan process should be placed on a statutory footing have been received since the announcement, in the Queen's Speech, of a Bill to give people greater access to the countryside and improved protection for wildlife. This issue and representations received on many others are currently being considered.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the implications for the national biodiversity action planning process of the Countryside Council for Wales's decision not to work on biodiversity action plans. [109990]

Mr. Mullin: The implications of the Countryside Council for Wales's decision are a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Departmental Research

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the titles of (a) research studies, (b) audits and (c) surveys he commissioned for completion in the last 12 months, stating in each case when the results were published. [109944]

Mr. Mullin: I refer to the answer that I gave on 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 544W, on Departmental Research, when I explained that details of each project are not held centrally. As on that occasion, a list of research projects will be prepared and placed in the Library of the House.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each (a) unitary, (b) shire county, (c) shire district, (d) metropolitan district and (e) London borough council (i) the real terms cash and percentage increase in standard spending assessment between 1997–98 and 2000–01, (ii) the real terms cash and percentage increase in revenue support grant between 1997–98 and 2000–01, (iii) the real terms cash and percentage increase in total external support between 1997–98 and 2000–01 and (iv) the real terms cash and percentage increase in aggregate external finance between 1997–98 and 2000–01. [109600]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The information requested, to the extent that it is available, has been placed in the library. It is not possible to provide the increase in aggregate external finance to 2000–01 as the latest available figures relate to budgets for 1999–2000.

Development Plans (MPs' Representations)

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy that hon. Members should have the opportunity to make oral representations at the examination in public concerning the development plan policies relating to their constituencies. [109975]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Existing policy on the selection of participants in Structure Plan examinations in public (EIPs) is set out in Town and Country Planning Act 1990 and in the booklet "Structure Plans—A Guide to Procedures" published by my Department in December 1999. There are currently no plans to alter this policy. The purpose of an EIP is to provide the local structure planning authority with more information, through public discussion of certain issues, before reaching decisions on the plan. It is not intended that all those who have made objections or representations on an issue selected for discussion should be invited to take part.

Primary legislation gives responsibility to the EIP panel and the local planning authority for selecting participants. The basic criterion will be the significance of the contribution which they can be expected to make to the discussion of the matters to be examined. The aim will be to select participants (whether statutory bodies, interest groups or individuals) who between them represent a broad range of viewpoints and have a relevant contribution to make.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of amending planning and public inquiry rules and legislation to give hon. Members the right to make oral representations at the examinations in public on the development plan policies concerning their constituencies. [109977]

Ms Beverley Hughes: None. However, my right hon. Friend, the then Minister for Planning, indicated in "Modernising Planning—A Progress Report", published by my Department in April 1999, that while a number of improvements had already been achieved, we would continue to consider proposals for further changes to make the planning system more efficient and effective. A summary report on research into the Operation and Effectiveness of Structure Planning System was also published in April 1999, and indicated that the Department intended to carry out a short-term review of the structure planning process in England. That review will commence shortly.

Small Airports

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to (a) reduce noise levels and (b) improve safety at small airports outside London; [109797]

(2) if he will make a statement on the safety and age of aircraft using small airports. [109798]

Mr. Mullin: Our policy on noise is the same for small and large airports—reduction of noise at source, and airport specific measures where necessary. The Government continue to work for international agreement on higher certification standards and on phasing out noisier aircraft. Apart from the designated London airports, where the Secretary of State has direct responsibility, measures to reduce operational noise are the responsibility of the airport management, working in consultation with local interests. We shall shortly consult on the details of proposed legislation to strengthen aerodromes' powers to establish and enforce noise amelioration schemes, and to enable the Secretary of State to designate an aerodrome requiring it to agree such a scheme with an appropriate local authority.

All United Kingdom airports are licensed by the Civil Aviation Authority and must be operated safely, regardless of their size or location. Similarly there is no necessary correlation between the age of aircraft and their safety: what is important is that the aircraft are maintained properly. Commercial aircraft must be maintained to an approved maintenance programme by qualified engineers working for an approved maintenance organisation. The age of the aircraft will be taken into account in determining the maintenance programme. Similar arrangements apply to aircraft with a private category certificate of airworthiness.

Second Homes

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what levels of payment have been made to local authorities to recompense them through the premium support grant for the 50 per cent. council tax discount given to (a) second homes and (b) other domestic properties entitled to the 50 per cent. discount, in each of the last three years; [110203]

(2) what recompense has been paid to local authorities through the revenue support grant for the loss of income due to the 50 per cent. council tax discount for second homes, (a) by district and (b) by county and unitary authority in each of the last three years. [110205]

Ms Beverley Hughes: There is no distinct element of the Revenue Support Grant to recompense authorities for council tax discounts they are required to give. However, the definition of the tax base used in the calculation of Revenue Support Grant normally has the effect of increasing an authority's grant by an amount broadly similar to the discounts. It will not be exactly the same as the discounts because the taxbase is based on information available before the year in which the discounts are given, the tax base is based on 100 per cent. collection, and the grant calculation uses a national tax rate rather than the actual tax rate.

The Department does not have information distinguishing 50 per cent. discounts on second homes and 50 per cent. discounts for other reasons. We will place tables in the Library shortly based on all 50 per cent. discounts.

Radiation Protection

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the implementation of the European Council Directive 96/29/Euratom on radiation protection, with particular reference to the treatment of nuclear waste. [110248]

Mr. Meacher: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) on 14 February 2000, Official Report, columns 356–57W.

Single Vehicle Approval Tests

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans to introduce enhanced single vehicle approval tests. [110247]

Mr. Hill: Changes to the single vehicle approval scheme were the subject of public consultation last October, when it was envisaged that an enhanced test would be introduced this March for certain classes of passenger car and light goods vehicle. In the light of responses, including observations from the European Commission, we are reviewing the proposals. This will mean the existing arrangements will continue for the time being. A further announcement will be made as soon as we have decided how best to proceed.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many 18 to 24-year-olds have entered the New Deal in Shrewsbury and Atcham; what the destinations of the leavers were; and if he will make a statement. [105525]

Ms Jowell: In the period to the end of October 1999, 299 young people started the New Deal in Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency. Of the 173 leavers, 78 found unsubsidised employment, 21 transferred to other benefits, and 20 left for other known destinations. Many of the remaining 54 who left for unknown destinations will have found jobs without telling the Employment Service. We are on target to meet our manifesto commitment of 250,000 young people into jobs and have just published a 10 point plan to build on the success of the New Deal.

School Sports

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to introduce a school sports strategy to coincide with the forthcoming Government sports strategy. [107156]

Jacqui Smith: I am working very closely with the Minister for Sport to develop the education strand of the Government's Sports Strategy.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of children can swim 25 metres at the end of Key Stage 2; and if he will make a statement. [107159]

Jacqui Smith: In November, Ofsted conducted a focused survey on swimming in the primary school and is currently analysing the data which will provide an up-to-date figure on what percentage of children can swim 25 metres at the end of Key Stage 2.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the relationship between physical exercise and standards of literacy and numeracy. [107172]

Jacqui Smith: No research has been commissioned on the relationship between physical exercise and standards of literacy and numeracy. Ofsted has published an evaluation of the first year of implementation of the National Literacy Strategy and is currently evaluating the first year of the National Numeracy Strategy.

Individual Learning Accounts

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if students undertaking a fourth year at law school will be eligible for an individual learning account from September 2000. [108128]

Mr. Wicks: Anyone aged 19 and over can open a learning account. A package of incentives is available for people in work, or seeking to return to work, who do not benefit from the public provision provided to unemployed people and people in full-time education (e.g. women seeking to return to the labour market, younger workers with low skills or few qualifications and self-employed people). The incentives will help these people to invest in their own learning and take charge of their career and futures.

New Deal (Regional Variations)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment the Government have made of regional variations in the performance of the New Deal; and if he will make a statement. [109280]

Ms Jowell: The overall success of the New Deal does not mean that variations in levels of performance will not arise. This is inevitable in the short run and reflects the range in the client group and labour market conditions in some localities. We are always striving to improve performance and build on success. We have a strategy in place for continuous improvement which enables us to monitor performance against a range of measures and develop plans for improvement. By involving locally based partnerships in delivery we are ensuring that the programme design is relevant to local needs and will continue to offer unemployed people the best route into employment.

Section 28

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what reports he has received indicating that section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988 has prevented teachers from dealing with incidents of bullying in schools. [109369]

Jacqui Smith: Section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988 has never applied to schools, but it is clear that it has had a significant effect on teachers' perceptions.

In research carried out in over 300 secondary schools by the Health and Education Research Unit at the Institute of Education, University of London (Playing it Safe, November 1997) some 44 per cent. of the teachers responding said that section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988 had made it more difficult for them to address the needs of gay, lesbian and bisexual pupils. The report noted that > "teachers often referred to confusion about promoting homosexuality and how this had caused them to be reluctant to touch upon certain issues."

More recently, Dr. Debbie Epstein from the Institute of Education, University of London, who has conducted confidential interviews with teachers as part of her research into sex education in schools (Schooling Sexualities, Open University Press 1998), concluded that > "Section 28 has created an atmosphere of confusion and fear. Because teachers do not know how to comply with it, they err on the side of caution. As a result, they choose to ignore, wherever possible, homophobic harassment and bullying. This creates a permissive environment in which pupils believe they can, and do, get away with it."

Citizenship Studies

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in respect of the inclusion in the National Curriculum of citizenship studies in schools, what consultation took place, and with whom, prior to the adoption of such studies; to whom and when draft proposals were sent for comment; what specific requirement is made in respect of information and instruction concerning the European Union and consequential citizenship obligations; what material for use of (i) teachers and (ii) pupils in respect of the European Union is made available through departmental channels; and if it includes a package entitled, Euroquest. [109435]

Jacqui Smith: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority consulted widely on proposals for a framework for Citizenship and Personal, Social and Health Education between 13 May and 23 July 1999 as part of broader proposals for the review of the National Curriculum.

The proposals were sent to all schools. In addition, 4,000 copies were sent to other major organisations including central educational organisations, subject organisations, professional associations, Local Education Authorities and faith groups. In all, nearly 80,000 copies of the proposals for Citizenship and Personal, Social and Health Education and over 50,000 copies of the full consultation materials were distributed. In addition to the paper consultation, MORI held discussions with a number of focus groups of teachers, parents and governors.

Questionnaires were returned by nearly 2,500 people and organisations—including over 600 schools, nearly 1,000 teachers, almost 200 parents, nearly 100 school governors, 90 Local Education Authorities, and over 20 employers. Details of the questionnaire responses and the responses of the focus groups were published in September. They showed a high degree of support for the proposals.

The Citizenship programme for secondary schools—to take effect, subject to Parliamentary approval, at the start of the school year 2002—provides for pupils to be taught about: the world as a global community, and the political, economic, environmental and social implications of this, and the role of the European Union, the Commonwealth and the United Nations at Key Stage 3 and the United Kingdom's relations in Europe, including the European Union, and the relations with the Commonwealth and the United Nations at Key Stage 4.

During the UK Presidency of the European Community from January to June 1998, an information and resource pack for schools, Partners in Europe, was produced and distributed by the four education departments in the UK, in response to requests from teachers to update materials that were already in use in the classroom. The pack offers case studies of how schools have incorporated the European dimension into work which meets the requirements of the National Curriculum. It was produced in conjunction with the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority and the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges. The material is available from the Department's website. It is designed for use by teachers and its use is voluntary.

I understand that the Euroquest booklet was funded entirely by the Representation of the European Commission in the UK, and that the content of the booklet was produced in collaboration with a number of UK educationalists and the Central Bureau for International Education and Training. One million copies were produced and approximately half have been distributed to schools on request.

Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Systems

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance he gives to local education authorities on the use on their estates in air conditioning and refrigeration systems of substances which contribute to global warming. [109332]

Jacqui Smith: The Department gives advice in Building Bulletin 83, "Schools Environmental Assessment Method (SEAM)". This recommends specifying materials which are CFC and HCFC free, and do not use CFCs or HCFCs in their manufacture, for refrigerants in refrigerators, freezers and air conditioning systems.

Unemployment

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of all those unemployed in (a) rural and (b) urban areas were classified as long-term unemployed (i) at the latest date for which figures are available and (ii) 10 years previously. [109752]

Ms Jowell: In England, in December 1999, 18.4 per cent. of claimant unemployed people in rural areas and 25.1 per cent. of claimant unemployed people in urban areas had been claiming for more than a year. The figures for December 1989 are 17.8 per cent. and 26.7 per cent. respectively.

Minimum Nutritional Standards

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the education authorities that (a) voluntarily adhere and (b) do not adhere to the Minimum Nutritional Standards. [109763]

Jacqui Smith: Regulations to be laid before Parliament in due course, setting out compulsory nutritional standards for school lunches in England, will begin to take effect from September 2000. In the meantime, local education authorities and schools are free to set their own local specification and guidelines.

Milk (Schools)

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the education authorities that provide milk to school children (a) free and (b) at cost. [109762]

Jacqui Smith: All education authorities decide for themselves whether or not to provide any milk for school children. Where they do so, they must, by law, provide milk free to children whose parents receive the specified benefits. Authorities must charge for all other milk they provide. We do not collect statistical information on which education authorities provide free or at cost milk.

Remploy

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the subsidy to Remploy (a) in cash terms and (b) at December 1999 prices, in each year since 1980. [109597]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 14 February 2000]: This table shows the Government's subsidy to Remploy, in both cash and real terms, since 1980.

£ million

Year	Cash	December 1999 prices
1980–81	42.123	101.605

Bullying

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on tackling bullying in schools. [109925]

Jacqui Smith: We attach a high priority to helping schools prevent and combat bullying in whatever form—be it racial, or as a result of a child's appearance, behaviour or special educational needs, or related to sexual orientation. We want all schools to treat bullying seriously and deal with it promptly and firmly whenever and wherever it occurs. Since September 1999, schools have been required by law to have an anti-bullying policy. Ofsted's Framework for Inspection requires inspecting teams to evaluate the measures taken by the school to prevent and eliminate bullying.

We will be launching a further anti-bullying initiative shortly. This will comprise a public information film to raise awareness of the problem; a video for schools on tackling bullying aimed at young people, on the theme 'Don't Suffer in Silence'; and a revised and updated anti-bullying pack for schools on the same theme setting out, among other things, strategies for combating bullying including racist bullying.

Education SSA (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each year from 1992 to date, the standard spending assessment increase in education allocated to Shropshire County Council; and if he will make a statement. [110129]

Ms Estelle Morris: The data requested are given in the table. These figures have not been adjusted for any changes in local authority function over the years and are not directly comparable due to the effects of local government reorganisation.

Year	SSA total	Cash change £ million	Percentage change
1990–91	128.2	—	—
1991–92	145.5	17.3	13.5
1992–93	154.0	8.5	5.9
1993–94[1]	134.0	—	—

1998–99[3]	95.4	—	—
1999–2000	100.8	5.4	5.7
2000–01	105.4	4.6	4.5

[1] From 1993–94 Education Spending Assessment figures are affected by the Creation of the Further Education Funding Council and the subsequent reduction in post-16 funding
[2] In 1997–98 £527 million was removed from Education Standard Spending for the Nursery Voucher Scheme
[3] In 1998–99 Shropshire was affected by Local Government Reorganisation

Assisted Places Scheme (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each year the cost of the assisted places scheme in Shropshire; and if he will make a statement. [110132]

Ms Estelle Morris: The cost to the Exchequer of the assisted places scheme at the seven participating schools in the area of the present Shropshire local education authority in the current academic year 1999–2000 is estimated to be £535,600. Information relating to previous years is not readily available and, in any case, would not be directly comparable in view of the boundary changes brought about by the recent local government re-organisation. The assisted places scheme is being phased out and no new assisted places are now available.

Kinloss School, Worcestershire

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the timescale for the publication of the Social Services Inspectorate report into Kinloss School in Worcestershire. [110304]

Jacqui Smith: On 3 February 2000 my Department authorised the Worcestershire County Inspectorate to release copies of the report. Copies will be sent to all local authorities that have placed children in the school and to those people, often parents of present or former pupils, who have contacted the Department or the Inspectorate about the report. I understand that the Inspectorate is finalising its distribution arrangements, and expects copies to issue around one week from now.

My Department has also given the school notice of withdrawal of its approval under section 347 of the Education Act 1996. This means that the school has until June 2000 to remedy the failings identified in the report, or it will lose its approval. The school has submitted its plans for addressing these issues, and we will arrange for inspection at the appropriate time.

Education Funding (Newcastle)

Mr. Doug Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set aside the passporting test and review his decision to reduce the education element in Government grant made available to Newcastle City Council. [110185]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is vitally important that the increased funding we have made available reaches education. We will therefore continue to urge local authorities to passport the increase in education standard spending assessment to education budgets. My right hon. Friend will take decisions on the release of the £50 million special grant to support school budgets in due course.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress he has made on reforming teachers' pay. [109246]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Green Paper "Teachers: meeting the challenge of change" (Cm 4161) published in December 1998 outlined our proposals for reform of the teaching profession. Following extensive consultation with representatives of teachers and teachers' employers on the proposals, the Department for Education and Employment submitted detailed evidence on pay reform to the School Teachers' Review Body (STRB) last September. This evidence contained revised proposals on the pay structure and responded to issues raised through the consultation process.

The STRB's Ninth Report was published on 1 February. The report is a major endorsement for the Government's reforms, and the Government have accepted the recommendations with only minor modifications. Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of the Houses of Parliament. The Secretary of State has initiated consultation with key stakeholders including teacher unions and employers on the STRB's recommendations. The consultation ends on 7 March.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the National Union of Teachers representations on the Government's proposals on performance-related pay. [109570]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government's proposals for teachers' pay reform were initially outlined in the Green Paper, "Teachers: meeting the challenge of change" (Cm 4164). We have discussed our proposals extensively with all teacher unions and other key stakeholders. The NUT's evidence to the independent pay body, the School Teachers' Review Body (STRB), was considered alongside that of other statutory consultees when the STRB drew up their recommendations, which were published on 1 February 2000. Ministers and officials will continue to meet unions and other consultees as part of the consultation on the STRB recommendations. The consultation ends on 7 March.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Charity Premises

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Solicitor-General on how many occasions charges have been brought against managers of charity premises under section 8 of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971; and if he will make a statement. [109890]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service measures its performance and case-loads by the number of defendants, the type of proceedings and the outcome of cases. It does not keep a central record of specific charges brought by the police. That information is held on individual case files and could be recovered only by examining every case file in each CPS office. The cost of such an exercise would be prohibitive.

Gardening Leave

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Solicitor-General how many staff employed by the Law Officers' Departments are currently on gardening leave. [110342]

The Solicitor-General: None. I take "gardening leave" to mean paid absence from work that is not annual leave, sickness absence, suspension or any category of special leave as defined in my Departments' personnel management manuals.

DEFENCE

Flying Hours

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many hours flying, other than during operations, (a) the Army Air Corps and (b) the Fleet Air Arm have flown in each of the last five years. [108656]

Mr. Spellar: For statistical purposes, the number of flying hours is collated by financial year (FY). Figures for the last five complete years and for the current year are as set out. The figures for the current FY are up to and including the end of October 1999.

Financial year	Total Army Air Corps hours [1]	Total Fleet Air Arm hours [1]
1994–95	66,035	17,958
1995–96	62,564	18,596
1996–97	62,601	16,509
1997–98	64,354	17,958
1998–99	67,465	15,835
1999–2000[2]	37,568	11,136

Antonov 124–100

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Antonov 124–100 has the capacity to lift two main battle tanks simultaneously. [103103]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 20 December 1999]: On the basis of information publicly available, we are not aware that the Antonov 124–100, nor any of the other aircraft under consideration to fulfil our Short Term Strategic Airlift requirement, are currently capable of carrying safely two Challenger 2 Main Battle Tanks. We have not, however, sought detailed information on this point since we have no such requirement.

Chinook Crash, Mull of Kintyre

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence underlies his conclusion that RAF Chinook ZD 576 was travelling too low and too fast towards the Mull of Kintyre on 2 June 1994. [108750]

Mr. Spellar: In reaching their conclusions concerning the height and speed of the aircraft just prior to the accident the RAF Board of Inquiry considered data extracted from navigation equipment on the aircraft, the AAIB technical report and information and analysis provided by Boeing Helicopters and the Defence Research Agency, Bedford. Evidence from witness statements was also taken into account.

Bowman Project

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the problems being experienced with the new Bowman Communication System; and what assessment he has made of their impact on the effectiveness and safety of the United Kingdom's armed forces. [109037]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Walton (Mr. Kilfoyle), the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence, on 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 468W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mrs. Gilroy).

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the reasons for delay to the original in service date of the BOWMAN digital battlefield communications system; and if he will make a statement. [109965]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 14 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John F. Howe to Mr. Paul Keetch, dated 15 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the reasons for delay to the in service date of the BOWMAN communication system. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

As part of our normal process, we assess the reasons for any programme slippage. Accumulated slippage from BOWMAN's original in service date of December 1995 can be attributed to a combination of technical difficulties, MOD budgetary constraints, the need to reconsider the BOWMAN procurement strategy following changes in industry, a redefinition of the in service date to reflect the completion of field trials and a further redefinition of the programme in order to reduce cost growth and risk.

On 21 December 1999, the then US of S, in a Parliamentary answer to Linda Gilroy MP, provided a progress report, which noted the difficulties being experienced by ARCHER Communications Systems Ltd. Subject to continued good progress by ARCHER on their improvement programme, our aim would be to seek approval to proceed later this year following which we would expect to place an implementation (manufacture) contract by the end of the year. Prior to this we cannot set a revised in service date but would expect it to be in late 2003 or early 2004.

Armed Forces Pay Review

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the report and recommendations of the Armed Forces Pay Review Body. [110524]

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the annual armed forces pay review will be announced; and if he will make a statement. [109050]

Mr. Hoon: The 2000 Report of the Armed Forces Pay Review Body has been published today. Copies are available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House. I am grateful to the Chairman and members of the Review Body for the work they have put into them.

In the Comprehensive Spending Review the Government made it clear that public sector pay settlements would need to be fair and affordable and support budgeted public service improvements. In making their recommendations the AFPRB have taken into account a number of considerations, including the recruitment, retention and motivation of the armed forces and have recommended an increase in basic military salary of 3.3 per cent. for all ranks, with the exception of Privates, Lance Corporals, Captains and Lieutenants who should receive 3.8 per cent. An increase of 1 per cent. in X Factor is also recommended. The X Factor which has not been reviewed for five years, is paid as an addition to basic pay and reflects the differences between conditions of service experienced by members of the armed forces over a full career and conditions in civilian life, which cannot be taken directly into account in assessing pay comparability. The graduate starting salary is set at £18,126 p.a. There are also some increases in Additional Pay (e.g. Flying Pay, Submarine Pay and Hydrographic Pay) and in Longer Separated Service Allowance/Bonus.

These recommendations will fully support the armed forces strategic personnel policies, in particular in relation to recruitment and retention. The additional cost to the Defence Budget will be £260 million. This will be met within existing Departmental Expenditure Limits.

The AFPRB's recommendations are to be accepted in full, with implementation effective from 1 April 2000.

Defence Bills Agency

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Bills Agency for the financial year 2000–01. [110523]

Dr. Moonie: Targets have been set for the Defence Bills Agency for the financial year 2000–01 in accordance with the Agency's Service Level Agreement with the Ministry of Defence. The targets build on the high standards of service achieved by the Agency since its formation in January 1996 and are as follows:

1. By the end of the financial year 2000–01, to reduce transaction costs by a further 7.3 per cent. for bills and a further 2.4 per cent. for invoices over the targets set for 1999–2000. This represents a further step towards achieving overall reductions in transaction costs of between 15 per cent. and 20 per cent. by March 2004 as required under the terms of the Service Level Agreement.
2. To produce financial and accounting information to the ISO 9001/3 quality standard and to the times set out in the Service Level Agreement.
3. To pay 100 per cent. of correctly-presented bills within 11 calendar days of receipt.
4. To raise 95 per cent. of invoices within four working days of receipt of a correctly-presented claimable document.
5. Within the permitted tolerances, to meet the performance targets prescribed in the Service Level Agreement.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of each of the reserves and auxiliary forces, distinguishing between Regular Reserves and Volunteer Reserves and identifying separately the cost of the (a) Territorial Army, (b) Royal Naval Reserve, (c) Royal Marine Reserve, (d) Royal Air Force Volunteer Reserves and (e) Royal Auxiliary Air Force, and specifying the constituent parts of each figure in the last year for which figures are available. [108907]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 9 February 2000]: The information is not available in the format requested and cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost. I can, however, identify total expenditure by Service during 1998–99 as follows:

	£ million
Navy Reserve Forces Pay	6.646
Navy Bounty Payments	3.025
Army Reserve Forces Pay	94.908
Army Bounty Payments	30.780
Royal Air Force Reserve Pay	6.993
Royal Air Force Bounty Payments	0.057
Total	142.409

TRACER/FSCS System

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreement has been reached with the USA regarding funding for the development of the TRACER/FSCS system. [109858]

Dr. Moonie: The UK and USA have entered into a joint Project Definition phase for TRACER/FSCS under the terms of a Memorandum of Understanding. This commits both nations to an equal share of the cost of this stage of the project. There is no commitment, by either nation, to proceed beyond the Project Definition phase and, therefore, no agreement to fund any further development beyond this stage. The UK contribution to the cost of the collaborative Project Definition contracts for TRACER is some £90 million.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what staff requirement is planned to be met by the development of the TRACER/FSCS system. [109856]

Dr. Moonie: The Tactical Reconnaissance Armoured Combat Equipment Requirement (TRACER) is intended to meet the Army's requirement for a manned reconnaissance vehicle as stated in Staff Requirement (Land) 4061. The requirement forms the UK part of the UK/US collaborative project for a future reconnaissance vehicle, the US part being known as the Future Scout Cavalry System (FSCS).

Accommodation (Royal Navy)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) refurbishment (b) rebuild and (c) new build projects are planned to modernise accommodation provided for junior ratings in each of Her Majesty's Royal Naval Shore Establishments; in what year they were first approved; what the programmed dates for completion were at the time of approval; and what the current expected dates of completion are. [109474]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: Following is the approved programme of current and planned projects for junior ratings single living accommodation:

Establishment	Type	Year approved	Initial anticipated completion	Current anticipated completion
Royal Naval Air Station Yeovilton	New Build	1997	March 1999	March 2000
HMS Dryad	New Build	1998	November 1999	March 2000
Royal Marines Bickley	New Build	1998	July 2001	July 2001
Royal Naval Air Station Culdrose:
Phase 1	Refurbishment	[1]1999	August 2000	September 2000
Phase 2			February 2003	February 2003
Phase 3			June 2005	June 2005
Royal Marines Chivenor	New Build	2000	June 2001	June 2001

MESAR2

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost is of evaluating MESAR2 in White Sands, USA; how much of the cost will be borne by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [109801]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John. F. Howe to Mr. Michael Hancock, dated 15 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost of evaluating MESAR2 in White Sands, USA and how much of the cost will be borne by his department. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The estimated cost to the UK of evaluating MESAR2 at the White Sands Missile Range is £1,691,000 (excluding VAT). The range will be provided to us on a cost-free basis but there will undoubtedly be costs incurred by the US of which we have no visibility.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost so far of DERA's evaluation of MESAR2; and if he will make a statement. [109803]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John F. Howe to Mr. Michael Hancock, dated 15 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence on what has been the cost so far of DERA's evaluation of MESAR2. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

To date the costs attributable to the DERA evaluation of MESAR2 are £6,395,700 (excluding VAT), which is part of the overall figure of £18,074,320 spent by MOD on MESAR2 so far.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money his Department has spent so far on MESAR2 and over what timescale; and if he will make a statement. [109802]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter for John F. Howe to Mr. Michael Hancock, dated 15 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence on how much money his Department has spent on MESAR2 and over what timescale. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The Department has spent £18,074,320 (excluding VAT) on MESAR2. This spend has been incurred over the period August 1995 to date.

RAF Neatishead

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of RAF Neatishead. [109558]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 28 January 2000, Official Report, column 382W.

Gulf Veterans

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the letter from the Minister of State for the Armed Forces to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) of 27 January 2000, concerning Gulf veterans, for what reasons he has been unable to obtain adequate material from Canada on depleted uranium testing work; and what further steps he plans to take to obtain adequate material. [110071]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The MOD has repeatedly stated that we are keen to see the evidence from the independent tests carried out in Canada and the US that claim UK veterans were exposed to unusually high levels of DU during the Gulf conflict. We have urged all the scientists involved in testing UK veterans to share their full results with us and the scientific community. We have also repeated our request for details of the work during meetings with, and when writing to,

Dr. Durakovic, Dr. Sharma and veterans' representatives. Yet in spite of our requests we have still not seen any robust scientific data justifying the claims.

The MOD will continue to make requests for robust scientific evidence to support the claims and urges all those involved in these independent tests to make the positive step to provide the evidence so that we can move forward on a scientific basis. In the meantime, we have offered to test the UK veterans who were involved with these independent tests. A draft protocol, under which the testing would take place, is currently being considered by veterans' representatives. We hope that they will soon agree to co-operate in such testing.

SONAR 2087

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the timetable for a decision on SONAR 2087. [109390]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 14 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John F. Howe to Ms Rachel Squire, dated 15 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the timetable for a decision on Sonar 2087. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Two companies, Thomson Marconi Sonar Ltd and Babcock Defence Systems Ltd, are currently competing for the Full Development, Production and Support contract for Sonar 2087. We expect to make a decision around the turn of the year and to place a contract in spring 2001.

QARNNS

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on plans to alter the current status of Queen Alexandra's Royal Naval Nursing Service; and how this will affect personnel serving within QARNNS. [110522]

Mr. Spellar: Following a comprehensive review, the Queen Alexandra's Royal Naval Nursing Service (QARNNS) will be incorporated into the Royal Navy (RN) from 1 April 2000 as the Service's specialised nursing branch. QARNNS is currently a separate Service within the Naval Service.

This will bring the status of QARNNS into line with that of the Army and RAF. It will also mean that QARNNS personnel commissioned or engaged into the RN from 1 April 2000 will be available for reserve service once they leave the RN. QARNNS ratings currently have no liability for reserve service.

The terms and conditions of service of existing QARNNS personnel will be unaffected by this change.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those previously planned meetings, and their subject, between his Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109901]

Mr. Hoon: There have been no cancellations of previously planned meetings between officials of the Ministry of Defence and its Austrian counterpart since the formation of the new Austrian government.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nigeria

17. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit Nigeria to discuss consular relations. [108547]

Mr. Hain: I visited Nigeria from 9–12 January and raised the case of my hon. Friend's constituent, Mr. Mark Davey, with the Nigerian Foreign Minister.

Intergovernmental Conference

18. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy at the next intergovernmental conference to resist any extension of qualified majority voting and new EU competences. [108548]

Mr. Vaz: The Government have made it clear that they will adopt a pragmatic approach to the extension of qualified majority voting. Where it is in Britain's interests to support QMV, we shall do so. But where key national interests are at stake, we shall insist on retaining unanimity. As for competencies, The Helsinki European Council agreed that the ICG would concentrate on reforming the institutions, not giving them new tasks to perform.

EU Enlargement

19. Mr. Andy King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the prospects for the enlargement of the European Union. [108549]

32. Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the prospects for the enlargement of the European Union. [108562]

37. Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the prospects for the enlargement of the European Union. [108568]

Mr. Vaz: Today, the EU is launching accession negotiations with six applicant countries. They will join six countries already in negotiation. We want applicant countries to accede to the European Union as soon as they are able to meet the obligations of membership. But the EU must prepare for enlargement too. This is why, yesterday, the member states of the European Union convened an intergovernmental conference to make the institutional changes necessary for enlargement.

Middle East

20. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the status of the middle east peace process. [108550]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave earlier in the House today to my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, North (Mr. Savidge).

Nepal

21. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to visit Nepal to discuss strengthening relations with the UK; and if he will make a statement. [108551]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has been invited to visit Nepal and this is currently under active consideration.

Pakistan

22. Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards restoring a democratic Government in Pakistan. [108552]

Mr. Hain: We continue to press General Musharraf for progress towards the restoration of democracy and in January, General Sir Charles Guthrie, Chief of the Defence Staff, took a strong message seeking a route-map to achieve this.

Kosovo

23. Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with other European Governments about additional funds for the reconstruction of Kosovo. [108553]

Mr. Vaz: The UK is in frequent contact with European partners on Kosovo reconstruction. The EU pledged 137 million euros for Kosovo reconstruction in 1999, and has agreed to provide 310 million euros this year.

Therefore, we welcomed the decision of yesterday's General Affairs Council to provide urgently 35 million euros in emergency support for the budget of the UN Mission in Kosovo.

Reconstruction is not just about economics. Kosovo's institutions need our help. The FCO is to give an additional £150,000 this month, via the OSCE Mission and the Council of Europe in Pristina, in particular to provide practical support to Kosovo's judiciary.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the security situation in Kosovska Mitrovica. [109714]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Violence erupted last week in Mitrovica, following an attack on a UNHCR bus in which two ethnic Serbs died. Reprisals led to deaths and injuries among Serbs and Albanians in the local population and injuries to troops in the NATO-led Kosovo force (KFOR). Following action by KFOR and the leaders of the United Nations Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK), including the imposition of a curfew, the situation appears to have been brought under control.

Mitrovica is a particularly acute example of the continuing tensions between the communities in Kosovo. It underlines the importance of international efforts to promote reconciliation and to condemn and act against violence and intimidation. It also emphasises the importance of both Serbs and Albanians working with UNMIK in the new joint administrative structures. The Kosovo Albanians are already participating. We hope the Kosovo Serbs will soon join them.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the political and security situation in (a) Kosovo, (b) Serbia, (c) Montenegro and (d) Vojvodina. [109712]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The political and security situation in Serbia clearly is desperate. The ruling coalition continues to intensify its repression of the independent media and of the democratic political parties through administrative and judicial harassment. The recent murders of Zeljko Raznatovic ("Arkan") and Federal Defence Minister Pavle Bulatovic—just the latest in a string of assassinations of high-ranking politicians, officials and businesspeople—show that violence has become endemic in public life.

Vojvodina, as part of Serbia, is suffering from the same degradation of democratic freedoms and public security.

In Montenegro, the government of President Djukanovic has made real efforts to introduce democratic reforms and promote the ethnic and social cohesion of Montenegro. However, Milosevic is undermining the economy and therefore the stability of Montenegro by blocking trade and financial transactions between Montenegro and Serbia. He and his supporters are also attempting to intimidate the legitimate government of Montenegro through the formation and deployment of special military units loyal to Belgrade.

In Kosovo, the security situation has improved since the arrival of the NATO-led Kosovo Force (KFOR) in June 1999. The number of crimes is decreasing. However, the recent upsurge in ethnic violence in the divided city of Mitrovica underlines the fragility of the security situation. KFOR and the UN Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) are taking measures to tackle extremist behaviour by Kosovo Albanians and Serbs and to maintain peace and security in Mitrovica.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Human Rights Watch report on civilian casualties in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [109719]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: We welcome the acknowledgement in the Human Rights Watch Report of "gross violations of international humanitarian law" by the forces of the Milosevic regime. This puts into proper perspective its comments on the consequences of NATO action. NATO intervened, when all other options had been exhausted, to avert a humanitarian catastrophe. The great lengths to which NATO went to minimise civilian casualties are in stark contrast to the carefully planned and brutally executed terror perpetrated by FRY and Serbian forces in Kosovo.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the economic impact of the Kosovo crisis on (a) Albania, (b) Bosnia-Herzegovina, (c) Bulgaria, (d) Croatia, (e) FYR Macedonia and (f) Romania. [109716]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The international community is committed to helping the countries of south-eastern Europe raise their level of economic prosperity, to bring them into the European mainstream. The International Monetary Fund estimate the Kosovo crisis might have reduced regional GDP by up to 2 per cent. in 1999. However, provided governments of the region push ahead with key economic reforms, the medium-term prospects are bright.

Helsinki Summit

24. Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent contacts he has had with the representatives of the six EU applicant countries announced at the Helsinki EU summit. [108554]

Mr. Vaz: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave earlier in the House today to my hon. Friend the Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Helen Jackson).

Drugs

25. Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to improve international co-operation in combating the global drugs trade. [108555]

Mr. Battle: The FCO coordinates the international elements of the UK's national drugs strategy, in close cooperation with Keith Hellawell, the UK Anti-Drugs Coordinator. Our efforts are targeted, with other Government Departments, on reducing the production and trafficking of class A drugs to the UK and Europe; and on improving the effectiveness of other countries, including the EU and UN, in dealing with the global threat from drugs and associated crime.

Angola

26. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of action taken against those who break the United Nations sanction against UNITA in Angola. [108556]

30. Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of enforcement action against those who break the United Nations sanctions against UNITA in Angola. [108560]

Mr. Hain: I am extremely concerned by continuing reports of breaches of UN sanctions against UNITA. It is vital that would-be sanctions busters are forced to recognise that the international community will not tolerate their activities. The UK fully implements these sanctions and takes its enforcement responsibilities very seriously.

We strongly support the efforts of Ambassador Fowler, Chair of the UN Angola Sanctions Committee and the Expert Panels that have been set up to investigate how these sanctions can be implemented more effectively. We have contributed $200,000 to fund their work. As I told the House on 18 January, I have referred to the Sanctions Committee the details of three individuals I believe to be breaching sanctions. We look forward to the forthcoming report of the Panels and their recommendations on how the sanctions can be made to bite.

The UK regularly discusses better sanctions with fellow Governments on a bilateral basis, urging them to do all that they can to fully implement the measures and take prompt and effective action in response to allegations of breaches. When I visited South Africa in January, I agreed with Deputy Foreign Minister Pahad, who shares my concerns, that we would work very closely together on this issue over the next few critical months.

Arms Sales

27. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy in relation to arms sales to other countries. [108557]

31. Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application of his ethical criteria to decisions on arms sales. [108561]

Mr. Hain: This Government have introduced fundamental changes in the UK's approach to arms exports, while maintaining our commitment to a strong defence industry. We introduced tough new criteria for export licensing. We will not issue a licence if there is a clearly identifiable risk the equipment will be used for internal repression or external aggression. We banned the export of equipment that has been used in torture. We worked for, and got, agreement on an EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports which is recognised by other member states as the touchstone of EU policy on arms exports. We have started publishing Annual Reports—deliberately inviting scrutiny.

Malta

28. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Malta. [108558]

Mr. Vaz: Our relations with Malta are very strong. We continue to build on our common traditions and shared history with close links across a wide range of issues. We are delighted that negotiations for Malta's EU accession were formally launched today.

Treaty of Nice

29. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the European Commission to discuss the draft text for the proposed treaty of Nice. [108559]

Mr. Vaz: There is no draft text for a possible future treaty of Nice. Last month's Commission Opinion is merely a contribution to the IGC negotiations. Treaty change is for member states.

Austria

33. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his EU colleagues about the new Government in Austria. [108563]

Mr. Vaz: The Portuguese Prime Minister's statement on 31 January, based on consultations with his colleagues in the thirteen other member states of the EU was a signal of our joint concern about developments in Austria. I discussed developments directly with my EU colleagues including the Austrian Foreign Minister at the General Affairs Council meeting in Brussels on 8 February.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Austrian Embassy in respect of the formation of the new coalition Government in Vienna; and if he will make a statement. [109125]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 9 February 2000]: My officials have been in touch with the Austrian Embassy in London and the Austrians are fully aware of Her Majesty's Governments reaction to the inclusion of the Freedom Party in the new Austrian Government.

I have made very clear over the last two weeks my deep concern and distaste at the inclusion in the Austrian Government of a far-right party which appeals to xenophobia. I have welcomed the fact that the new Austrian Government has committed itself to abiding by the common obligations and values of EU membership, to combating all forms of discrimination, and to dealing constructively with the country's Nazi past. But we will be watching them closely and judging them on whether they fulfil the commitments they have made.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will recall the British Ambassador to Austria. [109816]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: We have no plans to recall the British Ambassador to Vienna.

Human Rights

34. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the relationship between the proposed charter of fundamental rights of the European Union and the European convention on human rights. [108564]

Mr. Vaz: The Charter of Rights should complement the ECHR. The Conclusions of the June 1999 Cologne European Council state that the Charter

"should contain the fundamental rights and freedoms as well as basic procedural rights" guaranteed by the ECHR. I therefore welcome the attendance of Council of Europe representatives at all meetings of the Charter Convention.

Chile

35. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British relations with Chile. [108566]

Mr. Battle: We have kept closely in touch with the Chilean Government since Senator Pinochet's arrest in October 1998. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has met the Chilean Foreign Minister three times, most recently in New York last September. These meetings have all been open and friendly.

Iraq

36. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of sanctions against Iraq on the number of deaths of children in Iraq. [108567]

Mr. Hain: We are very concerned about reports of increased child mortality rates in Iraq. We continue to support efforts to target the humanitarian effort there towards the most vulnerable who continue to suffer because of the policies of the Iraqi Government. If Iraq had prioritised properly the vast amounts of humanitarian assistance on offer, the suffering of the Iraqi people would have been hugely reduced.

India and Bangladesh

38. Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Her Majesty's Government's visa policy in India and Bangladesh following the recent visit by the Minister of State. [108569]

Mr. Vaz: Our entry clearance policy is designed to facilitate travel to the UK by visitors who qualify under the Immigration Rules, and to prevent the entry of those who do not.

I was impressed by the commitment of our staff in the Posts I visited to offer a fair, fast and firm visa service.

During my visit I announced the launch of a number of feasibility studies to examine how we might be able to improve the services we offer to people living a long way from our visa-issuing centres.

Restraints (Exports)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the report from the US Customs and Excise Service on the availability for sale within the USA of (a) hand cuffs, (b) over-size hand cuffs and (c) leg irons, manufactured by Hiatts of Birmingham, UK. [109482]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 11 February 2000]: During the course of our investigations into the allegations in The Independent newspaper on 16 November that UK-made leg-irons were on sale in the US, we received assistance from US authorities. They did not, however, provide us with any written report.

I stated in a letter to the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee on 2 February that we had completed thorough investigations into the allegations but had found no evidence that there had been a breach of the ban on the export of leg-irons. As far as we have been able to establish, it appears likely that the leg-irons in question were old stock dating back to the early 1980s prior to the statement made on 28 March 1984 by the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, Official Report, columns 175–76.

We are also satisfied that the leg-irons mentioned in The Independent articles were not manufactured using oversized individual cuffs exported without a licence from the UK. Although we have no evidence to suggest that such single cuffs have ever been exported, there is a hypothetical loophole and amending legislation to extend controls to cover large individual cuffs is in preparation.

Montenegro

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received from the Montenegrin Government concerning the situation in (a) Montenegro, (b) Serbia, (c) Kosovo and (d) Sanjak. [109711]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: President Djukanovic of Montenegro visited London on 25 January. During our meeting, we discussed the situation across the whole of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Spain-Gibraltar Ferry Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last raised the establishment of a new ferry service between Spain and Gibraltar port. [109708]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: We would welcome the re-establishment of ferry links between Gibraltar and Spain. We have regularly drawn to the attention of the Spanish authorities the potential benefits of such links to Gibraltar and to the neighbouring regions of Spain, most recently following the publication of the report of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Gibraltar

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the next meeting in the Brussels process on Gibraltar will take place. [109710]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: We expect the next meeting in the Brussels Process to take place in Spain. No date has yet been fixed.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he received the expert team report on a fast patrol boat for the Royal Gibraltar Police. [109709]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The expert team reported their findings at the beginning of November. As a result of the team's recommendations, HMG and the Government of Gibraltar have agreed to co-fund the purchase of a new vessel.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in negotiations with Spain over the future of Gibraltar airport. [109707]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The subject of Gibraltar airport has been raised in discussion with the Governments of Spain and Gibraltar, but there are no negotiations taking place at present on the future of the airport.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last raised the issue of Gibraltar with the Spanish Foreign Ministry; and what was discussed. [109706]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: We regularly raise a wide range of issues related to Gibraltar with Ministers and officials of the Spanish Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which recommendations of the Fourth report from the Foreign Affairs Committee on Gibraltar, HC366, Session 1998–99, have been implemented. [109705]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The Government's response to the Foreign Affairs Committee report on Gibraltar was laid before Parliament in October 1999 (Cd 4470). The response included detailed comments on each of the report's recommendations.

South-eastern Europe (Stability Pact)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of progress in implementing the Stability Pact for South Eastern Europe. [109715]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The Stability Pact has made a useful start in refocussing attention on the political and economic needs of the region. The United Kingdom has been an active participant in the Pact, taking forward key initiatives such as the Investment Compact and the Media Charter. We are now working with partners in the Pact to prepare further initiatives which will be considered at a Regional Conference in March. This will be a useful opportunity to take stock of the progress that has been made.

Russia (Nuclear Weapons)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Russian Government about its decision to lower the first-use criterion for nuclear weapons. [110328]

Mr. Vaz: We have made no representations about the new Russian National Security Concept or Military Doctrine, neither of which make significant changes to Russian policy on the use of nuclear weapons. Russia abandoned its no first use commitment in 1993.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Russia's decision to lower the first-use criterion for nuclear weapons; and if he will make a statement on Government policy on this decision. [110327]

Mr. Vaz: Our assessment, supported by assurances from Russian officials, is that neither the new Russian National Security Concept or Military Doctrine make significant changes to Russian policy on the use of nuclear weapons. Russia abandoned its declared policy of no first use of nuclear weapons in 1993. There has therefore been no change of British policy towards Russia.

Falklands

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations (a) he and (b) the Falkland Islands' Governor have received from (i) the Falkland Islands Government and (ii) individual Falklands councillors about the withdrawal of the South Atlantic guardship. [110326]

Mr. Battle: I refer to the answer of 27 January 2000 from my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces to the hon. Member for Croydon, South

(Mr. Ottaway), Official Report, column 227W. In response to recent press speculation we have assured the Falkland Islands Government that there are no plans to withdraw the Falkland Islands Guardship or otherwise reduce naval patrols in the South Atlantic. The Governor of the Falkland Islands informed Legislative Councillors accordingly. They thanked the Governor for this assurance and expressed the view that it would not be appropriate to reduce such patrols.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Ministry of Defence about the diplomatic and security consequences of withdrawing the South Atlantic guardship. [110333]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I have had no such discussions with the Ministry of Defence. There are no plans to withdraw the Falkland Islands Guardship or otherwise reduce naval patrols in the South Atlantic.

Chechnya

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on representations to which he has been a party concerning the prosecution of the war in Chechnya. [108539]

Mr. Vaz: We have made frequent representations to the Russian government since the outbreak of hostilities in Chechnya, as has the EU. Most recently I raised the matter with Russian Foreign Minister Ivanov by telephone on 31 December 1999 and 11 January 2000.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from human rights organisations about the scale of civilian suffering in Chechnya; and if he will make a statement. [110331]

Mr. Vaz: We have received representations about the scale of civilian suffering in Chechnya from a wide number of sources, including Amnesty International, Medecins sans Frontieres and other NGOs. We have repeatedly made representations to the Russian government about the indiscriminate use of force in Chechnya and its impact on the civilian population, urging them to seek a political solution. The UK has given £1.4 million to UNHCR/ICRC appeals for humanitarian relief in Chechnya.

Other international organisations are also active. The Council of Europe Parliamentary Assembly (PACE) debated Russia's human rights performance on 27 January. It passed a recommendation calling on Russia to halt disproportionate military action, including attacks on the civilian population; for a dialogue leading to a ceasefire and a political solution; unhindered delivery of international assistance and access by Russian and international media; and a role for international organisations, including the CoE, in the search for a long-term solution. The relevant documents are available on the CoE website www.coe.fr/index/asp.

Kosovo and Chechnya (Civilian Casualties)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the level of civilian casualties in (a) Kosovo and (b) Chechnya. [110332]

Mr. Vaz: We estimate that around 10,000 Kosovo Albanians, many of them civilians, were killed by Yugoslav and Serb forces, between June 1998 and June 1999. This estimate is based on a variety of sources, including debriefing of refugees, eyewitness accounts, reports from NGOs, as well as information derived from more sensitive sources.

We are concerned over the civilian casualties in Chechnya. We have repeatedly made representations to the Russian government about the disproportionate use of force, most recently on 11 January. We have stressed to the Russians that the human cost of their military offensive in Chechnya is unacceptable and that they must pursue a political settlement. We are working with both the OSCE and Council of Europe to urge Russia to begin such a process at the earliest opportunity.

Iran

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received about the UK's relations with Iran. [108565]

Mr. Hain: We regularly receive representations about UK/Iran relations. Recently we have received representations from a number of sources including the Bahai community of the UK, the Jewish community of the UK, the All-Party Parliamentary Group on Iran, a number of British companies and a number of NGO's with an interest in Iran.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Disqualifications Bill

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the written representations he has received on the Disqualifications Bill; [109061]

(2) if he will list the persons and organisations he consulted before the Disqualifications Bill was published, giving the dates and times of oral consultations. [109060]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 8 February 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 10 February 2000 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to a question from the hon. Member for Southwark, North and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes), Official Report, column 240W.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) number and (b) country of origin of asylum seekers who arrived in the United Kingdom in (i) 1998 and (ii) 1999. [109761]

Mrs. Roche: The requested information is given in the table.

[1] Figures rounded to nearest 5

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that asylum seekers are not kept on a voucher system beyond the six-month target for processing claims. [109569]

Mrs. Roche: No. In the White Paper, "Fairer, Faster and Firmer", the Government set a target of delivering, by April 2001, most initial asylum decisions within two months and most appeals in a further four months. In respect of families with children, this target was brought forward to April 2000. For those people who remain on the support arrangements for more than six months through no fault of their own, additional payments of £50 per person will be made every six months to assist with the cost of any replacement items they may need.

Police Expenditure

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of police expenditure was represented by (a) pay, (b) pensions and (c) staff personnel costs in the last year for which figures are available. [109833]

Mr. Charles Clarke: According to information on police expenditure published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy's Police Statistics for 1998–99, police officer pay and allowances represented 54.5 per cent. of gross expenditure; support services' and other staff salaries 14.9 per cent.; pensions represented 12.1 per cent., and other staff related costs 1.0 per cent.

Police National Radio System

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has put in place to fund the planned police national radio system. [109830]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Over the next three years the police service will receive an additional £1.24 billion in central Government funding, which is a significant increase for the police at a time when the Government need to maintain firm control over public expenditure. It is a matter for each Police Authority to set its budget and for the Chief Constable to determine how to use the resources that are available. The Government have also relaxed the rules on the use of capital receipts from the sales of assets. Police Authorities now have the freedom to use all proceeds from the sales for capital investment.

Approximately 80 per cent. of the service charges for the Public Safety Radio Communications Project (PSRCP) is attributable to the cost of the core service which, in England and Wales, is to be funded centrally by means of deduction from the total police grant provision. These charges will be reduced by the £50 million subsidy I have obtained from the Capital Modernisation Fund.

The cost of services additional to the core, the so-called 'menu services', which all forces may purchase according to their own requirements accounts for the remaining 20 per cent. Separately from the PSRCP Service charge, forces will need to purchase radio terminals, control room equipment and integration service.

Police expenditure in the period 2001–02 to 2003–04 will be subject to the outcome of the 2000 Spending Review.

Speed Limits (Prosecutions)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Association of Chief Police Officers on its advice to police forces not to prosecute motorists exceeding the 30 mph speed limit until their speed reaches 35 mph; and if he will make a statement. [109548]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The enforcement of speed limits is an operational matter for chief officers of police. The Association of Chief Police Officers informed the Home Office of the guidelines on its speed enforcement policy before they were published but there were no detailed discussions about the appropriate thresholds for enforcement action. The thresholds provide guidance to police forces. The decision in any particular case will be taken by the police in the light of the individual circumstances of the offence.

Transsexuals

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further representations he has received regarding the working group on the status of transsexual people since 19 July 1999; what further meetings he and his officials have had with groups representing transsexual people; and what plans he has made for such meetings in the future. [109393]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 14 February 2000]: Since 19 July 1999, the Interdepartmental Working Group on Transsexual People has received representations from nine organisations and 83 members of the public. A number of hon. Members have also written to me about the work of the Group. In addition, the Working Group had a useful meeting last month with representatives of five organisations representing the transsexual community (the Gender and Sexuality Alliance, the Gender Trust, Gender Identity Research and Education Society, Liberty and Press for Change). Consideration will be given to further meetings as appropriate.

Criminal Convictions

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the (a) male and (b) female adult population has a criminal conviction; and if he will make a statement. [109921]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The exact information requested is not held centrally.

However, from studies of the criminal histories of persons born since 1953 it is estimated that 30 per cent. of males and 7 per cent. of females aged between 18 and 39 have at least one conviction for a standard list offence.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many young people were convicted (a) in each category of recorded crime and (b) in total in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [109915]

(2) what proportion of crime was committed by young offenders in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [109916]

(3) what was the average age of offenders in each category of crime and in total for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [109917]

(4) what is the peak age of offending for (a) males and (b) females; and if he will make a statement. [109920]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The available information on offenders by age comes from the Home Office Cautions and Court Proceedings databases and is given in the tables.

Table B: Number and proportion of young people aged 10 to under 18 cautioned or convicted at all courts for indictable offences, England and Wales, 1994–98

The average age cannot be calculated exactly from data in the Home Office Cautions and Court Proceedings databases.

Table D: Peak age of offending for indictable offences by sex, England and Wales, 1998

Sex	Peak age
Males	18
Females	15

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of convicted adult offenders were first convicted under the age of 21; and if he will make a statement. [109918]

Mr. Charles Clarke: From a representative sample of adult offenders convicted during 1997, 54 per cent. had previously been convicted when they were under the age of 21.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average age of first time offending for (a) males and (b) females; and if he will make a statement. [109919]

Mr. Charles Clarke: An estimate of the average age for first time offending is not available.

However, results from the youth lifestyles survey, a self report study of persons aged 14 to 25 undertaken between November 1992 and January 1993, indicated that 55 per cent. of the males and 31 per cent. of the females questioned admitted committing at least one of 23 criminal offences at some time in their life. The same study indicated that the average age at which they started to offend was around 13.5 for both males and females.

Data on known offending in 1998—that is those who are cautioned by the police or found guilty by the court for indictable offences—show that the peak age for known offending was 18 for males and 15 for females.

Misuse of Drugs Act 1971

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend section 8 of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971; and if he will make a statement. [109889]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridge (Mrs. Campbell) on 1 February 2000, Official Report, column 512W.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he will reply to the letters dated 25 October, 25 November and 6 January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. T. Gulzar; [110337]

(2) when he will reply to the letters dated 29 October, 2 December and 6 January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Bafaiz Shapari. [110338]

Mrs. Roche: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 15 February.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters dated 18 October, 19 November and 22 December from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. R. Taylor and Jacqueline Taylor. [110339]

Mr. Straw: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 15 February in response to his letters on behalf of Mr. Taylor and Jacqueline Taylor. I am sorry that I was unable to do so sooner.

Sexual Offences

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress and future timetable of his review of the law on sexual offences. [110344]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Sex Offences Review, which started in January 1999, is considering the law on sexual offences. It has held eight consultation conferences and seminars on a number of subjects, and is now drawing together its recommendations. It will be reporting to Ministers this spring, and we hope that the recommendations of the review will be published for public consultation in the early summer.

Electric Shock Dog Collars

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the police forces in possession of an electric shock dog collar for use in training, indicating those forces that have used the device since July 1998. [110246]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following 20 forces in England and Wales possess electric shock dog collars:

Avon and Somerset
Cambridgeshire
Cheshire
Cleveland
Derbyshire
Gloucestershire
Greater Manchester
Gwent
Hampshire
Humberside
Kent
Leicestershire
Lincolnshire
Metropolitan Police
South Wales
Staffordshire
Sussex

Warwickshire
West Midlands
West Yorkshire.

The following eight forces had used electric shock dog collars in the period July 1998 to November 1999:

Cambridgeshire
Gwent
Humberside
Leicestershire
Lincolnshire
South Wales
Warwickshire
West Midlands.

I understand that the Association of Chief Police Officers is considering whether these devices should be used in future.

Firearms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firearms have been misappropriated over the last five years from (a) the police, (b) the Ministry of Defence police, (c) the Atomic Energy Authority police and (d) the armed forces. [108825]

Mr. Charles Clarke [pursuant to the reply, 10 February 2000, c. 249–50W]: Information on the misappropriation of firearms from the police service is not collected centrally, but inquiries of 41 police forces in England, Wales and Scotland indicate that firearms have been misappropriated from the police in only one incident over the past five years.

On 24 January 1997, an MP5 carbine was misappropriated when the police vehicle in which it was carried was hijacked by armed criminals. The vehicle and the weapon were recovered two days later.

No firearms are recorded as having been misappropriated from the Ministry of Defence Police or the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary during the period concerned.

The Ministry of Defence have confirmed that the firearms in the following table have been misappropriated from the armed services in mainland Great Britain over the past five years. Their figures run from 1 April to 31 March. Figures in parenthesis are those weapons subsequently recovered by the authorities.

Firearm	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
5.56mm rifle	0	9 (8)	[1] 1 (1)	1 (1)	3 (1)
9mm pistol	2	7 (3)	1	1	1
.22in rifle	0	7 (3)	1	0	0
.77in Air Rifle	0	6	11	0	0

[1] This weapon was misappropriated by a soldier and used in a murder. Recovered immediately afterwards when soldier was arrested.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Consultation

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the public consultation exercises on policy matters carried out by his Department and its agencies in each of the last five years; who was consulted and by what means; how responses were analysed; how and in what form the results were transmitted to those responsible for the consultation; how the results of the consultation were published; and what analysis has been carried out of the extent and nature of policy changes resulting from the consultation. [106296]

Mr. Rooker: The Department and its agencies are continually and routinely engaged in consulting the public and external stakeholders on a wide range of policy and other matters, both nationally and locally, and through formal written exercises, as well as more informally.

A list of the main national public consultation exercises on policy matters carried out by the DSS since May 1997 has been placed in the Library. Details of consultation exercises prior to May 1997 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

We are very grateful to the many individuals and organisations which have taken the time to let us have their views during public consultation exercises.

All responses to public consultation exercises are categorised and carefully examined by the relevant policy areas.

The consultation exercises listed cover specific, detailed policy proposals as well as broader aspects of social security policy and the responses served to inform the development of detailed policy.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will make winter fuel payments to men over the age of 60; if men have to claim these payments; and if he will make a statement. [110033]

Angela Eagle: An announcement on the arrangements will be made soon. We will be able to identify some of those newly eligible for a payment through the benefits systems; however the majority will have to make a claim.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what resources he has made available to the Benefits Agency to expedite the processing of applications by men aged 60 and over for winter fuel allowance; and when application forms will be available to enable claims to be paid in Stoke-on-Trent. [109986]

Angela Eagle: An announcement on the arrangements will be made soon. To ensure that payments are made accurately and securely to those who are newly eligible, a project team has been set up to deal specifically with winter fuel payments.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will obtain a copy of the report on the research undertaken by the Financial Services Authority into the effect of decision-tree approaches to pension choices; and if he will place it in the Library. [109842]

Mr. Rooker: We see a key role for decision trees, as part of a package of information, in enabling many of those considering a stakeholder pension scheme to make an informed choice about whether it will be a suitable option for them. We have been working closely with the Financial Services Authority (FSA), which is carrying out a three-stage programme of consumer research aimed at developing an effective decision tree. The final stage is currently under way and is due for completion in April. The FSA will be publishing a report of its completed research in due course.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of employees who fall within the target group for stakeholder pensions and who will not be entitled to workplace access to a stakeholder pension because they currently work for a firm with fewer than five employees. [109838]

Mr. Rooker: We estimate that the exemption for employers with fewer than five employees will mean that around 750,000 employees, from a target group of over five million, will not have an automatic right of access through the workplace. We expect, however, that some employers will voluntarily offer access. Furthermore, those who cannot join a stakeholder pension scheme through the workplace will be able to join a scheme on an individual basis.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what restrictions he proposes on the investment strategies which may be adopted by the managers of stakeholder pension funds. [109840]

Mr. Rooker: The position for trustees of stakeholder pension schemes is set out in legislation and mirrors the current requirements on trustees of occupational pension schemes. For example, the trustees will have a duty to consider the need for diversification and the suitability of proposed investments, and to take appropriate advice when making investments. They will also have to prepare a statement of investment principles.

Details of the rules applying to schemes run by an authorised scheme manager, as an alternative to a trustee board, including any rules relating to investments, will be announced shortly.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate for each of the 10 financial years after the introduction of the State Second Pension the number of people receiving the State Second Pension; and of these, how many will also be receiving Income Support. [109839]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

It is not possible to provide precise estimates of the numbers of individuals who will receive the State Second Pension for specific years following its introduction. The table shows very broad brush estimates of the numbers who will benefit from the State Second Pension. These are subject to uncertainty and possible subsequent revision. Income Support is means-tested and is paid on a benefit unit basis. Therefore, in order to estimate the overlap between those receiving the State Second Pension and Income Support we would need information on the incomes, assets and family circumstances of the State Second Pension recipients for up to 12 years in the future. No sufficiently reliable estimates of all these factors are available to answer this question.

Numbers benefiting from State Second Pension at the end of the financial year

Year	Millions
2003–04	0.3
2004–05	0.5
2005–06	0.8
2006–07	1.2
2007–08	1.7
2008–09	2.1
2009–10	2.6
2010–11	3.0
2011–12	3.5
2012–13	3.7

Notes:

1. The numbers given are the estimated numbers of individuals who will benefit from the State Second Pension at the end of each financial year. For example, with the first year of awards being 2003–04, the entry in the table headed 2003–04 shows the number of beneficiaries after the first full year of awards.
2. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 0.1 million.
3. Figures include people who would receive the State Second Pension payments as well as those receiving contracted-out pensions where they have benefited from higher contracted-out rebates than would have applied under SERPS.
4. The figures exclude those higher earning individuals who are contracted-out and whose rebates would be the same under the State Second Pension as under SERPS, since such individuals would not benefit from awards of the State Second Pension, nor would they gain from any increase in contracted-out rebates.

Departmental Initiatives (Grants)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the initiatives launched by his Department since May 1997 under which specific grants are allocated, indicating in each case and for each financial year the funding provided by central Government. [109315]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 10 February 2000]: No formal grants have been awarded by the Department in respect of new initiatives since May 1997 although the Department does make a small number of grants and grants in aid to voluntary organisations and other outside bodies based on specific legislation established before that date.

We are reforming the welfare system to encourage work for those who can and to improve security for those who cannot. In delivering this, the Department is already working locally with a number of outside bodies and is looking to extend the involvement of the voluntary sector as its resources and statutory powers permit, including the establishment of a Children's Fund to help voluntary organisations to do more to eliminate child poverty. For existing local schemes, payment is generally on the basis of remuneration for services provided rather than by direct grant, and information on these arrangements is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many bilateral meetings were held between his Department and its Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what was discussed at each meeting since May 1997; [109904]

(2) if he will list those previously planned meetings, and their subject, between his Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109892]

Angela Eagle: Routine bilateral contacts at official level between the UK and Austrian Governments regularly take place in the margins of meetings of Council and Commission working groups. No bilateral meetings between my Department and the Austrian Government were specifically arranged during 1995 and 1996. The information for subsequent years is as shown.

September 1997:

DSS officials met their Austrian counterparts as part of a tour of member states in preparation for the UK's forthcoming Presidency on the EU.

February 1998:

My hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Bradley), then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Social Security, met Frau Eleonara Hostach, the then Austrian Minister for Labour Health and Social Affairs. They discussed issues of mutual interest, including the social security agenda of the UK Presidency of the EU and prospects for the forthcoming Austrian Presidency.

June 1998:

Austrian officials met DSS officials to review the EU social security agenda to be handed on from the UK Presidency to the Austrian Presidency.

July 1999:

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State had a discussion on issues of mutual interest with Frau Hostach in the margins of an informal meeting of EU social affairs ministers convened by the Finnish Presidency.

October 1999:

The Department's Head of International and EU Relations met his Austrian counterpart to review the two Governments' respective positions on current EU social security business.

No meetings previously arranged by the Department have been cancelled since the formulation of the new Austrian Government.

Jobseekers

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefits are available to men aged between 60 and 65 years who are out of work and seeking employment. [109679]

Angela Eagle: There is a range of Social Security benefits available to help meet a variety of needs. Entitlement to these benefits depends upon the individual circumstances of each case.

Men in this age group may claim either Jobseeker's Allowance or Income Support, subject to the normal conditions of entitlement, to help meet day-to-day living costs. National Insurance credits may also be awarded to men aged 60–64 if they are not liable to pay contributions or do not receive credits by another route. The credits awarded will count towards Retirement Pension.

Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit, which are intended to help meet eligible rent or council tax liability, and payments from the Social Fund may also be available. Again, this would be subject to the normal conditions of entitlement. Other help may be available through the benefit system, but this would very much depend upon the circumstances of the individual and whether the basic conditions of entitlement to the particular benefit had been met.

People in this age group who are unemployed or economically inactive and who have been receiving certain benefits (including Income Support or Jobseeker's Allowance) for six months or more may also have access to a package of back-to-work help through the New Deal 50 plus, which was launched in nine pathfinder areas in October last year and will be available nationally from April 2000.

Severely Disabled People

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the impact of the benefits available to severely disabled people through the provisions of the Welfare Reform and Pensions Act 1999. [109568]

Mr. Bayley: Our package of reforms to provision for sick and disabled people is intended to modernise the welfare system and to encourage those who are able to work to do so. Severely disabled people will benefit in particular from the provisions in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Act 1999, which will allow those incapacitated under the age of 20, or 25 in certain circumstances, to qualify for Incapacity Benefit without having to meet the normal National Insurance contribution conditions.

In addition, the introduction of the new Disability Income Guarantee and the extension of the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance to three and four year old children will provide additional help for many severely disabled people who have the greatest needs.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has to amend his Department's expenditure limit and running costs limit for 1999–2000. [110525]

Mr. Rooker: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XII Vote 3 (Department of Social Security: administration) the Department of Social Security's Departmental Expenditure Limit will be increased by £27,811,000 from £3,265,802,000 to £3,293,613,000. The Supplementary Estimate is the net effect of £20,000,000 (running costs) for expenditure associated with Welfare Modernisation activities, £526,000 (running costs) for additional pensions work, £525,000 (running costs) to meet additional costs of providing a letter forwarding service and £203,000 (running costs) to meet the costs of collecting expenses associated with road traffic accidents in Scotland and Wales.

Other changes result from an increase of £11,062,000 (running costs) arising from a number of small transfers offset by a corresponding reduction on Class I, Vote 3 (Employment Services), a reduction of £619,000 (Capital) offset by a corresponding increase on Class I, Vote 3 (Employment Services), a reduction of £53,000 (running costs) arising from the continuing effects of the transfer of responsibility for Contributions Agency and Working Families Tax Credit to Inland Revenue offset by a corresponding increase on Class XVI, Vote 4 (Inland Revenue: administration), an increase of £1,250,000 (running costs) for the cost of collecting expenses associated with road traffic accidents offset by a corresponding reduction on Class II, Vote 1 (Hospital, community health, family health and related services, England), a reduction of £60,000 (running costs) towards the administrative costs of the Teenage Pregnancy Unit offset by a corresponding increase on Class II, Vote 2 (Department of Health administration, miscellaneous health and personal social services, England), a reduction of £505,000 (running costs) for costs associated with the recruitment of panel members offset by a corresponding increase on Class V, Vote 1 (Lord Chancellor's Department), a reduction of £304,000 (running costs) for the London Rough Sleepers Unit offset by a corresponding increase on Class III, Vote 1 (Housing, construction, regeneration, countryside and wildlife, England), an increase of £34,000 (running costs) for access to miner's medical records offset by a reduction on Class XI, Vote 1 (Department of Trade and Industry, programmes and administration), a reduction of £20,000 (running costs) for costs associated with Better Government for Older People offset by an increase on Class XVII, Vote 1 (Cabinet Office). There is also an increase of £7,972,000 (running costs) associated with services provided to other government departments on a repayment basis, an increase of (£13,696,000) running costs arising from increased payments of Value Added Tax on contracted out services and a reduction of £10,000 (running costs) as a result of virement to capital expenditure. Appropriations in aid increase by £22,896,000.

Changes in the Welfare-to-Work provision arise from an increase of £1,204,000 in the administrative costs of measures to help people with a disability or long-term illness move into or remain in work and a net reduction of £213,000 as a result of a number of minor transfers to Class I, Vote 3 (Employment Services).

As a result of these changes the running cost limit of this Department will be increased by £32,648,000 from £3,009,854,000 to £3,042,502,000 and the running cost limit of the Welfare-to-Work programme will be increased by £991,000 from £10,968,000 to £11,959,000.

The increase will be offset by transfers from other Departmental Expenditure Limits and also a charge on the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will reply to the letters to him dated 25 October, 2 December and 6 January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. L. Goode. [110340]

Mr. Darling: A reply was issued to the right hon. Member on Friday 11 February 2000.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Clerks

Mr. Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2000, Official Report, column 25W, on staff, how many House of Commons Clerks are female. [109603]

Mr. Kirkwood: There are presently 18 female Clerks employed in the Department of the Clerk of the House out of a total of 73. Of these, one is currently on secondment to the Cabinet Office.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Millennium Dome (Advertising)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has made to the New Millennium Experience Company about the newspaper reviews used in the Dome advertising campaign. [107947]

Janet Anderson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is responsible for all decisions connected with the marketing of the Dome. Lord Falconer of Thoroton, as NMEC's Shareholder, is kept informed by the Company of all aspects of the Dome's operations.

Lottery Grants

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many grant applications to the National Lottery have been received from organisations within the Torbay constituency; how many have been successful; and what was the total amount awarded (a) by each distributing body and (b) in total. [109512]

Kate Hoey: The following table shows applications for, and awards of, National Lottery funds in the Torbay constituency by distributing body. The total amount awarded (excluding awards by the New Opportunities Fund) is £1,187,107.

Distributing body	Number of applications	Number of awards	Amount awarded (£)
Arts Council of England	[1]Not known	3	22,667
Film Council	0	0	0
Heritage Lottery Fund	8	3	551,200
National Lottery Charities Board	161	49	490,318
New Opportunities Fund	[2]Not known	[2]Not known	[2]Not known
Sport England	20	9	122,922

[1] The Arts Council of England has received 15 applications from within the area covered by Torbay Borough Council.

[2] The New Opportunities Fund (NOF) has not received any applications from the Torbay constituency for its Health Living Centre, Out of School Hours Activities, or Digitisation programmes. Funding for the ICT (information and computer technology) programme is allocated by local education authority or library authority, and NOF is unable to provide a breakdown by constituency at present. NOF has allocated £409,044 to schools in Torbay LEA.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many applications for National Lottery grants have been received from organisations in (a) Gloucestershire and (b) Tewkesbury since its inception. [109554]

Kate Hoey: 1,429 applications for National Lottery grants have been received from Gloucestershire since the inception of the Lottery; 212 have been received from Tewkesbury. Both figures exclude applications to the Millennium Commission, and the figure for Tewkesbury also excludes applications to the Arts Council of England, as these bodies do not hold information in the form requested.

Henry Watson Music Library

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations his Department has made to Manchester City Council regarding the proposed closure of the Henry Watson Music Library. [109561]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Officials in my Department at my request have been in contact with their opposite numbers at Manchester City Council to discuss their proposed reorganisation of the Central Library and its effect on the Henry Watson Music Library. No final decisions have been taken by the Council, but under the present proposals the Henry Watson collection would remain intact, and physical access to it would be improved.

The Henry Watson Music Library of course provides a service which is used extensively in the North West and other local authorities may wish to consider whether it would be appropriate for them to contribute to the costs of maintaining it as allowed by Section 9(1) of the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964.

National Lottery

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list, for each year from 1995 to date, the total amount received by National Lottery winners in Shrewsbury and Atcham; and if he will make a statement. [109924]

Kate Hoey: My Department does not hold information on National Lottery prize winners by constituency.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regulations (Refrigerator Manufacturers)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 2 December 1999, Official Report, column 288W, on refrigerator manufacturers, if he will list the regulations referred to in respect of employment, health and safety and environmental legislation. [104884]

Ms Hewitt: A list of the main regulations in respect of employment, health and safety and environmental legislation is as shown. More generally, the overall number of regulations that impact on a business will depend to some extent on the size of that business and its particular sector of industry. The Small Business Service, which is to be formally launched in April this year, will consider the applicability and impact of regulations on businesses in different circumstances.

List of main Employment, Health and Safety and Environment Regulations

Employment Legislation

The main duties on employers are set out in the:

Employment Rights Act 1996,
Employment Relations Act 1999,
National Minimum Wage Act 1998,
Working time Regulations 1998
The Maternity and Parental Leave Regulations 1999

Discrimination

Race Relations Act 1976
Sex Discrimination Act 1975
Disability Discrimination Act 1995
Equal Pay Act 1970

Health and Safety

The Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974.

Other main pieces of generic health and safety legislation which may apply are:

the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1999;
the Workplace (Health, Safety and Welfare) Regulations 1992;
the Provision and Use of Work Equipment Regulations 1998; the Personal Protective Equipment at Work Regulations 1992; and the Manual Handling Operations Regulations 1992
the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995

Environmental Regulation

There are three sets of regulations that apply specifically to refrigeration:

The Energy Information (Refrigerators and Freezers) Regulation (SI 3076–1994)
The Energy Efficiency (Refrigerators and Freezers) Regulation (SI 1941–1997)
The Environmental Protection (Control of Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer) Regulations 1996 (SI 506–1996) implementing Council Regulation (EC) 3093–94 on substances that deplete the ozone layer.

In addition the refrigerator manufacturers also may need to comply with the Framework on Materials in Contact with Food (SI 2487–1990), and potentially with the following regulations on effluent discharge:

The Water Industry Act 1991
The Environment Act 1995
The Environmental Protection Act 1990 (for Integrated Pollution Control); and The Pollution Prevention and Control Act 1999 (for Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control).

Socialist Environment Resources Association

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of the Socialist Environment Resources Association; and what matters were discussed. [108684]

Mr. Byers: Socialist Environment Resources Association (SERA) have not requested such a meeting.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list, for the financial year 1998–99, the number and total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that have (a) been put out to competitive tender, (b) not been put out to competitive tender and (c) been let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109062]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 8 February 1999]: In respect of the value of contracts in 1998–99, I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Bath on 10 November 1999, Official Report, columns 722–24W. The number of contracts let centrally to external consultants and advisers, as defined in the 1994 Efficiency Scrutiny into the Government's use of external consultants, was 19. Eighteen of these were let following competitive tendering exercises. One was let by single tender action. All 19 contracts were let on a commercial basis. The organisations concerned were:

GHK Economics and Management Ltd;
ECOTEC Research and Consulting;
Risk and Policy Analysts Ltd;
Public and Corporate Economic Consultants;
Casson and Crispe Consultants;
Meitra Martech Ltd;
Paras Ltd;
Segal Quince Wicksteed Ltd;
Roto Conseil Ltd;
Nottingham University;
Roger Tym and Partners;
KPMG Management Consultants;
Strategem Ltd;
David Rigby Associates;
Ove Arup and Partners;
University of Sussex;
The Harris Research Centre.

The above information does not include contracts let by the Department's Executive Agencies. I have asked the respective Chief Executives to reply separately to this question.

Letter from David Hendon to Mr. Don Foster, dated 15 February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to your Parliamentary Question about contracts let to external consultants and advisors.

2. The tender route followed for each of the four contracts let by the Agency in FY 98/99 is as follows:

Competitive Tender

Quotient Communications Ltd.

Single Tender

The Smith Group Ltd.
Barclay Associates Ltd.
Quotient Communications Ltd.

3. The total value (ex-VAT) of the contracts was £330,800. No Agency contracts were let on a non-commercial basis.

Letter from J. S. Holden to Mr. Don Foster, dated 15 February 2000:

I have been asked to reply to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in respect of Companies House Executive Agency.

Companies House expenditure on external consultants and advisors for 1998–99 was £2.6M. The major part of this atypically high outlay was for IT supplier companies, substantially to secure Millennium readiness for IT systems.

Within the classes requested, expenditure was:

(a) £1.8M

(b) £0.8M

(c) Zero

Apart from the individual contractor company (IBM) mentioned in (b) there was a large number of contractors involved. The number and names have not been provided because of disproportionate cost.

Letter from Desmond Flynn to Mr. Don Foster, dated 15 February 2000:

In Peter Joyce's absence from the office the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about competitive tendering for external consultancy contracts by the Insolvency Service.

In 1998/99 the Insolvency Service, an Executive Agency of the Department of Trade and Industry, spent £5,000 on a single external consultancy contract, awarded after a competitive tendering exercise.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Don Foster, dated 15 February 2000:

You tabled a Parliamentary Question on 4 February to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry about the number and total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisors. I have been asked to reply in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS) which is an executive agency of the DTI.

ETS let the following contracts with consultants in 1998/9:

Yale Consulting—to assist in the development of an IS/IT strategy for the ETS, a scoping study for a Web Site at the Employment Appeal Tribunal and work on the Service's IT security policy. Total value: £60,881

Cap-Gemini Ltd—scoping and initial design of an e-mail migration project, and a Year 2000 audit of IT systems. Total value: £31,089

Drivers Jonas Ltd—Year 2000 audit of ETS embedded systems. Total value: £1,175

Central Computer Telecommunications Agency—to conduct an IS/IT scoping study. Total value: £15,792

Mr D Bower—to advise ETS on the development of customer service arrangements with a view to an application for Chartermark. Total value: £3,924

All contracts were either tendered or let under pre-tendered call-off arrangements.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Don Foster, dated 15 February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the amount spent on external consultants and advisors in 1998/99. In response to a similar question in November 1999 (98/3127), NWML reported that the spend on consultants and advisors in 1998/99 had been £3,800. This figure was wrong, it should have been £68,862.87. This revised figure was made up of three contracts one of which went to competitive tender and two others that were each below the threshold for competitive tender. The three organisations in question were:—

National Engineering Laboratory
Parity Resources
ICL.

Letter from Alison Brimelow to Mr. Don Foster, dated 15 February 2000:

I am replying to your parliamentary question tabled 4 February 2000 regarding the number and total value of contracts let for the financial year 1998/99 with external consultants and advisors that have (a) been put out to competitive tender, (b) not been put out to competitive tender and (c) been let on a non-commercial basis.

The Patent Office has, under (b) above awarded one contract, to the value of £8k to Mtic Ltd.

No contracts were let under categories (a) or (c).

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the (a) number and (b) value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109301]

Dr. Howells: Information on this type of contract is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Post Offices

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the effect on sub-post offices' assigned office payments of the Government's plans to pay benefits and pensions directly into bank accounts starting in 2003; if he will estimate the effect on assigned office payments for each of the years (a) 2002–03, (b) 2003–04, (c) 2004–05, (d) 2005–06 and (e) 2006–07; and if he will make a statement. [109468]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The ability of the Post Office to continue making assigned office payments to subpostmasters is governed by the income levels it receives from its clients, such as the Benefits Agency, for undertaking work on their behalf.

The effect on Post Office income of payment of benefits and pensions direct into bank accounts from 2003 depends on the detailed plans for the migration. The Post Office's ability to finance assigned payments will depend on its overall level of income from all sources, including new and additional business opportunities generated by the Horizon automated system.

Newsprint Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will calculate the annual growth of consumption of newsprint in each of the last 10 years; and what proportion of that increase was made up of recycled newsprint. [110106]

Ms Hewitt: The information for the yearly change of consumption of newsprint is in the table. The Pulp and Paper Information Centre estimate that the recycled content has increased from 27.3 per cent. in 1992 to 52.4 per cent. in 1998. Over this period, the tonnage of recycled newsprint increased by more than overall consumption.

Newsprint Consumption

Year	Tonnage '000 consumption	Change per cent.
1989[1]	2,055	7.1
1990	1,895	-7.8
1991	1,851	-2.3
1992	1,860	0.5
1993	1,937	2.0
1994[1]	2,312	19.4
1995	2,214	-4.2
1996	2,221	0.3
1997	2,350	5.8
1998	2,497	6.2

The Paper Federation of Great Britain

Due to changes in import classifications figures may not be strictly compatible to those in preceding years.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the future role of incineration in the United Kingdom newsprint industry. [110102]

Ms Hewitt: The Government believe that incineration with energy recovery has an important role to play as one of the options in an integrated waste strategy. It can be the best practicable environmental option where the opportunity for recycling newsprint does not exist. For example, at least one leading paper mill utilises energy from waste.

The role of incineration was considered as one of the waste options when Regulatory Impact Assessments for the draft Waste Strategy and the Limiting Landfill consultation paper were drawn up.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the employment implications of newspaper recycling. [110104]

Ms Hewitt: While environmental policies can have positive or negative effects on employment in individual sectors there is no presumption that they lead to net (overall) employment gains or losses. Generally, environmental policies are justified on the basis of environmental objectives, taking account of the costs and benefits of the policy.

TransTec

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the reasons for his referral of matters relating to grants paid to subsidiaries of TransTec plc to the police. [110051]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 14 February 2000]: In reaching this decision I took account of the information received by the Department, the allegations being made and consultations with the police. I concluded that it was appropriate for the police to consider, independently, the allegations that fraud had been committed against the Department.

National Minimum Wage

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the latest report of the Low Pay Commission with the Commission's recommendation on a minimum wage for 2000–01. [110208]

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he received the latest report of the Low Pay Commission; and when he will respond to its recommendations. [110206]

Mr. Byers: The Government are grateful to the Low Pay Commission (LPC) for its report. Its findings confirm that the introduction of the national minimum wage (NMW) has been successful in helping take some 1.5 million people out of the trap of poverty wages, with no significant impact on jobs or the economy. The report presents evidence that the minimum wage has had a positive impact on business, in terms of improving performance and productivity, and helping to alleviate some of the worst aspects of low pay. The LPC report finds that the minimum wage has been introduced sensibly and smoothly.

The report makes 16 important operational recommendations and suggestions, covering aspects of the technical application and enforcement of the national minimum wage, and one recommendation on the treatment of 21-year-olds. It also repeats its view, expressed in the first report, that the main rate should be increased to £3.70 this year.

The Government have decided, in the light of the positive findings in the report and our own analysis, to accept this suggestion and increase the main rate from £3.60 to £3.70 an hour in October this year. By introducing it in October we will provide time for business to prepare for such an increase. The LPC stressed the importance of a reasonable time for implementation. The Government also accept all 16 of the LPC's operational recommendations and suggestions, subject to the usual detailed consideration of practicality and resources. In addition, the Government confirm that the development rate for young people will rise from its current level of £3.00 an hour to £3.20 an hour from June 2000.

The LPC report comes just nine months after the introduction of the NMW. Assessing the full impact of the NMW will take a little longer. A more thorough analysis will be possible when more data become available on earnings, compliance and the interaction of the NMW with the Working Families Tax Credit. The Government will therefore ask the LPC to monitor the NMW and produce a further report, including on whether there is a case for an increase and if so to what level, by July next year.

In its next report the LPC will be asked to take into account movements in earnings and other factors, as well as impacts on the economy, including competitiveness, jobs and on training with particular attention to the youth labour market and the impact on low paying sectors and small firms, as well as the effect of the minimum wage on particular groups of workers. The Government will take decisions on the basis of this report so that any further increase can take place by October 2001.

The Government have decided not to implement the LPC recommendations that 21-year-old workers should be treated as adults rather than young workers for the purposes of national minimum wage. The Government are not shelving this matter—they will consider in detail the LPC's case for changing the treatment of 21-year-olds when they report on the general case for an increase next year. Copies of the LPC's second report will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Post Offices (Ceredigion)

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices there are in the county of Ceredigion; and how many of them derive 40 per cent. or more of their workload from Benefits Agency-related work. [110119]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I understand from the Post Office that there are 73 post offices in the Parliamentary constituency of Ceredigion of which 44 derive 40 per cent. or more of their workload from Benefits Agency-related work.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many legal aid franchises have been issued in the last five years; how many legal aid franchises there are in each parliamentary constituency; and how lists of these franchise holders will be made available to the public. [109518]

Mr. Lock: The first Legal Aid Board Franchises were awarded in August 1994–95 and by the end of that financial year a total of 1,050 solicitors' offices and other organisations had been franchised. This total rose to 1,295 by the end of 1995–96, to 1,820 by the end of 1996–97, to 2,382 by the end of 1997–98 and to 2,780 by the end of 1998–99. In the lead-up to the introduction of civil contracting in January 2000, the numbers continued to rise and on 10 February 2000 stood at 3,697. 2,000 further offices and organisations have applied for a franchise and passed a preliminary audit.

The Legal Aid Board does not keep information on the numbers of legal aid franchises in each parliamentary constituency. Their franchising and contracting data are structured in line with Local Authority boundaries and Regional Legal Service Committees bid zones.

Information on franchised solicitors is currently available from the Legal Aid Board's Freephone helpline or on request from any of the Board's offices. On 3 April 2000 the Community Legal Service Directory will be published. All franchised holders will be listed in the Directory and will be marked with a Community Legal Service Quality Mark. Copies of the Directory will be available at all Community Legal Service approved outlets and at other information providing outlets and at other information providing outlets such as main libraries. In addition an electronic version of the Directory will be available via the Internet.

Family Law Act 1986

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to implement Part II of the Family Law Act 1986. [109676]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the right hon. Member to the written Parliamentary Answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Dr. Stoate) on 17 June 1999, Official Report, column 213W. The position remains unchanged.

Circuit Judges

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many circuit judges were appointed from the solicitors' profession in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95, (d) 1995–96, (e) 1996–97 and (f) 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [109578]

Mr. Lock: The information requested is set out in the table.

	Number of circuit judges from the solicitors profession appointed in the financial year	Total number of circuit judges appointed in the financial year
1992–93	10	50
1993–94	5	45
1994–95	6	32
1995–96	16	53
1996–97	4	37
1997–98	3	25

The Lord Chancellor welcomes applications from both solicitors and barristers to be considered for appointment to the Circuit Bench. He considers that the skills and experience needed to be a Judge may as well be shown by a successful litigation solicitor as by an experienced barrister. The Lord Chancellor wants to appoint the Judges with the best potential—regardless of whether they come from the ranks of barristers or solicitors.

Children and Family Court Service

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if the new training manual for the Children and Family Court Service is complete; and if he will make a statement. [109560]

Jane Kennedy: The Project Team charged with taking forward the development of the Children and Family Court Advisory Service is preparing a training strategy, along with unified National Standards and guidelines for the officers of the new service. In doing so the Project Team will consider the existing National Standards for those services being amalgamated, and take account of any guidelines in existence. It will also consider all submissions on the subject.

Family Assistance Orders

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to standardise the issuing of family assistance orders. [109571]

Jane Kennedy: Section 16 of the Children Act 1989 enables a court to issue a family assistance order requiring a probation officer or local authority officer to advise, assist and (where appropriate) befriend a child, any parent or guardian of a child, or any person with whom the child is living or who has an order for contact with the child. Family assistance orders last for a maximum of six months. They require the consent of any person named in the order other than the child himself or herself, and may not be made unless the circumstances of the case are exceptional. Consequently, the number of such orders made is small (in 1999 there were 43 in the High Court and 701 in county courts). The decision whether or not a case is exceptional, and whether a family assistance order would be in the best interests of the child, if those concerned agree, is necessarily one for the courts to take in the light of the facts of each case. Standardisation would therefore not be appropriate.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Occupational Health Services

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if Government Departments and agencies provide occupational health services specifically for drug and substance misuse. [109177]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Responsibility for the provision of occupational health services rests with individual departments and agencies. Precise arrangements will therefore vary from department to department. Most main departments have issued policy statements on the help available to staff with problems of drug abuse.

In the Cabinet Office, should a case occur, staff would receive counselling from the welfare officer who would be advised by the contracted occupational health services provider. Referral to an NHS programme or another provider would also be considered.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what childcare provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by (i) her departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of her Department; what was the cost to parents of this childcare; and how many parents used the facilities. [108838]

Mr. Stringer: The Civil Service as a whole is striving for an improved worklife balance. The report on Civil Service Reform by Sir Richard Wilson to the PM states > that the Civil Service is strongly committed to a dramatic improvement in our record on diversity. It attaches a lot of importance to developing policies to enable staff to achieve a better balance between their work and private lives.

The Cabinet Office is currently running pilot studies on five issues (working practices, working patterns, childcare, long hours culture and alternative working) from which lessons will be emerging early next year. It is essential that the Service responds, not only to bring on women, but also to become more competitive in the general recruitment market.

As a department, the Cabinet Office places great importance on maintaining and developing a wide range of family friendly policies. Childcare is just one element of these policies.

The following table shows the type of childcare provision in my Department and executive agencies; the number of parents who used it; and the cost to parents:

	Type of childcare provision	Number of parents using childcare	Cost to parents
Cabinet Office	Holiday playscheme	41	1,951
Civil Service College	Nursery	9	34,476
COI	Holiday playscheme	3	112

	Type of childcare provision	Number of parents using childcare	Cost to parents
Government Car and Dispatch Agency	None
Property Advisers to the Civil Estate	Nursery	2	4,323.20
	Holiday playscheme	2	128.88
Security Facilities Executive	Holiday playscheme	0	0
The Buying Agency	Holiday playscheme	2	0
Civil Service College	Nursery	9	34

Caroline Flint: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office in each of the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) her Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of her Department (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [108968]

Mr. Stringer: There is no requirement to keep data on the patterns of women returners after maternity leave. As a result this information is not available for the Cabinet Office, the Civil Service College or the Central Office of Information. Information is available from the following Cabinet Office Agencies.

CCTA

1995 one maternity leave case: returned to full-time working

1996 one maternity leave case: left three months later under VES Scheme before the end of her maternity leave

1997 one maternity leave case: returned to full-time working, took career break three months later

1998 one maternity leave case: returned to full-time working, resigned one month later

1999 four maternity leave cases: three returned part-time (average 18 hrs); one returned full-time

PACE (PACE records start from its creation on 1 April 1996)

1996 two maternity leave cases: one returned part-time; one returned full-time

1997 one maternity leave case: returned full-time

1998 four maternity leave cases: one returned part-time; three returned full-time

1999 three maternity leave cases: one returned part-time; two returned full-time

Security Facilities Division

two maternity leave cases: one took a 12 month career break immediately at the end of the leave period and returned to her previous part-time hours; one returned full-time

1998 one maternity leave case: returned part-time two days, previously worked four days

1999 one maternity leave case: resigned at end of leave period

TBA

1995 three maternity leave cases: one returned part-time (16 hrs); two returned full-time

1996 two maternity leave cases: one returned part-time (16 hrs); one took career break immediately following maternity leave

1997 one maternity case: returned full-time

Government Car and Despatch Agency

Since the Agency was formed there have been no women who have taken maternity leave.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what provisions are made available to (i) departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of her Department, for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contract, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108845]

Mr. Stringer: The Civil Service as a whole is striving for an improved work-life balance. The Cabinet Office recognises the importance of policies on work-life balance to the Civil Service Reform programme and is running pilot studies on five issues (working practices, working patterns, childcare, long hours culture, and alternative working). The lessons which emerge from the pilot studies will be communicated to departments and agencies when they are available early next year.

Within the Cabinet Office and its Agencies the following provisions are currently available;

(a) maternity leave

The Cabinet Office and its Agencies give 18 weeks full paid leave to their women employees provided they; a. are in paid service at the time maternity leave begins; b. have completed at least one year's paid service; c. intend to return to work in the Civil Service after their confinement and leave, or after a combination of maternity leave and a career break; d. agree to repay any non-statutory payments made during the maternity leave if they do not return to work; and e. are not employed on a casual basis or on a fixed term appointment of less than two years. Maximum of 52 weeks paid and unpaid leave.

(b) maternity pay

The Cabinet Office and its Agencies pay Statutory Maternity Pay within full pay.

(c) paternity leave

The Cabinet Office, Government Car and Despatch Agency and PACE allow seven days; CCTA, Civil Service College, Security Facilities Division and TBA allow five days; COI allow two days.

(d) parental leave

The Cabinet Office allows all staff with parental responsibility who have one years' service 13 weeks parental leave. Applications for periods of unpaid parental leave above the statutory entitlement would be considered favourably. The Agencies have all implemented the Parental and Maternity Leave Regulations 1999. TBA allow up to five years' unpaid parental leave.

(e) flexible working hours

The Cabinet Office operates a formal flexible working hours scheme in some parts of the Department, elsewhere line managers are responsible for agreeing hours of attendance for staff, providing that a core time of 10.00–12.00 and 14.00–16.00 hours is observed and conditioned hours are worked. CCTA, PACE, Security Facilities Division and TBA all operate flexible working hours. Civil Service College operates flexible working hours which is available to the majority of staff below Grade 7, with the exception of some occupational groups eg drivers. COI operates flexible working hours except in areas where operational needs make this impossible. Government Car and Despatch Agency allows flexible working hours to all non-industrial staff.

(f) part-time work

(g) job sharing

Cabinet Office considers all requests to work part-time or jobshare sympathetically and accommodates staff wishes where possible. Under the Departmental Job Advertising Scheme the presumption is that all posts advertised will be open to part-time or job share applicants unless there are specific reasons for restricting it to full time staff only. The Agencies consider requests to work part-time or jobshare on a case by case basis.

(h) leave to care for sick children

The Cabinet Office and its Agencies all allow special paid leave under their special leave arrangements for domestic situations.

(i) home working

Cabinet Office, CCTA, Government Car and Despatch Agency, PACE and Security Facilities Division members of staff are all eligible to apply for home working. All cases are considered on their merits. Civil Service College have no provisions. COI does not generally have provision for home working as it does not fit in with the work of the agency. TBA consider each case on merit and has a number of staff who are home based.

(j) term time contracts

(k) annual hours contracts

The Cabinet Office, CCTA, PACE and Security Facilities Division will consider cases on merit. COI, Civil Service College, Government Car and Despatch Agency and TBA have no provision.

(l) child care allowances

Cabinet Office staff with under school age children who fulfil certain criteria will be eligible for childcare vouchers which were negotiated as part of the 1999 pay agreement. Criteria are still being negotiated with the Departmental Trade Union side. Staff are also able to claim for additional childcare costs associated, for instance, with attendance on a training course. The responsibility for decisions about whether extra costs can be claimed has been delegated to line managers. No provisions exit in CCTA, COI, Civil Service College, Government Car and Despatch Agency, PACE, Security Facilities Division and TBA.

(m) careers leave

(n) career break schemes

The Cabinet Office, CCTA, PACE and Security Facilities Division allow up to five years' unpaid special provided that staff: a. are permanent members of the Cabinet Office with at least one year's service; b. have a satisfactory attendance record; and c. have a good record of performance. COI provides careers' leave on an unpaid basis but there is no provision for career breaks. Civil Service College provide special unpaid leave for careers' leave and career breaks. Government Car and Despatch Agency have no specific scheme in place but consider each case on merit. TBA provide special unpaid leave but consider each case on merit.

Investors In People

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list (a) those Government departments and agencies which have received certification in (i) ISO 9,000, (ii) ISO 14,000 and (iii) Investors In People; and (b) the status of the remaining departments and agencies; and if she will make a statement. Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what Remploy products her Department has purchased in the last three years. [109939]

Mr. Stringer: None.

Departmental Initiatives (Grants)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list the initiatives launched by her Department since May 1997 under which specific grants are allocated, indicating in each case and for each financial year the funding provided by central Government. [109312]

Mr. Stringer: My Department's expenditure on grants initiated since May 1997 is given in the table.

Description	Actual 1997–98	Actual 1998–99	Budgeted 1999–2000
National Infrastructure Programme (Y2K project)	—	3,698,200	18,671,000
Local Government Pilot Scheme	—	5,000	10,000
Better Government for Older People	—	51,000	50,000
Passport 50 plus	16,250	—	—
Youth Net—project work with girls	—	—	12,000
Payment to Disability Partnership for bursary awards	11,600	21,000	28,000
Total	27,850	3,775,200	18,771,000

Notes:
1. National Infrastructure Programme expenditure in 1998–99 was paid to Action 2000 via DTI.
2. Better Government for Older People exclude amounts in 1999–2000 specifically aimed at reviewing the project.
3. Youth Net grant is managed by the Home Office, Family Policy Unit.

TREASURY

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number and value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109450]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 10 February 2000]: Since May 1997 the Treasury has no record of contracts let for the purpose of managing competitive tendering processes.

Pensions

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the Inland Revenue's review into the operation of income draw-down on personal pensions and the system of a 75 year age limit on the purchase of an annuity. [110069]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The recent Inland Revenue review of income drawdown considered representations from the pensions industry, regulatory bodies and individuals. We will take all representations into account when deciding if any change to the current system is appropriate.

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish the report on the Inland Revenue's review into the mandatory purchase at 75 years of age of an annuity for a personal pension. [110070]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We are considering the conclusions of the recent Inland Revenue review of income drawdown, which looked at, among other things, the appropriateness of the current requirement for annuity purchase by age 75. An announcement will be made if it is decided that any changes are required.

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109785]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Our Department's catering contractor complies with all the relevant provisions of the Food Safety Act. An independent annual audit is carried out to ensure that the required standards are met.

VAT

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 26 January 2000, Official

Report, column 215W, on VAT, what study he has made of the recent alterations to Annex J of the Sixth VAT Directive regarding the potential it offers for permitting the lowering of rates charged to a private citizen installing energy-saving measures via a contractor; and if he will make a statement. [110201]

Dawn Primarolo: This Government have already introduced a reduced rate of 5 per cent. for the grant-funded installation of energy saving materials. Annex K of the Sixth VAT Directive allows member states to adopt optional experimental reduced rates for the renovation and repair of private dwellings, which would cover the related installation of energy saving materials.

The important issue for energy saving materials, however, is do-it-yourself installation, where EC law does not permit a reduced rate.

"Invest to Save"

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress is being made on the Government's Invest to Save Initiative. [110380]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I am pleased to announce that 104 bids from across the public sector have been successful in Round 2 of the Invest to Save Budget, at a cost of £45m in 2000–01, including consequential funding for the devolved administrations, and £69m in total over the three years to 2002–03. EU Membership Costs

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the financial cost of the United Kingdom's membership of the EU in (a) gross and (b) net terms for each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what estimate he has made of the costs for each of the next three years. [110250]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Details of the United Kingdom's gross and net contributions to the EC Budget for the years 1993–94 to 1997–98 are given in Table 7A of the 1999 Departmental Report of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Departments (Cm 4218). The latest forecasts of the UK's net contributions to the EC Budget for the years 1998–99 to 2001–02 are given in the footnote to Table B12 of the November 1999 Pre-Budget Report (Cm 4479).

Credit Unions

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the amount of money saved by those using credit unions in each of the last 10 years; [110244]

(2) how many credit unions (a) there were, (b) were established and (c) were closed in each of the last 10 years. [110212]

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Lamb Slaughter Charges

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to take action to reduce lamb slaughter charges to the EU average level; and if he will make a statement. [101147]

Ms Quin [holding answer 7 December 1999]: Since these charges relate to the cost of operating the abattoir and providing a slaughtering service, their level is a commercial matter between slaughter house operators and suppliers of lambs. The Government have, however, frozen MHS hourly inspection charges for 1999–2000 at 1998–99 levels—charges which affect the cost of slaughtering all species, including lamb.

Private Finance Panel

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which projects relating to his Department that appeared in the Private Finance Panel's list of 29 November 1995 (a) have been completed, (b) are still pending, (c) have been dropped and (d) are being pursued by means other than a public private partnership. [105867]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2000]: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 24 January 2000, Official Report, columns 117–18W.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received on the use of bovine somatotropin in dairy cows this year; and if he will make a statement. [108579]

Ms Quin: One letter has been received this year. Following advice from the independent Veterinary Products Committee, the Government voted in favour of a permanent ban in the EU on the marketing and use of recombinant bovine somatotropin. The ban came into effect on 1 January 2000.

Pet Passports

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will permit the new pet passport documentation to act as (a) an export certificate, (b) an import permit and (c) a rabies vaccination certificate; and if he will make a statement. [108176]

Ms Quin [holding answer 3 February 2000]: Export certificates for pets are not a requirement of the UK Government, but may be required by countries to which animals are travelling. Such countries are entitled, as is the UK, to set their own requirements for import documentation. There is no requirement for import permits for pet animals entering England under the Pet Travel Scheme. Each such pet will need to be accompanied by a valid Pet Travel Scheme rabies re-entry certificate. Other certification relates to treatment against ticks and tapeworms and no limitation of the pet's travel outside the UK to permitted countries.

The aim of the Pet Travel Scheme is to permit pet owners to bring their animals back to this country without having to undergo quarantine, while maintaining the protection of public health. The scheme which will commence on 28 February is a pilot: the experience gained from it will be used in framing the full scheme which we are committed to implementing by April 2001.

Baby Foods

Ms Shipley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review his nutritional guidance on packaged processed foods aimed at babies and toddlers. [108585]

Ms Quin: MAFF guidance for parents on Healthy Diets for Infants and Young Children recommends that parents choose products which are low in salt and sugar, and use nutrition labelling information to identify these foods.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will clarify the guidance in respect of the Food Labelling Regulations for processed foods targeted at babies and small children. [108583]

Ms Quin: The Food Labelling Regulations 1996 lay down rules for the labelling of foods generally, and this includes foods for babies and young children. MAFF has issued Guidance Notes on the Regulations for use by industry and enforcers and kept them under regular review. Responsibility for this guidance will pass to the Foods Standards Agency.

Flood Defence

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food where members of the public may (a) consult and (b) purchase the flood risk maps which were disseminated to local planning authorities in September 1999; and if they are available in electronic form. [110146]

Mr. Morley: These maps may be consulted at the offices of either the local planning authority or the Environment Agency. Paper copies may be obtained from the Agency. The Agency is also developing proposals to place the maps on its website to make them freely accessible to the public.

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the names and addresses of the Wessex Regional Flood Defence Committee. [110145]

Mr. Morley: Members of the Wessex Regional Flood Defence Committee are as follows:

(i) Members appointed by MAFF

G. P. Sturdy—Chairman

J. B. Bush

B. M. Chandler

J. B. Comer

Dr. J. Gething

(ii) Members appointed by Environment Agency

C. R. Rothwell

P. K. Rees

(iii) Members appointed by Local Authorities

A. Massey—Bristol City Council

F. L. Crutchley—North Somerset Council

P. Tyzack—South Gloucestershire Council

Mrs. L. C. S. Bennett—Wiltshire County Council

J. L. Churchouse—Dorset County Council

H. P. N. Temperley—Somerset County Council

H. Prior-Sankey—Somerset County Council

R. E. L. Lelliott—Bournemouth and Poole Borough Councils

Members of the Committee can be contacted c/o The Environment Agency, Manley House, Kestrel Way, Exeter EX2 7LQ.

Farm Animal Welfare

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has consulted the Farm Animal Welfare Council on the impact of the withdrawal of OP sheep dip. [110287]

Mr. Morley: I understand that the Farm Animal Welfare Council is already preparing to consider the likely impact on farm animal welfare of this decision. I look forward to receiving their advice.

HEALTH

Medicinal Drug Deaths (Northumberland)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people died in Northumberland Health Authority area as the result of the use of medicinal drugs in each of the last five years (a) accidentally, (b) in cases involving (i) suicide and (ii) self-inflicted injury and (c) in other cases; and which drug each death involved. [106824]

Ms Stuart: The information requested is in the table.

Scientific and Technical Staff

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) medical laboratory officers and (b) trainee biomedical scientists were employed by the NHS in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement; [108308]

(2) how many (a) clinical scientists and (b) biomedical scientists are employed by each health authority; [108307]

(3) how many people were recruited on to training courses for biomedical scientists in each of the last 10 years; [108221]

(4) how many people were recruited in each of the last 10 years on to training courses for (a) pathology, (b) pharmacology, (c) cardiology, (d) audiology, (e) respiratory and (f) other medical laboratory officers. [108309]

Mr. Denham: Information about the number of scientific and technical staff directly employed by the National Health Service in each health authority, and over the past 10 years, is in statistical bulletins and detailed results from the Department of Health's annual non-medical workforce census, copies of which are in the Library. Information about the numbers recruited on to training courses in the NHS is not available.

Drugs Costs

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the terms of his referral to the Office of Fair Trading of the cost of drugs to the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement. [109438]

Ms Stuart: The matter concerns the supply of generic drugs to the National Health Service. The whole basis of the current arrangements for generic supply is competition in the market place. In the light of disruption to the market last year, we were concerned to establish whether any suppliers of generics were misusing their market power; whether exploitation of the reimbursement system was taking place; and whether there was any implicit or explicit collusion to bring about price rises or shortages. The Office of Fair Trading is carrying out an investigation to see if there has been any contravention of United Kingdom competition law.

General Practitioners

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the average number of patients per general practitioner in (a) rural and (b) urban areas; [109749]

(2) what is the average waiting time for an appointment to see a general practitioner in a non-emergency case in (a) rural and (b) urban areas. [109750]

Mr. Denham: The average patient list size for general practitioners at 1 October 1998 was 1,787 for rural areas and 1,890 for urban areas.

Figures for average waiting times for an appointment with a GP are not collected centrally although there is information available from the 1998 Patients' Survey for General Practice. This shows that over 56 per cent. of respondents were given an appointment on the day they wanted, while 30 per cent. waited one day or more days. 13 per cent. of respondents reported that they had not minded what day they were given an appointment. There were no significant differences in waiting times between rural and urban areas.

NHS Direct (Shropshire)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent representations he has received regarding the organisation of NHS Direct in Shropshire; and if he will make a statement; [109845]

(2) what consultations his Department has held regarding the establishment of NHS Direct in Shropshire. [109824]

Ms Stuart: Shropshire Health Authority, in partnership with stakeholders, will shortly submit plans for the extension of NHS Direct to Shropshire to the National Health Service Executive. NHS Direct will be available in Shropshire by the end of October this year.

Resource Allocation

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he plans for the allocation of resources within the NHS so as to eliminate differences in waiting times and clinical performance between different hospitals. [109759]

Mr. Denham: The objective of resource allocation is to distribute National Health Service funds fairly based on the healthcare needs of populations.

Premature Deaths

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish figures showing the composite index for adverse events/complications of treatment in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 for (i) England, (ii) East and North Hertfordshire, (iii) West Hertfordshire and (iv) the health authority in the prospering growth area with the (1) lowest figure and (2) highest figure; [109754]

(2) if he will publish figures showing the composite index for in-hospital premature deaths in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 for (i) England, (ii) East and North Hertfordshire, (iii) West Hertfordshire and (iv) the health authority in the prospering growth area with the (1) lowest figure and (2) highest figure. [109756]

Mr. Denham: The 1997–98 figures for the in-hospital premature deaths indicator were published in "Quality and Performance in the NHS: High Level Performance Indicators" in June 1999, copies of which are available in the Library. Figures for 1998–99 will be published later this year.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bilateral meetings were held between his Department and its Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what was discussed at each meeting since May 1997. [109877]

Ms Stuart: There was a meeting between my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Public Health and the Federal Minister for Labour, Health and Social Affairs, Mrs. Eleonora Hostasch, on 11 March 1998, when key topics in the European Union public health field were discussed.

There have been no other bilateral contacts at senior official or ministerial level since May 1997.

Cleft Lip and Palate Services

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, in reviewing cleft lip and palate services, he will have regard to (a) the desirability of maintaining different clinical approaches, (b) travelling times to centres of excellence for parents and their children and (c) the practicability of providing adequate specialist nursing support services close to the parents' home. [110010]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 14 February 2000]: Under the new arrangements all centres will be required to participate in national, inter-centre audit. This will, for the first time, collect clinical data on an equivalent basis and allow comparisons to be made of the effectiveness of centres and different techniques. It will be a vital tool in supporting practice and the continuing training needs of clinicians. Arrangements for the appointment of surgeons in designated cleft lip and palate centres, including the selection criteria, will be a matter for employing National Health Service trusts. Those applying for posts will be required to demonstrate evidence of their skills and expertise regardless of surgical technique.

The new services will work on a hub and spoke basis. Surgery and other specialised elements of care will be provided at the main centres, but many aspects of care will continue to be provided locally, in close liaison with the main centre. We accept that some patients and their carers will need to travel further for some aspects of their care because it is not possible for the highest standards of care to be provided at every hospital which has previously carried out cleft lip and/or palate surgery.

It will be for each cleft centre to ensure that patients have access to specialist nursing services. This might be provided on an outreach basis from the main centre or by nurses with specialist skills in spokes working in accordance with agreed protocols.

Legal and Accountancy Fees

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has paid to (a) law firms and (b) accountancy firms since 1 May 1997. [110241]

Ms Stuart: The Department's records do not separately identify payments to law firms or accountancy firms. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his target is for answering ordinary written questions from hon. Members; and what percentage of his Department's answers were made within the target time in (a) 1999 and (b) 2000 to date. [110320]

Ms Stuart: The Department's target for replying to ordinary written questions is five working days. In 1999 we achieved this 63 per cent. of the time. In 2000 to date we have achieved this 40 per cent. of the time.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to reply to the two questions about NHS Direct tabled by the hon. member for Aylesbury on 24 January for answer on 27 January (refs. 107079 and 107088). [110321]

Ms Stuart: Because of the detailed nature of the hon. Member's questions it is taking a long time to compile the data. I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the National Screening Committee's advice regarding antenatal screening for cystic fibrosis. [110249]

Mr. Denham: The United Kingdom National Screening Committee does not currently recommend the introduction of routine antenatal screening for cystic fibrosis. This is based on the advice of its specialist Antenatal Screening Sub-Group. The aim of any antenatal screening programme would be informed choice and as yet there are too many mutations of cystic fibrosis and too little information on their clinical severity to enable counsellors to facilitate informed choice. The UK National Screening Committee will review this approach in the light of any new evidence.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Advisers

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidance his Department has issued to ensure that legal advisers working on a conditional fee basis make disclosures of that fact to any other party to litigation or to a transaction; and if the guidance provides that such disclosures be made. [110034]

Mr. Lock: At present there is no need for special guidance as the opponent's liability for costs is unaffected if a claimant chooses to finance litigation through a conditional fee agreement. However, the success fee in a conditional fee agreement and the premium for any insurance policy against costs will become recoverable from the losing party from 1 April, when the relevant provisions of the Access to Justice Act 1999 come into force. On 1 February, the Government published a report entitled "The Government's Conclusions Following Consultation on Conditional Fees: Sharing the Costs of Litigation". In view of the opponent's potential liability for increased costs if there is a success fee or insurance premium, the report includes recommendations to the Civil Procedure Rule Committee as to how rules of court might deal with issues of disclosure. Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Nottinghamshire Police (PFI)

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the progress of the PFI project involving vehicle supply, support and maintenance for Nottinghamshire Police; and if he will make a statement. [110345]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I understand that negotiations between the Nottinghamshire Police and the preferred bidders for this project are continuing, with a view to a contract being signed early in the next financial year.

Gambling Review Body

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to announce the appointment of the Chairman of the Gambling Review Body and the body's terms of reference. [110759]

Mr. Straw: Further to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross) on 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 534W, I have today appointed Sir Alan Budd as Chairman of the Gambling Review Body.

Sir Alan Budd is Provost of Queen's College, Oxford, and a former Chief Economic Adviser to the Treasury. The position is unpaid.

We will make a further announcement on the membership of the Review Body in the next few weeks. We hope it will start work shortly after Easter to report by the Summer 2001.

The terms of Reference for the gambling review are as follows:

Consider the current state of the gambling industry and the ways in which it might change over the next 10 years in the light of economic pressures, the growth of e-commerce, technological developments and wider leisure industry and international trends.

Consider the social impact of gambling and the costs and benefits.

Consider, and make recommendations for, the kind and extent of regulation appropriate for gambling activities in Great Britain, having regard to:

- their wider social impact;
- the need to protect the young and vulnerable from exploitation and to protect all gamblers from unfair practices;
- the importance of preventing gambling from being carried out in a way which allows crime disorder or public nuisance;
- the need to keep the industry free from infiltration by organised and other serious crime, and from money laundering risks;
- the desirability of creating an environment in which the commercial opportunities for gambling, including its international competitiveness, maximise the United Kingdom's economic welfare; and
- the implications for the current system of taxation, and the scope for its further development.

Consider the need for, and, if necessary, recommend new machinery appropriate for carrying out that regulation which achieves a more consistent and streamlined approach than is now possible and which is financed by the gambling industry itself.

Consider the availability and effectiveness of treatment programmes for problem gamblers and make recommendations for their future provision, potential costings and funding.

In conducting this review, the body should not consider changes to the National Lottery, but it will need to look at the impact on the Lottery of any proposed changes, including an assessment of the potential effect on the income to good causes.

Sex Offenders

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners are undergoing treatment on a sex offender therapy programme; how many prisoners have been recommended for treatment on such a course in the past year; and by how much demand for places outstrips supply; [110082]

(2) what is the average time between recommendation for treatment on a sex offender therapy programme and placement on such a course. [110083]

Mr. Boateng: Records are kept centrally of the number of sex offender treatment programmes running at any one time, but not of the number of offenders participating in them. However, given that there is an average of eight inmates attending each of the 48 programmes currently in progress, about 384 prisoners will be receiving treatment at the moment.

No records are kept centrally of the number of prisoners who have been recommended for a place on the programme and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The programme is open to all adult male prisoners who have been convicted of a sexual offence, to those whose index offence appears to have had a sexual motive and to those who have been convicted of a sexual offence in the past and are assessed as needing to participate in the programme. Candidates must be assessed as suitable for participation in the programme and they must be willing to participate in it.

There are considerable variations between the dates on which individual prisoners are assessed for participation in the programme and the commencement of treatment. It would not be feasible to make places available on demand for all prisoners who need to undergo it, and the Prison Service, therefore, operates a waiting list system. For determinate sentenced prisoners, the order of priority is determined by an assessment of risk of re-offending balanced against time left to serve; for life sentenced prisoners by their tariff date, or by proximity of the next parole review if the tariff has expired or none was set. In addition to that, programme treatment managers need to ensure that each group has a balance of different types of offender. This means that a prisoner at the top of a waiting list may not necessarily be selected for the next programme. For these reasons, average waiting times between assessment and participation have little significance and are not recorded centrally.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken in response to the report by HM Inspector of Prisons into Wymott Prison; and what plans he has to increase the provision of sex offender therapy programme places there. [110084]

Mr. Boateng: In accordance with the protocol for handling inspection reports, the Prison Service produced an action plan within 30 working days of publication of the report. All but three of the 104 recommendations have been accepted, and an updated action plan showing the progress made will be produced in April 2000, nine months after publication of the report.

Additional resources have been made available under the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review and the number of sex offender treatment programmes is set to increase as follows: 48 places in 1999–2000, 56 places in 2000–01, and 72 places in 2001–02.

Immigration and Asylum (Scottish Executive)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has held with the Scottish Executive concerning a bilateral concordat in relation to the implementation of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999; and if he will make a statement. [109225]

Mrs. Roche: Implementation of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 in Scotland is being pursued in accordance with the administrative arrangements set out in the general concordat between the Home Office and the Scottish Executive. In particular, the National Asylum Support Service is maintaining close contact with the Scottish Executive to ensure the effective implementation of the new asylum support arrangements in Scotland.

Cycling Offences

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by police force the number of fixed penalty cycling offences committed monthly since 1 August 1999. [110021]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information on the new fixed penalty offences introduced on 1 August 1999 is not yet available.

Each police force has been asked to monitor the fixed penalty provisions which came into force on 1 August 1999, and the figures will be published later in the year.

Monthly figures, however, are not being collected centrally.

National Fire College

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in relation to the National Fire College at Moreton-in-Marsh, Gloucestershire, when he will commence implementing the recommendations of the Options Review and over what timescale the implementation will be completed; what discussions he has had with the unions about the recommendations; and what discussions he has had with the private sector about the recommendation to form a private public sector partnership. [110228]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Eccles (Mr. Stewart) on 20 December 1999, Official Report, columns 370–71W. This makes it clear that we have invited the views of all interested parties, including the trade unions, by 18 February 2000. We shall also be seeking the advice of the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council. We will take further decisions on implementation in the light of these consultations.

Polling Booths

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to increase the accessibility of polling booths to the aged who are disabled; [109988]

(2) if he will estimate the increase in the number of people aged 65 or over who would vote in a national election if all polling booths were accessible to those with disabilities [109987]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Representation of the People Bill includes measures specifically aimed at increasing the accessibility of polling places to disabled voters. In addition, guidance on national minimum access standards for polling places was issued in June 1999; new guidance on disabled access to electoral services is being developed, and grants are available to local authorities for temporary ramps and polling screens. No statistics are collected on the age or disability of voters.

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109932]

Mr. Straw: The following Remploy products have been purchased by my Department over the last three years.

Year	Product
1997	Office furniture Binders
1998	Office furniture Binders
1999	Office furniture

Franchise

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for legislation that would allow long-term residents in the UK from member states of the European Union to be able to vote in all UK elections. [109997]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: European Union citizens can vote in local and European Parliamentary elections in the member state in which they are resident. We have no plans unilaterally to extend these voting rights to Parliamentary elections in this country.

West Mercia Police

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civilians were employed by West Mercia Police Authority in each year since 1979. [110120]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is set out in the table.

West Mercia Constabulary
Civilian support staff—1979 to 1999

Year (As at 31 March)	Number of civilians
1979	493
1980	519
1981	540.5
1982	560.5
1983	604.5
1984	701.5
1985	742.5
1986	760
1987	750
1988	744
1989	772
1990	832
1991	836
1992	850
1993	925
1994	918.5
1995	949
1996	963.7
1997	942.1
1998	974.6
1999	975.2
1999 (30 September)	963.6

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his policy with regard to the detention of asylum claimants from states which are party to an association agreement with the European Union; [110031]

(2) what information is given by his Department to asylum seekers from states which are party to an association agreement with the European Union regarding their rights to establish themselves in the UK. [110032]

Mrs. Roche: Association agreements do not provide an automatic right of establishment. Information regarding the right of establishment is not provided routinely, but is available to asylum seekers and others on request.

Decisions on whether detention is appropriate are made on a case-by-case basis. Detention is used only as a last resort, and only those who are inadmissible passengers, illegal entrants or subject to deportation action may be detained. The existence of an association agreement between an asylum seeker's country of origin and the European Union is not taken into account.

Burns Inquiry

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who determined the criteria used in drawing up lists of those invited to (a) give oral evidence to the Burns Inquiry, (b) attend seminar sessions to discuss commissioned research and (c) set up public meetings for the Burns Inquiry team; [109949]

(2) who set down the criteria used to determine which organisations were consulted in drawing up the list of hunting events for members of the Burns Inquiry to attend. [109954]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Committee of Inquiry into Hunting has been set up as a committee which is independent of Government. Terms of reference have been given to the Committee, as set out in the reply by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Wirral, South (Mr. Chapman) on 9 December 1999, Official Report, columns 617-18W.

The conduct of the Committee, within those terms of reference, is a matter for the Chairman and the members of the Inquiry team.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) individuals put forward by interested parties and (b) organisations approached for nominations for membership of the Burns Inquiry. [109953]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Organisations and Government Departments approached for suggestions for names of potential members of the Inquiry team into hunting included:

The Cabinet Office;

Campaign 2000 (the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the International Fund for Animal Welfare and The League Against Cruel Sports);

The Country Landowners Association;

The Countryside Agency;

The Countryside Alliance;

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions;

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food;

The National Trust;

The office of the Secretary of State for Wales; and

The Wildlife Network.

We consulted organisations on the basis that nominations would be received in confidence. It would not be right, therefore, for me to divulge individual names.

Electronic Tracking

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 142W, on electronic tracking, how many offenders have been granted a variation in the hours of a home detention curfew by prison governors; and in the case of each offender on how many occasions the variation was granted. [110135]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not held centrally and could be made available only at disproportionate cost by an examination of individual prisoner records.

Crime (Young People)

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will provide financial support for the work of prisons with schools to direct young people away from crime; [109526]

(2) if he will make it his policy for prisons to use serving prisoners in controlled circumstances to assist young people to address their offending behaviour; [109527]

(3) if he will provide financial support for the work of prisons in developing programmes to address the offending behaviour of young people referred from local courts and youth offending teams; [109525]

(4) if he will make it his policy to include prison staff on youth offending teams. [109524]

Mr. Boateng: Under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, local authorities must plan how youth justice service systems will be delivered locally. If they choose, they may seek to involve the Prison Service in the delivery of those services, including work with schools and the secondment of prison staff to youth offending teams. Funding for this work will, however, in general have to be found from youth offending team resources, since the Prison Service is funded to work with offenders in custody.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the previously planned meetings, and their subject, between his Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109869]

Mr. Straw: No meetings between my Department and its Austrian counterparts have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government, since, so far as I am aware, none were planned.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bilateral meetings were held between his Department and its Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what subjects were discussed at each meeting since May 1997. [109902]

Mr. Straw: My Department does not hold a central record of bilateral meetings with counterparts in other European Union member states. But bilateral meetings with Austrian counterparts in recent years have included:

a visit to Vienna by the United Kingdom's then K4 Co-ordinator on 16–17 September 1997;

a visit I made to Vienna on 14 May 1998 for talks with the then Austrian Ministers of Interior and Justice; and a return visit to London 25 November 1998 by the then Austrian Interior Minister.

All three meetings were in connection with the United Kingdom and Austrian presidencies of the European Union and covered a variety of topics on the Justice and Home Affairs Council agenda.

Hunting with Dogs

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to ban hunting with dogs. [109549]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Foster) on 11 November 1999, Official Report, columns 787–88W.

Sunday Elections

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the additional cost per elector of pilot schemes under which elections take place on Sunday. [109767]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A number of local authorities have applied to run pilot schemes which involve weekend voting but no scheme which provides for voting on Sunday only will be run.

Trial by Jury

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) number and (b) cost of additional appeals to the Crown Court against the (i) verdicts and (ii) sentences of magistrates, under his proposals to restrict the right to trial by jury. [108099]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 2 February 2000]: Only 1 per cent. of defendants appeal against conviction and sentence following a trial in the magistrates courts and the model which has been used to estimate costs assumes that the effect will be de minimis. Even if as many as 10 per cent. of previously electing defendants chose to appeal following conviction after a contested trial, there would be fewer than 200 additional appeals, at a cost of less than £250,000.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Broadcasting

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the EU authorities on the framework for public financing for broadcasting with special reference to licence fee supplements. [110072]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 14 February 2000]: My officials met Commission officials on 26 January, primarily to discuss the Commission's decision on BBC News 24. The various funding options identified in the report of the independent panel, chaired by Gavyn Davies, "Review of the Future Funding of the BBC", were briefly discussed.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which (a) organisations and (b) individuals he has met to discuss broadcasting since 1 May 1997. [109995]

Janet Anderson: My right hon. Friend has discussed broadcasting with a wide range of organisations and individuals since 1 May 1997, and with many of them a number of times. Diary records are not kept by subject matter and it would not be possible to identify all such meetings, formal and informal, in order to provide the comprehensive list sought.

Museums, Libraries and Archives Council

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport with which body the Chief Executive of the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council has a contract of employment. [110108]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The Chief Executive of the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council has a contract of employment with the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council (MLAC).

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what procedures were followed in the selection of a candidate for the new Chief Executive of the New Millennium Experience Company; [109470]

(2) if he will make a statement of the role of Lord Falconer of Thoroton in the appointment of the new Chief Executive of the New Millennium Experience Company. [109472]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The NMEC Board appointed Pierre-Yves Gerbeau as Chief Executive of the Company on 7 February. Mr. Gerbeau's appointment reflects the view that a different approach and different skills are now needed to manage the project successfully during its year of operation. A number of possible candidates were considered before deciding to appoint Mr. Gerbeau. Under the terms of the Financial Memorandum governing relations between the NMEC and its Shareholder, Lord Falconer of Thoroton has approved the appointment.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the balance of the revenues of the New Millennium Experience Company and the operating costs of the Dome. [106354]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 24 January 2000]: It is too early at this stage to make a conclusive estimate but I fully expect the New Millennium Experience Company to meet its income targets and complete the Millennium Experience project within the original £758 million cash-limited budget.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which schools in the Colchester constituency will be eligible to receive free tickets to visit the Millennium Dome; how many pupils in each school will be eligible; and what are the arrangements for the allocation of tickets. [106467]

Janet Anderson: Every school in the Colchester constituency is eligible to apply for up to 100 free tickets to the Dome under the New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) Education Tour scheme. Up to 1,000,000 free tickets are available. The available free tickets are allocated over a series of ballots. The first ballot, for tickets available in February, March and April, took place in November 1999. The second ballot, for tickets available in May, June and July, will take place in February 2000. The third ballot, for tickets available in September, October and November, will take place in June 2000. The final ballot, for tickets available in December, will take place in September 2000. NMEC, through the Education and Learning Experience Managers in its 12 offices countrywide (Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, the North-East, Yorkshire and Humberside, the North-West, the East Midlands, the West Midlands, the East, the South-East, the South-West and London), and through the regional media will continue to ensure that all schools are fully aware of the free ticket scheme and of the education visit arrangements.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) which schools in the Chorley constituency will be eligible to receive free tickets to visit the Millennium Dome; [105039]

(2) how many pupils in each school in the Chorley constituency will be eligible for free tickets to visit the Millennium Dome. [105040]

Janet Anderson: [holding answer 17 January 2000]: Every school in the Chorley constituency is eligible to apply for up to 100 free tickets to the Dome under the New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) Education Tour scheme. Up to 1,000,000 free tickets are available. The available free tickets are allocated over a series of ballots. The first ballot, for tickets available in February, March and April, took place in November 1999. The second ballot, for tickets available in May, June and July, will take place in February 2000. The third ballot, for tickets available in September, October and November, will take place in June 2000. The final ballot, for tickets available in December, will take place in September 2000. Approximately 12 per cent. of all free tickets are available to schools in the North West region as this is the approximate proportion of the school population in that region. NMEC, through the Education and Learning Experience Managers in its 12 offices countrywide (Scotland, Wales, northern Ireland, the north-east, Yorkshire and Humberside, the north-west, the east Midlands, the west Midlands, the east, the south-east, the south-west and London), and through the regional media will continue to ensure that all schools are fully aware of the free ticket scheme and of the education visit arrangements.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what provision is made for students with learning difficulties attending further education establishments to be allocated free tickets to visit the Millennium Experience; and if he will make a statement. [108724]

Janet Anderson: The New Millennium Experience Company are not making free tickets for the Dome available to further education establishments. Free tickets are available to up to 1 million schoolchildren aged between eight and 16. Groups of students are charged £14.50 per head and student card holders wishing to make their own arrangements pay £16.50. NMEC is happy to discuss any special needs which particular visitors and groups might have—for example, special needs groups can bring an enabler with them free of charge and can use the on site car park, provided they are Orange Badge Holders and book beforehand. Hosts can be prepared to receive a particular group and ensure that its members are able to move through zones at their own pace, and buggies and wheelchairs can be arranged. All special needs requirements can be arranged on the Dome ticket line (0870 606 2000) when booking Dome tickets.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what travel assistance is being provided to schools in the Chorley constituency visiting the Dome. [105041]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The costs attributable to the New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) Education Tour scheme at the Dome, including administration of the scheme, the tickets themselves and the management costs of implementing it throughout the year, are being met by NMEC from the Millennium Experience project budget. It is, however, established practice with school trips for the schools to make arrangements for travel and subsistence themselves. NMEC provides all schools with details of travel companies who are offering packages specifically aimed at schools. Additionally, many schools are also well placed to negotiate favourable deals through their established relationships with local travel operators.

Millennium Experience (Sponsorship)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will list the Millennium Experience zones for which final sponsorship arrangements remain outstanding; [106407]

(2) if he will list the (a) zones and (b) corporate sponsors of the Millennium Experience for which agreed sponsorship moneys remain outstanding. [106207]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 27 January 2000]: The target for the New Millennium Experience Company was to raise £150 million of sponsorship value towards its overall income requirement of £758 million. While the company's approach to sponsorship focused on individual exhibit zones, other forms of sponsorship—for example Official Supplier status—were also pursued and achieved. Consequently, once the £150 million was delivered, the company could remain within its £758 million cash-limited budget and deliver the Millennium Experience as planned, even if some exhibit zones were without sponsorship support. Sponsorship support has been achieved for the Work, Learning, Talk, Journey, Body, Shared Ground, Self Portrait, Home Planet, Money and Mind zones. Sponsorship support has also been achieved for Our Town Stage and donations have been received for the Faith zone.

In addition, sponsorship has been achieved for Skyscape and the Greenwich Pavilion, which are integral parts of the Millennium Experience but outside the Dome. Exhibit zones without sponsorship support, but delivered within the cash-limited budget, are Play, Rest, Timekeepers, Living Island and the Millennium Show in the Central Arena.

Those sponsors who have signed contracts with NMEC have paid, and are paying, sponsorship moneys according to the terms of their contracts. The three contracts, outstanding as at 10 February and detailed in my answer to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) on 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 442W, are being taken forward urgently by NMEC and moneys due under their terms will be paid accordingly. The actual amounts are subject to confidentiality provisions applicable to both parties.

BBC

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will take steps to widen the accountability of the BBC. [109993]

Janet Anderson: The independent review panel on the future funding of the BBC made a number of recommendations on BBC transparency and accountability. We intend to announce our decisions on those recommendations shortly.

Transfrontier Television

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to ratify the amendment to the Protocol of the European Convention on Transfrontier Television to enable it to enter into force on 1 October 2000. [110081]

Janet Anderson: The Protocol amending the European Convention on Transfrontier Television will enter into force on 1 October 2000, provided that no State Party to the Convention notifies the Secretary General of the Council of Europe of an objection to its entry into force. The United Kingdom has no plans to make such an objection.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Local Government Finance

Mr. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will exempt from being classified as excessive council tax rises the consequences of complying with the proposals of the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for passporting the increase in education standard spending assessments to education budgets. [110414]

Ms Armstrong: The Secretary of State will not be deciding whether to determine any principles to identify excessive budgets until all local authorities have set their budgets for 2000–01.

Mr. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his policy is on hypothecating standard spending assessments. [110413]

Ms Armstrong: Standard Spending Assessments are a component of the calculation of Revenue Support Grant, which is unhypothecated.

Air Quality Strategy

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what resources he has made available to local authorities to enable them to meet the targets set out in the Air Quality Strategy. [108335]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 3 February 2000]: Since 1997, the Government have provided additional resources each year via the local government finance settlement to enable authorities to carry out their air quality management duties. We have also provided supplementary credit approvals to the value of £12 million over the same period to allow for capital expenditure on air quality monitoring equipment. We have issued guidance and established helpdesks to help with any technical difficulties. Where road transport is the major source of local air pollution, we have encouraged authorities to use their local transport plans where appropriate to bid for additional resources to tackle the problem.

Eurostar

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Stafford (Mr. Kidney) of 19 January 2000, Official Report, column 450W, when the consultant's report on Eurostar services to the North was completed and submitted to Ministers; and when he plans to make a statement on the report. [109296]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 9 February 2000]: The finalised report was completed and submitted to Ministers in January. An announcement of its publication will be made to the House shortly.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what criteria he uses to assess whether potential members of regional development agency boards have expertise in rural matters. [109808]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Candidates are assessed against a range of criteria, which includes demonstrating a detailed understanding of rural and environmental issues and/or a track record of success in the rural economy.

The specific knowledge and expertise sought has varied from region to region and has included experience and knowledge of agriculture and land use industries, experience of social and economic issues affecting rural areas, experience of small and medium businesses in the rural environment and knowledge of issues such as CAP reform. The relative importance of these elements has depended on the balance of skills and expertise available from other potential board members.

Public Bodies

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department which hold their (a) board and (b) working meetings in public; if he will set out the reasons for the remaining meetings being held in private; and if he will arrange to place in the Library the minutes of, and papers presented at, open board meetings of NDPBs responsible to his Department. [105077]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Of the executive NDPBs sponsored by DETR, only the eight Regional Development Agencies are statutorily required to hold an annual board meeting in public, following the publication of their annual reports. However, the following bodies do hold at least one annual open board meeting:

Docklands Light Railway;
Countryside Agency;
English Nature;
English Partnerships;
Environment Agency;
Health & Safety Commission and Executive;
Housing Action Trusts (all five bodies);
Local Government Commission for England;
London Regional Passengers Committee; and National Forest Company.

Other NDPBs, including the Housing Corporation and the Traffic Director for London, hold meetings for stakeholders as and when necessary, and the Environment Agency's regional advisory committees hold their meetings in public. NDPB meetings are held in private for good reason: commercial confidentiality; personal confidentiality; legal matters; and operational reasons.

Many of DETR's executive NDPBs publish the minutes of board meetings and, in some cases, papers on the internet or make them available in paper form or do both. For this reason, and because of the volume of paper involved, I do not propose to ask bodies to place minutes of, and papers for, open board meetings in the Library.

Biosafety Protocol

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the Government's objectives in the forthcoming negotiations on the Biosafety Protocol in Montreal; and if he will make a statement. [105574]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 January 2000]: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 9 February 2000, Official Report, columns 159–60W.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy on the European Commission amendments to Directive 90/220 (Deliberate Release of Genetically Modified Organisms). [108091]

Mr. Meacher: The European Commission's amendments to Directive 90/220/EEC that have been incorporated in the Council's Common Position reflect the political agreement that was reached at the June 1999 Environment Council. The amendments include stricter provisions for environmental risk assessment and monitoring, the time limitation of consents, a tough new labelling regime and the identification and phasing out of antibiotic marker genes where they pose a risk to human health and the environment.

Homelessness

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy on the provision of accommodation for homeless young single people who do not have family support. [110139]

Mr. Mullin: Local authorities currently have a duty under the Housing Act 1996 to accommodate unintentionally homeless people in priority need, which includes those who are vulnerable.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' revised Code of Guidance on the Allocation of Accommodation and Homelessness, due to be published later in the year, will recommend that authorities treat 16 and 17-year-olds who have no back-up support as vulnerable, because of their age and circumstances, and therefore in priority need.

The revised Code of Guidance will recommend that authorities develop strategies for co-ordinated working between agencies, including the value of exploring joint assessments at an early stage for those with multiple needs. The Guidance will also explicitly refer to the need for this approach when assessing homelessness applications from vulnerable people and when dealing with the needs of young people between the ages of 16–18. The forthcoming Housing Green Paper is likely to include proposals for reform of the homelessness legislation to provide further protection for unintentionally homeless people in priority need.

Sustainable Waste Management

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what funding he has made available to local authorities for recycling, composting and other sustainable waste management initiatives for each financial year since the introduction of the landfill tax. [110030]

Mr. Mullin: There has been no specific funding for such initiatives by authorities, but schemes for new waste management facilities can be eligible for funding under the PFI. To date, 7 such schemes have been endorsed and will receive a total of £316.7 million of PFI credits.

As we said in the draft National Waste Strategy, "A way With Waste", we recognise that the move to more integrated, sustainable waste management could incur costs to local authorities. We are therefore considering options for providing more resources to local authority waste management as part of the current Spending Review.

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109934]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department purchased from Remploy office desking and pedestals during the period 1 January 1997 to 31 October 1997 after which the contract with the Department of Transport expired.

The value of this furniture was £39,561 and was purchased by the Central Services Unit of the Department of Transport and the Vehicle Inspectorate Executive Agency (VIEA).

Rent Assessment Panels

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the organisations which have been invited to respond to the consultation paper, entitled "Rent Assessment Panels: Financial Management and Policy Review". [109927]

Mr. Mullin: My Department invited the following organisations to respond to the consultation paper published on 18 November 1999:

All Party Parliamentary Group for Leasehold Reform and Commonhold
Association of Regulated Tenants' Associations
Association of Residential Letting Agents
Association of Residential Managing Agents
Association of Retirement Housing Managers
The Bar Council
British Property Federation
Camden Federation of Private Tenants
Campaign for Fairer Fair Rents
Coalition for the Abolition of Residential Leasehold Council on Tribunals
DETR Trade Union Side
The Enfranchisement League
Federation of Independent Advice Centres
Flat Owners Self-Help Network
Kensington and Chelsea Staying Put
The Law Society
Leasehold Advisory Service
Leasehold Enfranchisement Association
Leasehold Enfranchisement Limited
Lord Chancellor's Department
National Assembly for Wales
National Association of Citizens' Advice Bureaux
National Association of Estate Agents
National Consumer Council
National Federation of Residential Landlords
Rent Assessment Panels in England and Wales
Rent Service Agency
Residential Landlords' Association
Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors Scottish Executive Shelter
Small Landlords' Association.

My Department also invited comments from the following organisations who requested a copy of the consultation paper:

Advice Information and Mediation Service for Private Retirement Housing Association of London Government
Brent Private Tenants' Rights Group
Brighton, Hove and District Leaseholders' Association
Bromford Housing Group
Independent Housing Ombudsman
Liverpool Federation of Council Tenants and Residents' Associations
Local Government Association
Private Tenants' Rights Project
South East Landlords' Association Group.

RAF Base, Little Rissington

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in relation to the Planning Inspector's report on the application for change of use for the hangars at the former RAF base at Little Rissington, Gloucestershire, when (a) the inspector's hearing was concluded, (b) the inspector submitted her report to Ministers and (c) the Minister made a decision. [110227]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The public inquiry concluded on 7 January 1999 and the Government Office for the South West (on behalf of the Secretary of State) received the Inspector's report on 2 August 1999. The decision in this case has been delayed in large part to the complexity of the issues and the changing status of the development plan. The case will be ready to submit to the Secretary of State in the very near future.

DEFENCE

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which programmes set out in the Strategic Defence Review have been (a) cut, (b) delayed and (c) cancelled as a result of the costs incurred by the Kosovo deployment. [108743]

Mr. Hoon: The costs of the Kosovo deployment have had no impact on programmes set out in the SDR. However, the Kosovo deployment has meant that we have not yet been able to implement as much of the SDR as we would have liked at this stage. Some force elements, particularly those in the Army's Formation Readiness cycle, whose training has been disrupted by the deployment to Kosovo, will not be at full readiness levels as soon as planned.

Tracer/FSCS System

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last discussed the Tracer/FSCS system with his United States counterpart; and what conclusions were reached. [109859]

Dr. Moonie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has not had any specific discussions about Tracer with his US counterpart.

Eurofighter

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with the Norwegian Government about the possible purchase of the Eurofighter; and if he will make a statement. [109799]

Dr. Moonie: Discussions with the Norwegian Government are continuing and cover various aspects of governmental support, such as training, to assist in this important marketing campaign. Ministers of the Eurofighter nations have agreed to accept Norway as a member of the NATO Eurofighter and Tornado Management Agency should she choose to buy Eurofighter.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what impact the production of the Meteor Missile in the United Kingdom will have on the missile selection process for the Eurofighter; and if he will make a statement. [109523]

Dr. Moonie: We are currently evaluating the bids we have received from two companies, Matra BAe Dynamics and Raytheon Systems Ltd., to meet our requirement for a Beyond Visual Range Air-to-Air Missile for Eurofighter. Our assessment will take into account the industrial issues associated with each bid together with a wide range of other factors including missile performance, cost, technical risk and overall value for money.

Cruise Missiles (Kosovo)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Cruise missiles launched from UK submarines during the Kosovo conflict. [109837]

Mr. Hoon: The Tomahawk Land Attack Missiles (TLAM) fired from HMS Splendid made a highly effective contribution to the NATO air campaign in Kosovo. They provided a major step forward in UK capability, enabling precision attacks at long range against selected targets. Tomahawks were particularly valuable during periods of poor weather when fewer manned aircraft were able to operate.

Dervish Anti-personnel Land Mines

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to meet representatives from Edinburgh University to discuss the funding of the Dervish anti-personnel land mines clearance project. [109586]

Dr. Moonie: None.

Nancekuke

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what archive files relating to Nancekuke are restricted for publication by the 30-year-rule; and if he will publish them early. [109947]

Dr. Moonie: It is not possible to identify the holding of all archived files relating to defence activities at Nancekuke without incurring disproportionate cost. All department records are reviewed under well established procedures and those selected for permanent preservation are released in accordance with the provisions of the Public Records Acts, 1958 and 1967.

European Council (Helsinki)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes in military structures are required in order to implement the common foreign and security policies agreed at the Helsinki European Council. [109956]

Mr. Hoon: At the Helsinki European Council, EU member states agreed:

(a) to establish the new structures necessary for the EU to decide and, where NATO as a whole is not engaged, act in response to crises. These bodies will include a Military Committee and a Military Staff; and

(b) to set up, from March 2000, the interim arrangements required for the EU to develop its military crisis management procedures, including an interim body of military representatives of member states' Chiefs of Defence.

Defence Diversification Agency

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the budget for the Defence Diversification Agency for the financial year 1999–2000. [110317]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Diversification Agency (DDA) was launched in 1999 with a notional budget of £2 million per annum for its first three years. In the Agency's start-up year (financial year 1999–2000) the forecast budget was set at £1.5 million to take account of the planned ramp up in its operations. The forecast actual spend against this budget is projected to be around £1.1 million.

Cluster Bombs

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if cluster bombs available for use by the armed services (a) at present and (b) within the last three years contain depleted uranium. [110223]

Mr. Spellar: No cluster bombs available for use by UK Armed Forces now or at any time during the last three years have contained depleted uranium.

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110277]

Dr. Moonie: During 1999, the average cost to my Department of distributing a media release centrally was approximately £78.50.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110264]

Dr. Moonie: The information is not available in the requested format. However, MOD's forecast expenditure for 1999–2000 on PR, marketing and business support services (together with expenditure by the Chief of Public Relations but not including the salaries of staff or associated costs) totals £4.849 million. Recruitment costs are not included.

The corresponding figure for 2000–01 is £3.750 million.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source; [110158]

(2) what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110157]

Dr. Moonie: In line with the recommendations of a recent Government-wide review, it is my Department's policy to procure timber and timber products only from sustainable sources and, in the case of tropical hardwood, to require independent verification of those sources. The scheme operated by the Forest Stewardship council is one of a number of available verification schemes mentioned in the DETR's Green Guide for Buyers. Where practicable, the use of reclaimed timber or timber products is also considered. Guidance on the use of paper is set out in the Ministry of Defence's Environmental Manual (JSP 418) and will be reviewed as part of the implementation of the Department's corporate Environmental Management System. A copy of JSP 418 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Housing

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's housing repair programme. [105564]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 18 January 2000]: The Ministry of Defence plans cyclical maintenance and responds to requests for repairs through works services contracts. In Great Britain those works are managed by the Defence Housing Executive (DHE) who have a total repair and maintenance budget of £105.361 million in the current Financial Year. An additional £7.650 million is budgeted for carpets and curtains. Together these support the stock of some 64,000 houses. DHE have strict performance targets for meeting repair requests and these are being upheld.

Overseas and in Northern Ireland repairs and maintenance are actioned through the individual Service establishment's overall repairs and maintenance budget. This covers all Service buildings and office accommodation as well as housing and it is not possible to identify precisely the expenditure for housing alone.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funding his Department has allocated for each of the next three years for the renovation of service housing. [105563]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 18 January 2000]: The funding allocated for the next three years for the renovation of the married quarters estate (the upgrade programme) in Great Britain is as follows:

Financial year	£ million
2000–01	79.7
2001–02	78.8
2002–03	69.5

There is no separate programme for the renovation of Service housing overseas which is undertaken with general estate maintenance.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110278]

Mr. Byers: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 208W.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110265]

Mr. Byers: Most of the Department's publicity budgets, and the details of expenditure on advertising, are not held centrally. Also, in most cases a budget for advertising is not identified separately from other types of publicity or programme spend. The information requested could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Companies House

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the quinquennial review of Companies House will take place; and what the terms of reference for the review will be. [110934]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I am today launching the Quinquennial Review of Companies House.

Agencies and non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) are at the heart of our programme to modernise government. The Government are committed to achieving better public services that are of higher quality and are more responsive to the needs of the people who use them. Regular Agency and NDPB reviews are an important element in ensuring that we have in place the right structures to deliver the Government's agenda effectively and to provide a strong focus on improving future performance.

The terms of reference for the Review of Companies House are:

To consider and to make recommendations regarding:

First, the organisational status which would be most appropriate for the operation and policy of Companies House in the future, taking into account its contribution to the objectives of the Department and of the Government as a whole, including the Modernising Government agenda, developments in the national and international legislative, regulatory and commercial environment; and

Second, whether any changes should be made to the way in which Companies House operates, including its aims and objectives, targets and financial controls; the scope of the activities undertaken; and whether its activities could be done more effectively.

In carrying out both stages of the review, the views of customers, staff and their trade unions, consumers and other interested parties will be fully taken into account.

The review is to be undertaken in accordance with the latest Cabinet Office guidance, published on 31 January 2000.

The Review will be carried out by officials in the Department of Trade and Industry, with specialist advice as appropriate. The work of the Review Team will be overseen by a Steering Group chaired by the Director General of Competition and Markets and including an independent member. The aim will be to complete the review within about six months, as recommended in the Cabinet Office guidance.

As indicated in the terms of reference, the Review Team is seeking the views of interested parties. A questionnaire is available from:

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many bilateral meetings were held between his Department and its Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what was discussed at each meeting since May 1997. [109903]

Mr. Caborn: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those previously planned meetings and their subject, between his Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109905]

Mr. Caborn: The 'Britain Now' campaign, which was to involve a series of commercial and cultural events and was due to be held in Austria in May 2000, has been postponed. It may be rescheduled when the political climate is right and when commercial interests in the events themselves are more secure.

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109774]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Only caterers who meet the statutory requirements of food safety legislation are used as suppliers to the Department. They are audited for compliance before being used for the first time, and then at least annually.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if money from a private company, acting in the capacity of a port authority, is eligible as matched funding for European Objective 2 funding. [110138]

Mr. Caborn: It is perfectly acceptable for projects supported by the structural funds to be part-funded by the private sector. The Government encourage programme partnerships to provide for flexibility in their programmes between private and public funding. The amounts of public and private funding required for programmes are set out in the financial tables in each Single Programming Document which must be agreed with the European Commission.

Cash Machines (Surcharges)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will use his powers under the Prices Act 1974 to regulate the charging of cash machine customers; and if he will make a statement. [109484]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 11 February 2000]: I believe that any charges for cash machines should be clearly displayed before the transaction proceeds. I am aware that the banking industry is currently considering this in the context of the revision to the Banking Code and I hope that a voluntary agreement ensuring transparency will be achieved. Nevertheless, if this is not, I will use my powers in section 4 of the Prices Act 1974 to require the industry to display charges clearly.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers he has to regulate the charging of cash machine customers. [109483]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Under section 4 of the Prices Act 1974 the Secretary of State may by order require that charges for services such as the use of cash machines are indicated.

From 1 March the Director General of Fair Trading will have the power to examine such matters under the Competition Act 1998.

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice he has received from the Trade Attaché of the British Embassy in Chile concerning the trade effects of the arrest of General Pinochet. [110114]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The Commercial Section within our Embassy in Santiago provides regular advice on trade-related opportunities and developments. British companies remain active in Chile, although trade over the past year has been affected by the impact of the Asia crisis on the sub-region, including Chile, rather than by the detention of Senator Pinochet.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the unrecovered loans issued by the Export Credits Guarantee Department over the last 15 years which are attributed to defence-related contracts, broken down by (a) country, (b) financial amount and (c) equipment. [108740]

Mr. Caborn: From information readily available, the value claims paid by ECGD in respect of defence-related contracts under guarantees issued in the last 15 years and which remain outstanding for recovery is as follows:

£ million

Country	Value of claims outstanding
Algeria	98
Egypt	46
Indonesia	131
Jordan	253
Kenya	16

The equipment supplied under these contracts includes aircraft, artillery, naval vessels, vehicles, communications and ancillary equipment.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the losses attributable to defence-related business with the ECGD broken down by (a) country, (b) goods and (c) financial amounts concerned for each year from 1997 to 1999. [108766]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 7 February 2000]: No business for which ECGD has issued cover in the period 1997 to 1999 has given rise to losses.

However ECGD has recognised losses in this period in respect of business which was the subject of guarantees issued prior to 1997. In the case of defence-related business the losses are as follows:

£ million

Market	Amount written off
Burkina Faso	0.6
Egypt	0.7
Tanzania	0.1

Details of the goods are not readily available.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Traffic Accidents

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been killed or seriously injured in road traffic accidents in Northern Ireland since 1988. [110318]

Mr. Ingram: The following table shows the number of fatalities and serious injuries in road traffic accidents in northern Ireland since 1988:

Year	Fatalities	Serious injuries
1988	178	1,969
1989	181	2,014
1990	185	1,993
1991	185	1,648
1992	150	1,841
1993	143	1,725
1994	157	1,648
1995	144	1,532
1996	142	1,599
1997	144	1,548
1998	160	1,538
1999	141	[1]—

Armed Robbery

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many armed robberies there have been in Northern Ireland since the Good Friday Agreement. [110052]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 February 2000]: There have been 729 armed robberies in Northern Ireland during the period from 10 April 1998 to 10 February 2000.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the number of people who have been held at gunpoint in armed robberies in Northern Ireland since the Good Friday Agreement. [110316]

Mr. Ingram: The number of persons held at gunpoint during the 729 armed robberies recorded since the signing of the Good Friday Agreement could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Immigration and Asylum Act 1999

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, in relation to the Memorandum of Understanding published in October 1999, he has attended a joint ministerial committee to discuss matters relating to the implementation of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999; and if he will make a statement. [109226]

Dr. Reid: The implementation of this Act in Scotland has been the subject of regular contact between the Home Office and the relevant bodies in Scotland. UK Government Ministers are in frequent contact with Scottish Ministers on a wide range of matters. This issue has not been the subject of a meeting of the Joint Ministerial Committee.

Bilateral Concordats

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, in relation to the Memorandum of Understanding published in October 1999, he will list the bilateral concordats between the Scottish Executive and UK Government Departments; and if he will make a statement. [109227]

Dr. Reid: The following bilateral concordats between UK Government Departments and the Scottish Executive have been published:

1. Cabinet Office
2. Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions
3. Department for Education and Employment
4. Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (main concordat)
   (a) Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (subject specific concordat on Fisheries)
   (b) Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (subject specific concordat on State Veterinary Services and Animal Disease Compensation)
5. Office for National Statistics/General Register Office for Scotland
6. Department of Trade and Industry
7. HM Treasury and Department of Trade and Industry (subject to specific concordat on public procurement and related international obligations)
8. Health and Safety Executive
9. Department of Culture, Media and Sport
10. Ministry of Defence
11. Lord Chancellor's Department
12. European Structural Funds
13. HM Treasury
14. Department of Health
15. Home Office
16. Department of Social Security.

The bilateral concordats are administrative, not legally binding, agreements between UK Government Departments and the Scottish Executive, setting out their working relationships.

PRIME MINISTER

Austria

Q14. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his policy on the inclusion of the Freedom Party in the Government of Austria. [108949]

The Prime Minister: We made clear our concern at the inclusion of the Freedom Party in the Austrian Government. We have welcomed the fact that the new Austrian Government has committed itself to abiding by the common obligations and values of EU membership, but we will be judging it by its future actions.

NHS Beds (Oxfordshire)

Q16. Dr. Harris: To ask the Prime Minister what is his policy on providing NHS beds to patients in Oxfordshire. [108951]

The Prime Minister: It is the responsibility of individual health authorities to determine the most appropriate balance of health services locally, including the range and number of beds available to the local community.

The hon. Member will be aware that the report of the Government's National Beds Inquiry was published for consultation last week. The facts revealed by the report support our plans to build a new bridge of NHS care for older people between hospital and home and will support the first national strategy for providing NHS beds in 30 years.

The conclusions of the report underline the need for us to consider a variety of forms of care, from acute to community provision, depending on the circumstances. Some services will be provided in a large hospital, some in community hospitals and some will be via improved care services in the home.

Iraq

Q18. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what account Her Majesty's Government have taken of the representations of (a) Denis Halliday, (b) Hans von Sponeck and (c) other senior officials of UN Agencies in relation to UN sanctions in relation to child nutrition and mortality in Iraq. [108953]

The Prime Minister: The Government are very concerned about reports of child morality rates and malnutrition in Iraq. We continue to support efforts to target the humanitarian effort there towards the most vulnerable.

Meanwhile, UN Security Council Resolution 1284, which was drafted and piloted through the Council by the UK, includes a raft of measures providing for an increased and improved "oil for food" programme. It also calls on the Government of Iraq to prioritise its spending under "oil for food" more effectively and to address the needs of vulnerable groups.

If the Iraqi Government had chosen to prioritise properly the humanitarian assistance which has been made available since the start of "oil for food" in 1996, the suffering of the Iraqi people would have been hugely reduced.

Engagements

Mr. Prior: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 16 February. [108947]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I will have further such meetings later today.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 16 February. [109970]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings witn Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I will have further such meetings later today.

UN Agencies (Representations)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what account the Government have taken of the representations of (a) Denis Halliday, (b) Hans von Sponeck and (c) other senior officials of UN agencies in relation to (i) aggravated water shortage in Turkey and (ii) US and UK bombing and the effect on child mortality in Iraq. [108790]

The Prime Minister: We are not aware of any representations by UN officials regarding "aggravated water shortage in Turkey".

All actions by UK and US forces in the No Fly Zones are in response to Iraqi threats and are made in self-defence, as is their right under international law. Our forces make every effort to avoid civilian casualties. Iraqi claims to the contrary should be treated with caution. The Government of Iraq has, for example, previously blamed coalition aircraft for civilian casualties on days when no aircraft were patrolling the No Fly Zones.

Local Government Elections

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of the voting system for local government, with particular reference to proportional representation. [110334]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 February 2000]: We have consistently made clear that we do not propose to change the local government voting system, other than the introduction of the Supplementary Vote system for the election of directly elected mayors. The Local Government Bill now in the House of Lords makes provision for these mayors.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–00 and (b) 2000–01. [110252]

Mr. Foulkes: DFID does not have a specific advertising budget. However, paid advertising in relation to recruitment currently costs around £1 million annually.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the average cost of issuing a media release from her Department in 1999. [110266]

Mr. Foulkes: Our Department issued 89 media releases in 1999 at a total cost of £10,350. The average cost for issuing a press release was £116.29.

East Timor

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the projects and their costs in the reconstruction programme for East Timor. [108904]

Clare Short: At a multi-donor meeting on East Timor in Tokyo in December last year, the UK worked successfully for an international collaborative approach to East Timor. The UN Transitional Administration (UNTAET) and East Timorese representatives will set priorities for reconstruction and the transition to independence; the World Bank and Asian Development Bank will co-ordinate detailed analysis of needs; and donors will operate in this framework working jointly wherever possible. Often a sector-based, programmatic approach will be followed rather than one based on a plethora of small projects.

Donors pledged a total of $522 million for East Timor at the Tokyo meeting. The UK will provide £13 million over three years, the bulk of it channelled through Trust Funds established by the World Bank and the UN. This is in addition to £5.5 million which we made available in the immediate aftermath of the crisis in East Timor which has supported the humanitarian work of a number of international organisations and NGOs, and has helped restore the power supply in Dili.

Sri Lanka

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the humanitarian situation in north and east Sri Lanka. [109517]

Clare Short: The humanitarian situation in Sri Lanka remains difficult as a result of the ongoing conflict. Further displacements occur each time the conflict escalates. Officials from my Department continue to monitor the situation closely. We fund a number of agencies (including Oxfam, Save the Children Fund, the International Committee of the Red Cross, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations Children's Fund) who have well-established programmes providing relief and rehabilitation for those displaced by the conflict.

External Consultants

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the (a) number and (b) value of contracts let by her Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109300]

Mr. Foulkes: Since May 1997, our Departments has not used external consultants or advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list for the financial year 1998–99 the number and total value of contracts let by her Department with external consultants and advisers that have (a) been put out to competitive tender, (b) not been put out to competitive tender and (c) been let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109067]

Mr. Foulkes [holding answer 8 February 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development gave him on 24 November 1999, Official Report, column 132W. Our Department's spend on external consultants and advisers in 1998–99 was £1.83 million. Ten contracts with a value of £926,154 were awarded after competitions. The remaining 24 contracts, with a value of £903,846, were awarded without competition. There were no contracts awarded on a non-commercial basis.

Locally Employed Staff (Wages)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the salary scale for her Department's locally employed staff in (a) Bangkok, (b) Bridgetown, (c) Delhi and (d) Pretoria. [106327]

Mr. Foulkes [holding answer 24 January 2000]: The information is as follows:

Grade		Minimum	Maximum
(a) Bangkok
LEI	Baht	575,340	961,620
LEII	Baht	414,660	728,940

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many bilateral meetings were held between her Department and its Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what was discussed at each meeting since May 1997. [109878]

Mr. Foulkes: The last bilateral meeting between UK and Austrian Development Ministers took place on 22 June 1998, when the Secretary of State for International Development met Mrs. Ferrero-Waldner, the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs. The work programme for the Austrian presidency of the European Union was discussed.

The cost of researching all ministerial or official bilateral meetings in the last five years would be disproportionate.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list those previously planned meetings and their subject, between her Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109893]

Mr. Foulkes: No bilateral meetings between the Department for International Development and its Austrian counterpart had been planned to take place after the formation of the new Austrian Government.

Colombia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department gives to human rights training programmes for the Colombian army. [109520]

Clare Short: Our Department does not give any support to human rights training programmes for the Colombian army.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which British non-Governmental organisations in Colombia are supporting the Colombian Institute of Family Welfare's campaign to encourage peaceful resolution within the country. [109521]

Mr. Foulkes: Our Department has provided £149,905 for a Save the Children Fund project where they are working with five local partners in Colombia, including the Colombian Institute of Family Welfare. The project is meeting the immediate needs of children and adolescents while simultaneously addressing the longer-term rehabilitation aspects including conflict resolution, human rights and local capacity building.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

"Computers Within Reach"

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of the Computers Within Reach scheme on low-income learners and families. [109984]

Mr. Wills: The Government are making £15 million available for a pilot scheme—Computers Within Reach—to enable those who cannot afford new computers to acquire reconditioned computers for use in the home for the purpose of improving their employment prospects, for lifelong learning, or for their children's homework. The pilot scheme will run from April, and evaluation findings of the initiative will be made available in due course.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he has identified the pilot areas for the introduction of the Computers Within Reach scheme for low-income learners and families. [109982]

Mr. Wills: Proposals submitted in response to the Computers Within Reach prospectus published in autumn 1999 are currently being assessed. A final list of pilot projects and areas will be published later this spring.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Computers Within Reach pilot projects for low-income learners and families will begin. [110312]

Mr. Wills: The Computers Within Reach scheme to pilot arrangements in England for enabling those who cannot afford new computers to acquire reconditioned or remaindered computers for use in the home will run from April 2000.

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans the Government have to enable families on low incomes to gain access to home computers. [109184]

Mr. Wills: The Government have made £15 million available for a pilot scheme—Computers Within Reach—to enable those who cannot afford new computers to acquire reconditioned computers for use in the home for the purpose of improving their employment prospects, for lifelong learning, or for their children's homework. The pilot scheme will run from April.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will announce the areas for the pilot scheme for the Computers Within Reach Programme; and what criteria he uses in selecting these pilot areas. [108607]

Mr. Wills: The selection of pilot projects for the Computers Within Reach initiative is currently under way, and includes assessment of proposals submitted in response to the prospectus published in autumn 1999 and follow-up visits to shortlisted projects. All those satisfying an assessment of their technical and financial capability of fulfilling their commitment under the terms of the initiative will be accepted, and a list, with the geographical areas which the projects intend to cover, will be published later this spring.

SSAs

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the education standard spending assessment per (a) primary and (b) secondary pupil in (i) England and Wales and (ii) Wakefield District; what the reasons are for the difference between the two figures; and if he will make a statement. [109805]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information for England is given in the table for 2000–01. Education Standard Spending assessments do not cover Wales. The differences between the figures for England and those for Wakefield are a result of the authority's standard spending assessment which reflects social deprivation, area costs and demographic changes.

	England	Wakefield
Primary SSA per pupil	2,474	2,314
Secondary SSA per pupil	3,175	2,982

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much of Shropshire County Council's standard spending assessment increase for education will not be spent on education; and if he will make a statement. [110121]

Ms Estelle Morris: As part of our drive to raise standards in schools, the Government have announced an extra £1.4 billion for education standard spending assessments in 2000–01, of which Shropshire's share is £4.57 million. I understand that Shropshire County Council has not yet finalised its budget plans for the next financial year. We shall continue to urge them to use all of this additional funding for education.

Departmental Initiatives (Grants)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the initiatives launched by his Department since May 1997 under which specific grants are allocated, indicating in each case and for each financial year the funding provided by central Government. [109309]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The following table lists the education initiatives launched since May 1997 under which specific grants are located, showing for each initiative the amount of funding allocated by the Government in each financial year. The figures for the Standards Fund do not include local education authorities' contributions. The 5.7 per cent. and 5.4 per cent. national increases in Education Standard Spending in 1999–2000 and 2000–01 respectively, include provision for authorities' contributions to the Standards Fund. The Government are also making £390 million available, over the three years from 1999–2000, to increase by 66 per cent. the number of free early years education places available for three-year-olds by 2002.

Notes:

1. Grant for the Education of Traveller and Displaced Persons was in existence prior to May 1997 but became a standard Fund grant in 1999–2000.
2. Ethnic Minority Pupil Achievement replaced the schools' education element of the Home Office Section 11 grant.
3. Both grants for the reduction of class sizes will be paid through the Standards Fund mechanism from 1999–2000 but are covered by their own Regulations and are therefore listed outside the Standards Fund.
4. The Books for Schools grant includes provision for grant maintained schools paid via the Funding Agency for Schools.
5. In 1998–99 a large proportion of nursery education funding was channelled through the Revenue Support Grant.
6. Nearly £1.5 million of credit approval has been allocated for the removal of outside toilets, in addition to the £16.5 million of grant allocated through the Standards Fund.
7. Under the New Deal for Schools, grant that has not been paid through the Standards Fund has been paid direct to voluntary aided schools and to former grant-maintained schools (either direct or through the Funding Agency for Schools).
8. Formula capital grant is paid to schools either through the Standards Fund or direct to Voluntary Aided schools.

Funding

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the funding per pupil in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools for each local education authority in descending order in the last year for which figures are available; and what plans he has to tackle the disparity in funding between local education authorities. [110245]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 15 February 2000]: Set out in the table, in descending order, is the funding for LEA maintained primary (including pre-primary) and secondary schools, on a per pupil basis, for the financial year 1997–98, the latest year for which final figures are available.

The Government announced in November 1998 a three-year review in partnership with local government to look for a way of distributing revenue support grant which is simpler, more stable, more robust and fairer than the present arrangements for SSAs.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what account he took of the speech by the right hon. Member for the Cities of London and Westminster of 3 February 2000, Official Report, columns 1299–1300, in writing to the Leader of Westminster City Council on 7 February. [110409]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend is aware of views expressed in the speech by the right hon. Member for Cities of London and Westminster (Mr. Brooke) of 3 February 2000. He will not take account of the level of an authority's spend in comparison with its standard spending assessment in taking decisions on whether to release its share of the £50 million grant. It is vitally important that the increased funding we have made available for education reaches education budgets. We will therefore continue to urge local authorities to passport the increase in education spending assessments to education budgets. My right hon. Friend will take decisions on the release of the £50 million grant to support school budgets in due course.

Mr. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 7 February to the Leader of Westminster City Council, if he will take account of the authority's cash increase in central support grant when deciding whether to release the council's share of the extra £50 million special grant available for education. [110411]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is for an authority to decide how it uses any increase in central support protection grant in setting its budget. My right hon. Friend will want to see prior confirmation that an authority has increased its education budget by the increase for 2000–01 in its education standard spending assessment before making a decision on the release of its share of the £50 million special grant.

Mr. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what conditions will be attached to the additional special grant of £50 million for education next year; and what the reasons are for attaching these conditions. [110408]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend will want to see prior confirmation that the whole of an authority's increase in its education standard spending assessment has been passed on to its education budget before he takes decisions on the release of that authority's share of the £50 million special grant. Local education authorities will be required to include their share of the £50 million special grant in their schools' delegated budgets. It is vital that the £1.1 billion increase in education standard spending for 2000–01 is not diverted to other services, but reaches local education authority budgets, and that the £50 million in extra grant is used to support school budgets.

Mr. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take into account the fact that an authority is already spending above its education standard spending assessment when distributing his Department's additional special grant of £50 million for education. [110412]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend will not take account of the level of an authority's spend in comparison with its standard spending assessment in taking decisions on whether to release its share of the £50 million special grant. What is important is whether an authority increases its education budget by the increase in its education SSA.

Mr. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many local authorities have confirmed to his Department their intention to passport the whole of their education standard spending assessment increase to their education budget in the next financial year. [110407]

Ms Estelle Morris: To date 113 local authorities in England have confirmed their intention to passport the whole of their education standard spending assessment increase to their education budget.

Skills Development Fund

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the budget for the Skills Development Fund for 1999–2000; how many applications were received for assistance from the Fund for 1999–2000 and how many were successful; and what was the total value of applications for assistance from the Skills Development Fund received for the 1999–2000 bidding round. [110100]

Mr. Wicks: In 1999–2000, a Skills Development Fund budget of £31.75 million was allocated to the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) to enable them to support skills projects. RDAs have provided funding for over 100 SDF projects. The RDAs report that there was considerable interest in the Fund. Information is not held centrally on the number of bids received or their total value.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will permit TECs to commit funds to Objective 2 projects during the changeover period to learning and skills councils. [110136]

Mr. Wicks: The Government wish to maintain the level and quality of local projects with a learning and skills focus which are supported by European funding during the changeover to learning and skills councils. My Department is currently developing a framework for managing TECs' involvement in new projects, including European programmes, and will be issuing guidance shortly to TECs and Government Offices. Where it is necessary, transition arrangements will be made for managing any forward commitment, including transferring this to the learning and skills council if this is appropriate.

Higher Education

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what data he has collated on the number of people participating in higher education, broken down by socio-economic group, in each of the last three years. [109980]

Mr. Wicks: Figures for the number of acceptances by social class are given in the table.

Home domiciled accepted applicants to full-time and sandwich [1] undergraduate courses in the United Kingdom through the Universities and Colleges Admission System (UCAS) by social class [2] 1997 to 1999

	Year of entry
	1997	1998	1999
A Professional	39,644	38,510	38,864
B Intermediate	117,360	115,615	115,667
C1 Skilled non-manual	44,804	44,207	44,474
C2 Skilled manual	37,333	35,610	36,286
D Partly skilled	23,507	22,692	23,097
E Unskilled	5,620	5,329	5,538
Not known	35,050	36,257	39,139
Total	303,318	298,220	303,065

[1] UCAS collect data on full-time and sandwich courses only, therefore no information on part-time acceptances is available.
[2] For students aged under 21, the social class is that of their parents, for those aged 21 and over the social class is that of the student.

Northumberland Education Authority

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much Northumberland Education Authority will receive from the £50 million funding he has announced for the post-16 curriculum; and if he will provide guidance on the amount which should be made available to each high school or college teaching the relevant age group. [109985]

Mr. Wicks: Education Standard Spending for 2000–01 takes into account the estimated recurrent costs—£35 million—of successfully implementing the forthcoming reforms to post-16 qualifications in LEA maintained schools in that year. There is no meaningful way in which the Department can put a precise figure on how much additional funding for implementing the reforms is included in the Northumberland Education Standard Spending Assessment. Nor would it be appropriate for the Department to offer guidance on the resources which should be made available to individual schools in order to implement the reforms. These decisions are, rightly, made locally, in the light of local needs and circumstances.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the proposed arrangements for performance-related pay for teachers in England and Wales will apply to British teachers in European schools. [109941]

Ms Estelle Morris: The proposed performance threshold arrangements and other pay reforms will only have statutory force for those teachers working in England and Wales who are covered by the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document. This is not the position for British teachers in European schools.

Literacy and Numeracy Standards

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each year from 1992 to date the percentage of 11-year-olds that met the expected (a) literacy and (b) numeracy standards in Shropshire; and if he will make a statement. [110131]

Note:

Primary Performance Tables were first published in 1996. Complete national KS2 test information was not available prior to that year. Telford and Wrekin local authority was established as a Unitary Council in April 1998 from within the boundaries of Shropshire local authority.

DfEE Performance Tables

The national Literacy and Numeracy Targets for 2002 are that 80 and 75 per cent. of 11-year-olds should reach Level 4 and above in KS2 English and maths tests respectively.

Oath of Allegiance

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many letters he has received since 1 May 1997 on (a) constituency matters and (b) other matters of Government policy from each of those Members of the House who have not taken the oath of allegiance. [108410]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 3 February 2000]: Correspondence between MPs and Departments is treated in confidence unless the originating MP chooses to make such issues public.

"Computers for Teachers"

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how the supplying companies were chosen for the Computer for Teachers scheme. [108437]

Mr. Wills: The process of identifying suitable companies involved the DfEE issuing a prospectus, to which interested suppliers responded. Their proposals contained financial and historical information on their business, the specifications of computers being offered and a detailed plan of the ways in which the company would support prospective customers. Detailed checks were made on these responses, including checks on the financial strength and stability of the companies concerned. Final selection was made on the basis of advice provided by BECTa to the Tender Board assembled for the purpose. Their decisions and recommendations to the DfEE were arrived at in the light of the proposals received and the results of the checks carried out.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements he has put in place to allow small local suppliers to take part in the Computers for Teachers scheme. [108438]

Mr. Wills: Following the announcement of 12 October, copies of the prospectus were issued on request to interested companies. Nothing in the prospectus precluded applications from small suppliers.

Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if local authorities will have designated representation on the proposed national and local learning and skills councils. [109083]

Mr. Wicks: We have reiterated during the Lords Committee Stage of the Learning and Skills Bill that we would certainly expect national and local LSCs to include members who understand the needs of local communities through current local authority experience. But we also said it would be wrong to go further than that and specify a particular proportion of places for local authority representatives. It would be difficult then to ensure representation for all the other national partners and stakeholder organisations with an interest in post-16 learning.

We also made it clear that Local authorities will be central partners in the new post-16 arrangements—not just in providing and securing learning opportunities in schools and through adult and community learning but also as organisations which are uniquely placed to provide vision and leadership for communities. The new arrangements will mean that local authorities have a greater influence over the whole range of post-16 provision since local LSCs will be required to consult local authorities on their plans and set out in them the post-16 learning provision which LEAs will secure.

Disruptive Pupils

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to ensure schools receive the support they need to deal with disruptive pupils. [110238]

Ms Estelle Morris: The key to tackling poor behaviour is early intervention. My right hon. Friend issued guidance on pupil attendance, behaviour, exclusion and re-integration to Local Education Authorities and schools in July of last year. The School Inclusion: Pupil Support Standards Fund grant will provide £140 million to schools and Local Education Authorities in 2000–01 to help them tackle behaviour problems before they escalate. Nearly £100 million must be devolved to secondary schools. Additional resources are going to secondary schools in some city areas as part of the 'Excellence in Cities' initiative, which will include support for Learning Mentors and Learning Support Units to help combat disruption in the classroom. These measures will help meet the targets to reduce truancy and exclusions by one third by 2002.

Internet

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the primary schools in Lancashire which (a) are and (b) are not connected to the internet via the Lancashire National Grid for Learning. [108808]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 7 February 2000]: As at March 1999, national connection figures stood at 93 per cent. of secondary schools and at least 62 per cent. of primary schools having internet connections.

Information provided by Lancashire Local Education Authority indicates that as at October 1999, 313 primary schools had access to the internet. The 200 primary schools remaining are due to be connected to the internet by the end of July 2000. The Department does not hold information on whether or not these connections are through the Lancashire National Grid for Learning.

Information Technology (Primary Schools)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to develop the provision of information technology within primary schools. [108518]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 7 February 2000]: The implementation of the National Grid for Learning will support investment of £657 million in information and communications technology in maintained schools in England in the period up to 2002. Primary schools were the focus for expenditure in the first phase of this programme (1998–99). This has led to unprecedented improvements in connectivity. Last year there was a four fold improvement in internet connections in primary schools to 62 per cent. We are making increased levels of funding available in the period 2000–02 to enable the remaining primary schools to become connected to the internet and the Grid. At the same time this will enable more primary schools to invest in networked ICT.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to extend the new statutory right to time off for parental leave to staff in his Department whose children were born before 15 December 1999. [108792]

Mr. Wills: The Department for Education and Employment will consider whether it is appropriate to extend the new statutory right for parental leave to staff whose children were born before 15 December 1999 as part of the 2000 pay round.

Departmental Press Releases

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many press releases were issued by his Department in each year since 1995. [109305]

Mr. Wills: The number of press releases issued for each year from 1995 to 1999 by this Department are as follows:

Year	Number
1995	472
1996	443
1997	447
1998	598
1999	605

A-level Points Scores

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what recent research he has commissioned on the relationship between the size of school sixth forms and average A-level points scores; [109126]

(2) what recent research he has commissioned on the relationship between local authorities' average GCSE and A-level points scores, their admissions policies at 11 plus and the structure of post-16 provision. [109127]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The Department has not recently commissioned any research of these types.

Computers in Schools

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if all the computers being installed in schools under the Government's initiative for computers in schools are able to provide access to the internet. [105157]

Mr. Wills: The Government are making available over £700 million over the four years 1998–2002 for the networking and equipping of schools in the UK. The Government are committed to ensuring that all schools are connected to the internet by 2002, but it is for schools to decide their own pattern of ICT purchasing, and whether they make use of services and systems supporting internet connection from each computer, in the light of their own needs and development plans.

The Department published last year the results of the latest annual survey of ICT in provision in schools. Subsequent surveys will indicate the growth in number of schools with internet connections.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the President of the Council if all food served at her Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109780]

Mrs. Beckett: On any occasion when I host departmental functions where food is served, food is obtained from domestic producers who are subject to the necessary legal requirements.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chechnya

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with representatives of the Russian Government about Russia's proposals for ending the war in Chechnya; and if he will make a statement. [110330]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 15 February 2000]: We have had frequent discussions with the Russian Government since the outbreak of hostilities in Chechnya, but have seen no specific Russian proposals for ending the war, other than through military means. We have consistently emphasised to them that their military offensive has an unacceptable human cost and will not solve the problem in the long-term. We have urged Russia to seek a political solution in Chechnya and to make use of the good offices of the OSCE in order to bring this about. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will reiterate this message when he visits Moscow on 21–22 February.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Russian Government concerning the level of civilian casualties in the Chechen war. [110329]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 15 February 2000]: We have repeatedly made representations to the Russian Government about the war in Chechnya. We have stressed to them that the human cost of their military offensive is unacceptable and that they must pursue a political settlement. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister raised our concerns with Mr. Putin on 20 December 1999. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has also been in frequent touch with the Russian Foreign Minister about this, most recently on the telephone on 31 December 1999 and 11 January.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary expects to make further representations on Chechnya when he visits Moscow on 21–22 February.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the nomination of his representative for the intergovernmental conference preparatory group. [107365]

Mr. Vaz: The UK's representative to the intergovernmental conference preparatory group will be Sir Stephen Wall, the UK's Permanent Representative to the European Union.

Indonesia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the (a) Indonesian and (b) Chinese Governments concerning treatment of ethnic Chinese inhabitants within Indonesia. [109677]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary and I raised our concerns about sectarian violence in Indonesia with President Wahid in London on 1 February. We have not made representations to the Chinese Government on this issue.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the religiously motivated violence in Maluku, Indonesia. [109522]

Mr. Battle: We remain deeply concerned about the violence and loss of life in Maluku. Religion is only one of a number of factors involved. My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary and I raised these concerns with President Wahid and his Foreign Minister when they were in London on 1 February. President Wahid reaffirmed his commitment to securing lasting peace between the two communities. We shall support him vigorously in his efforts and stand ready to help him in any way possible.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to send a UN human rights rapporteur to Maluku, Indonesia. [109546]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary discussed the situation in Maluku with President Wahid in London on 1 February. President Wahid reaffirmed his commitment to find a fair and lasting solution through dialogue to the troubles in the province. The Joint Assessment Mission to Maluku of 22–27 January, by the Indonesian Government and international agencies including the United Nations, was an important first step in determining the best way forward.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those previously planned meetings, and their subject, between his Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109895]

Mr. Vaz: There were no previously planned meetings, and therefore none that have been cancelled.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidance he has given to the British Ambassador to Austria in respect of (a) official contacts and meetings with ministers of the new Government, (b) official contacts with officials of the new Government and (c) promoting Britain's interests in Austria. [109867]

Mr. Vaz: According to the measures of the 14 EU member states there are no restrictions on the contacts of the Ambassadors of the 14 in Vienna; contacts between officials also remain unrestricted. Her Majesty's Ambassador in Vienna will use his discretion in developing contacts with a new Government. He will continue to promote Britain's interests there.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's relations with Austria. [109815]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 11 February 2000]: I have made clear the Government's deep concern and distaste at the inclusion in the Austrian Government of a far-right party which appeals to xenophobia. Together with our 13 other partners in the European Union we have implemented measures which will serve to limit the bilateral relationship between the UK and Austria. I have welcomed the fact that the new Austrian Government have committed themselves to abiding by the common obligations and values of EU membership, to combating all forms of discrimination, and to dealing constructively with the country's Nazi past. We will be watching them closely and judging them on whether they fulfil the commitments they have made.

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of evidence presented to the European Commission concerning products processed in Israeli settlements in occupied territories which have been imported into the Community under the EC Trade Agreement with Israel in violation of that Agreement's Origin Rules Protocol; and if he will make representations to the Commission about acting on the evidence presented. [109539]

Mr. Vaz: Customs and Excise is participating in a European Commission initiative to establish the true origin of goods which have been exported to the United Kingdom and other member states under the provisions of the Interim Agreement on trade and trade-related matters between the European Community and the State of Israel. So far investigations have failed to substantiate the alleged non-compliance with the provisions of the Agreement. We will continue to assist the Commission in its investigations and to support the continuing dialogue between the Commission, the Israeli Government, and the Palestinian Authority on this issue.

Sri Lanka

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his Commonwealth counterparts concerning Sri Lanka's membership of the Commonwealth. [109513]

Mr. Hain: None.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment his Department has made of the civil war in Sri Lanka. [109515]

Mr. Hain: We are concerned about the continuing ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka and believe a lasting solution can be reached only through a political settlement. We welcome the Leader of the Opposition's recent offer of support for the President's devolution package. We have made it clear that we stand ready to help in the resolution of the conflict if both sides ask us to play a role.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the Sri Lankan Government's press reporting of the civil war there. [109538]

Mr. Hain: Concerns have been expressed about military censorship in Sri Lanka. We believe it is important for the Sri Lankan Government to maintain their commitment to press freedom, although this needs to take account of the need for military security.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his European counterparts concerning the civil war in Sri Lanka. [109514]

Mr. Hain: The ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka is discussed frequently in EU fora.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to encourage a political settlement between the Sri Lankan Government and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Ealam. [109516]

Mr. Hain: We take every opportunity at bilateral meetings to stress the need for a political settlement to end the ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka. We have made it clear that we stand ready to help if both sides ask us to play a role.

Okinawa G8 Summit

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the dates of the preparatory meetings of officials for the Okinawa G8 Summit in July. [109529]

Mr. Hain: So far there have been two meetings of senior officials to prepare for the Okinawa Summit. G8 Heads' Representatives met on 23–24 January and Foreign Ministry officials met on 5–6 February. Between now and the Summit there will be further meetings of these and Finance Ministry officials to prepare the Summit agenda. In addition there are a number of expert level groups looking at different issues on the G8 agenda such as Nuclear Safety and Non-Proliferation. The Japanese Presidency of the G8 has not publicised the dates yet.

Meetings of Education, Environment, Finance and Foreign Ministers have also been arranged in advance of the Summit (on 1–2 April, 7–9 April, 8 July and 12–13 July respectively).

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109935]

Mr. Hain: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not purchased any products from Remploy during the last three years.

Cameroon

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Cameroon in respect of the arrest of Justice Frederick Ebong, Chief Ayamba and James Sam Sabum; and what assurances he has been given concerning (a) their welfare, (b) their condition and (c) location of their detention. [110066]

Mr. Hain: Justice Ebong, Chief Ayamba and James Sabum were arrested on 8 and 9 January and are being held in Yaounde for firearm offences, following their alleged participation in demonstrations in the South West. Prison conditions are being monitored by the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC).

We regularly raise our concerns about human rights and prison conditions with the Government of Cameroon (GoC). We have urged them to respect human rights and their international obligations. We have also called on them to charge prisoners within 72 hours, as stipulated by Cameroonian law. We did this most recently on 1 February. We will continue to monitor the situation carefully.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received which estimate the total number of members of the Southern Cameroons National Council detained in Yaounde, Buea and Limbe following demonstrations held on 8 and 9 January. [110067]

Mr. Hain: The British High Commission in Yaounde has received reports that 25 SCNC members were arrested following these incidents. We are concerned about this as we are about the general deterioration in human rights in the Cameroon.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received which estimate the total number of English-speaking political prisoners in Nkondengui Prison, Yaounde, Cameroon. [110068]

Mr. Hain: We are aware that 25 English-speaking prisoners are being held in Nkondengui Prison, Yaounde. They were arrested for alleged firearms offences.

Common Foreign and Security Policy

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to ensure a continuation of democratic scrutiny by delegates from the national parliaments of the member and associate member states of the Western European Union following its being subsumed into the European Union. [109950]

Mr. Vaz: The European Union is still considering the modalities for the inclusion of those functions of the WEU necessary for the EU to fulfil its new responsibilities in international crisis management. No decisions have been taken in the EU or WEU on the future of the WEU Assembly.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what political structures are planned to implement the common foreign and security policy provisions of the Helsinki European Council agreement. [109955]

Mr. Vaz: The report to the Helsinki European Council on strengthening the common European policy on security and defence called for a standing Political and Security Committee to be established, and, as an interim measure, for an interim political and security committee to be set up. It called for appropriate structures to be established for dialogue and information on issues related to security and defence policy and crisis management with European NATO members who are not members of the EU and other countries who are candidates for accession to the EU.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes in European Union political institutions are planned in order to implement the common foreign and security policies agreed at the Helsinki European Council. [109951]

Mr. Vaz: The Helsinki European Council adopted conclusions and a report on strengthening the common European policy on security and defence. These do not address the roles of the institutions of the European Union.

NATO

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in setting up consultative mechanisms to integrate the non-EU member countries of the NATO alliance into the planning and conduct of future EU-led operations. [109976]

Mr. Vaz: The Portuguese presidency will report to the Feira European Council in June on proposals for modalities of consultation and/or participation that will allow third states to contribute to EU military crisis management.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms have been set up to ensure adequate consultation between NATO and the EU following the EU Presidency Progress report to the Helsinki European Council on strengthening the common European policy on security and defence. [109981]

Mr. Vaz: Initially, EU/NATO relations are being developed on an informal basis, through contacts between NATO's Secretary General and the EU's CFSP High Representative. The Portuguese presidency will report to the Feira European Council in June on recommendations for EU/NATO modalities.

South Africa

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of South Africa regarding the case of Mzwakhe Mbuli. [110171]

Mr. Hain: The South African Independent Complaints Directorate (ICD) is still investigating the allegation that the South African police coached witnesses to implicate Mr. Mbuli in the armed robbery for which he was convicted. The High Commission in Cape Town is aware of the investigation and will continue to monitor it.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the cattle in the United Kingdom diagnosed as suffering from BSE in each of the last two years for which records are available were (a) female and (b) male. [109329]

Ms Quin: The table shows the number of confirmed cases of BSE reported in the UK in the calendar years 1998 and 1999[1], by sex:

Sex	1998	1999[1]
Male	5	4
Female	3,191	2,166
Total	3,196	2,170

[1] Preliminary figures for 1999 as at 9 February 2000

GM Crops

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what recent communications he has received from the European Commission regarding the inclusion of (a) 98/294/CE ELGINA Monsanto Bt maize, (b) 97/98/CE COMPA CB Novartis Bt/Ht maize, (c) 97/98/CE JORDI CB Novartis Bt/Ht maize and (d) 98/293/CE CHARDON LL Aventis Ht maize GM seeds in the EU Common Catalogue; and if he will make a statement; [110289]

(2) what recent advice he has received about the inclusion of (a) 98/294/CE ELGINA Monsanto Bt/Maize, (b) 97/98/CE COMPA CB Novartis Bt/Ht Maize, (c) 97/98/CE JORDI CB Novartis Bt/Ht Maize and (d) 98/293/CE CHARDON LL Aventis Ht Maize GM seeds in the EU Common Catalogue; and if he will make a statement; [110323]

(3) if EU marketing consent has been given for 97/98/CE JORDI CB Novartis Bt/herbicide tolerant maize; on which national seeds lists the seeds are currently included; and if they are subject to field trials in any EU state. [110292]

Ms Quin [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The EU Commission has written to member states informing them of their proposal to add these varieties to the Common Catalogue, and inviting comments on that proposal. Inclusion on the Common Catalogue is governed by the requirements of EU Directive 70/457 as amended recently by Directive 98/95. It is for the Commission to determine whether all of the requirements of the Directives have been met. We do not have information about field trials in other member states, but CHARDON LL is on the Dutch National List, ELGINA is on the Portuguese National List, COMPA CB is on the Portuguese and Spanish National Lists and JORDI is on the Spanish National List.

Inclusion on the Common Catalogue would not practically affect the position in the UK where the voluntary agreement with the seeds/biotec industry ensures that no marketing of these GM varieties will take place until the current programme of farm scale trials has been completed satisfactorily and independently evaluated.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to lay the draft Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 2000 before Parliament. [110322]

Ms Quin [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The consultation period on these draft Regulations ended on 31 January 2000. We are currently considering the responses we have received and will bring the Regulations before Parliament as soon as possible.

Regional Service Centres

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussion he has had with trade unions about closures of his Department's regional service centres. [110180]

Ms Quin [holding answer 15 February 2000]: My right hon. Friend the Minister is due to meet the Departmental Trade Union Side on 24 February to discuss the report of the Review of CAP Scheme Administration.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of his Department's regional service centre in Worcester. [110181]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 February 2000]: My right hon. Friend the Minister is currently considering the report of the review of CAP Scheme Administration which he commissioned from PriceWaterhouseCoopers (PWC) last autumn. The report recommends that the CAP scheme processing functions currently carried out in MAFF and the Intervention Board should be merged to create a new paying agency, and that the IT systems should be redeveloped to enable claim forms to be submitted and processed electronically. Farmers without access to the Internet would be able to submit their forms via third parties. On this basis PWC consider that it will be possible to deliver a significantly better service to claimants and to reduce the cost to the taxpayer of administering the CAP schemes.

The Department is also drawing up plans to align other aspects of its regional activities with the Government Office network, so as to ensure that it can participate effectively in the formulation of policy at regional level.

The future of the Department's Regional Service Centre at Worcester and of the other eight Regional Service Centres, will be decided in the context of these two reviews. Radical reorganisation of CAP scheme processing will only be possible if funding can be made available in the Spending Review 2000.

Regional Offices

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list his Department's regional offices that are included in the review of service delivery. [110222]

Ms Quin: The Regional Service Centres covered by the Review of CAP Scheme Administration are located in Bristol, Cambridge, Carlisle, Crewe, Exeter, Northallerton, Nottingham, Reading and Worcester. The Intervention Board's offices at Reading and Newcastle upon Tyne are also included in the Review.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he received the report he commissioned regarding reorganisation of his Department's regional offices; and if he will make a statement. [110221]

Ms Quin: My right hon. Friend the Minister received the PriceWaterhouseCoopers report of their Review of CAP Scheme Administration on 25 January 2000. He is currently considering the recommendation to merge the CAP scheme processing functions carried out by MAFF's Regional Service Centres and the Intervention Board.

Farmers (Low Interest Loans)

Dan Norris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce low interest rate loans for farmers. [110236]

Ms Quin: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) on 24 January 2000, Official Report, column 13W.

Bees

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what powers are available to him to control the importation of bees from New Zealand. [110122]

Ms Quin: Importation of bees into the UK is subject to the Importation of Bees Order 1997, which was made under the Bees Act 1980.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many consignments of bees from New Zealand have come to the United Kingdom in each of the last three years; and what authorisations he has issued for the importation of bees from New Zealand during 2000. [110123]

Ms Quin: Figures on the number of consignments are not available. However, the numbers of queen bees imported into the United Kingdom from New Zealand in the past three years are 1,305, 977 and 883 respectively. There have as yet been no imports of bees from New Zealand in 2000.

Genetic Modification

Mr. Webb: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to place genetically modified seeds on the National Seeds List; if any seeds so listed could thereby be used legally in animal feed; and if he will make it his policy not to list any GM seeds until the current programme of safety research has been completed. [109593]

Ms Quin [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Ministers are required by the Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982 (as amended) to consider applications for the entry of plant varieties to the UK National List. Such applications are considered against the requirements of these regulations: namely that a variety is distinct, uniform and stable (DUS) and has a value for cultivation and use (VCU) over those varieties already on the National List. Where the statutory criteria are met, a variety may be proposed for addition to the National List, and where they are not, it is proposed for refusal for addition to the National List. People affected by the proposed decision may make representations and be heard before the decision is taken.

In addition, before a GM plant variety may be proposed for addition to the National List, a marketing consent must have been promulgated under Directive 90/220/EEC, and where appropriate, clearance obtained under the Novel Foods Regulation No.258/97/EEC. Where all of these criteria have been met, a proposal may be made for addition of a plant variety to the National List.A GM forage maize variety (CHARDON LL) has completed National List tests and trials. The trait involved has a marketing clearance under Directive 90/220/EEC, including use for animal feed. It also has clearance under the Novel Foods Regulation. The application for the addition of this variety to the National List is being considered and a decision is likely to be taken shortly about whether to propose the variety for addition to the National List.

The UK's farm scale evaluation programme is additional to the environmental and health assessments of GM crops referred to above. The recent agreement between Government and SCIMAC precludes the general commercialisation of GM maize until 2003 at the earliest—subject to the results of the farm-scale evaluation programme. The programme is intended to provide objective evidence of the effect of growing of these GM crops on a farm scale on biodiversity.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the antibiotic marker genes, and the antibiotics to which they convey resistance, that have been used in the genetic modification of crops which are used as animal feed in the United Kingdom. [109594]

Ms Quin [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Kanamycin and ampicillin resistance marker genes, in either complete or disrupted form, have been used in crops which could be used principally in the form of processed by-products in animal feed. These crops are not grown commercially in this country.

Farmers (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers there were in (a) Shrewsbury and Atcham and (b) Shropshire in (i) 1997 and (ii) 1998. [110127]

Ms Quin: The figures requested are given in the tables:

Analysis of the agriculture labour force with Shrewsbury and Atcham

Category	1997	1998

In 1998 fundamental changes were introduced to the labour questions on the census. It appears that this change may have led to the recording of additional labour that was not previously included on the returns. The change on questions has also led to a redistribution of labour between the various categories. Caution is therefore advised when comparing the 1998 results with previous years.

Farmers Network

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to support the establishment of a national network of farmers' markets. [109807]

Ms Quin: We support the establishment of a national network of farmers' markets and we are working closely with the National Association of Farmers' Markets who have been set up to promote the development of farmers' markets.

BSE

Mr. Collins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the latest figures for the incidence of BSE in Holstein cattle in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [105225]

Ms Quin [holding answer 18 January 2000]: From the start of the BSE epidemic until 1 January 2000, the numbers of BSE cases confirmed in the United Kingdom for Holstein cattle, Holstein cross cattle and similar breeds are given in the table.

Pig Sector

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the pig industry. [105108]

Ms Quin [holding answer 17 January 2000]: Although pig market prices are 12 per cent. higher this year than last, they remain below the cost of production. As a result, pig producers are experiencing severe difficulties and the British pig breeding herd is contracting. Market prospects continue to be depressed, but there should be some further recovery in prices. Our policy is to continue to draw attention to the quality standards and high animal welfare standards in British pig production methods and to encourage retailers and caterers to take this into account when sourcing pigmeat products. The work of MAFF's verification officer is important in these respects. Frequent discussions are held with representatives of the industry.

Sulphuric Acid

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) received on the effect on wildlife of spraying sulphuric acid on crops; and if he will publish the results of such studies. [103394]

Ms Quin: Sulphuric acid is approved as "commodity chemical"—a substance which has pesticidal uses but for which the major uses are non-pesticidal and which no company wishes to market as a pesticide. Commodity chemicals are assessed on the basis of information in the public domain and MAFF has not commissioned studies concerning effects on wildlife. However, under the Wildlife Incident Investigation Scheme, MAFF encourages the reporting of incidents suspected of being caused by pesticides and investigates all reports received. No incidents involving sulphuric acid have been reported in the past decade.

The most recent evaluation of sulphuric acid has been published and the underlying information is available for inspection at the Pesticides Safety Directorate in York.

WALES

Children in Care

10. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about children in care in Wales. [108919]

Mr. Hanson: I meet the First Secretary regularly to discuss a number of issues and my hon. Friend has regular discussions with Jane Hutt the Assembly Health and Social Services Secretary with responsibility for children in care.

Rail Transport

11. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about rail transport in Wales. [108921]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet with the First Secretary on a weekly basis and we discuss a range of issues, including transport in Wales generally and rail transport specifically.

21. Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary about rail transport in Wales. [108932]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet with the First Secretary on a weekly basis and we discuss a range of issues, including transport in Wales generally and rail transport specifically. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State also meets regularly with the Assembly Secretary for Local Government, Environment and Transport.

Cross-border Co-ordination

12. Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will establish a formal mechanism to ensure cross-border co-ordination of decisions affecting communities living close to the English/Welsh border. [108922]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Assembly and its sponsored bodies already have effective arrangements for cross-border co-ordination of decisions with Departments and NDPBs dealing with England. An additional central mechanism would add nothing to these arrangements.

Local Government Finance

13. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to meet the First Secretary to discuss the funding of local government in Wales. [108923]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend meets the First Secretary regularly to discuss a range of issues including the funding of local government in Wales. The allocation of funding to local authorities is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

National Farmers Union

14. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last received correspondence from the leadership of the National Farmers Union in Wales. [108924]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I last received correspondence from the leadership of the National Farmers Union in Wales in late December and I addressed their Welsh Surgery on 1 February.

Transport

15. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has met the First Secretary to discuss the Government's legislative programme and its impact on transport in Wales. [108925]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have regular meetings with the First Secretary to discuss a wide range of issues including the impact of transport in Wales and my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State also meets regularly with the Assembly Secretary for Local Government, Environment and Transport and has discussed the Transport Bill with him.

The Transport Bill was introduced on 1 December 1999 and plays a key role in the implementation of the integrated transport strategy for England and Wales. Responsibility for many aspects of transport in Wales was transferred to the National Assembly for Wales on 1 July 1999. The main exceptions are railways, air and sea transport, which remain a central Government responsibility, working in close co-operation with the Assembly on matters affecting Wales. I am keen to continue dialogue with the Assembly and Cabinet colleagues in order to determine how best to meet the transport needs of Wales.

Social Inclusion

16. Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the development of policies to promote social inclusion in Wales. [108926]

17. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the development of policies to promote social inclusion in Wales. [108927]

Mr. Hanson: This Government are committed to tackling Poverty and Social Exclusion. My right hon. Friend and I are keen to ensure that central Government and the devolved administration in Wales are working together in partnership to promote social inclusion.

I attended the launch of the Government's new Anti-Poverty Strategy in Wales with the Assembly Health Secretary, Jane Hutt, in September. The Assembly is committed to promoting social inclusion and ensuring that strategies, objectives and targets are integrated and give a high priority to the most disadvantaged.

The Joint Ministerial Group on Poverty, on which both the Assembly and the Wales Office are represented, had been set up to tackle poverty and social exclusion in a co-ordinated way.

New Deal (Young People)

18. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of additionality in the New Deal for Young People in Wales. [108928]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have made no such assessment. New Deal for young people is the responsibility of the Department for Education and Employment, on an England and Wales basis. I understand that the Department for Education and Employment have recently undertaken such an assessment covering England and Wales.

Job Creation

19. Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs have been created in Wales since May 1997. [108929]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Figures are not kept for numbers of jobs created in Wales. However, between May 1997 and December 1999 the seasonally adjusted count of claimants of unemployment-related benefit (i.e. Jobseeker's Allowance) has fallen from 81,800 to 59,200, a fall of 22,400 or 27 per cent.

Higher Education Funding

20. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with members of the Welsh Assembly on the funding of students at universities in Wales. [108931]

Mr. Hanson: I recently met with the National Assembly for Wales Secretary for Education and Training, when we discussed a number of issues including the funding of students at universities in Wales. Mr. Middlehurst has said that he will announce in due course increased help for students at higher education institutions in Wales through the Assembly's Higher Education Student Access funds.

Public Expenditure

22. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about overall public expenditure in Wales. [108933]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I usually meet the Assembly First Secretary on a weekly basis to discuss a range of issues, including this one.

Assembly Budget

23. Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about the budget for the National Assembly for Wales for 2000–01. [108934]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I normally meet the Assembly First Secretary on a weekly basis to discuss a range of issues, including this one.

Farming

24. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the First Secretary and the Agriculture Secretary of the National Assembly to discuss farming in Wales. [108935]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary on a weekly basis and we discuss farming in Wales and the whole spectrum of Welsh agriculture. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Wales met the Agriculture Secretary of the National Assembly to discuss farming in Wales in late January.

Advertising Budget

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110254]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department had no advertising budget at its inception on 1 July 1999 and it has no advertising budget proposed for 2000–01.

Block Grant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the size of the block grant for Wales for the next financial year. [108910]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The total Welsh Budget for the National Assembly in 2000–01 is £7,927 million. This is a current figure which may be subject to some small changes reflecting transfers to and from other Government Departments.

Health (Cynon Valley)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will discuss with the First Secretary health issues in the Cynon Valley. [108918]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend has regular meetings with the First Secretary to discuss issues affecting Wales, including health. I meet regularly with Jane Hutt, the Assembly Health and Social Services Secretary. Both my right hon. Friend and I would be happy to discuss any issues raised with us during these meetings.

Funding

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to maximise funding for Wales from abroad. [108920]

Mr. Paul Murphy: As part of the partnership between the National Assembly and central Government I do all I can to secure inward funding.

I am particularly pleased to note that in the period 1 May 1997 to 31 December 1999, the Welsh Development Agency has recorded 284 inward investment projects promising a total of 22,522 new jobs, 9,925 safeguarded jobs and capital investment of £1.9 billion.

CABINET OFFICE

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) if she will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by her Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source; [110195]

(2) what steps she has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by her Department come from a sustainable source. [110194]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Cabinet Office purchases paper and timber products which come from sustainably managed sources, in line with environmental guidance prepared by HM Treasury and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

The Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) label is accepted by buyers as demonstrating that timber and timber products have come from sustainably managed sources. However, it is not practicable to require that all paper and timber products purchased by the Cabinet Office are independently certified by the FSC because this might discriminate against any equally valid schemes and therefore be against public procurement. Specifying just the FSC label might also result in us failing to meet all our requirements as currently only a small percentage of timber products are currently FSC certified.

"Better Government for Older People"

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans she has to increase the number of Better Government for Older People pilot programmes; and if she will establish a pilot programme in Peterborough. [109989]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Better Government for Older People programme was launched in June 1998 with 28 local authority led pilots spread throughout the UK. The pilot phase ends in March. The evaluation and application phase will continue until the end of the year.

The Better Government for Older People Programme (BGOP) aims to improve service delivery; give older people more say; celebrate older people as achievers; and encourage improved partnerships. It is a key part of our modernising Government initiative. BGOP will provide a substantial amount of evidence on what works best in involving older people and better designing services to meet their needs. We aim to spread the lessons emerging from the programme as widely and as quickly as possible through the BGOP Network, which is open to all local authorities. Network events are being held throughout the UK, with the closest one to Peterborough being the Cambridge event on 9 March.

Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, pursuant to her answer of 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 573W, on departmental research contracts, if she will (a) state total expenditure on research let by her

Department since May 1997 and (b) list the titles of all research contracts let by her Department during 1999 and costing £20,000 or more, stating what is the value of each contract, and in each case whether the contract included (i) departmental veto over publication of the research results, (ii) departmental control over the date of publication of the research and (iii) a requirement that the final research results incorporate departmental amendments; and if she will place a copy of the standard research contract currently in use by her Department in the Library. [107093]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Details of my Department's expenditure on research contracts let during 1999 and costing £20,000 or more are as follows:

Title	Value (£)	Right of Veto	Date control	Departmental amendments
Performance Management Working Group Report	24,555	Yes	Internal use only	Yes
People Survey	25,000	Yes	Yes	Yes

Research for Information System Management Guides	60,000	Yes	Yes	Yes
Peoples' Panel Ethnic Minority Booster Research	61,500	Yes	Yes	Yes

Information for earlier years can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. A copy of the standard Cabinet Office terms and conditions has been placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of those entitled to the £100 winter fuel payment to pensioners have received it. [110341]

Angela Eagle: The administration of benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Prior, dated 15 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking what proportion of those pensioners entitled to a £100 Winter Fuel Payment have now received it.

I can now advise that of the 5,313,477 customers across all benefits identified as entitled to a £100 Winter Fuel Payment, 98% have now received their entitlement. The remaining 2% are those payments which have not been collected from the Post Office and which have been returned to the Benefits Agency (BA). They are returned for security reasons so that BA can investigate why it has not been collected by the intended recipient and determine whether any payment should be made.

I hope this is helpful.

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109929]

Angela Eagle: Over the past three years the Department has purchased bespoke office furniture from Remploy which has been manufactured by its network of sites. The Department continues to buy furniture from Remploy. Over the last three years orders amounting to £169,000 in 1997–98, £230,000 in 1998–99 and £178,000 in the current year have been placed.

In addition, up to 1998, Remploy supplied printed forms to the Department. The contract for this work was re-tendered, using EU Procurement procedures. Remploy were unsuccessful in bidding for printed forms but were awarded the contract to supply business cards and other bespoke personal products to the Department. This contract is for three years, expiring in 2001. Orders totalling £21,000 in 1997–98 for printed forms were placed with Remploy. Business cards and other printed items have been purchased totalling £17,000 in 1998–99 and £6,000 to date in the current financial year. Orders this year have reduced, in part, due to a reduction in the movement of staff.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110198]

Mr. Bayley: The Government, through the Green Ministers Committee, has issued a model framework which departments have used as the basis for preparing their own environmental strategies. Among its key aims is to: conserve resources and minimise waste by reducing our reliance on virgin materials and ensuring that any products derived from wildlife—such as paper and timber—are from sustainable sources and comply with EU and international trading agreements such as the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES).

This Department's policy statement/improvement programme which closely follows the model requires that all virgin paper used in products supplied to the Department, whether in its own right or as a consequence of recycled material, is obtained from sustainable managed forest sources. It also provides for timber, wood and plywood to be obtained from sustainable sources. With ownership of the Department's estate having been transferred to the private sector under the Prime contract the Department ensured that these commitments are enshrined in the outsourcing arrangements. The contract states:

"the Prime contractor's purchasing policy will exclude the use of unsustainable timber".

The Department and its contractors monitor performance on these and other aspects of its operations and reports on progress made.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110199]

Mr. Bayley: The FSC label is accepted by buyers as demonstrating that timber and timber products have come from sustainably managed sources.

However it is not practicable to require that all paper and timber products purchased by the Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council because this might discriminate against any equally valid schemes and therefore be against public procurement rules.

Specifying just the FSC label might also result in us failing to meet all our requirements as only a tiny percentage of timber products are currently FSC certified. This is why the Department's policy statement for greening its operations contains a requirement to ensure that suppliers of paper and paper products have in place an acceptable Environmental Policy and requires satisfactory evidence of compliance with published trade or other acceptable environmental standards and guidelines. It also provides for documented proof or, if available, adequate validation under an internationally recognised certification or ecolabelling scheme to ensure that timber, wood or plywood acquired by the Department, or its contractors come from sustainable resources.

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110271]

Mr. Rooker: The average cost of issuing a media release by this Department in 1999 was £51. This figure includes the costs incurred by Headquarters and Agencies. The figure given is the cost charged to us by the Central Office of Information who distribute media releases on our behalf to the national media.

The circulation spread covers all national and regional newspapers; broadcast—both visual and radio; and specialist magazines including the specialist ethnic and disability press. In addition, Benefits Agency releases are also distributed to local newspapers including free news sheets.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110258]

Mr. Rooker: Information is not available in the format requested as the Department does not allocate an annual budget specifically for advertising. Any expenditure on advertising is included in the publicity budget. Such information as is available is as follows.

For the current financial year the budget for Headquarters and the Benefits Agency was £10,155 million. This amount covers the publicity for the whole range of Social Security benefits in addition to information about pensions and fraud. The amount includes the production of information leaflets, helplines, advertising, exhibitions, research and other marketing activity.

The publicity budget for 2000–01 is still under discussion and not yet finalised.

HEALTH

Comparative Statistics

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish figures showing the index for patients who waited less than two hours for emergency admission in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 for (i) England, (ii) East and North Hertfordshire, (iii) West Hertfordshire and (iv) the health authority in the prospering growth area with the (1) lowest figure and (2) highest figure. [109747]

Ms Stuart: The 1998–99 figures showing the index for patients who waited less than two hours for emergency admissions were published in "Quality and Performance in the NHS: High Level Performance Indicators" in June 1999, copies of which are available in the Library. 1998–99 was the first year for which information on emergency admissions was published using this format.

Care (Elderly)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the latest available data on the indicators relating to (a) intensive home care for people aged over 65 years in England and (b) community based care for people over 65 years in England, in the Personal Social Services Performance Assessment Framework. [109848]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The data for indicators in the Personal Social Services Performance Assessment Framework were published on 24 November 1999 in a summary form in "Social Services Performance 1998–99" and in detail in the form of computer tables on the Department of Health's internet site (reference: www.doh.gov.uk/paf/). Final revisions to this data notified to the Department by local authorities will be incorporated into the computer tables by the early summer of this year. Data for 1999–2000 will be published in autumn 2000.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to amend the Department of Health departmental expenditure limit/running cost limit for 1999–2000. [110675]

Mr. Milburn: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates for Class II, Votes 1 and 2 the Department of Health Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £302,308,000 from £40,455,019,000 to £40,757,327,000. The increase is the net effect of changes to Class II, Vote 1 (Hospital, community health, family health and related services, England) of £261,646,000 made up of £113,671,000 in respect of the take up of end year flexibility for NHS trusts, £134,000,000 from the reserve for the cost of generic drugs and clinical negligence claims and £14,000,000 from the capital modernisation fund. In addition the following transfers will take place; £1,094,000 from Northern Ireland for out of area treatments, £177,000 from the National Assembly for Wales general practitioner drug costs and £155,000 from Class III, Vote 1 (Environment, Transport and the Regions: Housing, construction, regeneration, countryside and wildlife, England) for the Victoria Pilot Project. The overall increase is partially offset by transfers of £1,250,000 to Class XII, Vote 3 (Department of Social Security: administration) for the road traffic accident element of the Compensation Recovery Unit; £190,000 to Class XIII, Vote 1 (Scottish Executive) for student bursaries and £11,000 to Class XIV, Vote 1 (National Assembly for Wales) for the Dental Service Increment for Teaching.

The increase of £40,662,000 for Class II, Vote 2 (Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health and personal social services, England) is the net effect of transfers (detailed below) and £16,460,000 take-up of end year flexibility (as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393 and £25,000,000 for claims in respect of asylum seekers grant; £580,000 (£60,000 running costs) from Class IV, Vote 1 (Home Office: administration, police, immigration and other services, England and Wales) for teenage pregnancy unit, publicity and drug project development work; £60,000 (running costs) from Class I, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services), £60,000 (running costs) from Class III, Vote 5 (Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions: administration) and £60,000 (running costs) from Class XII, Vote 3 (Department of Social Security: administration) for the teenage pregnancy unit; £67,000 (running costs) from Class XIII, Vote 1 (Scotland and transfers to the Scottish Consolidated Fund) for the National Screening Committee; £4,000 (running costs) from Department of Health and Social Services, Northern Ireland for the National Screening Committee and Human Genetics Commission. The overall increase is partially offset by transfers of £1,629,000 (£138,000 running costs) to Class X, Vote 2 (Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food) for BSE Inquiry costs.

The Department's gross running cost limit will be decreased by £117,000 from £280,450,000 to £280,333,000 made up of an increase of £173,000 (detailed above) offset by and a transfer within DH DEL to programme expenditure of £290,000 for surveys and research.

The external finance limit for NHS trusts has decreased by £122,596,000 (£50,000,000 non-Voted) from £166,596,000 to £44,000,000.

All increases will either be offset by transfers to or from other Departmental Expenditure Limits (detailed above) or charges to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Hospital Waiting Lists (Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area have been treated privately but paid for by the NHS to help reduce waiting lists in the last 12 months for which figures are available; how much this has cost the NHS; how much it would have cost the NHS if an NHS hospital had carried out the treatment; and what were the transport costs for the patients. [109971]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not available centrally.

Dental Laboratories

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria dental laboratories have to fulfil before being allowed to be used for NHS dental work. [†10392]

Mr. Hutton: Dental laboratories, as manufacturers of custom made appliances, must meet the requirements of the Medical Devices Regulations (SI 1994 No 3017) which include registering with the Medical Devices Agency.

TREASURY

Nancekuke

Ms Atherton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the documents relating to Nancekuke which have been made public that had previously been restricted under the 30 year rule. [109946]

Dr. Moonie: I have been asked to reply.

Following a request from a journalist in July 1999, the Office for National Statistics authorised the early release of a file containing details of a study they had undertaken for the Ministry of Defence, looking at the incidence of industrially related illnesses at the Nancekuke establishment. A number of other papers, unrelated to Nancekuke, were authorised for release at the same time. The file containing the Nancekuke study, with the exception of one document containing individuals' names and medical records, was transferred to the Public Record Office in December 1999 and should now be available for public inspection under their reference RG 26.449.

Registration

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Registrar General has reported his findings of the outcome of consultation following the publication of "Registration: Modernising a Vital Service", on 8 September 1999; and if he will make a statement. [110893]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The consultation period for "Registration: Modernising a Vital Service" ended on 6 December 1999. Over 3,500 copies of the consultation paper and 25,000 summary leaflets were distributed. The consultation paper was also available on the Office for National Statistics web-site.

There were around 1,000 responses to the consultation paper from a wide variety of organisations, local authorities, members of the public and registration officers. There was widespread support for providing registration services in new ways, for better integration with other public services, for improving the use of technology to capture, store and share registration information and for determining national standards. These findings support the Government's commitment to the modernisation of public services in extending the scope of services and information available from civil registration and invoking better use of technology to share information in order, for example, to counter fraud.

I have asked the Registrar General to open discussions to take forward the modernisation of civil registration. Plans for such reforms will be published by the Government in a policy document.

Bonds

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of allowing for third party monitoring where individuals enter into agreements for the issuing of bonds. [110295]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There has been no specific consideration of third party monitoring. However, issues of bonds and other debt securities in the UK, whether by individuals or corporate entities already need to conform with various requirements. In the case of bonds to be admitted to the Official List, issues need to comply with the Listing Rules. In the case of unlisted bonds, the relevant legislation is the Public Offers of Securities Regulations 1995.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that individuals who invest in bonds receive proper advice and guidance. [110294]

Mr. Timms: The UK has a very robust investor protection system. The Financial Services and Markets Bill will enhance and streamline this further, with the introduction of a single regulator supervising a more integrated and efficient approach.

Investors can choose to make decisions on their own, without taking professional advice, but they have a right to receive accurate information that they need to decide whether the investment is right for them, in their circumstances.

Investors who do receive advice must be told about the status of the person they deal with; be asked about their circumstances; be told why an investment is suitable for them in those circumstances; and must be given clear information about commission and charges, the risk, and the aims and benefits of the investment, confirmed in writing.

IR35

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer from what date the Inland Revenue will be in a position to inform an independent contractor whether his tax position for 2000–01 will be changed under the IR35 proposals. [110184]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 February 2000]: Detailed guidance on the application of the law on employment status to workers using service companies was published on 7 February and is available in the House of Commons Library. The Inland Revenue will give advice on whether the proposed legislation will apply to current contracts which extend beyond 6 April. The guidance, and information on how to get advice from the Inland Revenue, is available on the Inland Revenue website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/ir35.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the expected balance in the National Insurance Fund at the end of the years 2000–01 and 2000–02, after taking into account proposed changes in contribution rates and the effects of the provisions of the Welfare Reform and Pensions Act 1999 and the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill; and by how much the balance is expected to exceed the minimum level recommended by the Government Actuary. [108315]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 3 February 2000]: Estimates for Great Britain are shown in the table:

£ million

	Fund balance[1]	Minimum level	Excess
2000–01[2]	16,660	7,870	8,790
2001–02[2]	18,820	8,280	10,540

[1] At the end of the year

[2] The estimates for these years are based on the difference between forecasts or receipts and expenditure. Changes in these forecasts could have a substantial impact on the balance

Unemployment Statistics

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will provide a breakdown of the average monthly flow from the unemployment count for claimants aged 18 to 24 and unemployed for over six months for (a) each year from 1990 to 1999, (b) April 1993 to May 1997, (c) October 1997 to March 1998 and (d) April 1998 to the latest available month; [109273]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of the average monthly flow from the unemployment count for claimants aged over 25 and unemployed for over two years for the periods (a) April 1993 to May 1997, (b) May 1997 to June 1998 and (c) June 1998 to the latest available month. [109274]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Maclean, dated February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary questions on the average monthly flow from the unemployment count for claimants aged 18 to 24 and unemployed for over six months, and for claimants aged over 25 and unemployed for over two years.

The ONS publishes a monthly count of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. The claimant count consists of all people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or National Insurance credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for, and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made.

Information on the numbers of people entering and leaving the claimant count by age and duration on the unadjusted basis can be obtained from the Nomis database at the House of Commons Library.

Between April 1993 and May 1997 in Great Britain on average there were 18,325 (4.6%) claimants aged 25 and over who had been claiming unemployment-related benefit for 2 years or more (computerised claims only) leaving the claimant count each month. The corresponding figure was 16,579 (7.3%) between May 1997 and June 1998 and 8,498 (5.8%) between June 1998 and December 1999. Computerised claims by age and duration data for Northern Ireland is only available from February 1994, therefore the data refer to Great Britain.

NIRS2

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the amount of interest received by the Government as a result of the late payment of benefits to pensioners due to the NIRS2 computer problem (a) to date and (b) by the end of 2000. [109849]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 February 2000]: I regret the information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Household Incomes

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the average household income for each region in descending order for each of the past 10 years; [110207]

(2) if he will list the percentage of household incomes derived from social security benefits in each region of the UK in descending order. [110211]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 16 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary questions on average household incomes and the percentage of household incomes derived from social security benefit.

The attached table shows information from the Family Expenditure Survey (FES) for the period 1992 to 1998–99. Data for earlier years are not readily available and are for two-year periods.

Like all estimates from sample surveys, these figures are subject to sampling variability, so while general trends can be seen, care should be taken in interpreting short-term changes in the data. In 1998–99, for example, in most regions the true average is unlikely to differ from the estimate by more than 7 per cent either way, but in Northern Ireland it may be 15 per cent either way and in the North West 13 per cent, both areas having small samples. In the Rest of the South East, however, the range is only 5 per cent either way. Standard Statistical Regions (SSRs) are used for England because data are not available for Government Office Regions for the earlier years.

The FES shows the proportions of household income derived from social security benefit for 1996–1999 as follows:

SSRs and UK countries	Proportion of gross income deriving from social security benefits
Northern Ireland	22
Wales	19
North	18
Scotland	16
North West	15
Yorkshire and Humberside	15
West Midlands	14
East Midlands	13
United Kingdom	13
England	12
South West	12
East Anglia	12
Greater London	10
Rest of South East	9

These figures are also subject to sampling variability. Data for 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99 have therefore been combined to reduce this variability. In most regions the true figure for each percentage is unlikely to differ from the estimate by more than 1½ percentage points either way. In Northern Ireland the range is 3½ percentage points each way but in the Rest of the South East less than 1. SSRs are used for England because data are not available for Government Office Regions for the earlier years requested in the average household income question.

Technical note

The ranges quoted are the 90% confidence intervals. There is only a one-in-ten chance that the true figure lies outside this estimated range.

Consumer Debt

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the average level of consumer debt owed by families for each of the last 10 years; and what his forecast is for each of the next three years. [110210]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 16 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on consumer debt.

The consumer borrowing series that are readily available, consumer credit and mortgage lending, are published in Table 3.2B of Financial Statistics, a copy of which is in the House of Commons library. The database identifiers are VZRD and AMWT respectively.

Information is not available on the number of families, from which to derive an average. Data on the number of households in Great Britain are published in the annual volume Housing and Construction Statistics, published by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Using estimates of the number of households in the United Kingdom (UK), the average level of consumer borrowing per household was approximately £22,800 in 1998, the latest data available.

We do not make forecasts of these series.

Savings

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the average savings per person expressed as a percentage of take-home pay for each of the past 10 years. [110168]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 16 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your question on average savings per person expressed as a percentage of take home pay.

The precise information requested is not available. However, the households' saving ratio is considered to provide the best available indicator of trends in changes in saving rates. This is derived as the ratio of savings to the total of resources available (more commonly known as disposable income) of the combined households and non-profit institutions serving households (NPISH) sector.

The households' saving ratio is published quarterly in the ONS First Release, "Quarterly National Accounts". The series is held on the ONS database. All sources are available in the House of Commons library.

Household Debt

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of total household debt (a) including housing debt and (b) excluding housing debt; and what were the comparable figures for each May since May 1997. [110092]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Nick St. Aubyn, dated 16 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on household debt.

The figures you requested are tabulated below. National accounts are prepared quarterly and the closest period to May 1997 for which there are data is end-June 1997.

Information on the financial liabilities of the household sector is published in the ONS "Financial Statistics", and is held on the ONS databank. All sources are available in the library.

Household Savings

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his most recent estimate of household savings (a) as a percentage of gross domestic product and (b) in nominal cash terms; and what were the comparable figures for each year since May 1997. [110091]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Nick St. Aubyn, dated 16 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on household savings.

The figures you requested are tabulated below. The latest year available is the twelve month period to September 1999. National accounts are prepared quarterly and the closest period to May 1997 for which there are data is the period April 1997 to March 1998.

Estimates for household saving and GDP are published quarterly in the ONS First Release "Quarterly National Accounts", and the data are held on the ONS database—all sources being available in the library.

[1] Household saving includes saving of non-profit institutions serving households. Separate data for the household sector are not available.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source; [110159]

(2) if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110160]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Stretford and Urmston (Ms Hughes) on 14 February 2000, Official Report, columns 357–58W.

Gold Sales

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the present sterling value of the euros which were purchased from the proceeds of the gold sold from the United Kingdom national reserves in 1999; what value that amount of gold would represent in sterling in today's market; and if he will provide similar statistics for the gold sold in 2000 to date. [110218]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The results of the gold auctions held on 7 July 1999, 21 September 1999, 29 November 1999 and 25 January 2000 are published in Bank of England Press Notices issued on those days. Copies of the Press Notices have been placed in the House of Commons Library. The proceeds from sales of gold have been invested in interest bearing foreign currency assets in broadly the same proportion as currently held in the net foreign currency reserves (40 per cent. dollars; 40 per cent. euro; and 20 per cent. yen).

Charities

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the change in registered charities' receipts since the ending of the dividend tax credit in each year since 1997–98; and what is the estimated average in the current financial year and each of the next three financial years. [110110]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The withdrawal of payable tax credits on charities' dividend income did not come into effect until April 1999. In recognition of their special position, charities will receive generous compensation through public expenditure in the form of a payment of a percentage of the dividends they receive. This will apply for five years from 6 April 1999 on a tapering basis.

The Charity Commission reports £19.75 billion of total annual income at the end of December 1998 in England and Wales (an average of £122 thousand, although nearly three-quarters of registered charities have an income of £10,000 or less).

The latest available figures from the Register show that at the end of September 1999 total annual income had risen to £22.4 billion (an average of £139 thousand). Forecasts of annual income are unavailable.

Debt Rescheduling (Russia)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the arrangements made for debt rescheduling with Russia by the London Club of major creditor banks. [110421]

Mr. Timms: The Russian government has reached a Framework agreement with the London Club of private sector creditors on restructuring its debt. The Government welcome this agreement as it does all efforts by debtors and creditors to resolve their differences amicably.

Advertising Budget

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110273]

Mr. Timms: For the year 1999 the Treasury was billed a total of £23,899.50 for the services of the Central Office of Information, who distribute press releases electronically and by fax. During 1999 the Treasury issued 283 press releases and the total average price was therefore £84.45.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Nationalist and Republican (Definition)

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his oral statement of 8 February 2000, Official Report, column 133, what is his definition of (a) a Nationalist and (b) a Republican. [109589]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Nationalists are those who support the SDLP, and Republicans are those who support Sinn Fein.

Terrorist Violence

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been (a) shot and (b) mutilated by terrorists since the Good Friday Agreement. [110057]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The following table shows the number of persons injured as a result of terrorist attacks during the period 10 April 1998 to 10 February 2000.

	Persons injured
Gunshot wound	155
Explosion	456
Other	1,811
Total	2,422

Notes:
1. 'Gunshot wound' includes casualties as a result of paramilitary style shootings.
2. 'Other' includes casualties as a result of paramilitary style assaults, serious public disorder, etc.
3. The figure of 155 shown in the table includes the 125 paramilitary style shootings shown in PQ 142 plus 30 other terrorist shootings ie those not recorded as paramilitary style.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been murdered by terrorists since the Good Friday Agreement. [110058]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 February 2000]: During the period 10 April 1998 to 10 February 2000, there have been a total of 49 deaths recorded as being attributable to the security situation in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been hospitalised following beatings by terrorists since the Good Friday Agreement. [110056]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 February 2000]: It is not possible to state how many were hospitalised but the following table shows the number of casualties as a result of paramilitary style attacks in Northern Ireland during the period 10 April 1998 to 10 February 2000.

	By Loyalist	By Republican
Shootings	79	46
Assaults	172	88

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many attacks have been made on the RUC since the Good Friday Agreement. [110053]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The following table shows the number of attacks on police during the periods 10 April 1998 to 10 February 2000 and includes all attacks as a result of terrorist activity and serious public disorder.

Type of attack	Number
Firearms	23
Explosive	45
Missile[1]	2,348
Assault	6
Other[2]	279
Total	2,901

[1] "Missile" includes petrol bombs, stones, bottles, etc.
[2] "Other" includes minor assaults (not resulting in injury)

HOME DEPARTMENT

Disqualifications Bill

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) oral and (b) written representations he has received from members of each party represented in the House and the Northern Ireland Assembly on the subject of the Disqualifications Bill indicating in each case the date on which representations were received; and if he will place a copy of each representation in the Library. [107629]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 31 January 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 10 February 2000 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Official Report, column 240W.

Police Pensions

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reform the long-term funding arrangements for police pensions. [109831]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We are closely examining the practicability of establishing a fully funded police pension scheme. This is part of our wider consideration, following a major review, of what long-term changes, if any, are required to the Police Pension Scheme.

Bus Lanes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists were convicted and fined during 1999 for driving in a bus lane in the Greater London area during the restricted hours of bus lane usage. [110215]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Convictions for driving in a bus lane cannot be distinguished from other offences connected with neglect of traffic directions in the statistics collected centrally.

Police Authority Funding

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will announce plans to restructure the formula governing police authority funding. [110178]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The police funding formula has been subject to continuous refinement since its introduction. The Government do not intend to make substantive changes to the formula during the more general review of the local government grant distribution system that is being taken forward in consultation with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Association of Police Authorities.

Clear-up Rates

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the crime clear-up rate was by (a) force and crime type and (b) basic command unit and crime type, for the year ending September 1999. [110306]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Clear-up rates by police force and crime type are published annually. The next set of figures, for the year ended March 1999, will be included in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 1998", which is due to be published in late March. Clear-up rates for basic command units are not currently available.

Information Systems

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) for which National Strategy for Police Information Systems applications contracts have been awarded; who will supply them; what are the projected delivery completion dates; and what are the expected benefits; [110307]

(2) which National Strategy for Police Information Systems applications have been designed to address cross-border crime between police authority areas; [110309]

(3) for which National Strategy for Police Information Systems applications contracts have not been awarded. [110308]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Chief Executive of the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO) informs me that all of the National Strategy for Police Information Systems (NSPIS) applications contracts have been awarded.

The NSPIS applications are linked Information Technology systems enabling sharing of information within individual forces and with other police forces. The applications are also linked to the Police National Computer (PNC).

The table, provided by PITO, details the contract status, supplier, expected delivery date and benefits for the individual NSPIS applications.

NSPIS applications

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110165]

Mr. Straw: My Department aims to purchase only sustainably produced timber and timber products. The Department's current Greening Operations policy (in place since June 1998) contains a specific aim in respect of purchasing wood. This states that as far as possible, wood products purchased by the Home Office should come from forests and plantations that have been independently verified as being well managed. We are continuing to develop and promulgate our Green Procurement policy and emphasise our commitment to considering the environment when making purchases. Our Environmental Action Plan in respect of paper focuses on reducing its overall use and on increasing the percentage of recycled paper used.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110166]

Mr. Straw: In keeping with my Department's policy to minimise any adverse environmental impact of its activities, the Home Office welcomes the availability of independent certification schemes such as that of the Forest Stewardship Council.

Our Greening Operations Policy (agreed in June 1998) encourages the use of ecolabels in procurement and asks purchasers to check environmental claims as thoroughly as possible, particularly with a view to verifying any vague environmental statements.

Nevertheless, it would be impractical for us to commit to ensuring that all paper and timber products that we purchase have the Forest Stewardship Council certificate. Our understanding is that the scheme does not yet cover the broad range of products that we are likely to require. Also, we would not want to find ourselves in breach of public procurement rules by being seen to favour the Forest Stewardship Council's scheme over and above any other equally valid certification scheme.

Contested Cases

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the years 1995 to 1999 (1) the average length of time between charge and final disposal of contested cases involving either way offences tried in the magistrates' courts; [110426]

(2) the average length of time between committal and final disposal of contested cases involving either way offences which are tried before jury after election for jury trial; [110427]

(3) the number and percentage of those who elected trial by jury who pleaded guilty to different offences from those on which they were committed. [110428]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not collected centrally. Information on the time taken in magistrates courts proceedings is collected by the Lord Chancellor's Department's Time Intervals Survey. In 1999 and earlier years, the survey collected data on indictable (including triable either way) cases completed in a sample week of each February, June and October. From 2000 onwards, there will be four surveys during each year.

The average time taken from charge to completion for defendants in contested triable either way cases which were tried in magistrates courts was 147 days in February 1999 and 132 days in both June 1999 and October 1999. These figures include charged defendants but exclude summonsed defendants. For defendants committed for sentence to the Crown Court, time before committal is included but time spent in the Crown Court after committal is not available and therefore is not included.

These figures use information collected for the first time in 1999 following an enhancement to the survey. Equivalent figures for previous years are not available.

Crown Court

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of appeals to the Crown Court per annum as a result of the provisions of the Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill (Lords). [110467]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe), by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary on 27 January 2000, Official Report, column 250W.

Sentencing

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has (1) to end the power of magistrates to commit for sentence to the Crown Court; [110424]

(2) to reduce the sentencing power of magistrates to those available to the Sheriff's Court in Scotland. [110520]

Mr. Charles Clarke: None.

Pleadings

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the requirement to plead before venue for each of the years 1997, 1998 and 1999. [110425]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Section 49 of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 ("plea before venue") provides for defendants in either-way cases to be asked to indicate their plea before the magistrates decide whether to accept or decline jurisdiction. Its purpose is to allow cases in which a guilty plea is indicated, and which might previously have been committed for trial, to be dealt with by the magistrates themselves where the appropriate sentence (after any discount for the guilty plea) is within the court's powers, or if not through being committed to the Crown Court for sentence. The provision was implemented in October 1997, since when (as expected) substantially fewer cases have been committed for trial, but there has been a significant increase in the numbers committed for sentence. Statistics collected by the Crown Prosecution Service show that the percentage of either-way cases committed for trial reaching the Crown Court by way of the defendant's election was 28 per cent. in 1997 and 1998, and 32 per cent. in 1999.

Number of defendants at magistrates' courts committed for trial or sentence for a triable either-way offence [1] in 1997, 1998 and January to June 1999 [2]

Year	Committed for trial	Committed for sentence
1997	66,456	6,823
1998	51,952	18,185
January-June 1999[2]	25,777	9,533

Young Offender Institutions

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to re-role existing adult prisons as (a) young offender institutions or (b) young offender institutions holding 16 and 17-year-olds. [110436]

Mr. Boateng: The Prison Service is considering a proposal to re-role Blantyre House, an adult male prison to a young offender institution for under 18-year-old juvenile males. This forms part of a strategy drawn up by the Prison Service and the Youth Justice Board for securing further improvements to the under 18 secure estate. The proposal is contingent upon the availability of resources and trends in the prison population. No other adult prisons are being considered for re-role to a young offender institution, or young offender institution holding 16 and 17-year-olds. However, changes in the composition of the prison population may require the Prison Service to consider other strategic re-role options in future.

Blantyre House Prison

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the future of Blantyre House Prison. [110438]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Chatham and Aylesford (Mr. Shaw) on 7 February 2000, Official Report, column 48W.

Emergency Services

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the current penalties are for malicious calls to emergency services; and what plans he has to increase the penalties. [110314]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The penalties for malicious calls to the emergency services, as to any other party, are a maximum fine of £5,000, level 5 on the standard scale, or six months' imprisonment, under section 43 of the Telecommunications Act 1984 as amended by section 92 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. Currently there are no plans to increase these. The penalties came into force on 3 February 1995, and include the option of a custodial sentence for the first time.

Charity Commission

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the arrangements for the publication of the Charity Commission's Annual report. [111225]

Mr. Boateng: I have agreed that in future, the Charity Commission's Annual Report should be prepared on a financial year basis, rather than a calendar year basis. As a transitional measure, the next Annual Report will cover the 15 month period, 1 January 1999 to 31 March 2000 and should be published this Autumn.

Boundary Commission

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Boundary Commission for England intends to start the next general review of constituencies in England. [111226]

Mr. Straw: The Commission has given notice of its intention to commence a general review forthwith. It is required to report between April 2003 and April 2007.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for changes to the 1999–2000 Departmental Expenditure Limits and running costs limits within his responsibility. [111227]

Mr. Straw: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL), which covers Class IV Vote 1 (Home Office administration, police, probation, immigration and other services, England and Wales) and Vote 2 (Prisons, England and Wales), will be decreased by £71,496,000 from £7,763,444,000 to £7,691,948,000. The running cost limit will be decreased by £1,141,000 from £2,137,953,000 to £2,136,812,000. A separate running cost limit of £163,000 has been established for expenditure on Welfare to Work.

The changes are the net effect of the following transfers: £60,000 to the Department of Health (Class II Vote 2) towards the cost of the Teenage Pregnancy Implementation Unit; £500,000 to the Department of Health (Class II Vote 2) for the publicity campaign costs on teenage pregnancy; £200,000 from the Lord Chancellor's Department (Class V Vote 1), £93,000 from the Crown Prosecution Service (Class V Vote 4) in relation to contributions towards the costs of the Integrated Business and Information Systems Unit; £1,000,000 from the Department for Education and Employment (Class I Vote 1) and £1,500,000 from the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Class III Vote 1) in support of the Youth Inclusion Programme; £411,000 from the Welsh Assembly (Class XIV Vote 1) to support Closed Circuit Television projects in Wales; £20,000 to the Department of Health (Class II Vote 2) for the development of a handbook for drug service commissioners; £25,000 from the Cabinet Office (Class XVII Vote 1) in relation to the transfer of posts from the security facilities division; £600,000 to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Class VII Vote 1) as contribution towards two overseas drug prevention projects; £9,612,000 from the DEL Reserve in respect of costs arising from the Kosovan humanitarian evacuation programmes; £176,000,000 from the DEL Reserve in respect of asylum support costs; £3,980,000 to the Scottish Executive for asylum seekers support arrangements; £233,000 to the Northern Ireland Office (Class XV Vote 1) in respect of legal services provided to the Northern Ireland Office; £56,000 from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Class VII Vote 1) to cover the short-term attachment of the former Director of Operations (North) to the South African Department of Correctional Services; £45,000,000 from the DEL Reserve to fund the payment of special grant to local authorities for Kosovan evacuees. In addition, £300,000,000 in the DEL for asylum support costs has been reclassified as Annually Managed Expenditure.

The decrease in the department's running costs limit is the net effect of the following transfers: £60,000 to the Department of Health towards the costs of the Teenage Pregnancy Implementation Unit; £200,000 from the Lord Chancellor's Department and £93,000 from the Crown Prosecution Service in relation to contributions towards the costs of the Integrated Business and Information Systems Unit; £25,000 from the Cabinet Office in relation to the transfer of posts from the security facilities division; £8,500,000 from the DEL Reserve in respect of asylum support costs; £233,000 to the Northern Ireland Office in respect of legal services provided to the Northern Ireland Office; £56,000 from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to cover the short term attachment of the former Director of Operations (North) to the South African Department of Correctional Services; £6,000,000 from the Prison Service's running costs to fund the issue of long term loans to the Forensic Science Service; £3,722,000 from the Departmental Unallocated Provision (running costs element) to other current expenditure to fund the purchase of DNA services from the Forensic Science Service.

These changes will be offset by transfers or a charge on the Reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

CABINET OFFICE

Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, pursuant to her answer of 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 573W, what restrictions were placed on contractors carrying out research projects funded by her Department in 1999 in respect of them discussing their findings with journalists (a) before and (b) after publication. [108195]

Mr. Ian McCartney: All research contracts placed using Cabinet Office standard terms and conditions of contract include the requirement for departmental consent to be granted prior to the disclosure of any information to journalists, both before and after publication. A copy of the standard Cabinet Office terms and conditions, which include the relevant conditions, has been placed in the Library.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Subtitling

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if it is his policy to ensure parity of subtitling across BBC1 and BBC2 and the new BBC digital channels before analogue switch-off. [106972]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 26 January 2000]: The provision of subtitling on BBC services is a matter for the BBC Governors and their policy is at least to match the targets set for any other broadcaster. I understand from the BBC that they have concentrated on subtitling their most popular analogue services and this has inevitably led to a disparity between BBC1 and BBC2. As a result, 63 per cent. of BBC1 is currently subtitled and 53 per cent. of BBC2. On digital services, 60 per cent. of output on digital BBC1 and BBC2 and 30 per cent. on BBC Choice is subtitled. The BBC has recently increased its targets for its new digital channels to 50 per cent. of subtitling within five years and 100 per cent. within ten years.

Exercise England

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the future role of Exercise England in setting standards and regulations. [110088]

Kate Hoey: I understand that Exercise England is currently in the hands of the liquidator. Sport England is now looking to safeguard standards by buying out Exercise England's register of members and the rights to its standards and regulations database. Sport England is also considering which organisation would be most suitable to take on this responsibility in future.

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109937]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department has no records of purchasing any Remploy products in the last three financial years.

National Lottery

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the average amount of National Lottery grant awarded (a) per region and (b) per parliamentary constituency in each year since 1995; and if he will make a statement. [109923]

Kate Hoey: The tables show the average amount of National Lottery grant awarded (a) by English region and (b) by UK parliamentary constituency in each year since 1995. These figures have been taken from the National Lottery Awards database which has been compiled using information supplied by the lottery distributing bodies. The tables exclude lottery awards not attributed by the distributing bodies to a particular constituency or region. The constituency or regional information relates to the address to which the lottery award was sent.

Welsh and Gaelic Language Television

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on broadcasting Welsh and Gaelic language television programmes throughout the United Kingdom; and what proposals his Department has in this area. [110285]

Janet Anderson: My Department does not keep a separate record of such representations. S4C has already made its Welsh programmes more widely available on its digital satellite platforms while, in relation to Scottish Gaelic broadcasting, a task force established by the Scottish Executive is currently considering future provision; my Department is keeping in touch with its work.

Works of Art (Nazi Era)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he will make an announcement about the establishment of a panel to advise on works of art which may have been looted during the Nazi era. [111224]

Mr. Alan Howarth: I am very pleased to be able to announce that the right hon. Sir David Hirst has agreed to chair a Spoliation Advisory Panel to consider and advise on claims from anyone who lost possession of a cultural object during the Nazi era where such an object is now in the possession of a UK national collection or in the possession of another UK museum or gallery established for the public benefit.

The draft terms of reference for the Panel are set out below and I am now inviting interested organisations and individuals to let me have their views before these are finalised.

Spoliation Advisory Panel

Draft Constitution and Terms of Reference

Members of the Panel

1. The members of the Spoliation Advisory Panel ("the Panel") will be appointed by the Secretary of State on such terms and conditions as he thinks fit. The Secretary of State shall appoint one member as Chairman of the Panel.

Resources for the Panel

2. The Secretary of State will make available such resources as he considers necessary to enable the Panel to carry out its functions, including administrative support provided by a Secretariat ("the Secretariat").

Functions of the Panel

3. The task of the Panel is to consider claims from anyone (or from any one or more of their heirs), who lost possession of a cultural object ("the object") during the Nazi era, where such object is now in the possession of a UK national collection or in the possession of another UK museum or gallery established for the public benefit ("the institution"). The Panel shall advise the claimant and the institution on what would be appropriate action to take in response to such a claim. The Panel shall also be available to advise about any claim for an item in a private collection at the joint request of the claimant and the owner.

4. In an appropriate case the Panel may also advise the Secretary of State

(a) on what action should be taken in relation to general issues raised by the claim, and/or

(b) where it considers that the circumstances of the particular claim warrant it, on what action should be taken in relation to that claim.

Performance of the Panel's functions

5. In performing the functions set out in paragraphs 3 and 4, the Panel's paramount purpose shall be to achieve a solution which is fair and just both to the claimant and to the institution.

6. For this purpose the Panel shall:

(a) make such factual and legal inquiries, (including the seeking of advice about legal matters, about cultural objects and about valuation of such objects) as the Panel consider appropriate to assess each claim as comprehensively as possible;

(b) assess all information and material submitted by or on behalf of the claimant and the institution or any other person, or otherwise provided or known to the Panel;

(c) examine and determine the circumstances in which the claimant was deprived of the object, whether by theft, forced sale, sale at an undervalue, or otherwise;

(d) evaluate, on the balance of probability, the validity of the claimant's original title to the object, bearing in mind the difficulties of proving such title after the destruction of the Second World War and the Holocaust and the duration of the period which has elapsed since the claimant lost possession of the object;

(e) give due weight to the moral strength of the claimant's case;

(f) evaluate, on the balance of probability, the validity of the institution's title to the object;

(g) consider whether any moral obligation rests on the institution taking into account in particular the circumstances of its acquisition of the object, and its knowledge at that juncture of the object's provenance;

(h) take account of any relevant statutory provisions, including stipulations as to the institution's objectives, and any restrictions on its power of disposal;

(i) take account of the terms of any trust instrument regulating the powers and duties of the trustees of the institution, and give appropriate weight to their fiduciary duties;

(j) where appropriate assess the current market value of the object, and

(k) formulate and submit to the claimant, the institution and the Secretary of State, its advice in a written report, giving reasons.

Scope of Advice

7. If the Panel upholds the claim in principle, it may recommend either:

(a) the return of the object to the claimant, or

(b) the payment of compensation to the claimant, the amount being in the discretion of the Panel having regard to all relevant circumstances, and not tied to the current market value, or

(c) an ex gratia payment to the claimant, or

(d) the display alongside the object of an account of its history and provenance during and since the Nazi era, with special reference to the claimant's interest therein; and

(e) that negotiations should be conducted with the successful claimant in order to implement such a recommendation as expeditiously as possible.

8. Where the Panel considers it appropriate to advise the Secretary of State under paragraph 4(a), it may make such recommendations in relation to general issues raised by the claim as it considers fit.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Sellafield

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the Health and Safety Executive and BNFL to report on the situation at Sellafield; and if he will make a statement. [111334]

Mrs. Liddell: Three HSE reports on the Sellafield site will be published by HSE tomorrow, Friday 18 February. BNFL's report into the data falsification incident at its MOX demonstration facility at Sellafield will also be published tomorrow. I will make arrangements for copies of the three HSE reports and the BNFL report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Hawk Exports (Zimbabwe)

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government of Zimbabwe has paid for (a) the Hawk aircraft and (b) the spare parts for these aircraft for which export credits guarantee support has been given. [109729]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 14 February 2000]: ECGD supported bank loans to finance the sale of Hawk Aircraft and associated equipment to Zimbabwe in 1981 and 1989. These loans have been repaid.

Objective 2

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to enable GO-East to manage the Objective 2 Programme in the Eastern Region. [110137]

Mr. Caborn: In deciding on my Department's contribution to GO East's running costs for the financial year 2000–01 I shall have regard to the additional administrative demands which will arise if the European Commission agrees to a substantial Objective 2 Programme in the East of England.

Ilisu Dam

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Turkey about the impact of the plans for the Ilisu Dam on neighbouring countries; and if he will make a statement. [110029]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State personally has had no discussions with Turkey about this matter. ECGD and FCO officials are continuing discussions with the other export credit agencies involved and the Turkish authorities on a number of issues, of which this is one.

Defence Exports (Bahrain)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the export licences for defence equipment to Bahrain for each of the past five years, indicating the amount underwritten by the ECGD. [109488]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The entry in the relevant legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating. The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated. Between 1 January 1995 and 1 May 1997, 71 Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) and 19 Open Individual Export Licences (OIELs) were issued covering the export to consignees or end-users in Bahrain of goods subject to control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, commonly known as the Military List.

As regards export licences granted for the export of military goods to Bahrain between 2 May 1997 and 31 December 1998, details of export licensing decisions in this period were set out in the Government's Annual Reports published by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in March and November 1999. The Reports give details of the military equipment licensed for export during the periods as well as the ratings of these goods. Similar details of the military equipment licensed in later years will be set out in the relevant Annual Reports.

As regards licences granted since 1 January 1999, the Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated. Between 1 January 1999 and 31 January 2000, 17 SIELs and 14 OIELs have been issued covering the export of the relevant goods to Bahrain. A breakdown of the licences issued between 1 January 1995 and 1 May 1997 and between 1 January 1999 and 31 January 2000 are set out in the tables.

Individual licences may cover a range of goods with various ratings (and OIELs may also cover a range of countries). Where this is so, the licence is included in the table in the total for all of the relevant ratings.

This information does not cover any Media OIELs that may have been issued during this period. Media OIELs authorise the export to all destinations of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists, when working in areas of conflict.

This information should be considered in light of the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 307–08W.

In addition, Bahrain is a permitted destination on certain Open General Export Licences, covering the export of goods on the Military List; copies of all Open General Export Licences valid at any time during the period are in the Library of the House.

As regards export credit, ECGD has not provided cover in support of the export of any defence related equipment to Bahrain in any of the last five years.

Arms Exports

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the circumstances in which it is possible to revoke arms export licences. [110167]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Crosby (Mrs. Curtis-Thomas) on 14 July 1999, Official Report, columns 155–56W.

Post Offices

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the ATMs earmarked for post offices have been installed; and if he will list their whereabouts. [110175]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I understand from the Post Office that the first of the ATMs under the new partnerships will be installed during the summer. The sites are still being agreed but they will be located at post offices across the whole of the UK, in both rural and urban areas.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria will be used to decide the location of the ATMs to be sited at sub-post offices. [110174]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I understand from the Post Office that all offices in the Post Office network will be considered for an ATM. The selection process and criteria used for selection are commercial and operational matters for the Post Office and its partners.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Post Office and banks concerning (a) the criteria to be used for locating ATMs in post offices and (b) the additional income to sub-postmasters and sub-postmistresses ATMs are planned to generate. [110176]

Mr. Alan Johnson: These are commercial and operational matters for the Post Office.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in each year since 1979, how many sub-post offices have closed; and how many of that number closed because no-one was prepared to take the business over following the (a) death and (b) retirement of the sub-postmaster or sub-postmistress. [110177]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I understand from the Post Office that the numbers of sub-post offices which have closed in each financial year since 1978–79 are as follows:

	Number of sub-post offices	Closures in the year
1978–79	21,213	21
1979–80	21,056	157
1980–81	20,894	162
1981–82	20,832	62
1982–83	20,734	98
1983–84	20,499	235
1984–85	20,110	389
1985–86	19,796	314
1986–87	19,708	88
1987–88	19,572	136
1988–89	19,537	35
1989–90	19,532	5
1990–91	19,471	61
1991–92	19,141	330
1992–93	19,041	100
1993–94	18,982	59
1994–95	18,826	156
1995–96	18,761	65
1996–97	18,645	116
1997–98	18,407	238
1998–99	18,175	232

No detailed records are kept on reasons for closure. In many cases closure would have been the result of no one being prepared to take over the business.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110149]

Dr. Howells: The Department's Estates and Facilities Management Directorate has established an Environmental Management System. This system requires all timber products to be purchased from a sustainable source.

The Department encourages staff to purchase recycled paper where practicable; at present recycled paper accounts for some 44 per cent. of consumption.

Small Businesses

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken since 1997 to reduce the administrative burden on small businesses. [109562]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 14 February 2000]: One of the key steps has been to establish the Small Business Service, which is to be formally launched in April this year. One of the primary functions of the Small Business Service will be to find ways of reducing the regulatory burden encountered by small business, by eliminating unnecessary regulations wherever possible and ensuring that the "Think Small First" principle is applied across Whitehall to all new regulations. The Small Business Service will also encourage Government Departments to make information on regulations more comprehensible and accessible, including through an SBS gateway.

Other important measures taken by the Department include exempting small shops from the EU requirement to unit price pre-packaged goods in fixed quantities and exempting employers with 20 or fewer employees from the trade union recognition procedures in the Employment Relations Act 1999. In addition we have recently consulted on proposals to increase the threshold below which companies are not required to have their accounts independently audited.

Nuclear Fuel (South Korea)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantity of nuclear fuel containing reprocessed uranium has been (a) licensed for export and (b) subsequently exported by BNFL to South Korea for use in the Hanaro research reactor at Daeduk; and what bilateral nuclear co-operation agreements are in force between the United Kingdom and South Korea. [109908]

Mrs. Liddell: An export licence was granted on 11 November 1997 for the export of up to 50kg of recycled low enriched uranium powder to the Republic of Korea for research and development on nuclear fuel. My officials have been informed by the company that a shipment of 43.7kg of uranium was made under this licence in 1998. I am disclosing this information in accordance with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

The UK has an agreement with the Republic of Korea for Co-operation in the Peaceful uses of Nuclear Energy which was presented to Parliament in June 1992 (cmnd 1961).

BRITECH Initiative

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those firms participating in the BRITECH initiative in (a) Israel and (b) Britain. [109540]

Ms Hewitt: The BRITECH Foundation Ltd., which administers the BRITECH Fund, has recently been established. The Foundation has not yet made any grants from the Fund to UK or Israeli firms.

Home Work Convention

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to ratify ILO Convention No. 177 on Home Work; and if he will make a statement. [110381]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government are committed to fair and decent minimum standards for all workers, including those who work from home. Our approach is fully in line with the principles of the ILO Convention which calls for policies to promote equality of treatment between homeworkers and other workers. The Government White Paper published in December 1997 makes it clear that we are working towards ratification of the Convention, on a basis which does not impose excessive burdens on business.

Competition Act 1998

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many requests there have been for the Director General of Fair Trading to examine agreements under section 12 of the Competition Act 1998. [110365]

Dr. Howells: None. Parties cannot make use of the notification provisions in Part I of the Act until the Act itself comes fully into force on 1 March 2000. The transitional arrangements in schedule 13 of the Act allow parties to agreements made between the time the Act received Royal Assent (9 November 1998) and 1 March 2000 to notify those agreements to the Director General for guidance. To date (15 February) there have been 10 such notifications.

Hydro-Agri

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Hydro-Agri's plans to restructure their UK operations. [110209]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 15 February 2000]: I am aware that discussions are taking place concerning the future of Hydro-Agri's fertiliser manufacturing plant at Immingham. However, as it is a commercial matter for the company, it is not an issue on which it would be appropriate for me to comment.

Millennium Bug

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what identifiable operational difficulties were caused to (a) nuclear power stations and (b) other nuclear facilities as a result of computer and other malfunctions arising from the Year 2000 millennium bug. [110651]

Mrs. Liddell: No identifiable operational difficulties occurred at any of the nuclear installations in the UK because of Y2k difficulties.

Ukraine

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, under the G8 memorandum of understanding, Ukraine is intended to receive international funding for the continuing Chernobyl clean-up operation (a) before and (b) after the closure of reactor number three. [110573]

Mrs. Liddell: The G7/EU Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with Ukraine covers a wide range of support to Ukraine to allow them to close Chernobyl by 2000—including assistance in areas of nuclear safety, energy efficiency, energy investments and the social impact resulting from closure. The MOU does not stipulate whether this support is to be given before or after closure of Chernobyl 3. In practice, much assistance has already been given and will continue after the anticipated closure of Chernobyl this year.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much Britain has pledged as part of the G8 funding for the Chernobyl clean-up operation. [110574]

Mrs. Liddell: The UK has pledged $16.82 million to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) managed Chernobyl Shelter Fund (CSF), set up to finance work to repair the sarcophagus surrounding the damaged reactor 4 at Chernobyl, and a contribution of £18.25 million has been made to the EBRD managed Nuclear Safety Account (NSA), which is helping to fund a range of nuclear safety projects, including two pre-decommissioning facilities at Chernobyl. Further G8 contributions to the CSF are under consideration.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the UK and EU tariffs applicable to products imported from Ukraine. [110578]

Mr. Caborn: Goods imported from the Ukraine into the EU are charged either the tariffs laid down in the Common Customs Tariff of the European Communities, or, if they qualify, the preferential rates applicable to Ukrainian goods under the Community's Generalised Scheme of Preference.

Full details are published in Her Majesty's Customs and Excise Integrated Tariff of the United Kingdom, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110718]

Dr. Howells: The Department's current policy is not to use peat compost.

Recycling

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportions of the material in (a) cars, (b) computers, (c) refrigerators and (d) televisions are recycled. [110349]

Ms Hewitt: There are no published "average" figures for the recycled content of any of these products. However, there are industry estimates available for the amounts of each product which are recycled at the end of their lives, except for televisions, where the level of recycling is low and no firm figures are available.

(a) Cars—according to figures from the industry's Automotive Consortium on Recycling and Disposal report, 1.8 million vehicles (two million tonnes) came to the end of their lives in 1998. Around 75 per cent. of the material from these vehicles was recovered for reuse.

(b) Computers—the Industry Council for Electronic Equipment Recycling (ICER) estimates waste arisings of 125,000 tonnes of IT equipment per year. In 1997, recyclers handled around 30,100 tonnes of this equipment of which about 35 per cent. was reused and 58 per cent. was recycled, which equates to a recycling rate of 14 per cent. for IT equipment.

(c) Refrigerators—ICER estimate that approximately 90 per cent. of large white goods, including refrigerators, are entering the recycling market. The former Warren Spring Laboratory estimated in 1993 that around 59 per cent. of material in refrigerators is recycled when processed by a shredder.

(d) Televisions—televisions fall into the category generally known as brown goods. ICER estimate annual waste arisings in this category of around 53,300 tonnes, and televisions are thought to make up around 50 per cent. of this total. The recycling of televisions is not as commercially attractive as the recycling of computer equipment. As a result, the level of recycling is low and no firm figures are available.

Custodian of Enemy Property, Palestine

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has completed the report into the affairs of the Custodian of Enemy Property, Palestine. [111238]

Mr. Byers: Yes. I have arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109783]

Mr. Lock [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The Department has contracted out catering. All food served at official functions by the caterers fully complies with current Environmental Health Authority legislation. The caterers are also ISO 9002 accredited.

Our caterers confirm under their specification that all pig and cow meat purchased by their supplier is born and bred in either the UK or Ireland, that the livestock are free range, and not fed meat and bonemeal foodstuffs. Their supplier is audited and verified regularly to ensure compliance with these specifications.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110163]

Mr. Lock: The Lord Chancellor's Department includes a requirement in specifications for plain paper, and paper for publications, that any virgin wood pulp is to be sourced from sustainably managed forests. My Department also specifies that all timber products be sourced from independently verified sustainable sources and that no products supplied to us are made from rare woods as classified by the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES).

Mr. Reed: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110164]

Mr. Lock: The Lord Chancellor's Department already requires all timber and timber products to come from independently verified sustainable sources. No accreditation body is currently specified for certificates, but the supplier of our plain paper is part of a group supporting the verification of forestry management standards via the Forest Stewardship Council accreditation process.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Budget Requirements (London)

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what budget requirements he has set for the Greater London Authority, Transport for London, the London Development Agency, the Metropolitan Police Authority and the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority for 2000–01; and what will be the Greater London Authority's precepts for that year. [111119]

Mr. Hill: After considering responses to the consultation paper announced on 27 January 2000, Official Report, column 270W, I have today decided not to alter the proposed consolidated budget requirement for the GLA and functional bodies for 2000–01 of £2,178,800,000. The component budget requirements will also remain unchanged. These are:

Greater London Authority	32,500,000
Transport for London	9,900,000
London Development Agency	0
Metropolitan Police Authority	1,830,000,000
London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority	306,400,000

I have determined General GLA Grant at £22,300,000 and today will be issuing on behalf of the GLA precepts totalling £335,702,801. For a Band D council tax payer, this is equivalent to £122.98 a year in the London boroughs and £32.03 a year in the City, of which £1.72 or about 3p a week, is to fund the new GLA services.

Regional Eurostar Services

Mr. Doug Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has received the consultants report he commissioned on regional Eurostar services; and if he will make a statement. [111272]

Mr. Hill: Arthur D. Little's report on regional Eurostar services is published today. I have placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses.

The report considers whether Eurostar services directly serving the English regions and Scotland would be financially viable, and what wider transport and social benefits they would bring. The consultants consulted widely with local and regional authorities and groups. The report provides an independent assessment of the costs and impacts of a range of options.

Under Section 40 of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987, the British Railways Board, now part of the Shadow Strategic Rail Authority, has a duty to prepare a plan for regional international rail services. The Board is now reviewing its 1989 plan. It will no doubt wish to consider the Arthur D. Little report in that review, which it expects to conclude in early summer. In the longer term, the Strategic Rail Authority will have a duty to produce a strategy for services in various parts of Great Britain for facilitating the carriage of passengers by way of the Channel Tunnel.

I am today giving the go ahead for Eurostar UK Limited to lease some of the regional trains to GNER for a limited period, for additional services on the East Coast Main Line. This will allow regional passengers to enjoy an immediate benefit from the investment made in these trains, while leaving open future options for the use of the trains for regional Eurostar services. This arrangement accords with the recommendation of the Select Committee on the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs that leasing to a domestic rail operator should be considered while decisions on regional Eurostar services were under review.

Free Parking

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with each of the London borough councils as to their policy of providing free parking facilities within their borough; and if he will make a statement. [108016]

Mr. Hill: The Secretary of State's "Traffic Management and Parking Guidance for London", published in February 1998, a copy of which is in the Library, gives advice to the London boroughs on the development of a parking strategy and the level of parking charges, which must be set for traffic management reasons. I am in contact with the London boroughs (including regular meetings with the Association of London Government) on all their transport and traffic management issues.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what child care provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by (i) his departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department; what was the cost to parents of this child care; and how many parents used the facilities. [108832]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office set out in his reply of 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 518–20W, the importance of family friendly policies to the Civil Service Reform programme, and action in respect of the pilot studies.

In this Department (i) DETR(C) provides 11 subsidised workplace nursery places. The DETR(C) subsidy for nursery places is 48 per cent. The weekly cost to parents for each place for financial year 1998–99 ranged from £79.00 to £84.50. A total of 10 parents used the nurseries during that period.

DETR(C) participates in a Holiday Playscheme open to permanent members of staff with children between the ages of five and 12 years. The Department funds 50 per cent. of the cost of places. The daily cost to parents in financial year 1998–99 was £8.06. A total number of 28 parents used the playscheme.

Provision of child care differs across the Executive Agencies. Most provide holiday playschemes and subsidised nursery places. The cost to parents for the financial year 1998–99 ranged from £52.00 to £80.00 per week for a nursery place, and between £5.00 to £9.00 a day for a playscheme place. The total number of parents in the Executive Agencies making use of child care provision ranged from five to 40.

The Department and its Executive Agencies will reimburse child care costs incurred when work requirements demand a change to a member of staff's normal working hours eg to attend a training course.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what provisions are made available to (i) departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department, for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contract, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers' leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108849]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office set out in his reply of 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 519–22W, corporate actions that we are taking as part of the civil service reform programme to improve the balance between work and private life. In this Department (including its Agencies) staff with one year of service or more are entitled to 18 weeks maternity leave on full pay plus up to 34 weeks unpaid maternity leave in the period of 11 weeks before and 41 weeks after childbirth. Staff with more than 26 weeks, but less than one year, of service are entitled to 18 weeks maternity leave with Statutory Maternity Pay and 22 weeks unpaid leave in the period of 11 weeks before and 29 weeks after childbirth. Staff with less than 26 weeks service are entitled to 18 weeks unpaid maternity leave which may be extended by a further 11 weeks.

Across the Department, paternity leave ranges from between five and 10 days on full pay. This leave may be taken either at the time of the birth or during the following weeks. Unpaid paternity leave of varying lengths is offered in some parts of the Department. Parental leave applies across the Department as set out in the Maternity and Parental Leave etc. Regulations 1999. Departmental staff are covered by arrangements based on the default provisions as set out in the Maternity and Parental Leave etc. Regulations 1999.

Flexible working hours are, subject to management requirements, available to staff across the Department. A variety of arrangements and opportunities for part-time working and job sharing are available throughout the Department with some parts now opening up all posts to part-time and job sharing unless it is operationally vital that they be full time only. Across the Department paid leave up to five days may be granted to DETR(C) staff to take care of or make arrangements for dealing with the illness of a sick child. Additionally a period of unpaid leave may be granted if the illness continues.

Homeworking is available throughout the Department subject to the cost and business implications. Requests to work from home are generally taken on a case-by-case basis. Requests to work to term time or annual hours contracts will be considered throughout the Department. Child care support throughout the Department ranges from participation in subsidised workplace nurseries and holiday playschemes and reimbursement of additional child care costs incurred by attending training or other work events.

Career breaks of up to five years unpaid are open to staff throughout the Department. In all the above cases the criteria used to judge eligibility is based on statutory requirements and/or on staff handbooks and particular Agency guidelines. In some cases management discretion will apply.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in each of the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of his Department (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [108971]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office set out in his reply of 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 519W, corporate actions that we are taking as part of the Civil Service reform programme to improve the balance between work and private life. In this Department (including its Agencies) the number of women who have returned to work after childbirth in the last five years are as follows:

	Women returning after childbirth	Number of which returned before end of maternity leave
1995	129	15
1996	116	22
1997	150	35
1998	141	28
1999	118	25

We are unable to provide reliable information on the time range and mean time for staff returning to work after childbirth and before the end of maternity leave.

As regards the number of women returning to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, we do not have figures for 1995 and 1996; however, the figures for 1997 to 1999 are:

13 in 1997
22 in 1998
15 in 1999.

The average hours worked ranged from between 21.3 to 23.9. Finally, the number of women who returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours are:

16 in 1995 and 1996;
23 in 1997;
38 in 1998; and
23 in 1999.

Unfit Drivers

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what further measures he plans to prevent persons who are unfit to drive from being licensed to drive vehicles on public roads. [109814]

Mr. Hill: The present legislative and administrative systems are intended to allow only those who qualify to be granted a driving licence. It is not at present planned to introduce further measures. However, the statutory requirement to declare medical conditions that may affect a person's fitness to drive will continue to be reinforced through publicity and, with their co-operation, through the medical profession.

Car Insurance

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to combat the avoidance of car insurance. [109579]

Mr. Hill: Evidence of valid insurance must be produced when a vehicle is licensed and the Vehicle Excise Duty is paid. Police have wide powers to stop vehicles and check insurance. As a result more than 250,000 motorists are convicted of insurance evasion each year. When vehicles are clamped and impounded for not displaying a tax disc an insurance certificate must be produced in order to buy the disc and reclaim the vehicle. The department is supporting the Association of British Insurers in setting up a computerised insurance database with links to the vehicle register. This should be operational by autumn next year.

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce measures to make the displaying of a car insurance certificate on the car compulsory. [109580]

Mr. Hill: Display of a certificate would provide no assurance that the driver was covered by an insurance policy or was complying with policy conditions. Although the Government have not discarded the possibility of a requirement to display evidence of insurance, it appears at present that other measures, such as a computerised insurance database, would offer a better approach to the problem of the irresponsible minority of drivers who fail to take out insurance.

Chief Nuclear Inspector

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the reason for the Chief Nuclear Inspector's recent visit to Japan; and what discussions he held about the purpose of his visit with departmental Ministers and Officials in advance of his visit. [109907]

Mr. Meacher: HM Chief Inspector of Nuclear Installations, Mr. Laurence Williams, visited Japan on 7–11 February to brief his opposite number on the conclusions of HSE's forthcoming report "An Investigation into the falsification of pellet diameter data in the MOX Demonstration Facility at the BNFL Sellafield site and the effect of this on the safety of MOX fuel in use". He was not part of the Department of Trade and Industry team visiting Japan at the same time.

My Department was briefed by HSE officials about the purpose of the visit. In view of her accountability to Parliament for nuclear safety, the Minister of State for Energy and Competitiveness in Europe met the Chief Inspector and HSE officials on 2 February, following which she wrote to the Chair of the Health and Safety Commission to stress the independence of the HSE. I am placing in the Library a copy of this letter, together with a letter to the Japanese Minister for International Trade and Industry on 26 January about the Chief Inspector's visit.

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many cases were heard in 1999 against employers who had exposed their workforce to asbestos; how many employers were found guilty of this offence; and what fines were imposed. [109998]

Mr. Meacher: Information for December 1999 is not yet available.

Between 1 January and 30 November 1999, 39 cases were heard for breaches of the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987 (as amended). This figure includes cases against both employers and the self-employed, and comprises 100 informations laid, or charges preferred (Scotland). It includes all breaches of the Regulations, not all of which may have been for permitting the exposure of employees to asbestos.

The provisional results, recorded so far, indicate that there were 31 guilty verdicts on individual informations laid or charges preferred. One case was referred to a higher court on indictment, 67 cases were adjourned, and a result of not guilty was found on one charge preferred.

The fines imposed as a result of the 31 guilty verdicts on individual informations laid or charges preferred were as follows:

1 fine of £100,000
2 fines of £60,000
3 fines of £6,000
5 fines of £5,000
2 fines of £4,000
3 fines of £3,500
3 fines of £2,500
2 fines of £2,000
1 fine of £1,500
4 fines of £1,000
1 fine amount unrecorded.

In addition three cases resulted in a Community Service order and one defendant was conditionally discharged.

Health and Safety Prosecutions

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the average fine imposed in cases heard in 1999 against employers for health and safety offences involving their workforce; and if he will make a statement. [109999]

Mr. Meacher: The average fine imposed on employers and others convicted in Health and Safety Executive cases heard in 1998–99 was £6,654, per defendant. The average fine in such cases, per individual offence, was £5,038. These are provisional figures. The average fine per individual offence following local authority prosecutions in health and safety at work cases was £2,224 in 1997–98. Providing a figure for the average fine in cases against employers for offences involving their workforce would entail disproportionate cost.

The general level of fines imposed by the courts for health and safety at work offences has been far too low to properly reflect their true seriousness. In November 1998, the Court of Appeal said in a judgment that health and safety fines were too low and set out factors which should guide future health and safety sentencing. I welcome the Health and Safety at Work (Offences) Bill introduced to Parliament by my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, North (Mr. Savidge) which is taking forward the Government's intention to raise the maximum penalties for health and safety offences, especially making imprisonment available for a wider range of these offences. I hope this measure will send a clear message to all employers that society will not tolerate failures to safeguard health and safety.

Motor Vehicle Ban

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the advantages and disadvantages of banning motor vehicles from UK cities for a period of one day as part of an experimental environmental awareness programme. [110000]

Mr. Hill: Our view is that it is for local authorities to assess the case for banning motor vehicles, if they wish to, taking into account local circumstances. I understand that several UK local authorities are interested in taking part in the European Car Free Day on 22 September 2000.

Urban Waste Water Directive

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the Anglian region to meet the requirements of the Urban Waste Water Directive for primary and secondary sewage treatment. [109948]

Mr. Mullin: Following our decision in September 1998 to reverse the previous Government's policy of seeking to apply primary treatment only, for coastal discharges into areas of high natural dispersion, water companies are required to install secondary treatment at all major discharges as soon as practicable. Wherever possible they are expected to meet the initial deadlines set out in the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive. The majority of large works in Anglian region already have secondary treatment and we expect these to be compliant at or before the end of December 2000. Seven coastal discharges, into areas previously designated as areas of high natural dispersion, will have secondary treatment installed at or before December 2001. Some of these works already have primary treatment. In other cases, primary treatment will be installed as part of the total scheme to deliver treatment to secondary level.

Secondary treatment for smaller works will be delivered as part of the investment programme for Anglian water provided for in the recent determination by OFWAT of price limits for the period 2000 to 2005. These schemes are scheduled to be delivered by the end of March 2005, within the timescale required by the Directive.

The Environment Agency has agreed completion dates for each of these schemes with Anglian water. We expect the Agency to make prompt use of its enforcement powers, if the dates are not met.

Newspaper Recycling

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assistance his Department gives to the UK newsprint industry to encourage newspaper recycling (a) at a local level and (b) at a national level. [110101]

Mr. Mullin: At present, my Department gives no assistance to the UK newsprint industry.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent assessment he has made of the environmental implications of newspaper recycling. [110103]

Mr. Mullin: I have taken into account a range of reports and investigations into the implications of newspaper recycling from a variety of sources. At this stage, there is no common agreement on the precise impacts of newspaper recycling in comparison with other end-of-life options.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will calculate the proportion of newsprint currently consisting of recycled material. [110105]

Mr. Mullin: According to information supplied by the Newspaper Publishers Association, newspaper publishers in the UK use newsprint containing both virgin and recycled paper in varying proportions, and on average recycled paper made up 52.4 per cent. of the raw material for UK newspapers in 1998.

Euratom

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for further consultation on the European Union Directive 96/29 on Euratom. [110172]

Mr. Meacher: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) on 14 February 2000, Official Report, columns 356–57W.

Public Transport Employees (Attacks)

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many recorded attacks there were upon public transport employees in each of the years from 1992 to date. [110239]

Mr. Meacher: The only statutory reporting system for attacks on employees in public sector transport is the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 (RIDDOR), which came into effect on 1 April 1996. RIDDOR defined, for the first time, an "accident" as including "an act of non-consensual violence done to a person at work".

RIDDOR requires the reporting of all incidents which cause a fatality or major injury, or result in the employee being unable to work or to undertake the full range of their normal duties, for more than three days.

Reported assaults on employees in public transport sectors subject to RIDDOR are as follows:

	Number
1996–97	522
1997–98	577
1998–99	[1]651

Manor Farm Estate, Scunthorpe

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure that the residents of the Manor Farm Estate in Scunthorpe receive a definite offer of 100 per cent. compensation immediately. [110311]

Mr. Mullin: On 30 November 1999, my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning and officials of the Department met representatives of North Lincolnshire Council, my hon. Friend the Member for Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) and also a local estate agent acting on behalf of the property owners, to discuss the issue of compensation. At that meeting a number of options were explored, with a view to seeking the best possible solution and a fair deal for those concerned.

From that we believe that a positive way forward, involving the use of "buy back" provisions, has been identified. This, including the proposed compensation arrangements, is now subject to further discussions between North Lincolnshire Council and the owner-occupiers concerned. My Department and North Lincolnshire are hopeful that this will lead to a positive outcome for all concerned.

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110259]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 February 2000]: The Department's advertising budget for 1999–2000 is £13,160,000 and for 2000–01 is £16,150,000. The Department uses advertising, in conjunction with a range of other publicity activities, to promote its key road safety messages (on subjects such as drinking and driving, speed, using mobile phones while driving and rear seat belts) and environmental awareness messages (through the Are You Doing Your Bit? campaign). The figures provided do not include the cost of statutory and recruitment advertising.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110272]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 February 2000]: The average cost of issuing a press release in 1999 was £104.

Devolved Assemblies

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for holding referendums to establish elected devolved assemblies in the regions of England. [110440]

Ms Beverley Hughes: We said in our manifesto that, in time, we would introduce legislation to allow people, region by region, to decide in referendums whether they wanted directly elected regional government. We remain committed to this. However, finding the right arrangements may take time, just as the arrangements for Scotland, Wales and London have taken time.

Rail Safety

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress of Sir David Davies' assessment of rail safety systems. [110384]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 16 February 2000]: Sir David Davies' report on train protection systems will be published shortly.

Secondment Policy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the secondment policy in his Department. [110672]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department has a long history of seconding staff to organisations outside the civil service and of taking inward secondees. There have been secondments with the wider public sector, the private sector and the voluntary sector. The Department intends to build on these links as part of the Modernising Government initiative on bringing in talent and creating a more open civil service.

Second Homes

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many second homes entitled to the 50 per cent. council tax discount there are in each district and county/unitary authority area; and what percentage they represent of domestic housing stock in each such area. [110204]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 15 February 2000]: I have placed in the Library of the House today a table showing the latest available information on the number of dwellings in each English district and county/unitary authority area which are entitled to the 50 per cent. council tax discount. Not all of the dwellings that receive the discount are second or holiday homes.

The Department does not collect separate information on these dwellings. The 50 per cent. discount applies to all unoccupied dwellings and certain occupied dwellings such as those where all of the residents are disregarded—for example, households consisting of someone who is severely mentally impaired and their carer.

National Air Traffic Services

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people are employed by the National Air Traffic Services at (a) Prestwick in Scotland and (b) in total throughout the United Kingdom. [111005]

Mr. Mullin: The air traffic control facilities at Prestwick comprise the Scottish Area Control Centre (ScACC), which handles traffic over Scotland and Northern Ireland, and the Oceanic Area Control Centre (OACC), which handles traffic over the north Atlantic to the west of the UK and Ireland. The combined facilities, sometimes referred to as ScOACC, currently employ a total of 532 staff, including 217 controllers. The overall number of UK staff employed by National Air Traffic Services totalled 5,372 at 31 March 1999.

Leasehold Reform

Mr. Portillo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to introduce legislation to enfranchise leaseholders. [110465]

Mr. Raynsford: Leaseholders of houses already enjoy rights to enfranchise their property under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967, and leaseholders of flats enjoy collective enfranchisement rights under the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993. We intend to make these existing rights easier to exercise. The first stage in this will be the publication of a draft Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Bill for consultation during this session, as was announced in the Gracious Speech given on 17 November 1999, Official Report, columns 4–7. Following that consultation, we intend to bring forward legislation as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Bus and Train Companies (Liquidation)

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the responsibilities of his Department in the event of a (a) bus and (b) train operating company going into liquidation. [110251]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 16 February 2000]: My right hon. Friend has no specific responsibilities if a train operating company or a bus company goes into liquidation. The Franchising Director has a responsibility to take over the operation of any franchised train operator in the event of premature termination of a franchise, as a result of liquidation of the company or for any other reason, and he has arrangements in readiness to do this at short notice, if necessary. London Transport Buses are responsible for the provision of bus services in London.

DEFENCE

Bloody Sunday

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what (a) date he was informed of the establishment of a judicial inquiry into the events of Bloody Sunday and the appointment of Lord Saville, (b) how many self-loading rifles were submitted for ballistic testing to the Widgery Inquiry, (c) how many of those rifles are available with their original barrels for examination, (d) on what dates were batches of those rifles sent for the fitting of new barrels and for destruction and (e) who was responsible for the decision in each instance; and if he will make a statement. [108485]

Mr. Hoon: The Government decision to set up a new inquiry into Bloody Sunday and the appointment of Lord Saville of Newdigate to chair the Tribunal of Inquiry was announced by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons on 29 January 1998.

The Bloody Sunday Inquiry believe 29 self-loading rifles (SLRs) were submitted for ballistic testing during the Widgery Inquiry to the Department of Industrial and Forensic Science. It is not possible to say how many have retained their original barrels; it is highly probable that they would have been re-barrelled at some point during their operational lives, in which case their forensic value would be substantially reduced. Detailed records were not kept of repairs to SLRs and no record was kept of whether a rifle had been re-barrelled, or how many times this may have occurred. The SLR was declared obsolete in November 1997 and authority to commence destruction was given in January 1998. SLRs were therefore recalled for disposal in line with this policy. By the end of January 2000 approximately 116,000 rifles had been disposed of out of a total of 144,000.

A list of 29 partial serial numbers, relating to the rifles fired on Bloody Sunday, was sent by the Inquiry to the MOD on 1 September 1999. From the information available it was not possible to identify the rifles until 29 September 1999. Of the 29, 14 were identified as having been issued for destruction on the following dates: 26 January 1998, 13 February 1998, 8 April 1998, 29 April 1998, 30 April 1998, 3 June 1998, 29 June 1998, 10 August 1998, 17 August 1998, 22 February 1999, 29 March 1999, 23 August 1999 and two on 24 September 1999. Ten rifles were identified as having been sold to private companies, leaving the five in the possession of the MOD. Despite an embargo on the movement of the remaining five, two of these rifles were destroyed on 26 and 28 January 2000.

Thus 24 of the rifles were disposed of as part of the routine disposal programme at a time when they could not be identified as Bloody Sunday rifles from available MOD records. That two rifles have been destroyed since is a matter of deep regret and an investigation has been launched by the Chief Constable of the Ministry of Defence Police to which officers from the West Mercia Constabulary will be seconded. The Bloody Sunday Inquiry will be invited to send an observer. The remaining three rifles have been secured and the Bloody Sunday Inquiry has been given assurances about their safe keeping.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations have been made to the Northern Ireland Office regarding proposals for a fresh inquiry into the events of Bloody Sunday; and what response his Department has made. [108486]

Mr. Hoon: My Department was closely involved in considering the need for a fresh inquiry into Bloody Sunday and it has co-operated fully with the Tribunal of Inquiry chaired by Lord Saville. I am withholding details of internal discussion and advice under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Warships (South Atlantic)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the deployment of warships in the South Atlantic in (a) the current financial year and (b) each of the next five years. [109864]

Mr. Spellar: The costs incurred by warships on manpower, fuel, port visits and associated minor costs, while deployed in the South Atlantic in the current financial year are approximately £10 million. Annual costs in future years are expected to be broadly similar.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what UK military units are deployed in support of the UN force in Sierra Leone; what further units he will deploy to the operation; and when. [110516]

Mr. Hoon: None. The UK currently has 15 military observers and six logistics personnel deployed in support of UNAMSIL. There are no plans to deploy formed units.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the budget of the Defence Medical Services in 1998–99 and 1999–2000; what was the budget allocation to the (a) DSCA, (b) DDA, (c) DMTO and (d) MSA in the same period; and if he will make a statement. [109495]

Dr. Moonie: Information on budget allocations within the DMS is set out in the table.

£ million

	Allocation
	Financial year 1998–99	Financial year 1999–2000
DMS total, of which:	276.5	301.7
(a) DSCA	113.4	117.0
(b) DDA	33.8	35.9
(c) DMTO	16.4	21.4
(d) MSA	37.2	48.6

Note:
The figures exclude devolved primary care costs, other than those for Germany, and various other posts filled by DMS personnel.

Army Tanks and Vehicles (Maintenance)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average time spent in maintenance for (a) Warrior variants, (b) Challenger One, (c) Challenger Two, (d) Saxon variants, (f) AVF 430 variants, (g) Sabre, (h) Striker, (i) Scimitar, (j) Spartan, (k) Sultan, (l) Samaritan and (m) Samson in each of the last five years; what proportion was planned maintenance; what proportions was reactive repair maintenance; and if he will make a statement. [109498]

Mr. Spellar: Maintenance of Army tanks and vehicles is carried out at four levels ranging from low level upkeep (eg tyres, batteries, lights) (Level 1) to major work conducted by the Army Base Repair Organisation or Industry (Level 4). This work, covering some 5,500 vehicles, is undertaken at over 150 locations both in the UK and overseas. Maintenance records are held by the Unit where the work is conducted and a networked information system is being developed to give greater overall visibility of the work undertaken. At present, however, the information is not collated centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Imphal Barracks

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the numbers of (a) officers and men and (b) civilian workers, there will be at Imphal Barracks, York, following the transfer of 2 Division HQ to Edinburgh. [109446]

Mr. Spellar: The number of people working in Imphal Barracks is currently changing as the Headquarters of the 2nd Division departs and the Defence Vetting Agency and the Queen's Gurkha Signal Squadron build up in strength. It is estimated that there will be 430 civilian staff in the Barracks by early 2001 and 546 military personnel by 2003.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Education and Training (Deprived Areas)

15. Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to raise the educational and training aspirations of young people from deprived areas. [109145]

Mr. Wicks: The new Connexions Service will raise the expectations and aspirations of all young people, wherever they live, by ensuring they receive the advice they need, when they need it, to make a success of their lives. In addition, we have introduced the £350 million Excellence in Cities programme and £60 million Neighbourhood Support Fund to focus specifically on the issues faced by young people in deprived areas.

Information and Learning Technology (Access)

16. Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans his Department has to extend access to information and learning technology among those who do not own computers. [109146]

Mr. Wills: We are taking a number of initiatives to ensure that the benefits of information and communication technologies are made available as widely as possible. These include the development of City Learning Centres, community ICT Learning Centres and also a scheme to support job seekers and families on low incomes in getting ready access to computers.

New Deal

17. Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the New Deal, specifying the total number of businesses that have participated to date. [109147]

Ms Jowell: The New Deal is progressing well, with 179,000 people into work through the New Deal for Young People and over 32,850 into work through the New Deal for Long Term Unemployed People by the end of November. To date 64,900 employers have signed New Deal agreements.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reason information relating to whether employment is sustained is not provided in the Government's statistics concerning participants leaving the New Deal for Lone Parents to enter work; and if he will make a statement. [109275]

Ms Hodge: At present we are unable to say how many of the people who left the New Deal for Lone Parents for work are still in employment. If a lone parent were to leave their employment they may claim Income Support or Jobseekers Allowance (among other possible benefits). Legislation allowing the Employment Service access to DSS data on Income Support claimants has only recently been passed in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill. Without this information it has been impossible for the Employment Service to know if a client has ceased employment and claimed Income Support. Work to measure the sustainability of jobs entered through New Deal for Lone Parents is under way as part of the continuous improvement strategy for New Deal.

This issues is also covered in the evaluation of NDLP where a survey of lone parents (both participants and non-participants in NDLP) will take place in 2001.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of those participants who had left the New Deal for Lone Parents for jobs were still in employment at the latest date for which information is available. [109278]

Ms Hodge: At present we are unable to say how many of the people who left New Deal for Lone Parents for work are still in employment. If a lone parent were to leave their employment they may claim Income Support or Jobseekers Allowance (among other possible benefits). Legislation allowing the Employment Service access to Department for Social Security data on Income Support claimants has only recently been passed in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill. We are now looking into the possibility of tracking the employment status of clients after they leave New Deal for Lone Parents. We will also cover this issue through a separate evaluation survey in 2001.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the total cost of issuing letters to lone parents inviting them to participate in the New Deal for Lone Parents. [109276]

Ms Hodge: The total cost of issuing letters to lone parents inviting them to participate in the New Deal for Lone Parents to December 1999 is £196,498.15.

The breakdown of the total cost is as follows:

Print costs	56,180
Initial set up costs	29,061
Postage costs	111,257.15

Learning and Skills Councils

18. Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the proposed learning and skills councils. [109148]

Mr. Wicks: We are making good progress in our plans to establish the Learning and Skills Council. We are on course to have the Council in place by April 2001. I will shortly be announcing the locations of the local arms of the Council.

Class Sizes

19. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the average size of secondary school classes in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999. [109149]

Ms Estelle Morris: The most recent figures show that in January 1999 the average secondary class had 21.9 pupils. The corresponding figure for January 1998 was 21.7. January 1999 saw the first fall in overall average class size for 10 years, from 24.9 in January 1998 to 24.8.

35. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on class sizes in primary and secondary schools since May 1997. [109166]

Ms Estelle Morris: Between January 1998 and January 1999 the size of the average primary school class in England fell from 27.7 to 27.4, the first fall in 10 years. Average classes in secondary schools are much lower than in primary schools. The most recent figures show that in January 1999 the average secondary class had 21.9 pupils. The corresponding figure for January 1998 was 21.7. January 1999 also saw the first fall in overall average class size for 10 years, from 24.9 in January 1998 to 24.8.

Post-16 Education (Lancashire)

20. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on post-16 education in Lancashire. [109150]

Mr. Wicks: The new Learning and Skills Council will, for the first time ever, bring post-16 funding into a single body to invest in learning and skills. It will cut out the waste and bureaucracy of the current system. This is good news for the people of Lancashire.

School Funding

21. Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the funding of schools. [109151]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government are determined to see increases in funding for schools. For 2000–01 we have increased the funding available to local authorities by £1.8 billion. We are urging local authorities to pass on the

£1.1 billion increase in education SSA to their education budgets; and we have set LEAs three targets which will further increase the funding delegated to schools.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he will take to increase the equity of funding for school education. [109143]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government announced in November 1998 a three-year review in partnership with local government to look for a way of distributing revenue support grant which is simpler, more stable, more robust and fairer than the present arrangements for SSAs.

Summer Schools

22. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement regarding his plans for summer schools aimed at encouraging young people to apply for higher education. [109152]

Jacqui Smith: The Government are committed to helping gifted young people from inner cities to make full use of their abilities. This summer we are spending £4 million to finance university summer schools which will raise the confidence and aspirations of these young people and give them a taste of university life.

This programme is part of the Excellence in Cities (EiC) initiative, which addresses: concerns over the standards of achievement which are lower in inner cities than in other areas of the country; truancy is higher and rates of exclusion higher; the fact that pupils in city areas often face multiple and reinforcing disadvantages that require multiple and reinforcing solutions; the need for continuity of support from pre-school to post-compulsory education for vulnerable pupils at all the points of institutional transition in their education to ensure that early intervention is continually consolidated and reinforced; and providing a safety net for those who experience disadvantage later. Excellence in Cities (EiC) was launched on 22 March 1999 by the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State. Summer schools are an integral part of this continuing support through the education system. The Summer Schools programme is an extension of these initiatives and was announced on 23 November 1999.

In all there will be places for 5,000 gifted and talented 16–17 year olds from EiC areas this summer. The £4 million will cover all academic and accommodation costs and the costs of teaching and parental or teacher pastoral care, as well as the start-up costs of this scheme.

The summer schools are drawing on the pioneering work that has already been done by Institutions and we are building on their expertise and experience and the work of the Sutton Trust. The Sutton Trust is sponsoring six university summer schools this year at Oxford (2); Cambridge (2); Nottingham and Bristol. The schools will run this summer and will be open to able year 12 students throughout the UK who fulfil criteria recommended to universities by the Sutton Trust. The selection criteria will help ensure that many successful applicants are from inner-city secondary schools and colleges. The Minister for School Standards has agreed to offer a grant of £30,000 to contribute to the running of the schools.

Too many young people from the inner cities do not get the encouragement they need to make full use of their abilities. The Government are helping to put that right by giving them a chance to attend summer schools in our leading universities. This will raise their confidence and aspirations and give them a taste of university life.

Further Education Students

23. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the increase in the number of full-time equivalent students at further education colleges in England and Wales (a) in 1992 to 1997 and (b) since May 1997. [109153]

Mr. Wicks: The number of full-time equivalent students at further education colleges in England funded by the Further Education Funding Council increased from 862,000 in 1992–93 to 1,084,000 in 1996–97. Actual numbers for later years are not yet available, but we are projecting an increase to 1,186,000 by 2001–02 financial year.

Figures for Wales are a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Millennium Volunteer Projects

24. Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many millennium volunteer projects have been approved; and if he will make a statement on progress. [109154]

Ms Hodge: There are currently 95 projects which have been contracted for under the Millennium Volunteers Programme in England. I announced on 19 January that a further 88 projects had been approved from the second bidding round, which will build on the success of the earlier projects. There will be further activity supported during 2000 to extend the scope of Millennium Volunteers coverage and to ensure a sufficient variety of opportunities to attract a broad range of young people to Millennium Volunteers.

Specialist Schools

25. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to develop more specialist schools. [109155]

Ms Estelle Morris: In March last year we announced the expansion of the Specialist Schools programme under the "Excellence in Cities" initiative to 800 specialist schools by September 2003.

Neighbourhood Support Fund

26. Mrs. Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Neighbourhood Support Fund. [109156]

Mr. Wicks: We have invested £60 million over three years on the Neighbourhood Support Fund. These innovative projects, run by local and voluntary community organisations, will connect young people back into education, training and work in the most deprived areas as part of the wider Connexions strategy launched on the 3 February 2000. The first projects will be up and running by March this year.

Secondary Schools (Gloucestershire)

27. Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase the funding of secondary schools in Gloucestershire. [109158]

Ms Estelle Morris: For 2000–01, Gloucestershire's education SSA has increased by £11.21 million to £226.01 million. While it is for local authorities to set their education budgets, my right hon. Friend has written on behalf of the Government to urge all council leaders to ensure that all the additional provision we have made available is actually spent on education. Gloucestershire's Standards Fund allocation for 2000–01 is £15.21 million, an increase of £4.76 million. I hope it will take up all of this allocation. In addition, Gloucestershire will receive £572,000 as its share of the extra £50 million grant for education on condition that it is used for education and added to schools' delegated budgets. My right hon. Friend shall look for prior confirmation that the whole of the increase in Gloucestershire's education SSA has been passed on to education before deciding whether to release its share of the grant.

Performance-related Pay

28. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his latest discussions with teachers' professional bodies on performance-related pay. [109159]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department for Education and Employment submitted detailed evidence on pay reform to the School Teachers' Review Body (STRB) last September. The STRB's Ninth Report was published on 1 February. The Secretary of State has initiated consultation with key stakeholders including teacher unions and employers on the STRB's recommendations. The consultation ends on 7 March and a further announcement will be made following this.

Work-based Learning

29. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how he intends to ensure that young people have access to work-based learning. [109160]

Mr. Wicks: The Connexions Document issued by the Government on 3 February (copies placed in the Vote Office in the Commons on Thursday 3 February and in the Library in the Commons) set out a comprehensive strategy to ensure that all young people are enabled to stay on in learning after the age of 16 in school, college or on the work-based route.

Labour Market Access

30. Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment his Department has made of the measures required to improve labour market access for the most disadvantaged groups; and what policies are in place to address this situation. [109161]

Ms Jowell: My Department assesses continuously the progress of groups at a disadvantage in the labour market. All of our policies and programmes are underpinned by a clear focus on equality of opportunity.

Improving access for those at a disadvantage is an important element of all of our New Deals with early help for those facing particular problems. The Policy Action Team on Jobs identified a range of proposals to help people living in deprived areas and from ethnic minority backgrounds as part of the Social Exclusion Unit's work on neighbourhood renewal. Some are already being acted upon, such as the piloting of the use of intermediary organisations in New Deal.

Improving participation in learning by people from the most disadvantaged groups will be a key objective for the Learning and Skills Council. The Connexions Service, for all young people, will target intensive advice and support on those with greatest need. And our drive to improve standards in schools will also ensure that young people from disadvantaged communities are properly equipped to compete for jobs.

Early-years Education

31. Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures the Government have taken to raise the status of those who work in early-years education since May 1997. [109162]

Ms Hodge: The Government are committed to raising the status of early-years workers and improving the quality of early education. We have listened to early-years practitioners who have said that early education should be recognised as a distinct phase of education. The Foundation Stage of the National Curriculum will be launched in September, with the new Early Learning Goals which most children should achieve at the end of the reception year. And we will be providing significant extra training and support to help deliver that.

A highly trained and qualified workforce is the key to attracting and retaining good people. Our aim is to introduce minimum levels of qualifications for leaders of early-years settings and for the practitioners that work in them. In October 1999, we introduced "A Framework of Nationally Accredited Qualifications in Early Years Education, Childcare and Playwork". The framework provides for the first time clear, comprehensive and integrated information about the skills, competencies, training and qualifications that are needed for the wide range of jobs in the sector. It will be updated this spring. We are developing occupational standards for the sector which will form the basis for further qualifications. This work is being led by the Early Years National Training Organisation, which was established in November 1998.

I believe the steps we are taking will provide people working in early-years education with a more clearly defined career structure and better recognition of the contribution they make to children's development.

Sure Start

32. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the sure start programme. [109163]

Yvette Cooper: Forty-seven of the 60 trailblazer programmes in England have now been approved and are starting to help children. The remaining 13 will follow shortly. In November 1999 we launched the second wave of Sure Start by inviting a further 69 areas to start work to develop local programmes. All of these are now working on drawing up outline plans. My Ministerial colleagues in Northern Ireland, Wales and Scotland have responsibility for implementing Sure Start in their areas of responsibility.

Training and Further Education Spending

33. Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to re-direct resources for training and further education from spending on administration to vocational and academic education. [109164]

Mr. Wicks: Our plans to create a Learning and Skills Council will bring together, for the first time into a single coherent system, the current range of learning opportunities for individuals and workforce development. The new arrangements will cut through the present duplication and bureaucracy, and will secure savings of at least £50 million a year across post-16 learning.

These savings will be redirected to improving the quality of learning for individuals, raising standards, widening participation and tackling the skills deficit.

Disability Rights Task Force

34. Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps his Department plans to take to implement disability rights task force proposals as they affect education. [109165]

Ms Hodge: We announced our intention on 13 December to bring forward legislation to give people with disabilities equal access to schools and further, higher and adult education. The proposed legislation will address the key education recommendations of the final report of the Disability Rights Task Force.

Illegal Drugs

36. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he last met the UK anti-drugs co-ordinator to discuss the use of illegal drugs in schools and places of work. [109167]

Jacqui Smith: I met the UK anti-drugs co-ordinator at the end of November last year, to discuss the DfEE's contribution to the Government's Anti-Drugs Strategy. We have agreed to meet quarterly in future.

As DfEE Drugs Minister, I also have met Mr. Hellawell regularly in meetings of the Ministerial Steering Group on Drug Misuse.

Maths Year 2000

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what support his Department is giving to the Maths Year 2000. [109138]

Jacqui Smith: We have invested £6.75 million in Maths Year 2000 to promote a "can-do" attitude towards maths throughout the community. Only this morning my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment launched the first supermarket Maths Corner as part of the ASDA Big Sum Campaign. The funding for Maths Year 2000 is in addition to the £64 million which we have invested in the National Numeracy Strategy this year to raise standards of mathematics in primary schools.

Remedial Education

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what studies his Department has commissioned or evaluated on the effectiveness of remedial education in primary schools. [109741]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Literacy and Numeracy Strategies form the core of our programme to raise standards in all primary schools for all pupils including those with special educational needs. These strategies are being formally evaluated by a team from the University of Toronto.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the total cost of abolishing tuition fees in England and Wales for each of the years 2001–02 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [110024]

Mr. Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 393W. Figures for beyond 2001–02 depend on student numbers on which decisions have not yet been made.

Employment Service

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what impact the fundamental review of Employment Service Annual Performance Agreement will have on the Annual Performance Agreement for 2000–01. [111060]

Mr. Blunkett: I am today announcing the outcome of a fundamental review of the Employment Service Annual Performance Agreement (APA) which was launched in May 1999. The review included a wide-ranging public consultation involving employers, voluntary, public and private sector organisations and other Government Departments.

The review has been an important staging post in the modernisation of the Employment Service. I want the ES to provide an outward looking, accessible and efficient service, using the latest generation of technology, which can meet the demands of its customers, whether they are jobseekers or employers, by working in close partnership with a wide range of public, private and voluntary sectors. I also want greater emphasis on equal opportunities.

As a result of the review, the Employment Service will have a brand new Vision and Purpose for 2000–01 which describes the key elements for modernising the service. I am also announcing a new Aim and Objectives, which can be easily understood by ES staff and will help them to focus on the service that they provide to employers in helping to fill their vacancies. I believe that these proposals, together with a new set of targets, will help ES to be an inclusive service which helps all people without work and particularly the most disadvantaged jobseekers. During the year I will be exploring alternative ways of weighting targets. I hope to announce target numbers before the end of March 2000.

Vision and Purpose

"The Employment Service aims to make a major contribution to an efficient and flexible labour market and to the Government's objectives of high and stable employment and growth, equality of opportunity and social inclusion. ES works closely with employers and with its private, voluntary and public sector partners to provide a quality service for all people without a job and to promote employment opportunities for all who can work. It aims to attract a diverse range of vacancies and to fill those vacancies quickly by matching the right people and skills with the right jobs. Its chief priority is to help individuals facing particular difficulty in the labour market to move from welfare and economic inactivity into sustainable employment. It does this through correct application of the JSA regime, delivery of the New Deals and the pilot ONE service, and provision of appropriate information, advice, training and support. The Agency has achieved much over the past three years. The challenge and opportunity now facing it is to sustain continuous improvement in its services to jobseekers and employers and to make those services more accessible and relevant to customer needs, through effective use of modern technology and close working with a wide range of partners"

Aim

"To help people without jobs to find work and employers to fill their vacancies"

Objective A

To help all people without jobs, and particularly those on welfare and at a disadvantage in the labour market, to find and keep work by providing appropriate information, advice, training and support and by encouraging employers to open more opportunities to them

Objective B

To ensure that the rights and relevant labour market responsibilities of people on JSA and other benefits are fulfilled, while helping to combat fraud and abuse of the benefit system

Objective C

To harness new technology, the pursuit of excellence and continuous improvement to deliver effective, efficient and accessible services to all people without jobs and to employers in Jobcentres and, increasingly through other locations and means of communication

Objective D

To deliver services to all ES customers in a way which respects individual differences, helps to overcome disadvantages due to ethnicity, gender, age or disability and achieves the best possible outcome for each of them

Targets (linked to Objectives A, B and C above)

A1: To help x participants in the New Deals and Employment Zones into work, directly or in partnership with others (includes all New Deals and relevant EZs)

A2: To help x people with disabilities into work, directly or in partnership with others (includes all people with disabilities, including NDDP participants)

A3: To help x disadvantaged jobseekers into work, directly or in partnership with others (includes A1, A2 plus other disadvantaged people in receipt of benefit)

A4: To help x people from welfare into work, directly or in partnership with others (includes A1-A3, plus unemployed people claiming JSA for 0–6 months)

A5: To help x jobless people into work, directly or in partnership with others (includes A1-A4, plus others without work not claiming relevant benefits)

A6: Pilot target: For x per cent. of long term JSA claimants to be off benefit 13 weeks after starting a job

B: To ensure that the relevant labour market responsibilities of people on JSA are fulfilled in x per cent. of cases checked

C1: To achieve an x customer service level for jobseekers

C2: To achieve an x customer service level for employers

Milestone Target(s) [eg. Programme x to be introduced successfully by date y-to be specified]

Disability Rights Commission

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress has been made in establishing the Disability Rights Commission. [109139]

Ms Hodge: There has been good progress in establishing the Commission since the Bill to set it up received Royal Assent in July 1999. I expect it to open its doors for business on 25 April this year. The chair, the commissioners and the chief executive of the Commission have all been appointed. Recruitment of the Commission's staff is under way. The DRC's main office in Manchester is being fitted out.

Higher and Further Education

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to expand access to higher and further education. [109134]

Mr. Blunkett: The Government are committed to widening access to post-secondary education as part of their strategy to create a ladder of lifelong learning. We have already funded an additional 800,000 places in further and higher education through the current Comprehensive Spending Review.

This week I announce the development of the new two year foundation degrees and a new framework for vocational qualifications, both in institutions and in the workplace.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when an official from his Department last visited the Lytham St. Anne's High Technology School. [109133]

Ms Estelle Morris: Officials from the Department last visited the school on 18 September 1996.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what change there has been in processing times for Disability Living Allowance claims in the past year. [108746]

Mr. Bayley: The administration of the Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Colin Breed, dated 16 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question. You asked what change there has been in processing times for Disability Living Allowance (DLA) claims in the past year.

For your information the average processing time for the past year (1999) has been 40 days as against the average for 1998 of 35 days.

I hope that this is helpful.

New Deal

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his written answer of 4 February 2000, Official Report, columns 748–49W, how many lone parents under the New Deal for Lone Parents broken down into (i) targeted and (ii) non-targeted groups, (a) were issued with initial invitation letters, (b) booked initial interviews with personal advisers, (c) attended initial interviews, (d) agreed to participate in the programme, (e) were referred to Employment Service programmes or other training, (f) obtained jobs following participation and (g) have increased their hours of work following participation. [109503]

Angela Eagle: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

	Prototype phase 1 (July 1997-October 1998)		Phase 2 (April 1998-October 1998)	Results for the National Programme (October 1998-November 1999)
	Target group	Non-target group	All lone parents	Target group	Non-target group
Initial invitation letters issued	[1]50,612	0	[1]—	443,710	0
Initial interviews booked	7,198	1,981	21,647	[2]69,982	62,149
Initial interviews attended	6,289	1,818	15,193	61,033	51,536
Number agreeing to participate	5,561	1,741	12,889	54,659	45,838
Number entering education	300	75	2,569	4,405	3,961
Jobs obtained	2,473	920	2,878	18,949	13,756
(Number of these obtained by part-time workers increasing their hours)	3	—	(487)	(829)	(401)

[1] The number of letters issued during phase 1 and 2 cannot be divided into separate figures because these phases ran concurrently from April 1998 to October 1998. Letters were only issued to target group lone parents.
[2] This figure is taken from internal management information and so has not been validated in the same way as other figures for the National Programme.
[3] The number of lone parents who were working part-time before obtaining work of over 16 hours cannot be split into target and non-target group for phase 1.
Notes:
1. The results for phase 2 of NDLP are not available split into the target and non-target groups on/training.
2. In some cases it was not recorded whether the lone parent was either from the target or non-target group. The figures shown in the table are only those definitely recorded as in one group or the other. Consequently the sum of these figures do not always equal the total number of lone parents at each stage.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many lone parents, under the New Deal for Lone Parents, have (a) been issued with initial invitation letters, (b) booked initial interviews with personal advisers, (c) attended initial interviews, (d) agreed to participate in the programme, (e) been referred to Employment Service programmes or other training, (f) obtained jobs following participation and (g) have increased their hours of work following participation. [108001]

Angela Eagle [pursuant to her reply, 4 February 2000, c. 748–50W]: The information is in the table.

	Results for the National Programme (October 1998-November 1999)	Prototype phases 1 and 2 (July 1997-October 1998)
Initial invitation letters issued	443,710	50,612

Number agreeing to participate	100,500	20,191
Number entering education/training	10,630	2,944
Jobs obtained	32,710	6,271
(Number of these obtained by part-time workers increasing their hours)	(1,230)	(842)

Note:
[1] This figure is taken from internal management information and so has not been validated in the same way as other figures for the National Programme.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the additional annual cost of the Minimum Income Guarantee in (a) 2005, (b) 2010, (c) 2020 and (d) 2050 if annual increases are in line with earnings assuming (i) one in three, (ii) one in four and (iii) one in five pensioners qualify for income support. [109588]

Mr. Rooker: Estimates for the cost of the Minimum Income Guarantee (MIG) for the years shown are not available. This is because it is extremely difficult to obtain accurate projections of the future level and distribution of income and assets.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of abolishing the shared residency requirement for housing benefit; what assumptions underlie his estimate; and if he will make a statement. [110063]

Angela Eagle: We are unable to estimate with any accuracy the cost of abolishing the Single Room Rent restriction. There is insufficient quantitative information on how this group responded to the change, and without this information we cannot estimate the behavioural effects of reversing the change.

Pensions

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the (a) cost in real terms and (b) resulting increase in pensions, of raising pensions to the level they would have reached if the link between pensions and the rise in earnings had never been broken. [110415]

Mr. Rooker: If the link uprating the basic State pension by the higher of earnings or prices had not been broken the rate for a single pensioner would be £97.45 per week from April 2000. The gross cost of increasing the basic retirement pension to this level in 2000–01 would be £17.2 billion. The net cost would be £13.5 billion.

Notes:

1. The Retail Prices Index (all items) and the Average Earnings Index Whole Economy (Non Seasonally Adjusted) have been used as published by the Office for National Statistics.

2. From April 1994 the basic rate of Retirement Pension has been increased by 50p to reflect VAT on fuel.

3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5 pence at each uprating.

4. Costs are rounded to the nearest £100 million.

5. Costs include benefits whose rates are linked by statute to the rate of basic Retirement Pension (RP).

6. The figure of £97.45 per week refers to the full Category A rate; other rates of basic RP have been assumed to increase pro-rata.

7. Gross costs are estimated by the Government Actuary's Department. Net costs have been estimated using the Policy Simulation Model.

Benefit Entitlements

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the total annual net cost of restoring benefit entitlements to 16 and 17-year-olds; what assumptions underlie this estimate; and if he will make a statement. [110061]

Angela Eagle: We believe that every young person should have the opportunity to achieve their potential. That is why our aim is to engage 16 and 17-year-olds in education, training or work with training, rather than starting their adult lives dependent on the benefits system.

Departments are working together to develop and implement the proposals in the Government White Paper "Learning to Succeed" and the Social Exclusion Unit's report "Bridging the Gap". The recently announced Connexions Service will help, support and guide young people through their teenage years including those most at risk from disadvantage.

The estimated annual cost of restoring full entitlement to Social Security benefits to 16 and 17-year-olds would be £100 million at present rates. These costs do not make any allowance for possible changes in labour market behaviour as a result of these changes.

Notes:

1. Figure is rounded to the nearest £50 million.

2. Figure is based on data taken from the 1997–98 Family Resources Survey.

3. Figure assumes benefit would be paid at benefit rates for 16 and 17-year-olds.

Software Releases

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the number of software releases he plans to make available within his Department in each of the next three years; and what changes to the benefit system each release will produce. [107295]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 28 January 2000]: Software releases are a matter for the Chief Executive of the Information Technology Services Agency, George McCorkell. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Shanley, on behalf of George McCorkell, to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 11 February 2000:

Further to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Departmental software releases. You specifically asked about the changes that these releases would make to the benefit system.

Upgrades and enhancements to the Department's Information Technology (IT) systems are agreed and planned jointly between the Information Technology Service Agency, Departmental Agencies and other units and Stakeholders. The attached annex outlines the benefit system software releases planned for the next three years and concentrates on the benefits these releases will introduce for their recipients.

The work planned over the next three years has accounted for several legislative changes. Any further legislative changes announced will have an effect on the contents of the releases planned.

I hope that you find this reply helpful.

Annex

Over the next three financial years the following releases have been planned:

Job Seekers Allowance (JSA) has three proposed releases which plan to implement enhancements to:

- New Deal for Partners of the Unemployed providing equal treatment as a joint claim for partners in 18–24 age
- support payment of a revised range of benefits and allowances to both Widows and Widowers;
- apply a penalty to a Jobseeker's benefit where (s)he has failed to comply with Probation or Community Punishment Order;
- improve allowances where a higher-rate of Carer's Component of Disability Living Allowance is in payment;
- to improve system notifications issued to customers.

Income Support (IS) has four proposed releases which plan to implement the following enhancements:

- an extension of the New Deal for Lone Parent scheme to lone parents with children between 3 years and 5 years 3 months;
- introduction of new premiums as part of the 'Disability Income Guarantee' initiative;
- the provision of certain forms directly to Social Service locations;
- to account for the introduction of the Child Support Reforms;
- to improve system notifications issued to customers.

Social Fund (SF) has four proposed releases which plan to implement the following enhancements:

- to improve the system notifications issued to customers;
- extension of Budgeting Loans to low income groups by allowing Council Tax Benefit recipients access to the scheme;

BEST COPY A

improvements to the repayment of loan interface with the Income Support Computer System; introduction of Automated Credit Transfer for Social Fund customers.

Disability Living Allowance/Attendance Allowance (DLA/AA) has four proposed releases which plan to implement the following enhancements:

automation of some notifications to improve consistency of customer information; identification of certain renewal cases to allow for further medical enquiries;

a range of system administration enhancements.

Working Families' Tax Credit (WFTC)/Disabled Person's Tax Credit (DPTC) has three proposed releases to implement the following enhancements:

support changes intended to bring WFTC into line with DPTC; support changes for new rules for DPTC;

Support changes where the system will calculate entitlement to remission from NHS charges, and issue a certificate with the award notification; support changes to the award amount to certain WFTC applicants;

a range of system administration enhancements.

Invalid Care Allowance (ICA) has two proposed releases which plan to implement the following enhancements:

production of restricted orderbooks which account for the recipient reaching retirement age or changes to their receipt of DLA/AA;

a range of system administration enhancements.

Industrial Injuries has two proposed releases which plan to implement a range of system administration enhancements.

War Pensions (WP) has six proposed releases, which plan to implement the following enhancements:

to reflect decisions made at the European Court of Human Rights;

a range of system administration enhancements.

Pensions and Incapacity Benefit (PSCS/INCAP) has five proposed releases which plan to implement the following enhancements to:

support changes in the award of Maternity Allowance from April 2000; support changes relating to Pensions Sharing on Divorce;

support changes relating to the provision of support in bereavement;

support changes in Incapacity Benefit for helping young disabled people; support changes to cater for where a claimant has a personal or occupational pension; support the Child Support Reforms; support a State Second Pension Scheme; support Teleclaims processing for new Retirement Pension claimants in Great Britain.

Child Benefit (ChB) has three proposed releases which plan to implement the following enhancements:

new processing of late claims to Child Benefit;

new communications with Welsh customers;

introduction of new and improved communications for Child Benefit customers.

Child Support Computer System (CSCS) has two proposed releases which plan to implement the following enhancements:

to provide new customer payment statements;

to provide changes to the way information from Job Seeker Allowance (JSA)/Income Support (IS) is handled;

to improve system notifications issued to customers;

to the debt management system.

AVAILABLE

Discretionary Social Fund

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes he intends to make to the discretionary social fund. [111228]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be making changes to the discretionary social fund, with effect from 3 April 2000, to take account of new legislation in other benefit areas being introduced on that date. A range of other minor improvements, identified during the course of routine monitoring will also be included in the amendment to directions and guidance.

Details of these changes have been placed in the Library.

HEALTH

NHS Charges

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase charges in the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [111237]

Mr. Denham: We shall lay before the House regulations to increase National Health Service charges in England from 1 April 2000. There will be a cash increase in the charge of 10p, (1.69 per cent.) from £5.90 to £6.00 for each quantity of a drug or appliance dispensed.

The cost of prescription prepayment certificates will rise to £31.40 for a four-month certificate and £86.20 for an annual certificate. These offer savings for those needing more than 5 items in four months or 14 in one year.

Prescription charges are expected to raise some £380 million for the NHS in 2000–2001.

Charges for elastic stockings and tights, wigs and most fabric supports supplied through the Hospital Service will be increased similarly.

The maximum patient charge for a single course of dental treatment begun on or after 1 April 2000 will increase from £348 to £354. Only about 1 in every 1,000 courses of treatment will attract the new maximum charge.

The increases are in line with the movement of the retail prices index from January 1999 (the benchmark for the current charge) to November 1999 of 2 per cent., but rounded to the most convenient unit. Movements in the retail prices index from November to November will become the benchmark for any subsequent charges increases within the three year period following the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Optical voucher values in England will increase overall by 2 per cent. to help children, people on low income and certain people with complex sight problems with the cost of spectacles or contact lenses.

NHS charges and optical voucher values in Scotland and Wales are a matter for the devolved administrations. However, I can inform my hon. Friend that these proposals have been considered jointly with the Secretary for Health and Social Services to the National Assembly for Wales who tells me she will be putting forward parallel proposals for consideration by the Assembly.

Details of the revised charges have been placed in the Library.

Waiting Times

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish figures showing the percentage of patients seen for first appointment within 13 weeks of referral by a GP in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 for (i) England, (ii) East and North Hertfordshire, (iii) West Hertfordshire and (iv) the health authority in the prospering growth area with the (1) lowest figure and (2) highest figure. [109683]

Mr. Denham: The figures are given in the table.

Percentage of patients seen for a first outpatient appointment within 13 weeks of referral by a general practitioner

	1997–98	1998–99
England	82	79
East and North Hertfordshire health authority	85	80
West Hertfordshire health authority	83	80
Health authority with lowest percentage in prospering growth area	[1]73	[2]71
Health authority with highest percentage in prospering growth area	[3]92	[3]89

[1] Cambridge and Huntingdon
[2] Portsmouth and South East Hampshire
[3] Solihull
Note:
All figures are resident-based

Insulin Pens

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce free needles for diabetics who require insulin. [109530]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas) on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 199W.

Worcestershire and Alexandra NHS Trusts

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Chairman of Worcestershire NHS Trust and the Alexandra NHS Trust is receiving salaries for both posts; and what his total annual salary is. [110391]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 February 2000]: Mr. Harold Musgrove will continue to receive remuneration of £17,625 a year as chair of the Alexandra Healthcare National Health Service Trust until 31 March 2000. He will not receive remuneration as chair of Worcestershire Acute Hospitals National Health Service Trust until this newly merged trust becomes operational on 1 April 2000.

Hospital Waiting Lists (Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest figures in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area for the (a) total number of patients waiting for hospital treatment, (b) total number of people waiting 12 months or more for treatment, (c) total number of people waiting over 18 months for treatment and (d) number of people waiting 13 weeks or more to see a consultant on the out patient waiting list. [109972]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is given in the tables.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE and CJD

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria determine whether the European Commission intervenes in respect of the problem of BSE and CJD in a member state. [109852]

Ms Quin [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The European Commission has powers to take action in respect of BSE under Council Directives 89/662 and 90/425. When considering whether to take action, it acts in accordance with the precautionary principle of avoiding risk in order to protect human and animal health.

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110261]

Mr. Morley: The current budget allocation for advertising in the financial year for 1999–2000 is £835,000. The budget for 2000–01 is in the process of being decided.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2000, Official Report, columns 25–26W, on staff, (a) which departments of the House employ no ethnic minority staff, (b) what targets the House of Commons Commission has for ethnic minority recruitment and (c) if the Commission will publish a statement of aims on equal opportunity employment. [109602]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 15 February 2000]: (a) All departments of the House employ staff from an ethnic minority.

(b) The House of Commons Commission has set no targets for ethnic minority recruitment.

(c) The House of Commons Commission has recently considered equality of opportunity among employees at the House and has approved a programme of initiatives designed to encourage working practices which will allow every member of staff to contribute his or her best, regardless of race, sex, marital status, religion, age, disability, sexual orientation or any other irrelevant factor. This programme includes training for all our staff, improvements to procedures and better monitoring.

TREASURY

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on the net income of each decile group of (a) benefit units and (b) households, of extending the working families tax credit to (i) couples without dependent children and (ii) single people without dependent children; and if he will estimate the gross cost in each case. [110219]

Dawn Primarolo: The impact of extending the Working Families Tax Credit to couples and singles without children is contingent on the detailed parameters and assumptions used, for example the credit rates for people without children and the earnings thresholds.

Taxation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the combined net annual change in Exchequer revenues which would result from reducing the top rate of income tax from 40p to 30p and removing the ceiling on employees' national insurance contributions; and if he will make a statement. [110022]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated Exchequer cost of reducing the top rate of income tax from 40p to 30p and removing the ceiling on employees' national insurance contributions is around £3.7 billion in 2000–01.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to more closely align the income tax and national insurance systems; and if he will make a statement. [110023]

Dawn Primarolo: By bringing policy responsibility for tax and NICs together in the Inland Revenue, we have provided a single focus for employers' representatives to discuss improvements in legislation and processes across both income tax and national insurance contributions. From April 1999 we have aligned the point at which employers start to pay national insurance contributions with the income tax personal allowance. From April 2001, we will align fully the point at which employees start to pay National Insurance contributions with the income tax personal allowance. Provisions in the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill currently before Parliament go a long way towards aligning, in the interests of fairness, the tax and NICs treatment of benefits in kind. The Chancellor announced in the Pre-Budget Report that the Inland Revenue will work with employers' representatives and others to reduce technical differences between tax and National Insurance, while having due regard to individuals' benefit entitlement.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were paying income tax at the higher rate in (a) 1989–90, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [110025]

Dawn Primarolo: The numbers of taxpayers paying some income tax at the higher rate were as follows:

million

Year	Numbers
1989–90[1]	1.50
1996–97	2.08
1999–2000[2]	2.40

[1] Prior to 1990–91 most married couples were counted as one taxpayer

[2] This estimate is based on the 1997–98 Survey of Personal incomes and consistent with the November 1999 Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total annual net cost of (a) raising the income threshold at which the upper rate of income tax is paid by £3,000 per annum and (b) aligning this threshold with the ceiling on making employee national insurance contributions; and if he will make a statement. [110059]

Dawn Primarolo: For the year 2000–01 the estimated full year cost of raising the higher rate threshold by £3,000 is £1.3 billion and the estimated yield from aligning the threshold with the Upper Earnings Limit is £3 billion. These estimates are based on the 1997–98 Survey of Personal Incomes and are consistent with the November 1999 Pre-Budget Report.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost savings which would result if the national insurance system were abolished and integrated into the income tax system; and if he will make a statement. [110062]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to calculate the effects without more detail on how the integrated charge would work. In particular, income tax is charged on a wider base than national insurance contributions, covering in addition savings and investment income, pensions and contributory benefits. Income tax has no cap on employees' liability, no charge on the employer and no cessation of liability at retirement age, unlike National Insurance contributions, and payment of National Insurance contributions maintains access to contributory benefits.

Monetary Policy Committee

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the present terms of employment of members of the Monetary Policy Committee of the Bank of England. [110060]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The terms of employment of members of the Monetary Policy Committee of the Bank of England are set out in the Bank of England Act 1998. Additional details may be found in the Bank of England's latest Annual Report, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

Disqualifications Bill

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what (a) oral and (b) written representations he has received from (i) hon. Members of and (ii) parties represented in the House of Commons and the Northern Ireland Assembly on the subject of the Disqualifications Bill, indicating in each case the date on which representations were received; and if he will place written representations in the Library. [107854]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 February 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 10 February 2000 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Official Report, column 240W.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions he and his predecessor held bilateral meetings with his Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what was discussed at each meeting since May 1997. [109870]

The Prime Minister: From taking office in May 1997 until December 1999, I have had three bilateral meetings with my Austrian counterpart, Chancellor Klima. We have also seen each other at many multilateral meetings. We have discussed a wide range of issues, mostly on EU related business.

Steven John Hayden

Mr. Hague: To ask the Prime Minister if he has received the report of the Security Commission on the case of Steven John Hayden. [111061]

The Prime Minister: I announced on 30 April 1999 that, after consultation with the Chairman of the Security Commission and the right hon. Gentleman, I had asked the Security Commission to investigate the circumstances in which breaches of security had or might have occurred arising out of the case of Chief Petty Officer Steven Hayden, who was convicted on 23 October 1998 of offences under section 1 of the Official Secrets Act 1989; and to advise in the light of that investigation whether any change in security arrangements was necessary or desirable.

The Commission has now submitted its report to me and it is being published this afternoon as a Command paper, with the exception of some details which it would not be in the public interest to publish on national security grounds. I am most grateful to the Chairman, Lord Lloyd, and to Dame Elizabeth Butler-Sloss, Sir John Foley and Sir Clive Whitmore.

It became apparent to the Commission at the start of the inquiry that the main issues at stake were in the area of personnel security. The Commission has fully examined the history of the Ministry of Defence's security assessment of Hayden. The Commission was critical of the decisions to continue to allow Hayden a security clearance and surprised at the lack of communication between the vetting authorities, the personnel authorities and line management about the management of the risk presented by him. In particular they considered whether the correct balance was being struck between maintaining vetting confidentiality on the one hand and the effective involvement of line and personnel management in the active aftercare of vetting risk cases on the other.

It was also concerned that recommendations made in earlier Security Commission inquiries had sought to address similar situations to those in the Hayden case which suggested that they had not been fully implemented.

However, the Commission acknowledges the Ministry of Defence's acceptance that Hayden's case represents a clear failure in personnel security and welcomes the changes to vetting processes and procedures that the Ministry of Defence have already implemented based on the lessons learned. The Commission has made a number of recommendations. These, in summary, are that:

(i) It should be standard practice for vetting authorities to consider whether to consult an individual's personnel or line managers, in order to ensure that the latter are aware of any particular vulnerabilities.

(ii) In cases where doubts emerge, it should be normal practice for regular consultations to take place between all those involved in assessing a clearance. Where the recommendations of Investigating Officers seem likely to be overridden for wider policy considerations of a non-security kind, there should invariably be a discussion between them and those responsible for making the assessment, so that options can be explored before final decisions are reached.

(iii) In risk cases where confidential medical reports exist on an individual, someone at an appropriately senior level should have the authority to see all the papers including a medical report on the individual's suitability to hold a DV clearance and thus be in a position to reach a proper assessment based on all relevant information.

(iv) More emphasis should be given to threats outside the traditional risk of an individual being vulnerable to approaches from a hostile foreign intelligence service. Threats from "cheque-book journalism" and industrial espionage should be given more emphasis in the current Field Investigation Officers Guide issued by the Cabinet Office, and in departmental guidance based upon it.

(v) The question of follow-up to Security Commission recommendations should be revisited to ensure that effective implementation of agreed recommendations takes place.

The recommendations of the Security Commission have been accepted in principle by the Government subject to further consideration of some detailed points and in the case of (iii), subject to discussion with the appropriate medical authorities. Work is now in hand to ensure that they are effectively implemented.

Countryside Reception

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those people who were invited to the Countryside reception at 10 Downing Street on 2 February. [110503]

The Prime Minister: It is not my practice to list individual names of guests invited to receptions at 10 Downing Street. The 200 people who were invited to the Countryside reception on 2 February came from a wide range of backgrounds, including the health service, schools, farming, forestry, rural businesses, rural post offices, youth hostels, churches, holiday villages and tourism.

WALES

Objective 1

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to ensure adequate finance from the Treasury on a contingency basis, to cover the eventuality that expenditure on Objective 1 schemes in Wales in the year 2000–01 exceeds the sums covered in the budget of the National Assembly, while still being within the limit laid down by the EU for that year. [109105]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The provisions for seeking additional finance from Treasury on an exceptional basis are detailed in "A Statement of Funding Policy", which was published by HM Treasury on 31 March 1999.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his reply of 27 January 2000, Official Report, column 327W, on departmental budgets, how much of the increase in the total budget for his Department and the National Assembly between the expected outturn for 1999–2000 and the budget for 2000–01 is for the effects of inflation. [109094]

Mr. Paul Murphy: During Spending Reviews, forecasts for inflation are reflected in the settlement, but form only one component of that settlement.

Changes to the size of the Welsh block are mainly determined by applying the population-based Barnett formula to changes in planned spending on comparable services in Departments of the United Kingdom Government, with some exceptions where this is not appropriate.

As a result it is not possible to identify an element of the increase to the block which is solely an allowance for the effects of inflation.

Waterhouse Report

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the Waterhouse report into abuse in North Wales Children's homes will be published. [110214]

Mr. Hanson: The report of the Tribunal of Inquiry into the abuse of children in care in North Wales was published on Tuesday 15 February. Copies of the report have been placed in the Vote Office and Libraries of the House.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Arms Exports

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many arms export licence applications relating to Zimbabwe examined by her Department her Department has (a) supported and (b) opposed since May 1997. [109106]

Clare Short: From 1 September 1997 until 28 January 2000, we have received 69 applications for a Standard Individual Export Licence and 51 applications for an Open Individual Export Licence. These licences cover the export to Zimbabwe of goods subject to control by being listed in Part III of Schedule I to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, commonly known as the Military List. Applications were not circulated to the Department for International Development before 1 September 1997.

Regarding advice given by this Department on individual licence applications, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by the Secretary of State for International Development on 26 April 1999, Official Report, column 18W.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many licence applications for arms exports to Indonesia her Department has examined since August 1997; if she will list them; and how many her Department (a) supported and (b) opposed. [109174]

Mr. Foulkes: From 1 September 1997 until 28 January 2000, we have received 78 applications for a Standard Individual Export Licence and 70 applications for an Open Individual Export Licence. These licences cover the export to Indonesia of goods subject to control by being listed in Part III of Schedule I to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994. This is commonly known as the Military List. Applications were not circulated to the Department for International Development before September 1997.

Regarding advice given by this Department on individual licence applications, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by the Secretary of State for International Development on 26 April 1999, Official Report, column 18W.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many licence applications her Department has examined for arms exports to Pakistan since May 1997; if she will list them; and how many her Department (a) supported and (b) opposed. [109104]

Mr. Foulkes: From 1 September 1997 until 28 January 2000, we have received 208 applications for a Standard Individual Export Licence and 80 for an Open Individual Export Licence. These licences cover the export to Pakistan of goods subject to control by being listed in Part III of Schedule I to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, commonly known as the Military List. Applications were not circulated to the Department for International Development before 1 September 1997.

Regarding advice given by this Department on individual licence applications, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by the Secretary of State for International Development on 26 April 1999, Official Report, column 18W.

Zimbabwe

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many locally employed staff are employed by her Department in Zimbabwe at pay levels below the British national minimum wage. [105687]

Mr. Foulkes: I refer the hon. Member to the reply from the Secretary of State on 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 430W.

Funding

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list, by country, the percentage of her Department's funding that goes (a) directly to foreign Governments, (b) to NGOs and charities and (c) directly to the private sector. [110565]

Mr. Foulkes: Detailed information on a country basis is not available and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost.

However, for the 1998–99 financial year, the last year for which figures are available, we estimate that bilateral aid expenditure overall was as follows:

Channel	Percentage of 1998–99 bilateral expenditure
Governments	37
Private sector	47
NGOs	16

Further detailed information on a country basis, divided into Project or sector aid, Programme aid, Technical Co-operation, Aid and Trade Provision, Grants, Humanitarian Assistance, and Debt Relief, is available in the publication "Statistics on International Development", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Chernobyl

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what has been the amount of (a) UK bilateral aid to Ukraine for use in the clean-up following the Chernobyl nuclear reactor accident, (b) aid relating to Chernobyl from the UK Government channelled through international organisations and (c) UK aid specifically targeted to the victims of the Chernobyl accident, expended in (i) Ukraine and (ii) Belarus. [110581]

Mr. Foulkes: The UK Government have pledged a contribution of £10.5 million towards the Chernobyl Shelter Fund. In addition, some £62.5 million has been pledged by the European Community, of which around 16 per cent. is the UK share. Since 1997, we have provided some £300,000 for measures specifically targeted at the victims of the Chernobyl accident in Belarus. There has been no support specifically targeted at the victims of the accident in Ukraine.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by her Department come from a sustainable source. [110196]

Mr. Foulkes: The Government, through the Green Ministers Committee of which I am a member, have issued a model framework which Departments have used as the basis for preparing their own environmental strategies. Among its key aims are the conservation of resources and minimisation of waste by reducing our reliance on virgin materials and ensuring that any products derived from wildlife—such as paper and timber—are from sustainable sources and comply with EU and international trading agreements such as the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES).

Our policy statement declares:

"We will seek to conserve energy and natural resources and reduce our production of waste, emissions to air and discharges to land and water".

The Department for International Development monitors its performance on the above and other aspects of its operations with respect to green housekeeping and reports on progress made. As part of our continuing efforts to constantly improve our performance, an environmental management system is currently being implemented.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by her Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110197]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development is currently involved with providing support, through the Natural Resources Institute and bilateral aid funded projects, for the FSC as part of its efforts to set up the certification program.

The Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) is accepted by buyers as demonstrating that timber and timber products have come from sustainably managed sources.

That said, it is not however viewed as being practicable to require that all paper and timber products purchased by this Department are independently certified by the FSC because this might discriminate against any equally valid schemes and therefore be contrary to public procurement rules.

Specifying the FSC label alone might also result in us failing to meet all our requirements, as currently only a tiny percentage of timber products are certified by the FSC.

My Department's policy statement for greening its operations states:

"We will encourage our suppliers to minimise the impacts of their operations, products and services on the environment through a procurement policy based on the standards in the Government's Green Claims Code".

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Advertising Budget

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110263]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 16 February 2000]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not have any budgets dedicated solely to advertising. However, as part of the recruitment process, advertising is included in the overall costs.

For the financial year to date the FCO has spent £438,282 on recruitment advertising. This covers recruitment to all grades in the generalist and specialist cadres. Owing to the demand led nature of recruitment it is not possible to predict advertising costs for 2000–01.

Kosovo

Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the export of demining equipment to the HALO Trust in Kosovo. [111120]

Mr. Vaz: We have granted a licence for the export to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) of a rocket wrench, de-arming kit and power charges for use by the HALO Trust, an organisation engaged in humanitarian demining activities in Kosovo on behalf of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK). These goods are on the UK's Military List.

UN Security Council resolution (UNSCR) 1160 imposed an arms embargo on the FRY. The only exception to this embargo is that in UNSCR 1244, which provides that prohibitions imposed by UNSCR 1160 shall not apply to the sale or supply of arms and related material for use by the international civil and security presence in Kosovo. We have notified the UN Sanctions Committee of this export and they have raised no objection. The export of the equipment required for demining purposes is not prohibited by the EU arms embargo.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by United Kingdom representatives at the United Nations to help ensure the speedy implementation of the proposed referendum on the future of the Western Sahara. [110478]

Mr. Hain: UK representatives in New York give their full support to efforts to implement the UN-sponsored referendum in the Western Sahara. UK representatives are also active members of the Friends of the Western Sahara grouping at the UN. The Permanent Representative to the UK Mission, Sir Jeremy Greenstock, recently met the Secretary-General of the Polisario Front and assured him that the UK would continue to support all efforts to find a just and durable peace in the Western Sahara acceptable to the Saharawi people.

Afghanistan

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring of human rights is undertaken by his Department in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [110477]

Mr. Hain: Our High Commission in Islamabad monitors human rights in Afghanistan and is in regular contact with NGOs and UN agencies on this subject.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to re-open the British Embassy in Kabul. [110568]

Mr. Hain: We have no plans at present to re-open the British Embassy in Kabul.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when his Department last (a) received representations from and (b) made representations to the Afghan Embassy in London; [110570]

(2) when his Department last received representations from the former Afghan Government of President Rabbani. [110569]

Mr. Hain: We are in regular contact with the Charge d'Affaires at the Afghanistan Embassy in London who was appointed by the Rabbani Government. He last met officials from the FCO on 16 February. We are also in contact with the other Afghan factions, including the Taliban

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the location of heroin production within Afghanistan. [110571]

Mr. Battle: The FCO funds a series of studies of the drugs problem in Afghanistan by the United Nations International Drugs Programme (UNDCP). Heroin production in Afghanistan is concentrated mainly in the Helmand, Nangahar and Badakhshan provinces. Approximately 90 per cent. of the areas in which opium poppy is cultivated is under Taliban control. According to estimates of the UNDCP, 1999 saw a 117 per cent. increase in the Afghan poppy harvest, to a total of 4,800 tonnes of opium, making Afghanistan the world's largest producer of illegal opiates.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department last had contact with a representative of the Taliban Government of Afghanistan. [110566]

Mr. Hain: We are in regular contact with the main Afghan factions, including the Taliban. The last contact between a representative of the Taliban and a British official was on 16 February 2000.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs where representatives of his Department have met representatives of the Taliban Government of Afghanistan. [110567]

Mr. Hain: Our meetings with the Taliban take place mainly in Islamabad. However, members of our Embassy in Copenhagen met a visiting Taliban delegation on 12 February 2000.

Departmental Meetings

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) meetings and (b) official social contacts between Foreign Office (i) Ministers and (ii) special advisers and Mr. Philip Gould from 1 May 1997 to date. [110510]

Mr. Robin Cook: Ministers and civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and analysis. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code and guidance for Civil Servants: Contacts with lobbyists. Some of these discussions take place on a confidential basis and, in order to preserve confidentiality, it is not the normal practice of Governments to release details of specific meetings with private individuals or companies.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the recent departmental meetings with Stanley Greenberg and James Caville. [110511]

Mr. Hain: Ministers and civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and analysis. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code and guidance for Civil Servants: Contacts with lobbyists. Some of these discussions take place on a confidential basis and, in order to preserve confidentiality, it is not the normal practice of Governments to release details of specific meetings with private individuals or companies.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 2000, Official Report, column 739W, on departmental expenditure, how much is (a) the transfer from another departmental expenditure limit of DFID and (b) the charge on the departmental expenditure limit reserve. [110514]

Mr. Hain: Our answer to the question of my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Blizzard) regarding the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Departmental Expenditure Limits contained an administrative error. The closing statement should have begun "The increase will be offset by a transfer from another Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL)", not "Departmental Expenditure Limit (DFID)". This is a standard Treasury line used when a department increases its DEL.

Our answer detailed an increase in our DEL of £5,157,000 and a breakdown of how this sum was made up. The breakdown detailed a variety of transfers between the FCO and other Government Departments internal movements and a claim on the reserve to support peacekeeping operations.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 2000, Official Report, column 739W, on departmental expenditure, what is the reason for the increase of £2 million in the capital expenditure and £2 million in the appropriation in aid for FCO estates rationalisation. [110515]

Mr. Battle: The reason for the increase in appropriations in aid is that the FCO was able to sell assets worth £2 million more than projected. The increase in capital expenditure reflects the recycling of those proceeds into other FCO capital programmes.

Ukraine

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many diplomats in the British Embassy in Ukraine are engaged in trade promotion; and what monitoring he conducts of the comparable figures for other EU states. [110572]

Mr. Battle: One senior diplomat leads a team of four locally engaged staff on trade promotion in Kiev. Our Ambassador devotes about 20 per cent. of his time to this work as do other staff to a smaller degree.

A full review of our Embassy in Kiev was conducted in November last year. British Trade International, who now operate the trade support services of the FCO and DTI, take account of the positions of comparable EU states when planning the allocation of resources.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is the Government's policy to support Ukraine's aspiration for EU membership; and what representations he or his Department have received from Ukraine concerning Ukrainian membership of the EU. [110579]

Mr. Vaz: We support Ukraine's aspirations for closer relations with the EU, but consider it too early to consider the question of possible EU membership. The EU/Ukraine Partnership and Co-operation Agreement offers wide scope for closer relations and we encourage Ukraine to implement it fully. Ukraine Ministers have frequently requested EU support for their aspirations to EU membership. It was one of the topics raised with me yesterday by the Foreign Policy Adviser to the Ukrainian President.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Ukrainian Government about (a) Ukraine's weapons exports and (b) illegal export of arms from Ukraine. [110582]

Mr. Vaz: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made representations regarding reports of Ukrainian manufactured arms in Sierra Leone and Angola to the Ukrainian Foreign Minister on 1 February and 16 December 1999. The Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) made similar representations to the Ukrainian Ambassador on 16 September 1999. A team of officials will travel to Ukraine in March to explore ways in which we can co-operate to combat illegal arms transfers in Africa. We do not believe that the Ukrainian Government is itself involved in illegal arms exports.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to other EU states by his Department concerning Ukrainian membership of the EU. [110580]

Mr. Vaz: The future of Ukraine's relations with the EU was discussed extensively with other EU member states during drafting of the EU Common Strategy on Ukraine, which was adopted at the Helsinki European Council in December 1999. The UK successfully argued that the Common Strategy should acknowledge Ukraine's European aspirations and welcome Ukraine's pro-European choice.

Children's Rights

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the report on Children's Rights published by the Children's Select Committee. [109822]

Mr. Hain: In November 1999, to mark the tenth anniversary of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, the FCO and Save the Children UK organised a Children's Select Committee. 16 children from across the UK chose to examine four issues of central importance to children: child soldiers, child labour, child rights and the environment, and child participation. The Committee's findings were presented in a report to the FCO on 8 February making a number of recommendations for the Government, business sector and NGOs to consider.

The FCO is co-ordinating the Government's response which we plan to publish by the middle of April. We will also be looking at ways to publicise the Committee's report and a video of the event as widely as possible, including through our Posts overseas.

Departmental Property

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all his Department's premises (a) currently for sale and (b) being considered for disposal. [110513]

Mr. Battle: Details of current FCO properties for sale are as listed. As to listing properties being considered for disposal, the entire estate is reviewed as part of a rolling programme revaluation exercise. This reveals properties which appear to be performing poorly on the basis of key performance indicators. These are then examined in detail to determine whether they should be replaced by more effective properties.

Zimbabwe

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made by him to the Government of Zimbabwe concerning demands that the UK compensate white farmers for land to be taken by the Zimbabwean Government. [110576]

Mr. Hain: Our High Commissioner called on the Vice President on 2 February. I wrote to President Mugabe on 4 February. The draft constitution, containing clause 57, was rejected by the Zimbabwe people in a referendum on 12–13 February.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to him by opposition groups within Zimbabwe about (a) that country's referendum on a new constitution and (b) human rights in Zimbabwe; and if he will make a statement. [110575]

Mr. Hain: We maintain close contact with a wide cross-section of society in Zimbabwe, including opposition groups. The referendum process was deeply flawed. The 'No' vote showed that there was clearly wide discontent with both the process and the content of the draft.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Gapes) on 11 January 2000, Official Report, columns 132–33W.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 21 February 2000

PRIME MINISTER

World Food Programme

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what inquiries he has made as to the reasons for the resignation of the head of the World Food Programme. [111230]

The Prime Minister: None.

Ilisu Dam

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the oral statement by the Minister for Small Business and E-Commerce of 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 172WH, what assessment he has made of the impact of the Ilisu Dam on water suppliers and shortage in Iraq. [111229]

The Prime Minister: The arrangements to be proposed by the relevant Turkish authorities for ensuring that adequate downstream water flows will be maintained at all times will be assessed by the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) as part of its underwriting consideration of this project. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has indicated that this is one of the key concerns he wishes to see addressed before any decision about ECGD support for the project.

Section 28

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 241, on section 28, what were the grounds for his statement that section 28 has not applied to schools since 1994. [111047]

The Prime Minister: Following the changes introduced by the Education Act 1993, which made sex education mandatory in secondary schools, the previous Government issued (in May 1994) Circular 5/94 "Sex Education in Schools". The Circular stated that section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988 applied to > "the activities of local authorities themselves, as distinct from the activities of the governing bodies and staff of schools on their own behalf".

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what consultation the Secretary-General of the United Nations had with the United Kingdom Government about the health and food situation in Iraq, before accepting the resignation of the senior UN representative in Baghdad responsible for co-ordinating humanitarian aid; and if he will make a statement. [111235]

The Prime Minister: None. UN staffing issues are a matter for the UN Secretary-General.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 16 February 2000, Official Report, columns 562–63W, concerning the Iraqi Government's prioritising of the humanitarian assistance, what the Government defines as prioritising properly the humanitarian assistance available under the oil-for-food programme. [111234]

The Prime Minister: In his regular reports on the implementation of the oil-for-food programme, the UN Secretary-General has repeatedly recommended that priority must be given to the food/nutrition and health sectors. In his most recent report of November 1999, he again stated that the Government of Iraq needed to give greater attention to the provision of basic pharmaceuticals, primary and preventive health-care services and material support for more effective distribution.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 16 February 2000, Official Report, columns 562–63W, concerning child nutrition and mortality in Iraq, what is the raft of measures referred to in his answer. [111232]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to operative paragraphs 15–32 of Security Council Resolution 1284, a copy of which is available from the Library.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 16 February 2000, Official Report, columns 562–63W, concerning the Iraqi Government's prioritising of humanitarian assistance, what priorities the Iraqi Government have set out under the oil-for-food programme. [111233]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the distribution plan submitted by Iraq to the UN Secretary General for the current phase of the oil-for-food programme. This information is available on the United Nations website from the following url: www.un.org/Departments/oip/dp7pdf/dp7exesum.htm .

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Prime Minister if all food served at his Office's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109790]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 11 February 2000]: All food served at official functions in my Office is obtained from suppliers who are required to meet the necessary legal requirements.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the names of the European Commissioners he has met since 1 August 1999 and the dates on which the meetings took place. [108868]

The Prime Minister: The information requested is as follows:

Date	European Commissioner
12 August 1999	Romano Prodi
15 October 1999	Romano Prodi
21 October 1999	Neil Kinnock
3 December 1999	Neil Kinnock

I have also spoken to President Prodi and Commissioner Byrne on a number of occasions by telephone.

Council of Europe/WEU Delegation

Mr. Savidge: To ask the Prime Minister what changes there are in the composition of the United Kingdom Delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and the Assembly of the Western European Union. [111160]

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friends the Members for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) and for Mansfield (Mr. Meale) have been appointed as substitute members in place of my hon. Friends the Members for Cannock Chase (Dr. Wright) and for North-West Leicestershire (Mr. Taylor).

Post Office Network

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister when the Performance and Innovation Unit's study into the future of the Post Office network will be published. [110837]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Torbay (Mr. Sanders) on 17 January 2000, Official Report, column 267W.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

East Timor

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department has provided to East Timor for small-scale agriculture, public health and education since November 1999; and what plans she has for immediate further assistance. [110490]

Clare Short: Since November 1999 we have provided £100,000 to CARE for an Emergency Agricultural Rehabilitation Programme; £625,000 to United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) for programmes in water and sanitation, education and social services and protection of women and children; and £100,000 to the World Health Organisation to strengthen and expand their role in public health co-ordination.

We have recently agreed to provide a further £1.4 million in immediate assistance through the United Nations Transitional Administration for East Timor (UNTAET) to fund labour intensive road rehabilitation programmes which will keep vital supply routes open.

Uganda

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representation she has made to the Uganda Government about dealing with the fighting in Northern Uganda. [111157]

Clare Short: Over the past three years I have discussed with the Government of Uganda the best way to achieve a peaceful solution to the fighting with the Lord's Resistance Army in Northern Uganda. I discussed this issue with President Museveni in 1997 and during my visit in Uganda last year.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of UK aid to Uganda is for agriculture and forestry. [111159]

Clare Short: We expect to spend £50 million in Uganda this financial year. Around 4 per cent. of this will be spent on agriculture and forestry. This includes assistance related to land ownership, agricultural research, veterinary services, government strategies on forestry and the modernisation of agriculture, and management of aquatic resources. Agricultural development in the less fertile areas of northern and eastern Uganda are key focuses for several of these projects.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of UK aid to Uganda is targeted to Northern Uganda. [111158]

Clare Short: We expect to spend £50 million in Uganda this financial year. Around 1 per cent. of this will be spent on projects directly targeted at the four northern districts of Kitgum, Gulu, Arua and Moyo. Most of the Uganda programme is comprised of nation-wide projects and initiatives designed to benefit the whole country, rather than specific districts. Examples include our commitment of £67 million over five years to Uganda's Education Sector Investment Plan, which aims to achieve universal primary education by 2003, and the budgetary assistance we provide direct to government.

Ongoing conflict and instability in Northern Uganda, particularly in Kitgum and Gulu, have made traditional development activities difficult and most of our current projects there focus on humanitarian assistance and peace-building. I have however made it clear when I visited the north and in response to requests from the Ugandan Government that should a sustainable peace be achieved, we will increase the proportion of our resources directly targeted at the region.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Satellite and Cable Television

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current availability to schools via satellite or cable of overseas television programmes of news, information or language teaching, and in what languages; and if he will make a statement on recent changes in that availability. [110396]

Mr. Wills: The information requested is not available centrally. Decisions about whether to subscribe to specific satellite or cable services are taken by individual schools in the light of their specific curriculum requirements.

Women's Incomes

Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish the findings of Government research into women's incomes over their lifetimes. [111335]

Ms Jowell: We have published today and will be placing in the Library our document "Women's Incomes over the Lifetime".

The research set out to examine the key features of women's incomes over their lifetimes, and to identify, and quantify, the factors behind men and women's lifetime incomes, drawing on existing research and undertaking new analysis. While we know quite a lot about income comparisons between individuals at particular moments in time, these do not tell us about the impact over women's lifetimes of the pattern and level of their earnings, the effect of the tax and benefit systems and the importance to women's incomes of transfers within families.

Women's lives have undergone a revolution in the last 25 years. Nearly eight out of 10 of all mothers are in paid work. Overwhelmingly mothers work because they want to—seven out of 10 saying they would rather work even if they could afford not to. But when children are young and dependent there must be a choice; therefore the Government has delivered the Working Families Tax Credit which guarantees low-paid families with one full-time worker a minimum income of £190 a week with no tax to pay on incomes below £220.

Lone parents often find it the most difficult to go back to work, but thanks to the New Deal for Lone Parents many are now finding jobs that are giving them on average, an extra £39 a week in their pockets.

Women already working are benefiting from a whole host of policies put in place by the Government. The National Minimum Wage, which the Government have announced will be uprated by 10p in October, has given around 1.5 million people, the majority of whom are women, an immediate pay rise. The new 10p tax rate halved the tax paid by over one million women.

Maternity pay has been improved for part-time women, women who have only been working for a year and those who are self-employed. Therefore getting pregnant while in work should no longer mean giving up jobs.

Many women work part-time because it gives them the best chance of balancing work and home life. New improved part-time employment rights mean that women working part-time now have the same rights, and therefore security, as other employees.

And the biggest ever increase in child benefit last April, straight into mum's purse, will help ensure women are not worse off in work. Next April will come another boost so that mums get £15 for the first child and £10 for the second.

Through this action we are committed to equipping women for the challenges of the new economy—one that values a broader range of skills, diversity and knowledge and one that provides new opportunities for women.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the cost of preparing, printing and distributing the publication, "Raising Aspirations in the 21st Century: A Speech by the right hon. David Blunkett MP Secretary of State for Education and Employment, 6 January 2000". [110739]

Mr. Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his hon. Friend the Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) on 18 January 2000, Official Report, column 388W.

Internet Access

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance the Government are giving about ensuring that children at school are unable to access inappropriate material on the internet. [111156]

Mr. Wills: We are determined that pupils should be protected from unsuitable material while accessing the wealth of educationally valuable material on the internet. DfEE and the British Educational Communications and Technology agency (BECTa) have produced a detailed information pack for teachers and parents about pupils' safe use of the internet. The Superhighway Safety pack, which is available free and is also on the National Grid for Learning, provides guidance on the wide range of measures which schools can adopt. These range from using walled gardens and filtering software, to monitoring and tracking pupil access and providing user contracts for pupils, spelling out how they should behave.

Administration Costs (LEAs)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list (a) the total administration costs and (b) administration costs as a percentage of income for each local education authority in England in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [110708]

Ms Estelle Morris: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 11 January 2000, Official Report, columns 148–52W. As part of the 2000–01 settlement, the Secretary of State set targets for LEAs relating to delegation of resources and retention of central costs.

Pupil Spending (Somerset)

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of spending per pupil in secondary schools in Somerset for each year from 1988–89 to 1999–2000, expressed in 1997–98 prices; and if he will make a statement. [110762]

Ms Estelle Morris: Spending in secondary schools in Somerset on a per pupil basis from 1989–90 to 1997–98, the years for which this information is currently available, is set out in the table. The figures are based on Net Institutional Expenditure and expressed at 1997–98 prices.

	1997–98 prices
1989–90	2,347
1990–91	2,312
1991–92	2,292
1992–93	2,497
1993–94	2,369
1994–95	2,307
1995–96	2,347
1996–97	2,277
1997–98	2,222

The balance of funding between secondary and other sectors of education is a matter for local education authorities. More generally, the Government announced in November 1998 a three year review in partnership with local government to look for a way of distributing revenue support which is simpler, more stable, more robust and fairer than the present arrangements for SSAs.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action he is taking to ensure that TECs do not divest themselves of assets derived from public funds before the ending of such funding in 2001. [110397]

Mr. Wicks: My Department has a number of mechanisms in place to ensure that TECs do not dispose of assets without our agreement. We hold a debenture which prevents TECs from selling, transferring or otherwise disposing of any assets other than in the ordinary and proper course of business without the permission of the Secretary of State. The TEC licence also requires them to gain the Department's approval to dispose of any land and buildings and to get the full market value for them and, following the notice of termination of the licence on 13 July 1999, to comply with reasonable requests to limit expenditure.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will establish a mechanism for valuation and apportionment of assets currently held by TECs according to whether or not they were derived from public funds; how publicly owned assets will be treated for accounting purposes; and what advice he will offer TECs on the use or disposal of their remaining assets. [110398]

Mr. Wicks: My officials are currently working up proposals for the valuation and treatment of assets currently held by TECs. We expect to publish these by the end of March 2000. As private companies TEC assets, including publicly funded assets, are recorded in their accounts and depreciated in line with the recognised accounting standards. Should any assets remain on wind up, TEC memorandum and articles of association require them to be passed to a body with similar objects and which has been agreed by the Secretary of State. It is our intention to agree with each TEC a transition plan that will set out, among other things, plans for the future use or disposal of assets.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to monitor performance and contract compliance by TECs during their last financial year, 2000–01. [110401]

Mr. Wicks: There is a well established system in place for monitoring TEC performance and this will continue to operate until all TEC business with DfEE ceases. Managing TEC performance is the role of Government Offices (GOs). They collect and analyse information to assess how well each TEC is performing. GOs manage and report upon the delivery of performance against the TEC Business Plan and hold TECs to account for meeting programme objectives. Officials will continue to monitor the effectiveness of these arrangements throughout 2000–01.

DfEE will continue to monitor TECs' compliance with their contracts throughout 2000–01 and has in place claims testing processes that will be applied to all TECs during this period. In parallel with this work, the Department is monitoring TECs' compliance with specific requirements resulting from the issue of notices of contract termination to the TECs. Audit work based on professional risk judgments will also continue.

Ofsted Inspectors

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many Ofsted inspectors have been appointed to date; and how many are of ethnic minority origin; [111025]

(2) what requirement exists for Ofsted teams inspecting schools where the majority of students are of ethnic minority background, to include (a) a registered inspector from an ethnic minority and (b) a proportion of members who reflect the ethnic background of the majority of the students; and if he will make a statement. [111026]

Ms Estelle Morris: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what regulations are issued to Ofsted on the composition of inspection teams. [110995]

Ms Estelle Morris: The regulations governing the composition of Ofsted inspection teams are set out in schedule 3 to the School Inspections Act 1996.

Education Funding

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the arrangements for the distribution of the additional funds for education announced in the recent local government settlement, indicating how much each local authority will receive and what conditions will be attached to the receipt of such funds. [111046]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend confirmed in a letter of 31 January 2000 to all council leaders that the extra £50 million grant for education will be paid as a special grant to authorities on condition that it is used for education and added to schools' delegated budgets. It will be distributed among authorities according to their numbers of schools and pupils, following the same pattern as the school improvement grant for 2000–01. My right hon. Friend will want to see prior confirmation that an authority has increased its education budget by the increase for 2000–01 in its education standard spending assessment before making a decision on the release of its share of the £50 million special grant. The table sets out the amount each authority can expect to receive.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what criteria he attaches to the award of grants available following the announcement of additional funding for education in the recent local government settlement. [111145]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend will want to see prior confirmation that the whole of an authority's increase in its education standard spending assessment has been passed on to its education budget before he takes decisions on the release of that authority's share of the £50 million special grant. Local education authorities will be required to include their share of the £50 million special grant in their schools' delegated budgets.

LEA Funding (Bradford)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much funding was awarded to Bradford Local Education Authority in each year from 1995–96 to 1999–2000 in respect of (a) reduction in infant class sizes, broken down by (i) revenue and (ii) capital funds, (b) the National Grid for Learning, (c) literacy programmes, (d) numeracy programmes, (e) books for schools, (f) truancy and behaviour initiatives, (g) school security, (h) improving school effectiveness, (i) the Excellence in Cities initiative, (j) New Deal for Schools, (k) voluntary aided schools capital grant, (l) energy efficiency, (m) education S.S.A. and (n) music programmes. [111029]

Ms Estelle Morris: The figures requested are shown in the following table. For Standards Fund grants, the figures include both the Government's and Bradford Local Education Authority's contributions where appropriate. The figures shown for Education Standard Spending Assessment also include provision for the Authority's contribution to the Standards Fund.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has in respect of the level of resources to be made available to individual schools for threshold payments under the proposed performance-related pay scheme for teachers. [111024]

Ms Estelle Morris: For an initial period starting in September 2000, the Government will establish a Special Grant to target resources for the performance threshold additional to and separate from schools' delegated budgets. Schools will be able to draw additional funds from this grant via their local education authority for the salary uplift of each teacher promoted to the upper pay spine. There will be no quota on threshold successes.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements he has put in place in respect of the proposals for teachers' performance related pay in the event that the teachers' association reject the proposals. [111040]

Ms Estelle Morris: Since our proposals for reforming teachers' pay and conditions were published in the Green Paper "Teachers: meeting the challenge of change" (Cm4164), in December 1998, we have consulted extensively with the teacher unions and other key stakeholders on the best way to take our proposals forward.

One of the main elements of the proposals is the introduction of a performance threshold for classroom teachers. It will be for each individual teacher to decide whether to apply for the threshold as he/she becomes eligible—application will be entirely voluntary. Teachers who are successful will receive a pay rise of £2,000.

Following publication of the School Teachers' Review Body (STRB) report on 1 February 2000, two of the teaching unions—NAHT and ATL—have indicated their support for the latest proposals. The NUT has indicated that it will not try to prevent members from applying to cross the threshold.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to allow the contribution of private tuition to be taken into account when judging pupil performance as part of his proposals for teacher's performance-related pay. [111023]

Ms Estelle Morris: In considering applications to cross the performance threshold, headteachers will need to make a professional judgment on whether the progress made by a teacher's pupils is as good as would be expected from local and national context of the school. In reaching a judgment, we would expect headteachers to think about the evidence presented by the teacher against the pupil progress standard, particularly whether the evidence is representative of the range of the teacher's work and whether it demonstrates care and attention to all pupils.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance he will issue with the introduction of performance-related pay for teachers to ensure a commitment to equal opportunities regardless of age, disabilities, ethnic origin, gender, marital status, religion and sexual orientation. [110997]

Ms Estelle Morris: We will be enforcing our commitment to equal opportunities through the package of performance threshold materials we will be publishing for schools and others towards the end of March and through the working code of conduct for the external assessors. We will be asking all applicants to cross the performance threshold to complete an equal opportunities questionnaire to enable us to monitor the profile of those applying for threshold assessment and the outcomes.

A copy of the draft materials has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to ensure that proposals for performance-related pay do not discriminate against (a) female and (b) ethnic minority teachers. [110998]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department for Education and Employment is committed to pursuing equal opportunities. It has taken a series of steps to ensure that the proposals to establish a new upper pay range do not discriminate on any grounds. The Department has consulted and is continuing to consult widely in drawing up the proposals. The performance assessment is designed to be accessible by part-time as well as full-time teachers. The external assessors deployed to verify the assessments made by Headteachers will receive training in equal opportunities issues and will work to a code of conduct which includes a commitment to pursuing equal opportunities. The Department has ensured that the contractor responsible for deploying the external assessors is committed to pursuing equal opportunities. Their activities will be quality assured internally and by the Department. Applications made by teachers for threshold assessment will be monitored for equal opportunities implications.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what safeguards he will put in place to ensure that a previous dispute between a headteacher and a teacher does not affect a decision on whether to recommend the teacher for progress through the performance pay threshold. [111043]

Ms Estelle Morris: Headteachers will be responsible for the assessments of teachers in their schools. Assessments will be made against national standards. Trained accredited external assessors will visit every school to verify headteachers' assessments on a sampling basis in order to ensure national consistency and the rigorous application of the standards.

Education Zones

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the education zones include rural areas. [110783]

Ms Estelle Morris: There are 11 education actions zones with schools in rural areas, as defined by Local Authority Districts. They are Withernsea and Southern Holderness EAZ, the South East Virtual EAZ, the Kent Somerset Virtual EAZ, Shropshire "Meeting the Rural Challenge" EAZ, the North East Derbyshire Coalfields Action EAZ, Weston (North Somerset) EAZ, Hereford EAZ, Bedford EAZ, Redruth Cornwall EAZ, Somerset "The Bridgwater Achievement Zone", Easington and Seaham EAZ.

In addition, a 12th zone, East Cleveland's "Learning Together" EAZ, includes schools in the rural part of Redcar and Cleveland, which is officially designated as an urban area.

School Standards (Manchester)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will make a ruling on the possible breach of section 107 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 in relation to Trinity School in Manchester. [110671]

Ms Estelle Morris: A reply was sent to the hon. Gentleman on 17 February.

Class Sizes

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average class size at each key stage in schools in (a) rural and (b) urban areas. [109751]

Ms Estelle Morris: The available information on class sizes is shown in the tables.

Average size of classes taught by one teacher in maintained primary schools by area and by key stage in England—January 1999

School Playing Fields

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to encourage inner-city schools in the independent and maintained sectors to share their sports playing fields with schools which do not have such fields. [108283]

Ms Estelle Morris: Through the specialist schools programme, Sports Colleges work closely with local partner primary and secondary schools and the wider community, sharing their facilities and resources, to help raise participation and standards in PE and sport for all pupils. We are particularly keen to support schools in inner cities and areas of social deprivation, and give some preference to applications through the associated Excellence in Cities programme. It is for individual schools to make appropriate arrangements to share facilities.

A survey in 1997 indicated that, in 45 per cent. of the independent schools surveyed, games pitches and school grounds were used by maintained schools; and in 28 per cent, athletics tracks were used by maintained schools. The Government's Independent/State School Partnerships Scheme, established in 1997, promotes the sharing of a wide range of resources between independent and maintained schools for their mutual benefit, supported by a project grant programme. A number of these partnerships are sharing sporting facilities as one aspect of their project.

New Deal

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have stopped claiming (a) jobseeker's allowance and (b) national insurance credits as a result of moving onto a New Deal option since April 1998. [109271]

Ms Jowell: Since April 1998, all 138,320 young people who started one of the four options under the New Deal for young people ceased claiming Jobseeker's allowance. 107,460 of these continue to claim national insurance credits but we expect that the 30,680 young people who started a waged option will have ceased to claim national insurance credits.

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if it is his policy to encourage schools and local education authorities to employ people under the New Deal. [109983]

Ms Jowell: I continue to encourage all employers, especially those in the public sector, to offer more employment opportunities to people in the New Deal. Organisations in the public sector, including schools and local education authorities, have close links with their local communities and are in a strong position to offer leadership in order to tackle unemployment and social exclusion.

Higher Education

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to raise awareness in the higher education sector of best practice in equal opportunities. [108277]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State wrote to the Higher Education Funding Council for England on 23 November 1999 to express his concern about the present position on equal opportunities for HE staff and he asked them to ensure that institutions have and implement equal opportunity statements. The Commission on University Career Opportunity has sent a three-point action plan to implement racial equality to all heads of institutions.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many higher education subjects in the United Kingdom are offered only in one of its component countries. [110373]

Mr. Wicks: The information is not available in the form requested.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what data he has collated on the number of people participating in higher education courses in each constituency in each of the last three years. [109979]

Mr. Wicks: These data are not collated centrally on a constituency basis.

School Budgets

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy to enable schools to plan ahead by fixing their budgets, on a per capita basis, for three years ahead in line with the public expenditure planning periods set out in each Comprehensive Spending Review; and if he will make a statement. [110796]

Ms Estelle Morris: Under the current system of local government finance, it is for local authorities to decide on the distribution of funding between their schools, taking account of local circumstances and priorities. However, the Government has set local authorities a target for 2000–01 of increasing average delegated funding per pupil by at least 6 per cent., or 5 per cent., in authorities which already delegate more than 85 per cent. of their local schools budget.

Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if external institutions will have the same rights of access to learning and skills council development funds after April 2001 as further education colleges and private training organisations. [109084]

Mr. Wicks: External Institutions will have the same access to core funding for learners as further education colleges and private training providers. The Further Education Funding Council will consult on proposals for the use of the FE Standard Fund in 2000–01. It is intended to extend the use of FE Standards Fund in 2000–01 to External Institutions, Specialist Colleges and other non-sector college providers of further education. The Department will consult separately this summer on the use from April 2001 of FE Capital Funds.

GNVQs (Revised Syllabus)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the development of the revised syllabus for GNVQ at Advanced Level for implementation by schools and colleges in the autumn, with particular reference to the assessment regime. [110280]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 17 February 2000]: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) is currently in the process of finalising the accreditation of the revised Advanced GNVQ specifications to be introduced for teaching in September 2000. Draft specifications are already available via the QCA's and the awarding bodies' websites.

The rigour of the Advanced GNVQ assessment regime will be significantly upgraded to ensure that standards are equivalent with GCE A level. In particular, the new specifications have been written to a more demanding standard; there will be a higher proportion of external testing; there will be revised A-E grading scale; and candidates will be limited to one opportunity to re-sit each unit, as for A level. We announced on 16 February that Advanced GNVQs would be known as "vocational A levels" with effect from September to reflect these important reforms.

Electronic Data Interchange

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress is being made in developing electronic data interchange between further education colleges and awarding bodies. [110279]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 17 February 2000]: The major awarding bodies use a variety of electronic data interchange (EDI) systems, operated through service providers, to link with colleges and they encourage the use of these systems. It is for each college to decide whether to use EDI systems or not. Links are well developed for GCSE, GCE and GNVQ titles but less so for NVQs and "brand name" qualifications.

Ethnicity and Employment

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the report, Ethnicity and Employment in Higher Education, published by the Policy Studies Institute. [110366]

Mr. Wicks: The findings of the report are for the higher education institutions to consider and address. In his letter of 23 November 1999 to the Higher Education Funding Council for England, the Secretary of State asked the Council to encourage institutions to give proper emphasis to racial equality in their equal opportunities policy statements.

Green Issues

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source; [110189]

(2) what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110188]

Mr. Wills: I refer to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions dated 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 357W. I can confirm that my Department's policy on green issues is modelled on that of DETR.

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110253]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 16 February 2000]: The Department's advertising and publicity budget is:

(a) £10.937 million for 1999–2000

(b) £11.108 million for 2000–2001

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110267]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 20 February 2000]: The average cost of printing and distributing a press release from the DfEE in 1999 was £65. This allows us to get information to over 1,000 national, local and specialist media as well as local education authorities and other educational bodies. Increasing use of electronic communication is being made to reduce costs.

Kinloss School

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take steps to require Kinloss School in Worcestershire to allow Worcestershire Local Education Authority access to the recent Social Services Inspectorate report on the school. [110441]

Jacqui Smith: On 3 February 2000 my Department authorised the Worcestershire County Inspectorate to release copies of the report. Copies will be sent to all local authorities that have placed children in the school. This will include Worcestershire Local Education Authority.

DfEE officials have also written to all Local Education Authorities responsible for children in Kinloss, advising them that my Department has also given the school notice of withdrawal of its approval under section 347 of the Education Act 1996. This means that the school has until June 2000 to remedy the failings identified in the report, or it will lose its approval.

GCE A-level Syllabus

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the introduction of key skills to the GCE A-Level syllabus from autumn 2000, with particular reference to difficulties encountered in individual subject areas. [110281]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 17 February 2000]: The new key skills qualification is designed to be taken alongside A-levels and other post-16 qualifications. It is not mandatory. To assist teachers, opportunities to develop key skills have been signposted in each of the new A-level specifications. In addition, specifications for the new qualification have been available from the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority since January 1999. Examples of test questions will be available shortly. A Government funded programme is providing teachers with a wide range of training and materials, including packs on how to teach key skills alongside particular A-levels.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Rural Bus Services

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of rural parishes have (a) no bus service and (b) no daily bus service. [109811]

Mr. Hill: My Department does not collect information in this form.

However, I understand that results from a 1997 survey of rural parishes in England carried out for the Rural Development Commission (RDC) show significant variation according to parish size, and were as follows:

Parish population size (persons)	No bus service[1] (%)	No daily bus service[2] (%)
0–99	60	93
100–199	34	92
200–299	21	89
300–499	17	84
500–999	13	77
1,000–2,999	9	57
3,000–9,999	8	31
All under 10,000	22	75

[1]No bus stop in the parish

[2]A service that runs 7 days per week

Results from the Department's own National Travel Survey for the period 1996–98 show that 85 per cent. of rural households are within 13 minutes walk of a bus service which runs at least every weekday.

In its first year following introduction, the Rural Bus Subsidy Grant provided for over 1,800 new or improved services in 1998–99 in rural England. These services are not reflected in the data.

A49 Dorrington Bypass

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will reinstate the A49 Dorrington Bypass scheme; and if he will make a statement. [110126]

Mr. Hill: As explained in "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England" our policy is to integrate trunk road planning within the wider transport network through regional planning guidance. The priorities for improvement of the trunk road network in Shropshire now fall to be considered in the first instance by the Regional Planning Conference in revising the regional planning guidance for the West Midlands. Revision of the guidance is expected to begin in the spring.

Traffic Noise

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much public money (a) has been spent and (b) is budgeted to be spent as compensation for traffic noise levels for residents living adjacent to the M25 between Junctions 8 and 10 following the road's widening. [110233]

Mr. Hill: We have received 2,832 claims so far and paid £10,114,641 in respect of 822 claims. This figure includes interest and agents' costs.

A further 925 have now been agreed and compensation on those will be £3,456,445 exclusive of interest as this is calculated at date of payment. These claims should be paid within the next few months. The remaining claims are currently with the Agency's Valuer under negotiation. The estimate for the outstanding cases (and any others we might receive) is of the order of £6.5 million. The total compensation bill is therefore estimated at around £20 million.

We have an obligation to pay compensation under Part 1 of the Lands Compensation Act 1973 in respect of depreciation in value of properties caused by physical factors—including noise—arising from the use of the M25 widening between junctions 8–10.

Harris Bus Company

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with London Transport regarding the Harris Bus company; and if he will make a statement. [110324]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The provision of bus services is a matter for London Transport Buses (LTB), although my officials have been kept informed. I understand that LTB is in discussion with the Administrator of Harris Bus with a view to taking over direct management of Harris's route contracts.

A number of approvals remain to be granted, notably that of an Operators' Licence, and there are still some commercial negotiations to be completed before LTB can confirm its final intentions. In the meantime, I understand that LTB managers and supervisors are assisting the Administrator to deliver the best possible service in the circumstances. LTB has also developed contingency plans in the event that discussions are unsuccessful.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to reply to the letter of 10 February from the hon. Member for Erith and Thamesmead regarding the Harris Bus company and bus services in South East London; and if he will place a copy of his reply in the Library. [110325]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 15 February 2000]: I replied to my hon. Friend on 18 February and have placed a copy of the letter in the Library.

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent research his Department has commissioned into the (a) number of abandoned vehicles on public highways and private property and (b) cost of the removal of such abandoned vehicles by local authorities. [110416]

Mr. Mullin: My Department has commissioned no recent research into either (a) the number of abandoned vehicles on public highways and private property or (b) the cost of the removal of such abandoned vehicles by local authorities.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to meet representatives of the Local Government Association to discuss the abandoning of vehicles on public highways and private property. [110410]

Mr. Mullin: My Department has regular meetings with representatives of the Local Government Association to discuss a range of waste management issues.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to reduce the number of cars abandoned with no known owner; and if he will make a statement. [111125]

Mr. Hill: A number of measures to improve the accuracy of the DVLA vehicle record have either recently been put into operation or are planned. They include changes to the way in which notification is made when vehicles are sold, increased involvement by the police in enforcing registration procedures and a pilot scheme to enforce registration offences direct from the DVLA record. The Vehicle Crime Reduction Action Team's five year strategy document "Tackling Vehicle Crime" recommends a number of further measures intended to improve the accuracy of the DVLA record.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many cars were abandoned with no known owner in 1999. [111126]

Mr. Hill: No information is available on the total number of vehicles that are abandoned. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) records only vehicles notified by the police and local authorities. In 1999, there were 34,860 notifications. It is not possible to discover the number of cars abandoned with no known keeper without running a prohibitively expensive search of the DVLA database.

Used Cars

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to change the DVLA's V5 registrations system for used cars; and if he will make a statement. [111130]

Mr. Hill: Changes to the vehicle registration system are being considered in relation to the Government's commitment to reduce vehicle crime. Tighter vehicle registration procedures have been suggested by the Vehicle Crime Reduction Action Team and are set out in "Tackling Vehicle Crime—A Five Year Strategy". Comments have been invited on these recommendations and will be taken into account in framing new procedures.

Thameslink

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the quality of Thameslink services from St. Albans to central London. [110363]

Mr. Hill: Overcrowding on Thameslink services has been eased by the loan of four class 317 units from WAGN and two class 319 units from Connex, resulting in an extra 3,900 seats per week, and an extra train path from 26 September 1999. The shadow Strategic Rail Authority are currently looking at proposals for additional capacity on the Bedford to London section of the route. The long term capacity solution lies within the Thameslink 2000 project, which will improve services for passengers between London and St. Albans.

Underground Trains

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what standards he sets in respect of volume level of flange squeal on London Underground trains; and if he will make a statement. [110418]

Mr. Hill: The Secretary of State does not set standards that relate specifically to the volume of flange squeal on London Underground trains. However, the noise exposure limits set under the Noise at Work Regulations 1989, apply in respect of the noise experienced by London Underground's employees and contractors. Also, London Underground has a duty of care to ensure the safety and well-being of its customers and neighbours.

Local Deprivation Index

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when decisions on the content of the Index of Local Deprivation will be announced; and if he will make a statement; [110539]

(2) when the underlying data used to calculate the proposed Index of Local Deprivation 1999 will be released; and if he will make a statement. [110540]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The final 1999 Index is due to be published in spring 2000 along with a summary report and a supporting document. This final index will include local authority district level scores and ranks. The scores and ranks at the ward level will be published at the same time and will be available for each domain separately (income, work, health and disability, education, skills and training, housing and geographical access to services). A further more detailed report will be published in summer 2000.

The summary report will contain details about where to obtain, sometimes at a charge, the underlying data, used to construct the 33 indicators.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) was the membership of and (b) were the organisations represented on the (i) advising group and (ii) virtual advising group which advised the Index 99 team on the Index of Deprivation. [110541]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The review of the 1999 Index of Local Deprivation was overseen by an inter-departmental steering committee. This included representatives from DETR, Department for Education and Employment, Department of Health, the Office for National Statistics, the Department of Social Security, the Home Office, The Department of Trade and Industry, the Treasury, the Social Exclusion Unit, The Northumbria Police, the Countryside Agency, The Local Government Association, the Improvement and Development Agency, The Welsh Executive, the Scottish Executive, the Northern Ireland Office, the Department of Culture, Media and Sport, the University of Cambridge and all Regional Development Agencies (East of England Development Agency, East Midlands Development Agency, North East Development Agency, North West Development Agency, South East of England Development Agency, South West Regional Development Agency, Advantage West Midlands and Yorkshire and Humberside Development Agency).

In addition, the review team benefited from the advice of a large advisory panel with a range of different skills and areas of expertise. This included academics from a number of Universities including Bath, Bristol, Birmingham, Cambridge, Lincolnshire, the London School of Economics, Warwick and York and members of other organisations including the Policy Studies Institute, the Local Government Association, the Improvement and Development Agency and the Central and Local Government Information Partnership sub group on deprivation statistics.

Roughland Paths

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the objection of (a) the RSPB and (b) other environmental groups to police advice to local authorities to cut back undergrowth alongside paths crossing roughland for public safety reasons. [110647]

Mr. Mullin: I am not aware that my Department has received any such objections but we would always seek to balance environmental considerations with those of public safety.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the cost of training for (a) councillors and (b) officers if new cabinet structures in local government are implemented. [110645]

Ms Armstrong: The extent to which councils will need to direct their training programmes for councillors and officers to cover the new cabinet structures will depend upon local circumstances, including the details of any cabinet structure that they are proposing to adopt.

Greater London Enterprise

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidelines govern donations by Greater London Enterprise to political parties. [110439]

Mr. Hill: The GLE is a limited company, and is therefore covered by Schedule 7 of the Companies Act 1985 which requires disclosure of monetary donations to a political party.

Train Services (Waterloo-Crewkerne)

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that punctuality on South-West Trains services from Waterloo to Crewkerne is improved; and if he will make a statement. [110803]

Mr. Hill: The performance of South West Trains services has been adversely affected over the past few months by a combination of unofficial strike action by staff and the annual leaf fall. Most services have now returned to normal. The Franchising Director is pursuing with South West Trains changes to their staffing policy and levels which should lead to improvements over time in both punctuality and the reliability of all of the company's services.

Chard Junction

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to re-open Chard Junction railway station; and if he will make a statement. [110802]

Mr. Hill: There are currently no plans to re-open Chard Junction railway station. Interested local stakeholders may, however, wish to consider making a bid for funds to re-open this station from the Rail Passenger Partnership scheme (details in the House Library) administered by the Franchising Director.

London Underground

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the public-private partnership for London Underground will include the funding for the installation of a moving block signalling system on each London Underground line. [110895]

Mr. Hill: In the London Underground public-private partnership, the private sector is being invited to bid to implement a programme of maintenance and enhancement projects specified largely in output terms. It will therefore largely be for the bidders to identify the right technological solutions that would enable London Underground to run the improved service London needs. The level of funding needed can be considered sensibly only once the bids are in.

Air Pollution (Rural Areas)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent assessment he has made of the levels of air pollution in rural areas; and what plans he has for programmes to reduce such pollution levels. [110775]

Mr. Hill: The Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, published on 19 January, provides a comprehensive assessment of current and future air quality throughout the UK. It sets objectives for reducing levels of the eight main air pollutants, to be achieved between 2003 and 2008. These objectives will be met through a combination of international, national and local measures.

Under local air quality management (LAQM), local authorities are obliged to review and assess air quality in their areas against these objectives and, where the objectives are unlikely to be met by the relevant date, establish action plans to improve air quality. Ozone is the pollutant of particular concern in rural areas. Because of its transboundary nature, it is most effectively tackled at international level and so is excluded from LAQM. In December 1999, we and other countries signed the UNECE Protocol to abate acidification, eutrophication and ground level ozone. This will lead to significant reductions in emissions of pollutants which cause the formation of ozone. We are currently negotiating within the EU proposals from the European Commission for a National Emissions Ceilings Directive and an Ozone Directive which are expected to lead to further reductions in levels of ozone.

Farmers' Markets

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will amend planning regulations to provide for the establishment of a national network of farmers' markets. [110835]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Existing planning controls apply equally to all open air markets. Farmers' markets have been established successfully throughout the country in recent years. However, the "Rural Economies" report by the Performance and Innovation Unit (published last December) stated that there would be merit in reviewing the ancient local market charter arrangements and accompanying regulations. The common law right of charter markets to prevent other markets being established within a distance of six and two-third miles is one possible inhibiting factor.

The "Rural Economies" report is an important contribution to the preparation of the forthcoming Rural White Paper and we shall consider carefully its conclusions and proposals.

Eden Project

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the road access to the Eden Project tourist attraction in South East Cornwall. [110788]

Mr. Hill: The planning application for the Eden Project was not called in for the Secretary of State's decision. Assessment of the adequacy of road access therefore lay with the local planning authority which in this case is Cornwall county council as Highways Authority and Restormel borough council as Planning Authority.

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110714]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions issued a Greening Operations Policy Statement in October 1999 which sets out its aims and objectives for greening its operations. The Department's policy on using materials in horticulture is to substitute all slow renewables such as peat with organic waste such as compost, manure, leaf mould, bark chipping and coir. This policy applies to all parts of the Department including its Executive Agencies and Government Offices for which DETR has property management responsibility.

DETR has specific Terms and Conditions on this issue which are included in its contracts.

Local Government Staff (Training)

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on (a) the amount allocated and (b) the amount spent on training of local government staff broken down by (i) occupational grade, (ii) type of employment and (iii) gender, in each of the last five years. [109604]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department does not hold information of this type.

Some information is available from the People Skills and Development Survey undertaken by the Local Government National Training Organisation (LGNTO). The Survey, to which 22 per cent. of local authorities responded, estimated that training expenditure by authorities in the United Kingdom totalled some £500 million in 1997–98. This included £239 million on the wages and salaries of employees trained. The Survey does not, however, break this information down in the manner requested.

A summary report was sent to all local authorities last year. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House. I understand that the LGNTO intend to conduct another survey this year, for the financial year 1999–2000.

Holmethorpe Relief Road

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to respond to the Borough of Reigate and Banstead Council's request in a letter of 29 July 1999 to the Government Office for the South East to confirm the Council of the Borough of Reigate and Banstead (Holmethorpe Relief Road, Redhill) Compulsory Purchase Order 1996. [110583]

Mr. Mullin: We expect to issue a decision on the Compulsory Purchase Order shortly.

Steel Shot

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to take action to discourage the use of steel shot in woodlands. [R] [110402]

Mr. Mullin: The Government have no plans to take action to discourage the use of steel shot in woodlands. The owners of shooting rights may restrict the use of particular types of shot on relevant land, if they so wish.

Biodiversity

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will respond to the report on Biodiversity in the EU of Sub-Committee D of the European Union Committee of the House of Lords; and if he will make a statement on recommendations 1, 6 and 7 of the report. [109322]

Mr. Meacher: The Government's response to the Report is in preparation and will be submitted in March. I also hope that an announcement about a Countryside Bill, as mentioned in the Queen's speech, will soon indicate where some of the Report's recommendations may be tackled through intended legislation.

Railtrack

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of the report he has received on the future of the Safety and Standards Department of Railtrack; and if he will make a statement. [110994]

Mr. Hill: I expect to make an announcement shortly on the future of Railtack's safety and standards directorate, and will then place relevant material in the Library.

Rail Freight

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent assessment he has made of the effect of rail freight facilities grants on the volume of rail freight; and if he will make a statement. [110993]

Mr. Hill: The table gives details of all rail freight grants awarded by my Department since May 1997. Grants are awarded against tonnage committed for the life of each scheme.

	Awarded	Total value (£)	Total tonnage committed (million tonnes)	Lorry journeys saved as a result
Freight facilities grants	31	30,517,625	20,549,600	1,739,500
Track access grants	39	18,813,445	5,535,700	640,600
Total	70	49,431,070	[1]26,085,300	2,380,100

[1] Plus 2,380,000 containers and 770,000 vehicles linked to these grants

In addition to these awards, during the period between May 1997 and May 1999, Freightliner received Track Access Grant payments of more than £36 million, having made over 500,000 medium to long distance container movements by rail. These rail movements saved a like number of similar distance road movements.

We believe that but for payment of these grants, this traffic would not be moving by rail.

Section 28

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those organisations which have made representations to him calling for (a) the repeal and (b) the retention of section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988. [111031]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Government have received many representations, from both organisations and members of the public, concerning the repeal of section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988.

Organisations who have expressed their support for the repeal include:

Save the Children
The British Medical Association
The Royal College of Nursing
National Union of Teachers
Local Government Association
Terrence Higgins Trust
Trade Unions Congress
Stonewall
Outrage
The Family Planning Association.

Organisations who have expressed their opposition to the repeal include:

The Christian Institute
Intercessors for Britain
Riverside Christian Centre, Exeter
Christian Life Centre, Wolverhampton
Concern for Family and Womanhood, Cheltenham
Lighthouse Enterprises, Middlesex
Wigan Family Care Centre
The Crops Trust, Peterborough.

Business Rate

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the business rate increase has been (a) as a percentage and (b) in real terms in each of the past 10 years. [110824]

Ms Beverley Hughes: By law, the national non-domestic multiplier can increase each year only by the rate of inflation unless the year in question is one when non-domestic properties are revalued. In a revaluation year the multiplier is recalculated to ensure that the rate yield after revaluation is equal to that before revaluation plus inflation. However, because the national total rateable value may rise or fall at revaluation then the multiplier may rise and fall as a consequence.

Changes in the national non-domestic multiplier for the years 1990–91 to 2000–01 are as follows:

Year	Multiplier for England (Pence)	Percentage change on previous year	Multiplier for Wales (Pence)	Percentage change on previous year
1990–91	34.8	—[1]	36.8	—[1]
1991–92	38.6	10.9	40.8	10.9
1992–93	40.2	4.1	42.5	4.1
1993–94	41.6	3.5	44.0	3.5
1994–95	42.3	1.7	44.8	1.7
1995–96[2]	43.2	1.9 (2.2)	39.0	-12.9 (2.2)
1996–97	44.9	3.9	40.5	3.9
1997–98	45.8	2.1	41.4	2.1
1998–99	47.4	3.6	42.9	3.6
1999–2000	48.9	3.2	44.3	3.2
2000–01[2]	41.6	-14.9 (1.1)	41.2	-7.0 (1.1)

[1] First year of national non-domestic rates therefore no comparable data.
[2] Revaluation year.
Note:
Figures in brackets are the annual inflation rates.

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he plans to give to local authorities and passenger transport executives on concessionary travel arrangements for males aged between 60 and 65 years, following the European Court ruling on winter fuel payments. [111122]

Mr. Hill: We have no plans to give any guidance on this topic. Our view is that the European Court of Justice ruling on winter fuel payments does not have any implications for concessionary travel arrangements.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109928]

Dr. Howells: The Department's latest information on its use of Remploy products covers the three-year period to May 1999. Records show that during that time, the Department purchased one Remploy office furniture product.

The information above does not include contracts let by the Department's Executive Agencies. I have asked the respective Agency Chief Executives to reply separately to this question.

Letter from Claire Clancy to Mr. Martin Caton, dated February 2000:

I am replying to your parliamentary question tabled on 10 February 2000, regarding what Remploy products the Department of Trade and Industry has purchased in the last three years.

2. The Patent Office has not purchased any products from Remploy during the last three years.

Letter from J. S. Holden to Mr. Martin Caton:

I have been asked to reply to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in respect of Companies House Executive Agency.

A contract was awarded to Remploy in January 1988 following a competitive tender, to supply for a three year period a range of office furniture, namely workstations, pedestals, storage units and chairs.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Martin Caton, dated February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the purchase of Remploy products. This Agency has not purchased any Remploy products during the last three years.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Martin Caton, dated February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Trade & Industry has asked me to reply to your question in relation to The Insolvency Service's purchase of Remploy products. The Service has not placed any order with Remploy in the last three years.

Letter from G. Womble to Mr. Martin Caton, dated February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to your Parliamentary Question about Remploy products.

2. I can confirm that no Remploy products have been purchased by the Agency within the last three years.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Martin Caton:

You tabled a Parliamentary Question on 10 February to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry about what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. I have been asked to reply in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS) which is an executive agency of the DTI.

In the last three years, the Employment Tribunals Service made three purchases from Remploy. These items were a set of six shelves, a bookcase and a chair. The total value of these orders was £891.36p.

Green Issues

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110150]

Dr. Howells: In respect of timber products it is the Department's policy to use timber products from a sustainable source. In respect of the Forest Stewardship Council, I would refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 357W. For paper products the policy is to encourage use of recycled paper.

Steel (Ireland)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the monitoring procedures carried out on compliance with steel production limits imposed on European Union-assisted manufacturing of steel in the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [110432]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Copies of all the European Commission's six-monthly reports on the monitoring of aid given to companies under Article 95 of the European Coal and Steel Community Treaty, including Irish Steel, have been deposited in the Library of the House.

I consider that the Commission continues to monitor these companies effectively to ensure that they comply with the limits on steel production and meet the other conditions imposed upon them.

End of Life Vehicles

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had on the potential impact of the proposed EU End of Life Vehicles Directive with motor industry representatives. [110352]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 17 February 2000]: My officials have met regularly with the motor industry to discuss this Directive since it was first proposed by the European Commission in 1997.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are currently in place to deal with end of life vehicles. [110348]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 17 February 2000]: The ACORD (Automotive Consortium on Recycling and Disposal) voluntary agreement on the treatment of end of life vehicles has been in place since 1997.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on the UK Government's policy on the proposed EU End of Life Vehicles Directive; [110346]

(2) what information and advice his Department has given to UK MEPs on the likely economic and environmental impact of the proposed EU End of Life Vehicles Directive; [110350]

(3) what the Government's policy is in respect of EU legislation that imposes a retrospective financial liability on UK industry. [110351]

Ms Hewitt [holding answers 17 February 2000]: The Government wishes to secure the important environmental benefits that will be delivered by this Directive at the lowest costs. We have agreed to the Common Position text which states that vehicle producers must meet "all or a significant part" of the costs of treatment for new vehicles from 2001 onwards and for existing vehicles from 2006 onwards. As with all proposals for European Legislation, the Government maintains regular contact with MEP's and provides information and advice in line with the Government's position.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the cost to the UK motor industry of implementing the proposed EU End of Life Vehicles Directive. [110347]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 17 February 2000]: My Department's Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) in September 1999 estimated the costs of the Common Position text of the proposed Directive at £312 million per annum in 2005. The Common Position text gives each member state an important degree of flexibility in deciding how best to recover the costs of treating scrapped vehicles, including the size of the vehicle producer's contribution.

Copies of above RIA and earlier RIAs are available in the Library of the House.

World Trade Organisation

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the General Council of the WTO held on 7 and 9 February. [110964]

Mr. Caborn: The World Trade Organisation General Council meeting on 7–8 February took a number of decisions on next steps for the organisation. It was agreed that the mandated negotiations on agriculture and services would take place in the Agriculture Committee and the Services Council, respectively, and that they would get under way during this quarter (services in the week of 21 February, agriculture in the week of 20 March). Efforts are now being made to find Chairpersons for these negotiative groups.

It was also agreed that parallel consultations should be conducted on several issues by the Director General and the incoming Chair of the General Council. These include measures to improve market access for least developed countries, further efforts on capacity-building and technical co-operation for developing countries and, linked to this, action on implementation deadlines where some WTO member governments have problems meeting their commitments under existing WTO agreements. In addition, a consultation process was launched on improvements to WTO consultative and decision-making procedures. It is hoped that the outcome of these consultations will be made known quickly, if possible by the end of March.

Genetic Testing (Employment Policy)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will adopt comparable policies to those of President Clinton on prohibiting the use of genetic testing in employment policy. [110740]

Ms Hewitt: The Government are giving careful consideration to a report on "The Implications of Genetic Testing for Employment", from the Human Genetics Advisory Commission (HGAC) and will publish its response.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his policy on the level of national coverage by mobile phone telecommunications operators which will be sufficient for competition purposes; and what plans he has for further licences being granted beyond those currently planned. [110817]

Ms Hewitt: There is no such policy. A geographic coverage obligation will be included in the Wireless Telegraphy Act licences, due to be auctioned next month, for the use of spectrum for third-generation mobile. The obligation will require the licence holder to roll out a network covering an area in which 80 per cent. of the UK population lives by the end of 2007. It is included to ensure that spectrum is used efficiently.

With the award of the five licences to be auctioned next month, there is no further spectrum currently available for the licensing of additional third-generation mobile operators.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the changes required to existing telecommunications networks in order to meet the standards of the next generation of licences; and what estimate his Department has made of the number of extra masts required. [110765]

Ms Hewitt: Existing mobile telecommunications networks will be unable to deliver the broad range of third-generation mobile services. As a result of the introduction of the five new third-generation mobile networks, for which spectrum will be auctioned next month, the existing second-generation networks of Vodafone and BT Cellnet may need to be changed in respect of a requirement to permit roaming from a new entrant third-generation mobile operator's network onto their existing second generation mobile networks. While the third-generation networks will require new infrastructure, including masts, it is not clear that any new masts will be required for the existing first and second-generation networks as a consequence of third-generation mobile standards.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the number of telecommunication masts that will be required by new operators who win one of the new generation of telecommunication licences; and whether a commitment to sharing masts with other operators will be (a) a condition of the licence and (b) one of the criteria in the granting of licences. [110816]

Ms Hewitt: No estimate has been made of the number of masts that a new operator might require. As a condition of being granted telecommunication Code Powers, the Telecommunications Act licences of existing operators and of any new operator include a requirement that, before erecting a new mast, the possibility is investigated of: using an existing structure or mast; replacing an existing mast with a mast for joint use; and erecting, in co-operation with another operator, a mast for joint use. This requirement obviates the need to include a specific criterion in the auction rules requiring a commitment to share masts. I am pleased to note also that the existing mobile operators are party to a database designed to support the sharing of masts. All who operate telecommunications masts or towers, including any new operator, are encouraged to include details of their sites on the database.

Mobile Phones (Licences)

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to amend licence conditions to limit (a) damage to the environment and (b) threats to health and safety. [110815]

Ms Hewitt: The Government believe that the conditions in Telecommunication Act licences, together with the relevant planning legislation and health and safety guidelines, appropriately balance concerns about these issues with the need to provide modern, efficient and cost effective telecommunications services. There are therefore no plans to amend licences in relation to these points. However we will consider very carefully the findings of the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones, under the Chairmanship of Sir William Stewart, which is due to report in April on alleged adverse health effects of mobile handsets and base stations.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reasons underlay the Government decision to sell additional mobile phone licences before the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones has published its report; and if he will delay this sale. [110769]

Ms Hewitt: The Government continue to work to the timetable for the auction of Wireless Telegraphy Act licences for third generation mobile communications set out by the then Under-Secretary of State for Small Firms Trade and Industry, my hon. Friend the Member for North Swindon (Mr. Wills), on 9 February 1999, Official Report, column 208, and accordingly notified bidders on 18 February that the auction would start on 6 March 2000. Delay to the auction would reduce and delay the benefits of third generation mobile to UK consumers and the economy, and the Government see no case for such delay. Bidders' attention has been drawn to the work of the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones, and to the fact that summaries of the evidence given to the group are being made publicly available as its work proceeds.

Arms Exports

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in what position the United Kingdom was ranked in terms of arms exports, in the last year for which figures are available. [110224]

Dr. Moonie: I have been asked to reply.

While other countries do not publish figures that enable a direct comparison to be made, based on the value of new defence export orders signed in 1998 we estimate that the United Kingdom ranked second behind the United States.

Zimbabwe

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what end-use monitoring arrangements are attached to the licence agreement for the recently announced sale of spare parts for Hawk jets to Zimbabwe. [108060]

Mr. Hain: I have been asked to reply.

In light of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's reply to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge) on 9 February 2000, Official Report, columns 184–85W, the Government have decided to approve a number of licences for exports in fulfilment of existing contracts for the support of Hawk aircraft in service with the Zimbabwe Air Force.

We shall monitor carefully developments both in the DRC and in Zimbabwe.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many disciplinary actions against RUC officers in the past 10 years resulted in files being presented to the Director of Public Prosecutions; on how many occasions and on what charges were prosecutions brought; how many charges resulted in a conviction; and how many charges resulted in a custodial sentence. [108487]

Mr. Ingram: Figures on the total number of disciplinary cases in which files have been passed to the Director of Public Prosecutions are not available. However, the table shows the total number of cases in which prosecutions were directed by the DPP from 1993 (the earliest year for which records are readily available) up to 1999.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in each of the last five years, what proportion of women employees in his Department (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (i) time-range and (ii) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth on full-time hours and subsequently reduced their hours. [108861]

Mr. Ingram: During the five years 1994–95 to 1998–99 the proportion of female staff who returned to work after childbirth was as follows:

Year	Percentage
1994–95	90
1995–96	88
1996–97	86
1997–98	97
1998–99	92

The majority of the remaining staff took a career break immediately after maternity leave.

The vast majority of these staff required only the 14 week period of paid maternity leave; a very small number took advantage of a further period of unpaid maternity leave.

The information requested on average hours worked after returning from maternity could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what child care provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by his departmental staff; what was the cost to parents of this child care; and how many parents used the facilities. [108855]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 517–20W.

Within the NIO, parents are assisted with the cost of pre-school child care by means of a voucher scheme. During the year 1998–99, expenditure on child care vouchers amounted to £31,400 and a total of 48 parents (approximately 3.2 per cent. of all staff) received assistance.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions are made available to Departmental staff for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job-sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108841]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is given in the following table.

	Provision in NIO (HCS and NICS)	Eligibility criteria
(a) Maternity leave	A total of 52 weeks' maternity leave is available; this includes 14 weeks' paid leave and a further 4 weeks on Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP)	Available to all female staff who have completed one year's paid service

	Provision in NIO (HCS and NICS)	Eligibility criteria
(b) Maternity pay	As above	As above
(c) Paternity leave	Three days' paid leave of absence per child	Available to all male staff, including those on temporary and fixed term contracts
(d) Parental leave	New legislation effective from 15 December 1999 entitles employees to 13 weeks' unpaid parental leave for each child born after that date	Available to all permanent staff employed for more than one year; leave must be taken before child's fifth birthday
(e) Flexible working hours	Flexible working hours are available to staff working in Belfast. The introduction of a similar scheme for staff in the London Office is under consideration	Available to all staff subject to the overall efficiency of the Department
(f) Part-time work	Part-time working and job-share arrangements are in operation at various grade levels throughout the Department	All staff at all grades are eligible to apply. Requests approved on the basis of personal and business needs
(g) Job-sharing
(h) Leave to care for sick children	Special leave, both paid and unpaid, is available at departmental discretion. New legislation effective from 15 December 1999 gives employees a right to "reasonable" time off work to care for dependents	Available to all staff at all grades. Each case considered on its merits
(i) Homeworking	No formal arrangements exist	Individual arrangements were made for a member of staff to work from home part-time
(j) Term time contracts	As above	Staff have been granted unpaid leave during school holidays
(k) Annual hours contracts	Does not apply in NIO	—
(l) Child care allowances	Assistance with the cost of pre-school child care is provided via a voucher scheme	All permanent staff with pre-school age children who employ a legally authorised child care provider are eligible to apply
(m) Careers leave	Unpaid special leave to undertake a full-time course of study and sabbatical leave for promising officers to develop and broaden their experience	All permanent staff are eligible to apply. Each case considered on its merits
(n) Career break scheme	Career breaks available for periods of not less than one year and no more than 5 years	All permanent staff are eligible to apply

Belfast Port

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the application within Northern Ireland of the proceeds from the sale of the port of Belfast; and if he will make a statement. [109847]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 11 February 2000]: I have had no discussions with my right hon. Friend on this matter. The sale of the port of Belfast was a matter for the devolved administration and a paper outlining various options was submitted to the Regional Development Committee prior to the recent suspension of the institutions. The money from the sale of the port is intended to part finance a range of projects within the package of special measures for Northern Ireland announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor in May 1998.

Rehoused Families

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many families have been rehoused in Northern Ireland to escape terrorist activities since the Good Friday Agreement. [110054]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The Chief Executive of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive has advised that from April 1998-February 2000 a total of 547 AI (intimidation) cases were housed. This includes those rehoused as a result of terrorist attack among others who were awarded AI(I).

An applicant will be entitled to AI(I)(intimidation status) where either

(a) The applicant's home has been destroyed or seriously damaged (by fire, explosion or other means) as a result of terrorist or sectarian attack; or

(b) The applicant cannot reasonably be expected to continue to live, or to resume living in, his/her home, because, if he or she were to do so, there would, in the opinion of the Executive, be a serious and imminent risk that the applicant or one or more of the applicants household, would be killed or seriously injured as a result of terrorist or sectarian attack.

Compensation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors govern his consideration of compensation claims for loss of business under the emergency provisions; and what was the total compensation for loss of business awarded following (a) the Drumcree protests of (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999 and (b) the Omagh bombing. [110654]

Mr. Ingram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Compensation Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Denis Stanley. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. A. Stanley to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 18 February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Compensation Agency, to reply to your recent Question about claims for compensation under emergency provision legislation for loss of business.

The emergency provisions scheme provides compensation to those who suffer loss or damage resulting from action taken under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1996. Claims under this scheme are principally in respect of damage to property alleged to have been caused during operations by the security forces. In addition, the Agency administers the criminal damage compensation scheme which provides compensation for malicious damage to property in Northern Ireland caused by terrorism or unlawful assemblies of three or more persons; and for malicious damage to agricultural property. The governing legislation is The Criminal Damage (Compensation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1977. Under both compensation schemes claims are considered and resolved on their individual merits and in accordance with the relevant legislation and caselaw.

The Agency is not required to establish a causal linkage between a claim for compensation and the motives of perpetrators and/or events in the wider community although, in some cases, these may become evident as a result of subsequent prosecutions. The Agency is therefore unable to compile reliable information concerning compensation paid for loss of business as a direct result of the Drumcree protests of 1997, 1998 and 1999 as there would have to be a high degree of subjective speculation by the Agency on many cases in which the perpetrators are unknown or where no prosecution has taken place. Claims for compensation under the criminal damage scheme in respect of the Omagh bombing of August 1998 are, however, readily identifiable. As at today's date, of the estimated £7.8 million worth of damage inflicted by the bomb, £3.5 million has, so far, been paid.

I hope this is the information which you were seeking.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a breakdown of the compensation claims made under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1996 for each of the last three years. [110956]

Mr. Ingram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Compensation Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Denis Stanley. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. A. Stanley to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 18 February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Compensation Agency, to reply to your recent Question about claims for compensation under the Emergency Provisions (Northern Ireland) Act in the last three years.

The numbers of claims received by the Agency under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1996 in each of the last three financial years were as follows:

	Numbers of claims
1996–97	2,208
1997–98	2,849
1998–99	3,395

Prison Service

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list each category of employee within the Northern Ireland Prison Service and the numbers employed in each category, broken down by (a) gender and (b) perceived community origin. [110656]

Mr. Ingram: The gender and perceived community background of those employed within the Northern Ireland Prison Service obtained for the purpose of monitoring under the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998 at 1 January 2000 was as follows:

Employees in the Northern Ireland prison service

Category	Number	Male	Female	Protestant	Roman Catholic	Not determined
Governor Grades	57	55	2	43	5	9
Prison Officer Grades	2,256	2,076	180	1,779	148	329
Prison Auxiliary Grade	161	108	53	111	20	30
Civilian Grades	456	189	267	347	85	24
Total	2,930	2,428	502	2,280	258	392

There are strict requirements governing the confidentially and proper use of community background monitoring data and an disaggregation beyond that given could breach those requirements.

DEFENCE

Anti-ballistic Missile Treaty

5. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received on the agreement of a new Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. [109398]

Mr. Hoon: The question of any possible amendment to the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty is a matter for the United States and Russia. The United Kingdom is not a party to that Treaty.

Heavy-lift Transport Aircraft

19. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress he has made in fulfilling the requirement of the Royal Air Force for heavy-lift transport aircraft. [109419]

Mr. Hoon: We are continuing our technical and commercial assessment of potential solutions to the RAF's short and longer-term airlift requirements. I expect to receive advice soon. We aim to reach a decision in the early part of this year.

Iraq

20. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are involved in patrolling the no-fly zones in Northern and Southern Iraq. [109420]

Mr. Hoon: As at 18 February we had some 987 Service personnel involved in or supporting operations in the Northern and Southern no fly zones. This is further supplemented by the HMS Illustrious Carrier Task Group that is currently operating in the region, which consists of 1,971 Service personnel.

Service Families Taskforce

22. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress the Service Families Taskforce has made in improving Service families' access to health care. [109423]

Mr. Spellar: We have made good progress. The Service Families Task Force has addressed three healthcare issues raised by the Service Families Associations. Access to NHS dentists has been improved by 24 new incentive schemes for NHS dentists in areas of large numbers of Service families, certain drug therapies are being made available abroad and work continues with the NHS to strengthen their current guidance on taking into account time spent on a waiting list elsewhere following a move.

Major Milos Stankovic

23. Mr. Martin Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates he has made of the cost of the investigation by his Department and his Department's police into the case of Major Milos Stankovic of the Parachute Regiment; and if he will make a statement. [109424]

Mr. Spellar: The estimated additional cost of the Ministry of Defence Police investigation into allegations of offences against the Official Secrets Act by Major Stankovic is £266,000. Costs incurred by other areas of the Department in support of the investigation, were not routinely recorded but would not have been large. The Army investigation is still in progress.

Trident

24. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the latest cost is of the current Trident nuclear fleet. [109425]

Mr. Hoon: As my predecessor announced on 21 April 1999, the total acquisition cost for Trident is currently estimated to be £12,870 million. About 90 per cent. of this figure was already committed before this Government took office.

Veterans Advice Unit

25. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many calls have been received by the Veterans Advice Unit. [109426]

Mr. Spellar: Since becoming operational in October 1998, the Veterans Advice Unit has received 9,198 inquiries up to the end of January this year on a wide range of topics. Many of the inquiries have required follow-up work by the Unit's staff. Arrangements are now in hand for the Veterans Advice Unit to have a discrete Internet e-mail address and it is expected that this service will become available during March.

Armed Forces Capacity

26. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the adequacy of the armed forces to meet current commitments. [109427]

Mr. Hoon: Following the Strategic Defence Review, the MOD has introduced a new strategic planning process which ensures that there is a policy-led re-evaluation of defence plans every year, or more frequently if required. In addition, we keep the level of commitments under constant review. As a result we have been able to reduce commitments in Bosnia, Kosovo, the Gulf and East Timor.

Royal Navy

27. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent meetings he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer to discuss spending on the Royal Navy. [109428]

Mr. Hoon: None.

Regimental Museums

28. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to secure the future of regimental museums. [109429]

Dr. Moonie: Following the review of Regimental Museums conducted in 1997, a policy statement defining the Army's policy towards Regimental and Corps Museums was developed. This policy statement formalised the relationship and responsibilities of the Army towards its Regimental and Corps Museums. The support that is provided to Regimental Museums in line with this policy is reviewed periodically.

European Collaborative Defence Projects

29. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in how many European collaborative defence projects the UK is presently involved. [109430]

Dr. Moonie: The UK is involved in 44 collaborative defence equipment projects involving European partners. They are as follows:

	Nations involved
European collaborative defence projects
Olympus/Tyne Gas Turbine Change Unit	UK/France/Belgium/ Netherlands
SPEY Gas Turbine Change Unit	UK/Netherlands
COBRA (Counter Battery Radar)	UK/France/Germany

	Nations involved
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked)	UK/Belgium
Multiple Launch Rocket System Phase II	UK/Germany
M3 Amphibious Bridging System	UK/Germany
Sidewinder Air-to-Air	UK/Germany/Italy/Norway
Milan Anti-Tank (including improvements)	UK/France/Germany
Sea Skua Support	UK/Germany
Eurofighter	UK/Germany/Italy/Spain
Jaguar	UK/France
Lynx	UK/France
Puma	UK/France
Gazelle	UK/France
Tornado	UK/Germany/Italy
EH 101 Merlin Helicopter	UK/Italy
RTM 322 Helicopter Engine	UK/France
1.5 MW Gas Turbine Alternator	UK/Netherlands
MRAV (Multi Role Armoured Vehicle)[1]	UK/Germany
Long Range TRIGAT[2] (Third Generation Anti-Tank Guided Weapon)	Uk/France/Germany
Medium Range TRIGAT (Third Generation Anti-Tank Guided Weapon)	UK/Belgium/France/Germany/Netherlands

Future Ground Based Air Defence	UK/France/Germany/Italy/Netherlands/Norway/Turkey/United States
Lightweight Mobile Artillery System (LIMAWS)—Howitzer	UK/Italy/United States
Future projects under negotiation (subject to national approvals)
Technology, Equipment and systems development for Environmentally Sound Ships and Naval Installations of the 21st Century	UK/France/Netherlands/United States

[1] Both UK and Germany are currently in negotiation with the Netherlands for their inclusion in the GTK/MRAV programme.
[2] The UK has declared that they are to withdraw from Long Range TRIGAT at the end of the Development Phase.
[3] FOAS (Future Offensive Air System) is not a collaborative project per se but the UK and France are collaborating on common technologies related to FOAS.

Submarines

30. Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when all Trafalgar and Astute class submarines will be capable of firing Tomahawk land attack missiles. [109431]

Dr. Moonie: HMS Triumph is already capable of firing Tomahawk land attack missiles (TLAM). Work to adapt HMS Trafalgar to fire TLAM should be completed before the end of the year. It is currently planned that the adaptation of the remaining Trafalgar Class submarines will be completed by about 2006.

The Astute class submarines are planned to be built TLAM-capable and the initial three are due to enter service between 2005 and 2008.

Departmental Efficiency Programme

31. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details of his Department's efficiency programme, including a list of the 250 measures most significant in terms of savings during each of the four financial years following publication of the strategic defence review. [109432]

Mr. Spellar: As offered in evidence to the House of Commons Defence Select Committee on 12 January, my Department will be providing the Committee with a more comprehensive list of efficiency measures shortly. We will then be happy to discuss how we can take forward the Committee's wish to examine the Department's efficiency programme in more detail.

Learning Forces Initiative

32. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Government's learning forces initiative. [109433]

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Government's Learning Forces Initiative. [109405]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave my hon. Friend for Barnsley, East and Mexborough (Mr. Ennis) earlier today.

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has received from Her Majesty's Defence Attaché in Chile concerning the effects on Chilean defence purchasing of the arrest of General Pinochet; and if he will make a statement. [110113]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 14 February 2000]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given in another place by my noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the noble Lord Lamont of Lerwick on 10 January 2000, Official Report, House of Lords, column 72WA. This reflects advice given by our Embassy in Santiago.

Bagshot Park

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on the refurbishment of Bagshot Park prior to its disposal to the Earl of Wessex; what the market value of the property was immediately prior to the works being carried out; and how much the property was sold for. [110990]

Dr. Moonie: Bagshot Park was vacated by the Ministry of Defence at the end of September 1996, having been occupied by the Army Chaplain's Department under a lease with the Crown Estate since 1947. No funds were spent by the Ministry on refurbishment prior to its disposal. However, under the terms of our contractual arrangements with the Crown Estate, a payment was made on surrender of the property, in respect of our outstanding repair obligations.

The subsequent lease of Bagshot Park to the Earl of Wessex in October 1997 is not connected with the MOD's former occupation.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funding has been committed by his Department to the maintenance and renovation of Bagshot Park in Surrey in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [110422]

Dr. Moonie: None.

Shoeburyness

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the level of monitoring for gun explosions at Shoeburyness. [110232]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Sir John Chisholm to Mr. Derek Wyatt, dated 21 February 2000:

I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question about monitoring for gun explosions at Shoeburyness since the range is part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

A system of acoustic monitoring of the activities at the range has been in place for over 10 years. There are 7 sensors in fixed sites around the Thames Estuary that allow remote recordings to be relayed to a central computer system. Live data containing noise levels and date/time information is fed into the operations room at Shoeburyness where it is displayed graphically for ease of interpretation. In the unlikely event that the noise levels exceed the guideline limits, work will be suspended.

The prevailing weather conditions are also taken into account. An acoustic prediction programme is run to determine the likely propagation of noise levels. If the forecast appears unfavourable and likely to lead to noise levels exceeding the guideline limit, the work will be rescheduled.

I hope this explains the situation.

Chinook Crash

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Air Accident Investigation Branch ruled out the possibility of any technical malfunction which may have contributed to the loss of Chinook ZD576 in June 1994. [108696]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The Air Accident Investigation Branch acted as technical adviser to the RAF Board of Inquiry and produced a comprehensive report on the technical investigation that formed part of the evidence used by the Inquiry. The AAIB concluded that although the pre-impact serviceability of the aircraft could not be positively verified, no evidence was found of a malfunction that could have contributed to the accident, with the possible exception of a radar altimeter system fault.

The AAIB noted several radar altimeter system defects and considered them in detail, but observed that they had probably not severely degraded performance, and there were probably generally correct indications at impact.

After careful consideration of all the available evidence the RAF Board of Inquiry concluded that the most probable cause of the accident was that the crew selected an inappropriate rate of climb to safety overfly the Mull of Kintyre, and the actions of the crew were thus held to be the direct cause of the crash.

Ottawa Treaty

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the response of the UK armed forces to the Ottawa Treaty. [110498]

Mr. Hoon: The response of the UK armed forces to the Ottawa Convention has been exemplary. On 19 October last year, the Government announced the complete destruction of all the UK's operational stocks of Anti-Personnel Landmines (APLs), some three years ahead of the requirements set out in the Ottawa Convention. On 27 August last year, the UK submitted its first report to the UN Secretary General on compliance measures under the Ottawa Convention. A copy of the Report was placed in the Library of the House.

Following the Landmines Act 1998, there are now no circumstances under which British service personnel can participate in the laying of anti-personnel mines.

Also, to support world-wide clearance of mines and the overall aims of the Ottawa Convention the Ministry of Defence provides whatever assistance it can to those non-governmental organisations and mine action centres engaged in the removal of APLs that remain in the ground around the world. This can take the form of training in demining techniques, assistance in the development of new equipment, attachment of individuals, or the gifting of surplus military vehicles to assist in their demining activities.

HMS Dumbarton Castle

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will replace HMS Dumbarton Castle when she completes her current assignment; and if he will make a statement; [110845]

(2) if HMS Dumbarton Castle is to be withdrawn from the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [110844]

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Dumbarton Castle will complete her current assignment; and which vessel will replace her. [110674]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 February 2000, Official Report, columns 373–74W, to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill).

RAF Pilots

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average number of flying hours undertaken by fully trained operational RAF pilots, not including pilots on staff/ground tours, in (1) 1998 and (2) 1999 in aircraft type (a) BAe 125, (b) BAe 146, (c) Canberra, (d) Chinook, (e) Harrier, (f) Hercules, (g) Jaguar, (h) Nimrod, (i) Puma, (j) Sea King, (k) Sentry, (l) Tornado F3, (m) Tornado GR1/4, (n) Tristar, (o) VC10 and (p) Wessex; and if he will make a statement. [109493]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 February 2000]: We do not centrally record the flying hours undertaken by individual pilots. Such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

We do calculate the average hours which crews fly in a given year. This calculation ignores the individual crew rotations and provides only a broad estimate of the flying undertaken. Against these averages, the amount of flying undertaken by individuals might vary considerably.

The average number of flying hours undertaken by a typical crew in 1998 and 1999 is as follows:

Aircraft type	Total hours 1998	1999
BAe 125	339	374
BAe 146	232	258
Canberra	224	171
Chinook	344	261
Harrier	198	194
Hercules	539	458
Jaguar	222	214
Nimrod	388	390
Puma	338	376
Sea King	467	359
Sentry	467	546
Tornado F3	206	205
Tornado GR1/4	291	209
Tristar	649	624
VC10	419	423
Wessex	299	279

Notes:
1. Hours do not include Reserve squadron (OCU) data.
2. Operational flying is all flying undertaken in active theatres, principally the former Yugoslavia and the Middle East.

Maintenance

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the time and mileage schedule of planned maintenance servicing for (a) Warrior variants (b) Challenger One, (c) Challenger Two, (d) Saxon variants, (f) AVF 430 variants, (g) Sabre, (h) Striker, (i) Scimitar, (j) Spartan, (k) Sultan, (l) Samaritan and (m) Samson in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [109497]

Mr. Spellar: The planned automotive maintenance schedules, which have been valid for the past five years or since the vehicle entered service, are as follows:

Servicing	Vehicle type	Maintenance schedule
(a)	Warrior	1,250 miles or 12 months [1]2,500 miles or 24 months
(b)	Challenger 1	2,000 miles or 12 months
(c)	Challenger 2	2,000 miles or 12 months
(d)	Saxon	5,000 miles or 12 months [1]10,000 miles or 24 months
(e)	FV432 Variants	1,500 miles or 12 months
(f)-(l)	CVR(T) Variants[2]	3,000 miles or 12 months

[1] Different maintenance routines apply at the different distance/time points.
[2] Includes Sabre, Striker, Scimitar, Spartan, Sultan, Samaritan and Samson.

In addition to the planned maintenance shown, tanks and vehicles are subject to running tests and monthly functional servicing. Additional maintenance routines apply to vehicles based on distances travelled (where less than those shown above) either in training or on operational missions. Reactive repair maintenance is conducted as necessary.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were (a) the number of qualified doctors, (b) the number of qualified dentists, and (c) the number of support staff in each service available to the Defence Medical Services in 1998 and 1999; and if he will make a statement. [109494]

Dr. Moonie: The numbers of qualified doctors and dentists and trained support staff in the Defence Medical Services as at 1 December 1998 and 1 December 1999 are as follows:

	1 December 1998	1 December 1999
Doctors
Royal Navy	224	218
Army	406	446
RAF	210	201

There are continuing manpower shortages in the Defence Medical Services, particularly among nurses, General Practitioners and the key specialties of Orthopaedic and General Surgery, Anaesthetics and General Medicine. However, the figures shown above suggest that manning levels are stabilising. Recruitment into training is generally satisfactory and measures to improve recruitment of direct entry qualified staff and retention of experienced personnel are being explored.

Track Mileage

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the annual track mileage allocation and the average track mileage completed for (a) Warrior variants, (b) Challenger One, (c) Challenger Two, (d) Saxon variants, (f) AVF 430 variants, (g) Sabre, (h) Striker, (i) Scimitar, (j) Spartan, (k) Sultan (l) Samaritan and (m) Samson in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [109496]

Mr. Spellar: I have provided details of the annual allocations and annual usage for each vehicle type. However, given the disposition of the vehicle fleet, the mix of operational and training deployments, average figures would be unrepresentative for the fleets as a whole.

Annual track mileage allocations and usage

Serial	Vehicle	Year (April-March)	Annual allocation (miles)	Annual usage (miles)
(a)	Warrior	1995–96	845,797	681,546

Track mileage allocations are a tool to aid both operational and financial planning. The overall allocations cover training and operational requirements and are made on the basis of anticipated operational scenarios and previous activity levels. Centrally held information on usage is drawn from records submitted by each Unit and can serve only as an indicator of trends rather than a detailed comparator. Vehicle usage may vary considerably from the planned allocations where unforeseen commitments or changes occur in-year. Similarly, the use of armoured vehicles in recent operating environments has reduced to reflect the nature of the operations.

Tomahawk Missiles

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the US/UK initiative on the joint development of tactical Tomahawk missiles will be completed; at what costs; what plans his Department has to procure tactical Tomahawk missiles; and if he will make a statement. [109499]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 17 February 2000]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Sir Robert Warmsley to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 21 February 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence on the US/UK initiative on the joint development of tactical Tomahawk missiles. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

George Robertson said in his letter of 23 August 99, that we had no plans to procure the Tactical Tomahawk (TACTOM) missiles, a more modern version of the Tomahawk missile. Since then, the United States authorities have given authority for the release of TACTOM information to the United Kingdom, but no decision has yet been taken about procuring the missiles. However, a contract has been placed through the United States Department of Defense to undertake a joint US/UK feasibility study to evaluate the design options for torpedo tube launch of the TACTOM missile. This enabling work will allow UK options for TACTOM procurement, if required in the future, to remain open. The cost of this study to the UK will be £350,000 and I expect it to be complete by the end of March 2001.

HMS Somerset

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to withdraw the South Atlantic guardship HMS Somerset from detachment in the South West Atlantic; and if he will make a statement. [R] [110925]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 14 February 2000, Official Report, columns 373–74W, to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill).

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with the removal and disposal of depleted uranium contamination in the Gulf resulting from coalition forces' ammunition. [109326]

Mr. Spellar: The clearance of hazardous materials following the conflict is primarily a matter for the governments on whose territory they lie. In the aftermath of the Gulf Conflict, the Government of Kuwait issued a number of contracts for the clearance of minefields and ordnance. UK forces were involved both in immediate battlefield clearance operations and the clearance of live firing ranges in Saudi Arabia. They also provided military advice and assistance to civilian contractors undertaking clearance work.

The US Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventative Medicine (CHPPM) produced a report in August 1999. A copy of that report was placed in the Library of the House following their analysis of 298 soil samples taken from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait in 1991, 1993, 1994 and 1996. Only five samples contained depleted uranium. All of these came from Kuwait—four from the Iraqi Tank Yard and one from Camp Doha where, in July 1991, US DU-based ammunition caught fire. In all five cases the level of DU found was well below the level set by the US Nuclear Regulatory Commission for assessing whether land can be made available for unrestricted use by the public. The Government do not have any comparable scientific data concerning the levels of DU currently present in southern Iraq.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps have been taken by his Department to implement a depleted uranium training programme. [109324]

Mr. Spellar: Training for the hazards associated with depleted uranium (DU) already forms part of existing Service courses. In addition, Service personnel are given appropriate guidance on dealing with any potential hazards from DU during pre-deployment training.

Naval Exercises

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by (a) date, (b) number of vessels, (c) number of personnel, (d) nationality of military force and (e) class of ordnance to be deployed including warhead, each of the naval exercises he has approved to be undertaken in the waters off Cape Wrath, Sutherland over the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [110823]

Mr. Spellar: A total of six ships (one UK frigate, one Dutch frigate, one Spanish frigate, two US Cruisers and one US Destroyer) are scheduled to use the range at Cape Wrath for Naval Gunfire Support over the next three months. The use of the range is, however, confined to the period between 28 February and 10 March. The range is booked for a period of 10 days to allow flexibility for weather and other factors. Each ship will occupy the range on an individual basis for a period of less than one day. The firing of ordnance at Cape Wrath is limited to guns of up to six inches in calibre. The exact number of personnel involved is not known but the vessels involved will have crews of between 175 and 350 personnel. This level of usage is broadly consistent with previous training sessions for RN and NATO ships conducted over recent years at Cape Wrath.

Nuclear Safety Seminar

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which representatives of his Department attended the NATO nuclear safety seminar held in Helsinki on 24 to 26 January; and if he will make a statement. [109001]

Mr. Spellar: The Government was represented by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Grants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the initiatives launched by his Department since May 1997 under which specific grants are allocated, indicating in each case and for each financial year the funding provided by central Government. [109319]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 2000]: No new grants have been made since May 1997.

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109931]

Mr. Spellar: The Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency has placed over £7.1 million worth of business with Remploy, covered by some 21 contracts, during the period February 1997 to January 2000.
Other items have been procured by the RAF Support Management Contracts Branches (12 contracts in an approximate value of £4.6 million) and by General Stores Contracts Branches (three contracts value £165,000) during the same period.

I have placed an alphabetical list of the items ordered by each MOD Branch in the Library of the House.

Arms Exports

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of Britain's arms exports in each of the last 20 years. [110202]

Dr. Moonie: The information requested has been published, since 1992, in UK Defence Statistics, and previously, since 1979, in Volume II of the Statement on the Defence Estimates. The last year for which figures are available is 1998. Copies are available from the Library of the House.

Extremist Organisations

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers have been disciplined for offences alleged to be connected with the activities of (a) Combat 18 and (b) other extremist organisations over the past three years; and what actions he is taking to prevent infiltration by such organisations. [110664]

Mr. Spellar: It has long been the policy of the Armed Forces that Service life precludes membership of, support for, or association with groups or organisations whose purpose includes incitement to racial hatred and violence. All three Services have in place regulations and instructions which give clear guidance to the Chain of Command on the process governing administrative discharge which is available to deal with behaviour which is incompatible with military service.

Over the past three years two soldiers alleged to have been involved with Combat 18 have been discharged from the Army.

Recruiting and vetting processes aim to provide a high degree of protection against infiltration by extremist organisations.

Entrance Policy

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change the policy of permanently barring those who have suffered from childhood eczema from entering the armed forces. [110761]

Mr. Spellar: Medical entry standards are constantly under review. The current policy barring applicants with eczema from entering the Armed Forces was last reviewed at the end of 1998, with policy being based on advice from the Defence Consultant Adviser in Dermatology. Eczema, and related serious skin diseases, are not considered compatible with Service life. However, those who have suffered from childhood eczema are not necessarily barred from entry into the Armed Forces. Each candidate is considered on an individual basis that takes account of medical history, and the possible effect on the condition of the proposed type of employment.

Civilians (Faslane and Coulport)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilian jobs there are at the Faslane and Coulport base. [111001]

Mr. Spellar: As at 31 January 2000, the Clyde Naval Base had a directly employed work force of 3,299.5, comprising 2,547 at Faslane and 752.5 at Coulport.

Territorial Army

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many occasions in the last six months units of the Territorial Army have travelled from Northern Ireland to Great Britain for training purposes; and on how many of these visits the unit did not have (a) its own weapons and (b) an armed escort; [110900]

(2) how many personal protection weapons held by the members of the Territorial Army in Northern Ireland have been withdrawn from (a) serving members and (b) former members of the Territorial Army in the last six months. [110901]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to encourage recruitment to the Territorial Army. [109421]

Mr. Spellar: A national and regional recruiting campaign for the Territorial Army is to be launched on 18 February. This campaign will include television, radio and cinema advertising, use of the Press both nationally and locally, and a targeted "Member for Member" personal invitation scheme. There will also be a National TA Day on 25 March on which all TA Units throughout the country will open their doors to the general public to enable them to get a first-hand idea of what membership of the TA can offer them.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the electricity used by his Department is generated from renewable sources; and if he will make a statement. [111039]

Dr. Moonie: My Department does not collate data on the proportion of its electricity which is generated from renewable sources.

Masonic Organisations

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance his Department has issued to the armed services on membership of, and recruitment to, masonic organisations; and if he will make a statement. [111341]

Mr. Spellar: We decided to clarify the position for Armed Forces personnel in July 1999 by issuing guidance in the form of a Joint Service Defence Council Instruction on Membership of Societies such as the Freemasons. This states that:

"There is no intention or policy to preclude Service personnel from membership of any lawful and benevolent organisation. However, involvement in organisations of a secretive nature, such as the Freemasons, carries with it the risk of establishing disparate loyalties which may have a destabilising influence on the chain of command, not least by the perception of preferential treatment and undue influence. While membership of such organisations is clearly a matter for the individuals concerned, serving personnel should not encourage or promote membership among their colleagues, meetings should not be held on MOD premises, and use should not be made of any MOD property."

HMS Endurance

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to withdraw HMS Endurance from service; and if he will make a statement. [R] [110926]

Mr. Spellar: There are no plans to withdraw HMS Endurance from service.

European Security

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent meetings he has had with European Commission officials to discuss European security. [109399]

Mr. Hoon: I have not held any bilateral meetings with European Commission officials.

European Commission representatives were present, however, at the EU General Affairs Council and the Western European Union Ministerial meeting in November 1999, both of which I attended.

Accredited Training

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to increase the proportion of accredited training and education in the armed forces. [109411]

Mr. Spellar: Civilian accreditation of military education and training is an important recruiting and retention issue for the armed forces. As such all three Services are working closely with a number of key accreditation and awarding bodies to increase the amount of civilian recognition given to military courses, leading eventually to the award of academic, vocational and professional qualifications.

CABINET OFFICE

IT Projects

Angela Smith: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made in her Department's review of the handling of major IT projects. [111307]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Cabinet Office study of major IT projects has made its first recommendations. These have been approved by the study steering committee and adopted by the Government. They demonstrate that the Government is committed to taking prompt and targeted action to improve performance and to ensuring that the pillars that support successful IT projects are put in place.

The recommendations cover:

Ministers

Ministers have to take a strong role in overseeing and scrutinising major IT projects. The Government have already introduced the first ever events to build ministers' awareness about their roles. IT projects will be a top priority.

Supplier Planning

It is vital that suppliers fully understand the requirements for a new system, and only promise what is realistic. They will now be required to produce detailed plans, to demonstrate to the Government how they will deliver, that will be monitored as projects go ahead. These will be set alongside the business plans that the Government have to make.

Peer Review

All high risk projects will be reviewed as they are developed. Departments will have to work with a team of independent experienced project managers to make sure that their projects are safe to go ahead.

Sharing Experience

We will establish a new system for sharing knowledge about IT projects across the Government, so everyone has the benefit of the best practice available. It is essential that we learn the lessons from projects as they proceed, share good ways of working and ensure that different parts of Government co-operate as closely as possible.

Managing suppliers

The Government are setting up the new Office of Government Commerce to make sure we manage suppliers in a strategic way across the public sector. IT suppliers will be the first priority for this work.

These recommendations will make a real difference, but they are, of course, only a start. The study team will in due course propose further measures to address other aspects of the handling of IT projects.

Buying Agency

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what targets she has set for the Buying Agency for 2000. [111439]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The information is as follows:

Financial

to generate a return on capital employed of 8 per cent.

Value for money to ensure that the TBA price index for a basket of top products is 5 per cent. lower than the external equivalent.

Service quality to raise customer satisfaction to 75 per cent.

Staff

to secure category 3 of the Health at Work Award.

Private Health Insurance

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when the private health insurance offer to civil servants which was advertised in Government offices was discontinued. [109325]

Mr. Stringer: Any discounts offered by private health care companies to civil servants are done so in the context of a private transaction between the individual and the provider. There is no central arrangement between the Government and any private health care company.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Judicial Appointments (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list each category of judicial appointment in Northern Ireland; and the numbers serving in each category, broken down by (a) gender and (b) perceived community origin. [110658]

Mr. Lock: The various categories of judicial appointments in Northern Ireland include full-time and part-time judicial office-holders. The perceived community origin of appointees is not a factor in judicial appointments and so is not recorded as part of the judicial appointments process. Details of the current complement and the gender balance in each of these categories are outlined in the table.

Judiciary—full-time and part-time

Office	Complement	Percentage Male	Female
Supreme Court Judges	11	100	—
County Court Judges	14	93	7
District Judges	4	75	25
Resident Magistrates	17	88	12
Masters	7	71	29
Deputy County Court Judges	40	87	13
Deputy District Judges	7	71	29
Deputy Resident Magistrates	19	74	26

Northern Ireland Court Service

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list each category of employee within the Northern Ireland Court Service and the numbers employed in each category, broken down by (a) gender and (b) perceived community origin. [110655]

Mr. Lock: There are 668 staff employed within the Northern Ireland Court Service. In terms of community background monitoring 445 (66.6 per cent.) are Protestant, 199 (29.8 per cent.) are Roman Catholic. The community background of the remaining 24 (3.6 per cent.) is non-determined. The table sets out the numbers of staff in each of the main categories showing the numbers of males and females in each as at 15 January.

	Administrative staff	Support staff and others
Total	584	84
Male	181	65
Female	403	19

Magistracy

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list each category of appointment to the magistracy and the numbers presently serving in each category, broken down by (a) gender and (b) perceived community origin. [110660]

Mr. Lock: The current full-time complement of Resident Magistrates is 17. The current complement of Deputy Resident Magistrates is 19. The perceived community origin of appointees is not a factor in judicial appointments and so is not recorded as part of the judicial appointments process. Details of the gender of these judicial office-holders are outlined below.

Office	Percentage Complement	Male	Female
Resident Magistrates	17	88	12
Deputy Resident Magistrates	19	74	26

SCOTLAND

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what child care provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by his departmental staff; what was the cost to parents of this child care; and how many parents used the facilities. [108856]

Dr. Reid: The Scottish Office provided two work place nurseries in Edinburgh. A total of 51 full-time places were available. The cost of a full-time place in 1998–99 was £79 per week. Subsidised places at holiday playschemes are also offered to staff in Edinburgh and Glasgow. These operate during the Easter and summer school holiday periods. Subsidies are paid to the playscheme operators and not directly to staff. The cost to parents varied between £5 and £7 per child per day, depending on the number of children placed there from each family. Details of the numbers of staff using the playschemes in 1998–99 are not held centrally.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provisions are made available to Departmental staff for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job-sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108839]

Dr. Reid: The Civil Service as a whole is striving for an improved balance between work and family life and a number of family friendly policies are being developed as part of the Civil Service Reform programme. Details were given in the reply from my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 519W. Staff in my Department are currently on loan from the Scottish Executive and we have adopted a number of provisions with them. These are:

In addition to statutory Maternity Leave/Pay an enhanced maternity scheme is available to staff who have satisfactorily completed one year's service.

Fathers are allowed five days paid paternity leave at the time of the birth or during the weeks immediately following.

Permanent staff may be granted up to five days paid special leave for domestic purposes, such as caring for sick children. Unpaid special leave is available in addition to this. We also comply with our obligations under the Parental Leave Directive.

Most full and part-time staff can participate in the Flexible Working Hours scheme.

Part-time work and Job Share opportunities are available to all staff, subject to availability.

Staff with child care responsibilities have the benefit of flexible working arrangements. In addition there are two work place nurseries in Edinburgh and holiday play schemes operate during the Easter and summer holidays in Glasgow and Edinburgh.

Our Career Break policy is currently being reviewed. We propose that discretionary periods of up to three years unpaid leave (five in exceptional circumstances) will be available to help staff cope with their domestic responsibilities. Permanent employees who have completed their probation and have a satisfactory record of attendance, performance and conduct will be eligible to apply.

We do not operate a system of Term-time working or Annual Hours contracts. However, we would consider any requests from our staff to do so.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will discuss with the Secretary of State for Social Security a review of the location of monitoring stations used to calculate the additional cold weather payments; what assessment he has made of the performance of the monitoring stations; and if he will make a statement. [109926]

Dr. Reid: The Secretary of State for Social Security is responsible for the Cold Weather Payments Scheme. He consults ministerial colleagues in the UK Government as necessary. As well as the Cold Weather Payments Scheme, the Government have also provided substantial help to eligible elderly households through Winter Fuel Payments. Under these payments, we estimate that this winter around £70 million has been paid to over 900,000 Scottish pensioners.

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109772]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 11 February 2000]: All food served at my Department's official functions is provided by contractors who meet the standards of production required of domestic producers.

Murder Statistics

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out on a comparable basis the number of murders recorded in Scotland in each of the past 30 years. [110563]

Dr. Reid: The total number of crimes initially recorded as murder or culpable homicide by the police in Scotland, and the number currently recorded as murder, are given in the table.

Crimes initially recorded as homicide, and those currently recorded as murder, Scotland, 1969–98

Year	Initially recorded as homicide	Currently recorded as murder

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110719]

Dr. Reid: My Department does not use peat compost in our gardens.

Interception Warrants

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many interception warrants were in force in Scotland on 31 December 1999. [111133]

Dr. Reid: Full information about the number of interception warrants in force in Scotland on 31 December 1999 is not yet available. They will be published, later in the year, in the Annual Report of the Commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 (currently Lord Nolan). A copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many interception warrants were authorised in respect of Scotland in 1999. [111143]

Dr. Reid: During the period 1 January 1999 to 30 June 1999, 162 telephone interception warrants were authorised in respect of Scotland. After 1 July 1999, the authorisation in respect of Scotland of interception warrants relating to serious crime was devolved to the Scottish Executive. The authorisation of national security interception warrants in respect of Scotland is reserved, but final figures on the number of national security interception warrants authorised in the second half of 1999 are not yet available. The Commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 will publish this information in his Annual Report for 1999, later in the year. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Astute Submarines

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the decision to place the imaging equipment order for the Royal Navy's Astute submarines with Pilkington Optronics in Govan. [111096]

Dr. Reid: I warmly welcome the decision by BAE SYSTEMS as Prime Contractor to award the contract for the provision of visual systems for the three Astute class submarines to Pilkington Optronics. This success is a reflection of the expertise of the company in the face of strong international competition and will be good news for the company's 600 staff in Govan.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organophosphates

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to carry out research on organophosphates; how he will co-ordinate funding of research into organophosphates; how much he will invest in organophosphate research; and over what period he will finance research into organophosphates. [103233]

Ms Quin [holding answer 20 December 1999]: Government research on organophosphates (OPs) in relation to human health is currently co-ordinated through an inter-departmental liaison group on OP research. An extract of work relating to human health in the MAFF programme is shown in the table. Listings of recent and current MAFF funded projects on OP research can also be found on the MAFF internet website at http://www.maff.gov.uk/r&d/projects/pp105.htm.

The report by the Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment on organophosphates, published on 26 November, made a number of recommendations for further research. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 446W, for details of how we propose to carry forward these recommendations.

Departmental Consultation

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the public consultation exercises on policy matters carried out by his Department and its agencies in each of the last five years; who was consulted and by what means; how responses were analysed; how and in what form the results were transmitted to those responsible for the consultation; how the results of the consultation were published; and what analysis has been carried out of the extent and nature of policy changes resulting from the consultation. [106305]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

MAFF and its agencies are committed to listening to what people have to say. In addition to consulting in accordance with statutory obligations on new legislation, we regularly consult on new proposals and polices to ensure that industry, other interested parties and the general public are given the opportunity to make their views known. All responses to consultations, which are received through a variety of means, are given very careful consideration and taken into account by Ministers when making policy decisions. Responses are treated as confidential where the respondent has asked the Department to do so.

Consultation exercises are, in the main, carried out by the issue of documents, on which comments are invited, to interested parties known at the Department or agency. As a matter of course, consultation documents, along with lists of recipients and respondents, are placed in the Libraries of the House, with the exception of the individual responses which are available for viewing, by appointment, in MAFF's Whitehall Place library. The MAFF library can also supply copies of consultation responses on request to personal callers or telephone inquirers for a small administrative charge.

Details of current and recent MAFF consultations can also be found on the MAFF website at http://maff.gov.uk/corps/consexer/default.htm.

Beef Exports

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 25 January 2000, Official Report, column 180W, if he will list those countries to which British beef has been exported within the last three months and those countries which do not have an import ban on British beef. [108484]

Ms Quin: Information about the destination of British beef export is commercially confidential as long as there are only two establishments approved to export it. From information currently available, countries which do not have a ban on British beef include all EU member states other than France and Germany, and the following:

Ascension Island Australia
Bermuda
Bolivia
Botswana
Brunei
Burundi
Cambodia
Cuba
Cyprus
Ecuador
Ethiopia
Falkland Islands
Faroe Islands
Fiji Islands
Guatemala
Guyana
Hong Kong
Iceland
Iran
Kenya
Lesotho
Malawi
Mauritius
Mongolia
Montserrat
Mozambique
Namibia
Norway
Paraguay Philippines
Seychelles
Solomon Islands
St. Helena
St. Kitts and Nevis
St. Lucia
Tonga, Kingdom of Vanuatu
Zimbabwe.

Discussions are currently under-way with various other countries aimed at securing a lifting of their bans as soon as possible. Where it is unclear whether a ban exists, the position is being further investigated.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provisions are made available to (i) departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department, for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contract, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers' leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108848]

Mr. Morley: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, set out in his reply of 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 518–20W, the importance of family friendly policies to the Civil Service Reform programme. MAFF shares this commitment to develop policies to enable staff to achieve a better balance between their work and private lives. Provisions already exist in core MAFF for flexible working practices and patterns and we will be building on these in taking forward work on diversity. These provisions are set out in a Staff Handbook to which all employees in the Department have easy access. They apply to both full-time and part-time staff. Requests are generally considered in accordance with these provisions. Where there is discretion, requests are dealt with on their merits on an individual basis. The maternity and paternity arrangements are provided in conjunction with the statutory entitlements available to employees, as are the arrangements for time off to care for dependents. I will write to my hon. Friend with fuller details of the provisions available.

In respect of MAFF Agencies, responsibility for such matters is delegated to Agency Chief Executives. Similar policies to core MAFF operate in the Farm and Rural Conservation Agency, the Pesticides Safety Directorate and Veterinary Medicines Directorate. I have asked the Chief Executives of the Central Science Laboratory, Veterinary Laboratory, Meat Hygiene Service and the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science Agencies to reply to my hon. Friend Direct.

Letter from Peter Stanley to Caroline Flint, dated 21 February 2000:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Central Science Laboratory (CSL), to your question concerning maternity and paternity provisions and other family friendly policies.

With the exception of the maternity leave provision, CSL presently follow the existing MAFF provisions for flexible working practices and patterns which are set out in the MAFF Staff Handbook. On 1 August 1999, paid maternity leave within CSL was increased to 16 weeks at full pay.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Caroline Flint, dated 21 February 2000:

The Minister has asked me to responde to your questions on provisions available to employees of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency and the proportion of women returning to work after maternity leave.

In responding to these questions the Cabinet Office have indicated that the Civil Service as a whole is striving for an improved balance between work and family life. This is reflected in several aspects of the Report on Civil Service Reform by Sir Richard Wilson to the Prime Minister.

The availability of the provisions you mention are set out in the MAFF Staff Handbook to which all employees in this Agency have access. They apply to both full-time and part-time staff. A VLA Staff Handbook is to be completed and issued to staff shortly. Maternity arrangements are provided in conjunction with the statutory entitlements available. Where provisions in this Agency differ from those in MAFF, information is readily available, for example, on the holiday playscheme.

The proportion of women returning to work after childbirth over the last five years is given in the table below:

Percentage

	1995	1996	1997	1998	[1]1999
Total returned to work	67	74	61	70	86
Returned to part-time work	42	49	22	40	72

[1] The figures for 1999 do not represent a full response as not all women have returned from maternity leave

A significant proportion of women elect to take a Career Break of up to five years rather than return to work directly after maternity leave.

Further information requested could not be readily provided and would incur disproportionate costs to obtain.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Caroline Flint, dated 21 February 2000:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food requesting information regarding the provision of various benefits to staff has been passed to me to reply as regards this Executive Agency.

MHS provisions and eligibility criteria with regard to these benefits are outlined below:

(i) Maternity Leave

Main provisions—Paid time off for ante-natal care regardless of service. 18 weeks maternity leave if service less than 1 year and a further 29 weeks after confinement if service more than 1 year.

Eligibility criteria—As indicated above.

(ii) Maternity Pay

Main provisions—As per statutory scheme i.e. Maternity Allowances (MA) or Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP) applies. For employees who qualify for SMP the first 6 weeks of maternity leave is at 9/10ths of pay. Subsequent 12 weeks at $\frac{1}{2}$ pay (subject to return to work for more than 3 months following maternity leave) plus SMP.

Eligibility criteria—As per statutory scheme.

(iii) Paternity Leave

Main provisions—Paternity/Maternity Support Leave of 5 days with pay granted to father, partner or nominated carer.

Eligibility criteria—Available to all employees.

(iv) Parental Leave

Main provisions—As per statutory provisions. MHS policy is this area currently under review. Requests of paid/unpaid leave currently considered under the MHS Special Leave policy provisions.

Eligibility criteria—As per statutory provisions and individual needs.

(v) Flexible Working Hours

Main provisions—A formal flexitime scheme does not exist but some MHS Departments do operate flexitime and where not in place flexibility is exercised where operational service requirements allow.

Eligibility criteria—Not appropriate as no formal scheme in place.

(vi) Part-time Work

Main provisions—All applications considered with regard to operational service requirements. Terms and conditions applied pro-rata to those of full-time employees.

Eligibility criteria—Suitability of proposed part-time work pattern in relation to operational service requirements.

(vii) Job Sharing

Main provisions—All applications considered with regard to operational service requirements. Terms and conditions applied equally between job-sharers.

Eligibility criteria—Suitability of proposed job share assessed with regard to whole job and operational service requirements.

(viii) Leave to Care for Sick Children

Main provisions—All applications considered with regard to individual needs and operational service requirements. Paid/unpaid time off work available under the MHS Special Leave policy provisions.

Eligibility criteria—Each case carefully considered on merit, and with regard to statutory entitlements and individual needs.

(ix) Home Working

Main provisions—Applies to certain groups of management employees who have been authorised to work from home for operational reasons.

Eligibility criteria—Employees only eligible to work from home when specifically authorised to do so by the MHS and only designated as home workers with the approval of the Inland Revenue.

(x) Term Time Contracts

Main provisions—Term time contracts not in operation within the MHS. Requests for paid/unpaid leave considered under the MHS Special Leave policy provisions.

Eligibility criteria—Each case carefully considered on merit, and with regard to statutory entitlements and individual needs.

(xi) Annual Hours Contracts

Main Provisions—MHS Annualised Hours policy applies where the workload fluctuates and/or job requirements are seasonal.

Eligibility criteria—Employees are contracted to work annualised hours only where significant variations in the work pattern are anticipated.

(xii) Child Care Allowances

Main Provisions—Some MHS employees utilise MAFF child-care facilities. No child-care allowances are paid.

Eligibility criteria—Available to all MHS employees but child-care places very limited.

(xiii) Careers' Leave

Main provisions—The MHS does not have a formal policy in this area, although special extended leave has been granted in some cases to facilitate career development.

Eligibility criteria—Each case carefully considered on merit, and with regard to operational service requirements and individual/organisational benefits arising.

(xiv) Career Break Schemes

Main provisions—The MHS does not have a formal policy in this area.

Eligibility criteria—Not applicable.

Letter from P. W. Greig-Smith to Caroline Flint, dated 21 February 2000:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question regarding provision of various benefits to staff. I am replying on behalf of the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS).

With regard to maternity leave and maternity pay, CEFAS provides 16 weeks leave with pay, one week more than core MAFF. Eligibility for these benefits is the same as core MAFF.

For paternity leave, parental leave, flexible working hours, part-time work, job sharing, leave to care for sick children, home working, term-time contracts, annual hours contracts, child care allowances, careers' leave and career break schemes, CEFAS' allowances are exactly the same as those of core MAFF. Eligibility is the same as core MAFF.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in each of the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of his Department (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [108970]

Mr. Morley: Absence details for individual staff (including those on maternity leave) are maintained for the core-Department, the Pesticides Safety Directorate and the Veterinary Medicines Directorate Agencies centrally through a combination of paper records and the computerised payroll system. But, unfortunately, aggregated information in the form precisely requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In respect of the remaining MAFF Agencies, responsibility for such matters rests with Agency Chief Executives. I have asked the Chief Executives of the Central Science Laboratory, Meat Hygiene Service, the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Service and Veterinary Laboratory to reply to my hon. Friend direct.

Letter from Peter Stanley to Caroline Flint, dated 21 February 2000:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Central Science Laboratory (CSL), to your question concerning the proportion of women employees that have returned to work after childbirth.

Information on the number of women returning to work after childbirth and those who returned to work part-time is given in the following table:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Total number of women taking maternity leave	12	7	9	6	12
Number returned to work	11	6	9	5	12
Of which part-time	3	4	3	1	8

More detailed information in the form requested could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Caroline Flint, dated 21 February 2000:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS), your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food requesting statistics on various aspects of maternity leave provision, has been passed to me to reply as regards this Executive Agency.

The information that you requested is summarised in the attached table. Please note that it has only been possible to provide data for the years 1997–1999 inclusive. Prior to this, the MHS's payroll provision was outsourced and obtaining the relevant information for 1995 and 1996 could only be achieved at disproportionate cost.

Letter from P. W. Greig-Smith to Caroline Flint, dated 21 February 2000:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question requesting statistics on staff returning to work after childbirth for each of the last five years. I am replying on behalf of the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS), which, prior to April 1997, was the MAFF Directorate of Fisheries Research (DFR).

DFR/CEFAS' staff records are held in a way that would entail extracting this information from individual staff files, and provision of this information could only be made at disproportionate cost.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to publish the results of the research projects into (a) alternatives to organophosphate sheep dips for the control of scab, with the aim of producing a vaccine and (b) the factors that influence the spread of sheep scab. [109531]

Ms Quin [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Following earlier published work funded at the Royal Veterinary College, my Department has since 1996 been funding projects to explore non-chemical methods as alternative approaches to sheep scab control. The issues involved are complex but not intractable. The programme is focusing on the possible immunological basis for control methods as well as the means of measuring the effectiveness of potential vaccines. The projects which also include sheep welfare are ongoing and funding is being continued at £450,000 a year for a further three years. Some work of a basic nature has been published but the key results of this work will be available at the end of that period or earlier depending on progress.

Flood Defence

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each of the past five years the budgets of the Wessex Regional Flood Defence Committee, indicating (a) the levy on each component local authority with the percentage rise or fall year on year, (b) the standard spending assessment for flood defence paid to each local authority with the percentage rise or fall year on year, (c) the difference between local authority SSA and actual levies paid and (d) MAFF flood defence grants (i) available and (ii) paid; and if he will make a statement. [110144]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The information requested in relation to (a) to (c) is as follows:

It is important to note the following points:

some local authorities pay levies to Regional Flood Defence Committees (RFDCs) other than Wessex; flood defence Standard Spending Assessments (SSAs) reflect a range of flood defence costs falling on different classes of local authority i.e. levies paid to RFDCs, special levies to internal drainage boards and local authorities' "own spend" as a flood defence operating authority; local government reorganisation caused adjustments to be made to the SSA and levy figures as between the affected county councils and new unitary authorities.

In relation to (d), MAFF grant is allocated to the Environment Agency by means of Grant Earning Ceilings (GECs), which represent the total of approved capital expenditure in respect of which grant can be claimed, and not in terms of the grant available. The amount of grant paid is dependent on the mix of (a) fluvial and (b) tidal/sea defence expenditure, for which different grant rates apply. Information is therefore unavailable in the form requested but a comparison of (i) the original GECs (which can be revised in-year) and (ii) the actual outturn of approved capital expenditure is as follows:

Internet

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of farmers in England and Wales who have access to the internet. [110179]

Ms Quin [holding answer 15 February 2000]: Precise figures are not available. However, based on information provided by farmers completing June 1999 agricultural census forms and a survey conducted by ADAS in 1998, it is estimated that between 5 per cent. and 25 per cent. of farmers have access to the internet.

Farming (Promotion)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives are being pursued to promote entry into farming for young people; and if he will make a statement. [110530]

Ms Quin: The Government believe that the best way to help young people enter farming and to secure the economic viability of UK agriculture is to develop an agricultural industry that is successful, competitive and sustainable. To achieve this, the Government are seeking to create a transparent and stable economic framework within which the industry can operate.

In addition, the £1.6 billion support for rural development, which the Agriculture Minister announced on 7 December 1999, will be of enormous benefit to the farming industry and represents a significant increase in expenditure on rural development measures. In implementing the England Rural Development Plan measures full consideration will be given to the needs of young farmers.

Advertising Budget

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110274]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 February 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 204W.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to persuade other EU Governments, when undertaking the review of Council Directive 91/628 EEC required by Article 13 of that Directive, to abandon the long distance transport of live farm animals through the European Union and replace it with a trade in meat and carcases; and if he will make a statement. [110812]

Mr. Morley: The Government believe that a carcase trade is preferable to long distance transport for slaughter.

The European Commission has begun its review of Council Directive 91/628/EEC. We will continue to press for a carcase trade as part of that review and, most importantly, when the Commission presents its formal report to the Council of Ministers.

TREASURY

Scud Missile Parts

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what day, at what time, and how Libyan scud missile parts (a) were shipped from the UK to Malta and (b) were returned to the UK from Malta; [105015]

(2) when Libyan scud missile parts were first uncovered on UK territory. [105014]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs inquiries into the shipment were commenced in May 1999. The parts were shipped in error by the airline to Malta at approximately 0615 on 21 May 1999 and were returned by air to the UK, following further intervention by UK Customs, at approximately 1345 on 2 July 1999. The shipment was inspected by MOD officials on 13 July who confirmed that the contents were consistent with Scud parts.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what child care provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by (i) his departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department; what was the cost to parents of this child care; and how many parents used the facilities. [108831]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 518–19W.

The information requested is in the table.

Department/agency	Type of scheme	Number of places	Cost
Customs and Excise	5 workplace nurseries and bought-in places elsewhere	About 1,000 children, estimated at 900 parents	Will vary as parents choose own nurseries. Budget allocation of £618,000, representing Departmental subsidy of between 37 per cent. and 47 per cent. for workplace nurseries and 25 per cent. for voucher and other schemes
Inland Revenue (including Valuation Office)	7 IR nurseries 17 IR playschemes 15 external schemes	182 places 190 places 238 places	Nil subsidy but with basic accommodation, equipment and utilities provided free. (No central record of fees paid, nor number of parents who use the facilities)
National Savings
Glasgow:	Crèche	24 places	£300 per month[1]
	Holiday playscheme	44 places	£6 per day[1]
Durham:	Crèche	52 places	£130 per month[1]
		70 places	£6 per day[1]
Blackpool:	Holiday playscheme	60 places	£6 per day[1]
Office for National Statistics
London:	External playscheme	16 staff—2 of whom used a different scheme, for which costs are not available	£8.05 per day, rising to £8.40 at Christmas 1998
Southport:	Playscheme	26 places, currently with 33 registered and 20 non-registered parents	£6.50 per day plus annual registration charge of £10 or £8 per day for non-registered parents
Titchfield:	Playscheme	30 places, used by 57 parents	£8 per day
Newport:	Nursery	28 places	£85 per week for under 2s, £80 per week for over 2s, rising to £90 and £85 respectively in January 1999
Runcorn:	Playscheme[2]	18 parents (24 children)	£8.50 per day
Royal Mint	No provision	—	—
UK Debt Management Office	No provision	—	—
Treasury	External playscheme during school holidays	16 parents used it at least once	Currently £6.70 per day. No provision of nursery places or child care vouchers

[1] NS subsidise the cost; figures given are average cost to parents, since not all places are taken up at a given time
[2] Co-located with DfEE and use their child care facilities

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what provisions are made available to (i) departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department, for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contract, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers' leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108842]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 519–22W.

The Chancellor's departments and agencies provide a wide range of family friendly options and alternative working patterns. All permanent staff are eligible subject to one year's service in the case of maternity leave, maternity pay and career break schemes.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of his Department (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [109232]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 519W.

Unemployment Statistics

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will provide a breakdown of the number of people who have left the unemployment count since May 1997 as a result of transferring to benefits which do not qualify the claimant for inclusion on the unemployment count in the categories of (a) all leavers from the count, (b) those aged over 25 and unemployed for over two years and (c) those aged 18 to 24 and unemployed for over six months; [109272]

(2) how many 18 to 24 year olds who had been unemployed for over six months left the unemployment count for work destinations during (a) March 1998, (b) the period between April 1993 and May 1997 and (c) the period between April 1998 and the latest date for which figures are available. [109281]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Maclean, dated 21 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions about the numbers of 18 to 24 year olds unemployed for over six months leaving the claimant count to find work, and the numbers leaving the count since May 1997 to transfer to benefits other than Jobseeker's Allowance.

The number of 18 to 24 year old claimants who were unemployed for over 6 months who left the count and were known to have found work as the reason for ceasing their claim was 6,895 between 12 March and 9 April 1998 and 147,305 between 9 April 1998 and 13 January 2000.

Information for the period April 1993 to May 1997 is not available as the data on leavers by destination have only been compiled since the beginning of 1995.

I regret that the data you have requested on the destinations of leavers from the claimant for the period since May 1997 are temporarily unavailable owing to a technical problem. I will write to you again as soon as possible. In the meantime it may be helpful to know that information on destinations of leavers from the claimant count, back to the beginning of 1998, can be obtained from the House of Commons Library, via the Nomis system.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 (a) the number and (b) the total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that (i) were put out to competitive tender, (ii) were not put out to competitive tender and (iii) were let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109265]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 9 February 2000]: During the financial year 1998–99 the Treasury let 39 contracts with external consultants and advisers, with a total value of £1.361 million. All Treasury contracts are made in line with government procurement policy. The list shows the contractors and whether the contract was subject to competition.

Incomes

Mr. St.Aubyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people earned income (a) between their basic rate limit and £26,000, (b) between £26,000 and £37,000, (c) between £37,000 and £55,000, (d) between £55,000 and £73,000 and (e) over £73,000 in 1990. [110089]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 14 February 2000]: Information for calendar years is not available. Estimates for 1990–91 are as follows:

Range of total earned income	Number of taxpayers (000s)
£20,700-£26,000[1]	1,350
£26,000-£37,000	919
£37,001-£55,000	359
£55,001-£73,000	101
Over £73,000	111

[1] BR limit

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people earned income (a) between their basic rate limit and £35,000, (b) between £35,000 and £50,000, (c) between £50,000 and £75,000 and (d) between £75,000 and £100,000 in the last financial year. [110090]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The table shows estimates relating to 1997–98, the latest year for which this information is available:

(Thousands)

Range of Total Earned Income	Number of taxpayers
£26,100 (BR Limit)-£35,000	1,780
£35,001-£50,000	810
£50,001-£75,000	382
£75,000-£100,000	117

Compliance Visits

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many financial services companies have had compliance visits; and what has been the average frequency of compliance visits in the last 12 months; [110386]

(2) how many financial services companies have been eligible for compliance visits by an SRO regulator in the last 12 months. [110385]

Miss Melanie Johnson: IMRO, the PIA and the SFA all adopt a risk-based approach to deciding which firms to visit, in order to target their resources efficiently.

The total number of firms regulated by these SROs at 31 December 1999 was 6,760. (Some firms are regulated by more than on SRO). Any of them would have been eligible to receive a visit if it were thought to be required.

During the calendar year 1999 the number of routine periodic visits paid to SRO-regulated firms was 2,396.

The frequency of periodic inspection visits to individual regulated firms is decided by each SRO, taking into account the risk profile of the firm.

Earnings Statistics (Scotland)

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list for Scotland and each local authority area of Scotland (a) the weekly median earnings and (b) the amount of median earnings for those in the first and ninth deciles, for (i) all manual, (ii) all non-manual and (iii) all workers; [110471]

(2) what are the proportions of full-time workers in (a) Britain, (b) Scotland and (c) each local authority area in Scotland with hourly gross earnings (i) including and (ii) excluding overtime, below (1) £7.15, (2) £6.58, (3) £4.94 and (4) £3.60 for the categories (A) male manual, (B) male non-manual, (C) all male, (D) female manual, (E) female non-manual, (F) all female, (G) all manual, (H) all non-manual and (J) all workers. [110470]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alasdair Morgan, dated 21 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent questions about the average earnings for workers in Scotland, the Scottish local authorities and Great Britain.

The New Earnings Survey (NES) can provide earnings data for small geographical areas. However, the release of NES data is restricted to figures, which are derived from a sufficiently large sample of employees, and have an acceptable level of accuracy. I have provided the available data for Scotland, the Scottish local authorities and Great Britain in the attached tables. These are based on the 1999 NES, the latest survey for which data are available. These are large tables and copies of them are being placed in the Library of the House rather than reproduced in Hansard.

The NES is based on a one per cent. sample of employees in the PAYE system and is therefore likely to under-represent relatively low paid staff earning below the tax threshold and in particular those who work part-time.

Golden Shares

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which companies the Government retains a golden share; and on how many occasions in the last year the Secretary of State has exercised his right to intervene in respect of each of these companies. [110543]

Mr. Timms: The Government currently retain a special share in the following companies:

Cable and Wireless plc
Stena Line Ltd.
British Aerospace plc
Rolls-Royce plc
VSEL Ltd.
BAA plc
Belfast International Airport Ltd.
Viridian Group plc
Phoenix Natural Gas Ltd.
National Grid Group plc
BG plc
National Power plc
PowerGen plc
Scottish Power plc
Scottish and Southern Energy plc
British Energy plc
British Energy Generation Ltd.
British Energy Generation (UK) Ltd.
Rosyth Royal Dockyard
Devonport Royal Dockyard
UK Nirex Ltd.
London and Continental Railways Ltd.
Eurostar (UK) Ltd.
Inter-Capital and Regional Rail Ltd.
CDC Group plc.

The powers of the various special shares are not identical, but none of them enable Ministers to "intervene" in the day-to-day running of the companies. I believe that there have been only three cases (Ministerial consents to company restructuring, requested by BG plc, Cable and Wireless plc and ScottishPower plc) in the last year when Ministers have exercised their powers as owners of special shares. However, in the time available, it has not been possible to establish conclusively that these are the only cases.

Petroleum Products

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions Treasury Ministers and officials have (a) held since 7 October 1999 and (b) plan to hold with their counterparts in the Irish Republic to discuss the taxation and smuggling of petroleum products; and if he will make a statement. [110417]

Mr. Timms: The matter of differential fuel taxes was raised at the British-Irish Inter-Governmental Conference held in London on 17 December and attended by the Prime Minister and other Ministerial colleagues. The resulting bilateral work programme will be taken forward by officials with the aim of achieving closer co-operation between the Governments on issues of shared interest.

At an operational level, officials of HM Customs and Excise have regular contact with their counterparts in the Irish Revenue Commissioners to discuss issues of common interest including smuggling of fuel.

Advertising Budget

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110260]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 16 February 2000]: The Treasury's advertising 1999–2000 budgets total £7.765 million.

Any expected spending on advertising in 2000–01 will be included in the department's Supply Estimates, which will be presented to Parliament in April.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 January 2000, Official Report, column 515W, on economic and monetary union, what the level of preparedness was of small and medium sized enterprises as a whole in April 1999. [110760]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The most recent survey commissioned by the Treasury in April 1999 showed that 14 per cent. of the UK's small and medium sized enterprises had made preparations for the euro.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies have been made of the effectiveness of the national communications campaign, outlined in page 8 of the Outline National Changeover Plan, aimed at raising business awareness of the implications of the launch of the Euro; how many factsheets were asked for; and if he will make a statement. [111250]

Mr. Timms: In October 1998, following the national euro business information campaign, the Treasury commissioned a survey which showed that the number of firms preparing for the euro had trebled since the initial survey in May 1998. The survey also revealed that there was a high level of campaign recognition among the target audience of small and medium sized enterprises.

To date, around 400,000 factsheets have been sent out in response to requests by businesses and other key intermediary bodies.

Testimonials (Taxation)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the taxation status of income received by professional sports people in testimonial games. [110923]

Dawn Primarolo: I have no such plans.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the taxation revenue that would accrue from taxing the incomes received by professional sports players in testimonial games. [110922]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

Pesticides

Mr. Horam: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will place in the Library the British Agrochemicals Association's draft proposals to minimise the environmental impact of pesticide use; [111082]

(2) when he will have proposals in place for voluntary measures to meet the Government's objective of minimising the environmental impact of pesticide use; and if he will consult interested parties prior to their publication. [111081]

Mr. Timms: The Government announced on 1 February that the proposals brought forward by the British Agrochemical Association to minimise the environmental impacts of pesticides form a useful basis for discussing with the industry and other interested parties what form a partnership approach might take. Subject to further detailed discussions on these proposals, the Chancellor will not proceed with the introduction of a pesticides tax in the Budget. Discussions with the industry will continue in the run up to the Budget. Should these discussions continue after the Budget, the Government will consult with interested parties before any final decisions are taken on the detailed measures aimed at reducing the environmental impacts of pesticide use.

Average Incomes

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average gross weekly income of households in each region of the UK in descending order of region in the most recent period for which figures are available; and what proportion of income was derived from social security benefits in each case. [110828]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers that my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary gave him on 16 February 2000, Official Report, columns 610–12W.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. St.Aubyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate the Treasury has made of the consequences for interest rates and the value of sterling of a rise in NHS expenditure over five years to the EU average, funded by additional taxation. [110829]

Mr. Andrew Smith: It is the task of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee to set interest rates to ensure the Government's inflation target is met. Price stability will also help to promote exchange rate stability, consistent with the Government's objective of a stable and competitive pound over the medium term. Decisions on future NHS expenditure will be taken in the Spending Review.

Dividends Tax Credit

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the costs of allowing non-taxpayers to reclaim the tax credit paid on dividends; and what estimate he has made of the number of people who would benefit. [110919]

Dawn Primarolo: Dividends are paid without any deduction of tax, so there is no tax to reclaim.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what industries will be eligible to claim grants for energy efficiency measures under the scheme announced in his pre-Budget report; how such awards will be calculated; and what will be the maximum amount available; [111018]

(2) how the scheme for supporting energy efficiency measures announced in his pre-Budget report is to be funded; [111016]

(3) what new money will be available from the Treasury to fund the grants available for energy efficiency measures announced in his pre-Budget report. [111017]

Mr. Timms: In the November 1999 Pre-Budget Report, the Chancellor announced that, following the responses to the consultation exercise on the climate change levy carried out after the March 1999 Budget he would be trebling the support for energy efficiency measures under the climate change levy package. This is to say that £150 million of levy revenues, not £50 million as originally proposed, will be made available to fund energy efficiency measures in business in 2001–02. This additional support will represent a step change in the level of funding for energy efficiency measures in the business sector.

The £150 million of additional support that will now be available in 2001–02 will have two elements. The first is £50 million energy efficiency fund, first announced in the March 1999 Budget. This fund will be used to:

provide energy efficiency advice/audits to small and medium sized enterprises; promote the development of 'new' sources of renewable energy; and encourage the research, development and take-up of low carbon technologies and energy saving measures through a 'carbon trust'.

Final decisions on the use of the £50 million fund will be made in the Spending Review 2000.

The second element is enhanced capital allowances for firms making energy saving investments. Firms making qualifying investments will be able to deduct the full costs of those investments in arriving at their income tax or corporation tax bills. All firms making qualifying investments will be eligible to claim the allowances. A consultation exercise has just been carried out on which energy efficient technologies and products might qualify for the enhanced allowances. The Government's suggested initial selection includes combined heat and power, boiler systems, motors, variable speed drives and lighting systems. Depending on take-up, the scheme might have an Exchequer cost of up to £100 million in 2001–02.

Taken together, these measures will give a considerable boost to energy efficiency measures in the business sector and help meet the Government's targets for reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

Conveyancing

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what evidence his Department has collected concerning the extent to which agreed property prices in London are banded at values just below the stamp duty thresholds; [110639]

(2) what steps he is taking to prevent purchasers of property from avoiding stamp duty by schemes to apportion the purchase price between taxable and non-taxable items; [110640]

(3) what evidence his Department has collected concerning property purchasers avoiding higher rates of stamp duty by apportioning the purchase price between taxable and non-taxable items. [110644]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 17 February 2000]: Only a very small proportion of property deals in London are agreed at amounts just below one of the stamp duty thresholds.

Stamp duty is charged on a conveyance for sale of land and buildings. Where the total consideration for a sale includes non-dutiable items, such as chattels, the value of those items can properly be deducted from the total in order to calculate the amount to which ad valorem stamp duty applies. The Stamp Office examines documents presented for stamping as well as the associated Certificates of Value and other legal documentation and makes further inquiries where it is appropriate to do so. Adjustments to the tax charge are made in a handful of cases each year but there is no evidence of widespread overstatement of the value of non-dutiable items. It follows that there is no need for additional steps to counter avoidance or other abuse in relation to the apportionment of purchase prices.

Tobacco Smuggling

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish the full report on tobacco smuggling prepared by Martin Taylor, adviser to HM Customs and Excise; [110751]

(2) if he will publish the papers and correspondence accompanying the report on tobacco smuggling prepared by Martin Taylor; [110750]

(3) what advice he has received from Martin Taylor on the UK levels of tobacco duty in addition to his report on tobacco smuggling. [110752]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch (Mr. Sedgemore) on 17 January 2000, Official Report, column 351W.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what level per week of housing benefit individuals entitled to receive working families tax credit lose benefit. [110500]

Dawn Primarolo: The amount of Housing Benefit that a family is entitled to is dependent on the eligible rent, net income, and an applicable amount based on family circumstances. For those in receipt of the Working Families' Tax Credit, which is part of net income for Housing Benefit purposes, Housing Benefit is not affected if net income is less than or equal to the applicable amount. For those with net incomes greater than applicable amounts, Housing Benefit is reduced by 65 per cent. of the difference between net income and the applicable amount.

Inflation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans he has to produce inflation statistics at a regional level; [110822]

(2) what recent research his Department has undertaken on the cost of living and the rate of inflation in (a) different regions of Britain and (b) households of different compositions and characteristics. [110003]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 21 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions on recent research on the cost of living and rate of inflation.

The latest research completed on regional RPIs was discussed by the 1971 RPI Advisory Committee. The ONS has not conducted research into regional differences in the cost-of-living.

The ONS is aware of the growing demand for regional data in general and possible regional differences in inflation rates were an issue raised in the July 1999 report of the House of Lords Select Committee on the Monetary Policy Committee. The development of regional inflation measures would need to resolve a number of technical matters and would invòlve large additional expenditure to cover expansions of price collection and of the Family Expenditure Survey. The ONS regularly consults with users about their needs and evaluates these relative to other priorities in the context of its annual planning round.

No research has recently been undertaken on differential inflation rates and cost-of-living for different population sub-groups. However, the ONS produces a retail prices pensioner index, which is published quarterly in Business Monitor MM23: The Retail Price Index. An example is attached.

The RPI (all items index) covers private households but excludes (a) the households whose total income lies within the top four per cent of all households incomes, and (b) pensioner households which derive at least three quarters of their total income from state pensions and benefits. The latter decision was taken as a result of an RPI Advisory Committee recommendation (Report on Revision of the Index of Retail Prices, March 1962).

Pensioner Indices: The Retail Prices Index excludes pensioners deriving at least three-quarters of their income from state pensions and benefits. Separate quarterly indices excluding housing costs are compiled to cover these households (Housing costs are excluded following a recommendation of the RPI Advisory Committee because of the technical difficulties involved in their measurement). Table 20 gives the most recent weights

HEALTH

Croydon Health Authority

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the financial impact on Croydon Health Authority of (a) the Working Time Directive, (b) the introduction of the minimum wage, and (c) the abolition of dividend tax credit on pension funds announced in the 1997 Budget. [106773]

Mr. Denham: The National Health Service Executive recognises the important of the Working Time Directive. NHS employers, like all other employers in the United Kingdom are required to meet the obligations put on them by the Working Time Regulations. The impact of the Working Time Directive has varied over the NHS trusts which provide services to Croydon Health Authority residents. Croydon Health Authority has included a provision for the reasonable costs of the European Union Directive in its financial agreement with trusts.

It is not possible to identify accurately the costs associated with the National Minimum Wage separately for Croydon.

The withdrawal of Advance Corporation Tax credits has no effect on National Health Services expenditure.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in each of the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of his Department (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [108969]

Yvette Cooper: The Department and its executive agencies (the Medicines Control Agency, the Medical Devices Agency, National Health Service Pensions Agency and NHS Estates) all provide the same terms and conditions of employment. The table covers the Department as a whole and shows the proportion of women employees returning to work after childbirth in each of the last five years against the number of women employees going on maternity leave.

Data relating to the other information required could be established only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 the number and total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that have (a) been put out to competitive tender, (b) not been put out to competitive tender and (c) been let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109066]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 February 2000]: The information requested is not held centrally. However, the Department's procurement policy is that services and goods should be acquired by competition unless there are compelling reasons to the contrary.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the (a) number and (b) value of contracts let by his Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [109303]

Yvette Cooper: No contracts to manage competitive tendering processes have been let by the Department since 1997.

Grants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the initiatives launched by his Department since May 1997 under which specific grants are allocated, indicating in each case and for each financial year the funding provided by central Government. [109314]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The Department launched the Social Services Modernisation Fund in November 1998. It makes new funding available to local authorities through special and specific grants. Details of the Fund are shown in the table.

£ million

Social Services Modernising Fund	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03

[1] £5 million was also made available to authorities in 1998–99 to help them prepare for the requirements of the Quality Protects programme.

[2] This represents the extra money in these areas and is in addition to the existing grant levels.

[3] The residential child care award element of this new initiative was launched in 1998–99 with £2 million being made available.

In addition, the carers' special grant was announced in February 1999 and it makes available to local authorities £20 million in 1999–2000, £50 million in 2000–01 and £70 million in 2001–02. Extra funding of £3 million in 1999–2000, £5 million in 2000–01 and £12.5 million in 2001–02 has also been made available through the drugs and alcohol grant to help local authorities develop new approaches in commissioning drug services.

As part of the Government-wide initiative to promote the welfare of families with children under five, the Department is funding 30 Home Start schemes in areas of social deprivation, providing £0.333 million in 1998–99 and £0.366 million in 1999–2000.

Two award schemes were launched in 1999 to recognise excellence in social care generally and in the provision of support for carers specifically. In 1999–2000 the Social Care Awards' scheme has been allocated £150,000 and £80,000 has been allocated for the Caring for Carers Awards scheme.

The Child Migrants Fund with an allocation of £250,000 in 1999–2000, £450,000 in 2000–01 and £300,000 in 2001–02 was created to assist former child migrants with the costs of visiting relatives in the United Kingdom. In addition a central index of historical data and sources of existing information is being created with funding of £128,000 in 1999–2000 and £90,000 in 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Correspondence

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, South-West of 26 October 1999 regarding the development of the former Royal Hospital, Wolverhampton. [109559]

Yvette Cooper: I replied to my hon. Friend on 11 February.

Waiting Times

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish figures showing the percentage of patients admitted within three months of the decision to admit in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 for (i) England, (ii) East and North Hertfordshire, (iii) West Hertfordshire and (iv) the health authority in the prospering growth area with the (1) lowest figure and (2) highest figure. [109682]

Mr. Denham: The figures requested are shown in the table:

Abortion

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that medical abortion (a) is delivered in the most cost effective way and (b) meets women's needs; [109744]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that women receive a choice of methods for early abortion. [109743]

Yvette Cooper: Although health authorities and primary care groups are responsible for service delivery, national initiatives also have a role in influencing practice and increasing choice to develop high quality services.

In October 1999 the Department introduced a new core set of principles governing approval of independent sector places carrying out abortion. A key reason for this change was to reduce barriers to introducing effective clinical practices.

In addition, the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists was commissioned to produce clinical guidelines on "Induced abortion". This report is due to be published in March.

These issues will also be examined in the Government's Sexual Health Strategy.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the recent report from the Family Planning Association, "Medical Abortion: Meeting Women's Needs". [109742]

Yvette Cooper: This is a useful summary of the current situation and the points raised will be considered in the sexual health strategy currently being developed in the Department.

Breast Implants

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the published scientific reports relating to breast implants and health issues that have been examined by the Independent Review Group. [110098]

Mr. Denham: A list of the published scientific papers examined or being examined by the Independent Review Group is available from a searchable database on their website (www.silicone-review.gov.uk). This database is regularly updated.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place a copy in the Library of the published results of the research projects conducted using the Breast Implant Registry at Salisbury District Hospital. [110096]

Mr. Denham: There have been no published studies using the National Breast Implant Registry.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the information sheet for women contemplating breast implantation provided by the Independent Review Group in 1998. [110094]

Mr. Denham: The Independent Review Group provided a suggested checklist of issues to be discussed with women considering breast implantation as figure 2 in their report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place the conclusions of the Independent Expert Advisory Group set up to investigate the public health effects of silicone gel breast implants in the Library. [110093]

Mr. Denham: A copy of the letter from the Chief Medical Officer to all doctors in 1993 setting out the conclusions reached by the Independent Expert Advisory Group in 1992 has been placed in the Library. The 1994 Medical Devices Agency report containing the Independent Expert Advisory Group's updated conclusions was placed in the Library on its publication.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many research projects have been conducted using the Breast Implant Registry set up in 1993 at Salisbury District Hospital. [110095]

Mr. Denham: One study is currently being undertaken by the Registry in collaboration with local clinicians.

Remploy

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what Remploy products his Department has purchased in the last three years. [109933]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has a contract with Remploy for the supply of office furniture to its social service inspectorate regional offices.

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109773]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 11 February 2000]: All catering services provided in the Department's main buildings are supplied under contract and meet all appropriate standards and legislation. In particular, all meat is either from domestic producers or to the same standards of production.

Influenza Immunisation

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 2000, Official Report, column 710W, on influenza immunisation for healthcare workers, if he will publish the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation's recommendations on influenza immunisation of healthcare workers for next winter. [110182]

Yvette Cooper: Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation's recommendations on influenza immunisation of healthcare workers will be made public in advance of next winter.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110151]

Yvette Cooper: The Department's Environmental Policy Statement and Environmental Strategy have been produced to ensure that sustainable development is a key factor in this Department's business. The Environmental Strategy supports the Department's aim to achieve best environmental practice with a commitment to conserve paper, wood and other resources and to purchase only timber products that come from sustainable sources. Environmental criteria are now contained as part of the specification in tendering contracts and include a requirement that paper and timber products are from sustainable sources.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110152]

Yvette Cooper: The Forest Stewardship Council label is accepted by our buyers as demonstrating that timber and timber products have come from sustainably managed sources but it is not practicable to require that all paper and timber products purchased by the Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council because this might discriminate against any equally valid schemes and therefore be against public procurement rules.

Advertising Budget

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110269]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 16 February 2000]: The Department's press releases production function incorporates various mechanisms including in house production. The average cost of a press release is £151.

Ambulance Personnel (Clotbuster Injections)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to allowing ambulance personnel to administer clotbuster injections to heart attack patients; and if he will make a statement. [110423]

Ms Stuart: We will exploit all the potential of thrombolytics (clot busters) to save more lives and improve clinical outcomes for patients. We are reviewing the list of medicines that ambulance paramedics are allowed to administer on their own initiative. We are working closely with the Joint Royal Colleges Ambulance Liaison Committee and Medicines Control Agency on proposals which would allow paramedics to administer thrombolytics. Any changes to the list would require amendments to secondary legislation and be subject to public consultation.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to end the payment of notional rents to fundholding general practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [110431]

Mr. Denham: We abolished the general practitioners fundholding scheme on 30 September 1999. The future arrangements for the payment of notional rent are still subject to discussions with the GP profession.

NHS Cardiothoracic Services (London)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the outcome of the review of NHS cardiothoracic hospital services in West London. [110389]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 February 2000]: Any future public consultation over proposals to move specialist cardiothoracic services currently located at Harefield Hospital will be supported by a summary of all relevant information.

Harefield Hospital

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what facilities and services at Harefield Hospital, Middlesex, are to be transferred to other sites; when such transfers will take place; and to which other hospitals they will be transferred; [110387]

(2) what plans he has to transfer the facilities and services of Harefield Hospital, Middlesex, to (a) the Royal Brompton Hospital, Chelsea and (b) a new hospital on the Paddington Basin site in West London. [110390]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 February 2000]: Kensington, Chelsea and Westminster Health Authority has recently completed a period of formal public consultation over proposals to move inpatient paediatric services from Harefield Hospital to the Royal Brompton Hospital. A decision over the proposal, which the Royal Brompton and Harefield Hospitals NHS Trust identified as a preferred option to maintain the quality and safety of children's services, has yet to be reached. Any decision on the future location of Harefield Hospital's paediatric transplantation services would require the consideration of the National Specialist Commissioning Advisory Group.

This must be set in the context of longer term plans. Following detailed planning and assessment by NHS organisations in West London and the Imperial College of Science, Technology and Medicine a preferred option has been identified for the future of specialist inpatient services including cardiothoracic services. Subject to the approval of the Outline Business Case for the Paddington Basin, there will be a period of public consultation in the summer of 2000 before any decisions are made. That public consultation will be based upon the provision of a summary of the information that had led to the identification of a preferred option.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) medical and (b) other staff are employed at Harefield Hospital, Middlesex; and how many will be employed there in February (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) 2003. [110388]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 February 2000]: Forecast figures are not held centrally. The latest figures for the whole of the Royal Brompton and Harefield National Health Service Trust are for the situation as at 30 September 1998 and are shown.

Medical: 350

NHS Funding

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the expected funding of the NHS in England per head of population in 1999–2000; and what are the comparable figures in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland. [110476]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 17 February 2000]: The information is contained in the table:

Total gross [1] NHS expenditure per head of population—1999–2000

Country	£
England	868
Scotland	1,056
Wales	927
Northern Ireland	875

[1] Exchequer or net expenditure plus income from receipts and charges

NHS Staff

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on (a) the amount allocated and (b) the amount spent on training of NHS staff, broken down by (i) occupational grade, (ii) type of employment and (iii) gender, in each of the last five years. [109605]

Mr. Denham: Information is not held centrally on the total amount spent on the training of National Health Service staff by gender or occupational grade. The tables show the allocations and expenditure for each of the three service specific education and training levies since their creation in 1996–97. Information on the amount spent on the training of other staff groups outside the scope of the levies and on continuing professional development training by local employers (trusts and health authorities) is also not held centrally.

1997–98	766	751
1998–99	802	792
1999–2000	900	Not yet available

Note:

Any underspends on the three levies are not lost but are used elsewhere in-year for NHS activity and some virement between budgets is a necessary part of vote management on a Hospital and Community Health services budget of over £40 billion

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) men and (b) women were employed by the NHS in each occupational grade for each of the last five years. [109606]

Mr. Denham: Information about the number of men and women directly employed by the National Health Service in each of the main occupational groups is published in the Statistical Bulletins from the Department of Health's annual medical and dental, and non-medical workforce censuses. The information available centrally for individual non-medical pay grades by gender will be place in the Library shortly.

Carers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to give local authorities powers to provide direct payments for carers over the age of 16 years. [110667]

Mr. Hutton: On 4 February, the Government were pleased to support at Second Reading the Bill promoted by my hon. Friend the Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry), the Carers and Disabled Children Bill. The Bill empowers local authorities in England and Wales to make direct payments to carers over the age of 16 years for the services that meet their own assessed needs.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the number of acute care beds in the NHS. [110669]

Ms Stuart: We published the National Beds Inquiry for three month's consultation on 10 February. This set out that under any future scenario the overall number of acute, residential and intermediate care beds are likely to rise. The consultation will focus on the balance of acute and other beds in the whole system. Our plans for acute care beds will be announced once the consultation is complete.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the report of his Department's inquiry into bed numbers. [111325]

Ms Stuart: The National Beds Inquiry report was published on 10 February. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Dental Services

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase access to NHS Dentistry. [110668]

Mr. Hutton: We recognise the problems of access to National Health Service dentistry which exist in parts of the country and which it inherited it 1997. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has made it clear that, by the end of 2001, NHS dentistry will be a truly national service again. The Government have already addressed the problem with the Investing in Dentistry initiative, under which dentists were offered grants of £10 million in return for some 900,000 patient registrations, and the Personal Dental Service projects which include "phone and go" dental access centres. By the end of the year there will be about 40 access centres in the areas which need them most, providing the full range of high quality NHS dentistry to patients who are not registered with a dentist. Further measures will be set out in the forthcoming strategy for NHS dentistry in England.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria those firms certificated to remove used mercury-based amalgams from dentists' surgeries have to meet. [110483]

Mr. Hutton: Any person transporting waste, including amalgam, from dentists' surgeries in the course of their business is required, under the Control of Pollution (Amendment) Act 1989, to be registered with the Environment Agency as a "waste carrier".

Waste carriers are also subject to the "Duty of Care" under section 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. This requires that all reasonable steps should be taken to keep waste safe.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many firms have current contracts to collect and dispose of used mercury-based dentists' amalgams; and if he will make a statement. [110480]

Mr. Hutton: Contracts to collect wastes are a matter between the parties concerned and information on them is not held centrally. Businesses transporting wastes are required to be registered with the Environment Agency, but the register does not identify the types of waste transported.

Departmental Targets

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many targets have been set for his Department since May 1997; and how many have not been reached and for what reason. [111028]

Ms Stuart: The Department's Public Service Agreement includes 36 targets, all of which are on course to be reached. Progress on each of the targets will be published in the 2000 Departmental Report due to be published in April.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Government plan to implement a ban on tobacco advertising. [111315]

Yvette Cooper: As part of our comprehensive programme against tobacco, the Government will implement a ban on tobacco advertising in line with Directive 98/43/EC as soon as practicable and will monitor its implementation closely.

Hip Replacements (North-west)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average waiting time for hip replacement operations in hospitals in (a) Greater Manchester and (b) the North-west Region. [110850]

Mr. Denham: The information concerning hip replacement operations is not collected centrally. However, information is available for the total specialty of orthopaedics. During the period, October 1999 to December 1999, the proportion of patients awaiting orthopaedic operations at National Health Service Trusts across Greater Manchester was as follows:

Percentage waiting under six months: 57 per cent. (3,519 cases)

Percentage waiting under 12 months: 88 per cent. (5,403 cases)

Percentage waiting over 12 months: 12 per cent. (775 cases).

For the same period across the North-west as a whole, the information is as follows:

Percentage waiting under six months: 58 per cent. (11,508 cases)

Percentage waiting under 12 months: 89 per cent. (17,732 cases)

Percentage waiting over 12 months: 11 per cent. (2,188 cases).

There are no patients waiting longer than 18 months for treatment in Orthopaedics or indeed any specialty in the North-west Region.

Note:

The information relates to those recorded as waiting during the quarter rather than those admitted from the waiting list for treatment.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on procurement policy for NHS wheelchairs. [111055]

Mr. Hutton: National Health Service Supplies negotiate framework agreements for the purchase of manual and electrically powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs (EPIOCs) with manufacturers. The current agreement covers eight manufacturers. Wheelchair centres may purchase wheelchairs outside these agreements, subject to compliance with all local standing orders and European legislation. It is the responsibility of wheelchair centres to purchase the correct specification of wheelchair for individual patients.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many wheelchairs have been supplied to the NHS in each of the last five years. [111056]

Mr. Hutton: Figures on the number of wheelchairs supplied to the National Health Service are not available. However numbers issued by the National Health Service are as follows:

Year	Manual	Powered	Total
1994–95	193,719	9,441	203,160
1995–96	190,073	10,000	200,073
1996–97	185,471	10,135	195,606
1997–98	not available	not available	—
1998–99	195,082	12,939	208,021

Because of changes to information collection, no information is available for 1997–98.

The figures for 1998–99 were obtained from an NHS Supplies exercise requesting data from trusts regarding wheelchair purchases and issues.

Cot Deaths

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department's sponsored research into sudden unexpected deaths in infancy made of the incidence of deaths among (a) children sleeping on a mattress that was new for that child and (b) children sleeping on a mattress that had been previously used by other children. [111163]

Yvette Cooper: The Expert Group to Investigate Cot Death Theories, Chaired by Lady Limerick, looked at the data from the "Confidential Enquiry into Stillbirths and Deaths in Infancy/Sudden Unexpected Deaths in Infancy" study, relating to age of mattress. They found that this could not be used either to support or reject the hypothesis that older mattresses were more dangerous. They thus made no recommendations in this area. Copies of the Expert Group's report have been placed in the Library.

NHS Funding (North-east)

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding the level of NHS funding to the North-east from (a) hon. Members, (b) the North-east Development Agency and (c) others. [111087]

Mr. Denham: We have received a number of representations about the level of National Health Service funding for the North-east.

For 2000–01 the health authorities in England have received revenue allocations totalling £33.6 billion. This represents a cash increase of 6.78 per cent. Of this, health authorities in the North-east have received £1.9 billion, a cash increase of 7.11 per cent.

In-patient Statistics

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 585W, on in-patient statistics, whether his answers are cumulative figures for all people admitted who are above the age stated, or whether they were only for those of that particular age range, between the age stated and the next age. [111243]

Mr. Denham: The answer given on 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 385W shows cumulative totals for all people admitted who are above the age stated.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109776]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 11 February 2000]: With the beginning of the PRIME contract in April 1998, most food that is served at Departmental official functions is now provided through catering outlets run by the sub-contractor, Sutcliffe Catering (UK) Limited. As a reputable company, Sutcliffe Catering ensures that all food is procured from suppliers who meet the standards of production required of domestic producers.

ONE Pilot

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what extra funding his Department has given to the Benefits Agency in Somerset for the implementation of the ONE pilot. [110462]

Angela Eagle: ONE is a new initiative designed to bring together the services offered by the Benefits Agency, the Employment Service and local authority benefit departments in one place and provide help to all working-age clients in returning to employment. ONE is currently being piloted in 12 areas of the country.

The additional funding given to the Benefits Agency to implement the ONE pilot in Somerset during the 1999–2000 operational year was £283,285.

This covered local implementation costs, staffing and management of the ONE service and the cost of covering the duties of staff undertaking training for ONE delivery. The total of additional resource available for these activities in the Somerset pilot, that is including the amounts made available to the Employment Service and Local Authorities, was £588,669, so the Benefits Agency received 48 per cent. of the total.

Local implementation and delivery money was only part of the additional resource provided. Somerset also benefited from centrally managed funds, such as estates adaptations and information technology improvements. The contract for call centre telephony, which the Somerset pilot is testing, was also funded centrally. There is no breakdown by pilot area available for these centrally managed resources.

Council Tax

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about (a) progress on research into the effects of council tax benefit restriction and (b) when the report will be published. [110542]

Angela Eagle: In March 1999 we commissioned independent researchers to monitor the effects of the Council Tax Benefit restriction introduced in April 1998. Although local authorities have sought to co-operate with the research, many encountered difficulties and delays in extracting usable data. We extended the fieldwork period in order to allow the maximum number of authorities to take part but the amount and quality of data we will collect from the study may be limited. All social research conducted as part of the DSS Research Programme is published. The only exceptions would be if the results breached confidentiality, were potentially libellous or unreliable. As long as the data are of sufficient quality and we are confident that the findings are reliable, we hope to publish a report of the study in Spring.

Electricity (Renewable Sources)

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of the electricity used by his Department is generated from renewable sources; and if he will make a statement. [111037]

Mr. Bayley: 0.3 per cent. of the Department's electricity is generated from renewable resources under a specific contract with the Renewable Energy Company. The Department's estates partners, Trillium, are currently seeking further renewable sources for the next round of electricity tenders, and will be reporting to DSS Estates on progress. In addition, consideration is also being given to the potential for Combined Heat and Power (CHP) generation on larger sites. The Department and its estate partners are committed to a target of obtaining 10 per cent. of the Department's electricity from renewable resources by 2010.

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110720]

Mr. Bayley: This Department issued a Greening Operations Policy Statement in May 1999, which sets out its aims and objectives for greening its operations. With the Department's estate having been outsourced to Trillium, its Chief Executive was a joint signatory to the Statement and its accompanying Improvement Programme.

Our policy on using materials in horticulture is to substitute slow renewables such as peat with organic waste products. Under the arrangements for delivery of the Improvement Programme Trillium has instructed its Service Partners to use peat substitutes whenever possible and DSS Estates monitors Trillium's performance on this and other targets in the Improvement Programme.

Funeral Costs

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the assumed cost of a funeral within the Social Fund was last revised. [110898]

Angela Eagle: There is no assumed cost of a funeral within the Social Fund Funeral Payment scheme.

Under current legislation, where an eligible person is deemed to have good reason for taking responsibility for funeral expenses, the scheme allows for the fees levied by the burial authorities and crematoria (in so far as it is necessary to incur them), specified travel expenses and up to £600 for any other funeral expenses.

We do not plan any further reforms in the immediate future but will continue to keep the scheme under review.

Staff Training (Maidstone)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the expense of retraining staff following the re-rolling from a full benefits office to a gateway of Medvale House, Maidstone. [110437]

Angela Eagle: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Miss Ann Widdecombe, dated 17 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your Parliamentary Question about Maidstone Benefits Agency Office.

Following the move of work from Maidstone in May 2000 there will be 24 staff who will need to be redeployed.

Out of the 24 staff, 2 are already contracted to work in other offices. A further 3 are on long term career breaks and will not be affected by the moves of work in May. The assignments for the remaining 19 staff are not due to be decided until the end of February, in anticipation of moves in May. A number of those staff will be transferred to another location where their skills and knowledge will be fully utilised, doing the same type of work. Staff moving to other offices on different duties will require training. However they will be filling posts that otherwise would be filled by new recruits who would have required extensive training. Therefore it is anticipated that the net cost of retraining will in effect be marginal.

I hope this is helpful.

Savings

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the basis for his Department's calculation that savings attract annual interest of 20 per cent.; when this figure was last reviewed; and if he will make a statement. [110918]

Mr. Bayley: The basis for the Department's calculation of tariff income in the income-related benefits, with a system of graduated deductions, is not intended to represent any return that could be obtained from investing capital and hence is not based on any assumed rate of return. A tariff income of £1 per week is assumed for each £250, or part thereof, held between the appropriate lower and upper limits[1]. The system provides a straightforward method of calculating the weekly contribution which people with capital in excess of the lower limit are expected to make from those resources to help meet their normal living expenses.

There have been no changes to the tariff income formula since 1988. The capital rules are kept under regular review.

Deduction rates rise with savings. At £3,250 the notional interest rate would be only 1.6 per cent. This rises until at £8,000 the tariff income is equivalent to an interest rate of 13 per cent. So the rule is most generous to people with relatively low savings, in line with the policy of targeting resources on those most in need.

[1]£3,000 and £8,000 in Income Support and income-based Jobseeker's Allowance, except in residential care home and nursing home cases where the limits are £10,000 and £16,000, and Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit where the limits are £3,000 and £16,000.

Residential and Nursing Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his Department last (a) reviewed and (b) uprated the amount payable to people in residential and nursing homes in the form of pocket money; and what would its current value be if it had been uprated in line with (i) prices and (ii) earnings, in each year since it was last set. [110921]

Mr. Bayley: The level of the personal expenses allowance (PEA) paid to people in residential care and nursing homes is reviewed annually as part of the general uprating of benefits.

The current rate of PEA is £14.75. The rate from 10 April 2000 will be £15.45, which represents an increase in line with average earnings. If the allowance had been increased in line with prices the rate would have been £15.00.

Notes:

1. The figures are rounded to the nearest 5 pence at each uprating date.

2. For income related benefits the ROSSI index (Retail Prices Index less rent, local taxes and mortgage interest payment) as published by the Office of National Statistics.

3. Average Earnings Index Whole Economy (Non-Seasonally Adjusted) as published by the Office of National Statistics

SERPS

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will make an announcement on the future of SERPS payments to those whose partner has died. [111309]

Mr. Rooker: We will make a statement on inherited SERPS once we reach a conclusion on the way forward.

Disabled Children

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to introduce direct benefit payments for disabled children aged 16 and 17. [110586]

Mr. Bayley: Social Security benefits can already be paid directly to disabled young people aged 16 and 17. In addition, provisions in the Carers and Disabled Children Bill, now before the House, would enable local authorities to make direct payments to 16 and 17 year old disabled young people for services that meet their assessed needs.

Mortgage Interest Rates

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the basis on which his Department assumes a 6.6 per cent. interest rate in respect of mortgage repayments that are met by jobseeker's allowance and income support; when this figure was last set; and if he will amend the system to reflect changes in market interest rates. [110924]

Angela Eagle: Mortgage repayments for Jobseeker's Allowance and Income Support claimants are calculated by using a standard interest rate (SIR). The SIR is based on the weighted average of basic rates charged by the main building societies. The Building Societies Commission is responsible for the calculation of the average rate which is then passed to the Office for National Statistic's who publish it monthly in their financial statistics table 7.1L. Changes to the SIR are triggered by a 0.25 per cent. move in the published figure. The current figure of 6.66 per cent. was set in June 1999 and will be amended whenever a change is triggered.

Pensioners

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners who are (a) entitled to claim income support and (b) who are claiming income support. [110584]

Mr. Bayley: As at August 1999, there were 1,628,000 Income Support pensioner claimants aged 60 and over. Latest estimates of take-up of income related benefits covering the year 1997–98 were placed in the Library on 24 September 1999.

Source:

Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry, August 1999.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he has in place to encourage pensioners entitled to claim income support to do so. [110585]

Mr. Rooker: I expect to make an announcement shortly on measures to encourage pensioners to claim the minimum income guarantee.

Poverty

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what percentage of (a) children and (b) adults were living in poverty in each of the past 10 years; and what estimate he has made of the figures over the next three years. [110821]

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of (a) children and (b) adults living in poverty (i) in actual terms and (ii) as a percentage of the general population in each category (A) for each of the past 10 years and (B) expected for these categories in each of the next three years. [110767]

Mr. Bayley: Poverty and social exclusion are complex multi-dimensional issues, affecting many aspects of people's lives, their income, health, housing, the quality of the environment, opportunities to work and to learn. There is no single measure which can capture the complex problems which need to be overcome.

We are determined to tackle the problems that condemn many individuals and communities to poverty. That is why we set out our strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion in our first annual report "Opportunity for All" (Cm 4445). The report includes a range of indicators that capture the many aspects of poverty and social exclusion. Information on the indicators, including definitions and baseline data, was placed in the House of Commons Library on 21 September to accompany "Opportunity for All".

The indicators outlined in "Opportunity for All" include the number of people living in low income households. Information for one of the indicators outlined in "Opportunity for All" is shown in the table.

Notes:

1. Households Below Average Income (HBAI) estimates are based on Family Expenditure Survey (FES) data for the UK up to 1995–96 (combined financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97). From 1994–95, HBAI estimates are available for single financial years based on the larger Family Resources Survey (FRS), covering Great Britain. Despite the change in the survey and some changes in the precise definition of income, the estimates in this table are judged to be broadly comparable over the years.
2. The estimates are presented on household income both Before Housing Costs and After Housing Costs in line with HBAI conventions.
3. All estimates are subject to sampling error.

Future year on year movements in the numbers of people falling below low income thresholds, and other poverty indicators, depend on a number of economic, social and demographic factors whose overall net effect cannot be predicted accurately, as well as on policy interventions.

Benefits

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the annual administrative costs of recovering unpaid (a) benefit and (b) income support per claimant; and how much was spent by the Benefits Agency recovering overpaid (i) benefit and (ii) income support in each of the last 12 months; [108644]

(2) how many Benefits Agency claimants were overpaid (a) benefit and (b) income support in each of the last 12 months; and how many of these claimants have repaid that (i) benefit and (ii) income support in full; [108643]

(3) what is his policy in respect of recovering overpaid benefit from claimants overpaid by (a) over £5.00 and (b) under £5.00; [108645]

(4) how much (a) benefit and (b) income support was overpaid in each of the last 12 months; and how much of this (i) benefit and (ii) income support was recovered from claimants; [108642]

(5) what methods are used by the Benefits Agency to recover overpaid benefit from claimants who do not repay such benefit voluntarily; and in what percentage of overpayment cases these methods are used. [108646]

Angela Eagle [pursuant to her reply, 7 February 2000, c. 60–62W]: Administration of benefits and recovery of overpayments is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 17 February 2000:

I am writing pursuant to Mark Fisher's letter of 4 February 2000 in response to your Parliamentary Questions about overpaid benefits.

I am afraid that some of the statistics in the table attached to Mr. Fisher's letter were incorrect.

I would be grateful if you would accept my apologies for the error, and find an amended reply attached.

Amended reply from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 17 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your recent questions about overpaid benefits.

The Benefits Agency (BA) aims to obtain the recovery of overpayments as quickly and efficiently as possible by the most cost-effective method, without causing hardship, and in accordance with Government Accounting and Departmental Policy.

The BA spent £44m on recovering overpayments in the period April to December 1999. A monthly breakdown of this figure is set out in the attached appendix. Some of the information is not available in the format requested. For example, the BA does not break this down by benefit or by the number of overpayments recovered. Prior to April 1999, the BA did not separately identify costs relating purely to overpayment recovery across the whole BA.

The BA captures information on the value of recoveries made. The number of overpayments arising during 1998–99 totalled just over one million, and 707,000 have been raised so far this year. A monthly breakdown of the recovery figures for the last 12 months is attached, they also provide a breakdown showing Income Support (IS) and all benefits (including IS) as you have requested.

The BA does not normally seek repayment of overpayments less than £25. This is based on cost-effectiveness and in line with Government Accounting. However, there may be occasions when this is not adhered to, for example, when the overpayment has been quickly identified and the sum to be recovered is still likely to be held by the claimant and easily recoverable.

The BA recovers overpayments by deductions from ongoing benefits, instalments, by a lump sum, or by civil proceedings. Typically, the BA will firstly invite repayment and in the vast majority of cases, recovery is implemented by mutual agreement between the debtor and the BA.

Where the debtor remains in receipt of benefit and is not in a position to repay the overpayment immediately, recovery is normally pursued by deduction from ongoing benefit entitlement. This deduction can also be imposed compulsorily if no offer of repayment is forthcoming. Deductions from benefit, whether voluntary or compulsory, account for 74% of the overpayments currently being recovered.

Where customers are not in receipt of any benefit, repayments will be expected. A person's failure to respond to an invitation to repay (or making an unreasonable offer) could lead the BA to consider seeking recovery through a civil action. The threshold for acceptance for civil action is currently £150. There is a six year time limit on proceedings.

6.5% of overpayments currently being recovered have been subject to civil proceedings. The remaining are being recovered by other voluntary arrangements.

Policy on civil proceedings to recover overpayments is that litigation is not pursued where the debtor remains in receipt of benefit. For those not in receipt of benefit, litigation is pursued as a last resort where voluntary arrangements are unsuccessful or break down.

Recovery procedures follow guidance as provided in Government Accounting, where the recovery is likely to be detrimental to the health and/or welfare of the debtor or a member of their family, the Secretary of State has the power to exercise discretion and abandon recovery.

Recovery of an overpayment arising as a result of an official error is pursued if the overpayment is identified quickly and it is reasonable to expect the customer to have been aware of the overpayment. Duplicate payments are classed as over provisions of benefit and are recoverable under common law. The Secretary of State has a duty to seek recovery of such overpayments where it is cost effective to do so.

I hope this is helpful.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his Department's advertising budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [110255]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 16 February 2000]: The only advertising undertaken by my Department this year has been to attract candidates for the many public appointments for which I am responsible. The budget for this is £130,000. The budget for 2000–01 has not yet been allocated.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what child care provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by (i) his departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department; what was the cost to parents of this child care; and how many parents used the facilities. [108837]

Mr. Chris Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 518W.

The following table shows the type of child care provision in my Department and the Royal Parks Agency; the number of parents who used it; and the cost to parents:

Type of provision	Number of parents using child care	Cost to parents £

(Average hours worked per week)	(18)	—	—	(18)	—
(d) Returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours	0	0	0	0	0

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what provisions are made available to (i) departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department, for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contract, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers' leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108844]

Mr. Chris Smith: Within my Department and the Royal Parks Agency the following provisions are currently available (unless indicated [in italics], the Park's provisions and criteria are the same as those for my Department).

Scheme/Provision	Eligibility criteria
(a) Maternity leave
DCMS scheme	Must be permanent or Fixed Term Contract (FTC) with Civil Service for two or more years. Also completed one year's service and be in paid service when maternity leave starts. Must agree for minimum of one calendar month
Paid Maternity Leave—18 weeks Unpaid Maternity Leave—34 weeks
If not eligible for DCMS scheme, Statutory leave for 18 weeks	Statutory requirements
(b) Maternity pay
DCMS scheme	As DCMS maternity leave above
Full pay for 18 weeks
If not eligible for DCMS scheme, Statutory Maternity Pay 6 weeks at higher rate (90% of salary) plus 12 weeks at lower rate	Statutory requirements
(c) Paternity leave
Seven days	All male Civil Servants, but temporary appointments of less than one year are excluded
(d) Parental leave
Three months unpaid leave (but will take account of special paid leave taken in connection with parental responsibilities)	After one year's service
(e) Flexible working hours
Formal flexible working hours are available to staff	Formal flexible working hours are available to all staff at grades D, C and B. Higher grades can agree to work flexi hours with their line manager
Core time: Start 07.30–10.00 hours Work 10.00–12.00 hours Lunch 12.00–14.00 hours Work 14.00–16.00 hours Finish 16.00–19.00 hours Formal scheme requires a minimum of half hours lunch break. Carry forward up to two days credit and one and half days deficit. Can take maximum of two flexi days leave in four weekly period. Parks—some staff have reserved rights, but it is not generally possible in park offices, where cover is required until 5pm to comply with the Visitor's Charter. However, staggered working hours are worked as an acceptable system for managing start and finish times.

(i) Home working Available on an ad hoc basis Parks—nothing in place at present.	Depends on the applicant having the right personal qualities and skills together with the availability of suitable work
(j) Term-time contracts Would consider if required Parks—possibility exists, subject to operational needs
(k) Annual hours contracts Would consider if required
(l) Child care allowance None available, but 50 per cent. of child care costs met through the DCMS schemes (one nursery place and holiday playscheme) Parks—the Agency does not currently pay child care allowances, but would link into DCMS schemes if their staff requested
(m) Careers' leave Unpaid special leave—line managers authorise up to 20 working days (but up to 40 working days for visiting relatives overseas). Personnel authorise all other requests for unpaid leave over 21 days.	All permanent/loan staff and FTC of two or more years. Must have completed probation, have a satisfactory attendance, conduct and performance record
(n) Career break schemes Up to five years unpaid leave to i) cope with domestic responsibilities, ii) undertake external studies which could benefit long term development, or iii) to gain wider/external career experience	All permanent DCMS staff.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many senior civil servants from an ethnic minority background are employed in his Department; and how many of them are (a) men and (b) women. [110682]

Mr. Chris Smith: As at 1 April 1999, 55 members of the senior civil service were from an ethnic minority background (1.7 per cent.)

Information on ethnic origin in the civil service is collected on the understanding that it will be treated on a confidential basis. To protect the privacy of individual members of staff we do not disclose data relating to fewer than five people.

My Department has fewer than five people of ethnic minority background in the senior civil service.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list for the financial year 1998–99 (a) the number and (b) the total value of contracts let by his Department with external consultants and advisers that (i) were put out to competitive tender, (ii) were not put out to competitive tender and (iii) were let on a non-commercial basis, stating in each case the names of the individuals or organisations that have carried out the work. [109264]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 9 February 2000]: In the financial year 1998–99 my Department let the following contracts valued at over £5,000 for external consultants and advisers:

	(a)Number	(b) Value (£)
(i) Competitive tender	19	685,000
(ii) Single tender	3	21,500

Grants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the initiatives launched by his Department since May 1997 under which specific grants are allocated, indicating in each case and for each financial year the funding provided by central Government. [109313]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 2000]: The bulk of my Department's expenditure goes to its sponsored bodies, details of whose grants schemes can be found in their annual reports and accounts. My Department has launched the following initiatives:

DCMS/Wolfson Public Libraries Challenge Fund. £2 million DCMS funding (and £1 million Wolfson Foundation funding) each financial year since 1997–98 for projects which enhance the facilities or services of public libraries in England.

DCMS/Museums and Galleries Commission ICT Challenge Fund. £0.5 million over the financial years 1999–2000 and 2000–01 for ICT projects developed by partnerships of museums (main beneficiaries are non national, non designated museums). The bulk of the funding will fall in 2000–01.

DCMS/MGC Education Challenge Fund. £0.5 million over the financial years 1999–2000 and 2000–01 for Area Museum Councils to develop museums' educational work/resources. The bulk of the funding will fall in 2000–01.

MGC/Museums, Libraries and Archives Council Designated Museums Challenge Fund. £3 million for 1999–2000, £4 million for 2000–01 and £8 million for 2001–02. Although the scheme is administered by MGC/MLAC, I retain the final approval of awards.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people are currently employed in the Millennium dome. [109726]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 11 February 2000]: A total of 2,077.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list those sponsors of the dome with whom discussions have taken place concerning a reduction in the value of sponsorship originally agreed. [109725]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 11 February 2000]: All sponsors remain committed to the sponsorship values for which they have contracted with the New Millennium Experience Company. Where contracts have yet to be signed, the original values discussed and negotiated remain unchanged.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the Ministers who have been responsible for the Millennium Dome. [104655]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The following Ministers have held, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, the shares in the New Millennium Experience Company and have therefore been accountable to Parliament for the Millennium Dome:

the right hon. Roger Freeman MP (now Lord Freeman), under the previous Government, as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; the right hon. Chris Smith MP, from May 1997 to July 1997; the right hon. Peter Mandelson MP, from July 1997 to December 1998; the right hon. Chris Smith MP, from December 1998 to January 1999; and Lord Falconer of Thoroton, since January 1999.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will place in the Library a monthly estimate of the number of people visiting the Millennium Dome (a) in total and (b) broken down by nation and region of the United Kingdom. [104824]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 18 February 2000]: A total of 366,420 visitors came to the Dome during January, its first month of operation. Detailed information on their place of residence is not available. However, a MORI poll of Dome visitors estimated that 27 per cent. were from London, 28 per cent. were from the South East of England, 34 per cent. were from the rest of the United Kingdom and 11 per cent. were from overseas.

Libraries

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many libraries have closed each year for the last 10 years in (a) rural areas and (b) urban areas. [110784]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Information about the annual number of library closures is not collected centrally. However, data about the number of libraries are set out in the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy's annual publication 'Public Library Statistics', which can be consulted in the Library of the House, and from which year-to-year changes can be established.

Sports Action Zones

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria were used in determining eligibility for Sports Action Zones; what was the timetable for bids for such zones; and what process was used to arrive at the final awards. [111030]

Kate Hoey: Sport Action Zones, the first 12 of which were announced on 17 January, are part of Sport England's Lottery Sports Fund strategy, which was published in May last year. There will be a total of up to 30 Zones designated over the next 10 years. The Zones are areas where current basic sports provision falls furthest below an acceptable benchmark standard and there is significant economic deprivation. In selecting the areas to be designated, Sport England took into account a number of indicators of deprivation. These included the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions 'Index of local conditions', areas which are subject to regeneration initiatives such Objective 1 status, the Single Regeneration Budget, Housing and Education Action Zones and areas such as former coalfields and rural communities which clearly have a deficiency of sports facilities. The designation process also involved discussions with local interests including local authorities, sporting and community groups. The process for designating further Action Zones is under consideration by Sport England.

Sport England will now be discussing with all the local interests, including local authorities, governing bodies, community and volunteer groups and educational bodies a detailed needs analysis for each Zone which will be followed by the production of an Action Plan setting out the agreed priorities for the area. The Plans will form the basis of bids to Sport England for Lottery funding for projects aimed at meeting those objectives. The delivery of the Sport Action Zones objectives will require very close co-operation between all the local interests, with the emphasis very much on listening to the views of local communities and responding to their needs.

Healthy Living Centres

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the healthy living centres in each region and the year in which each was established. [110820]

Kate Hoey: To date the New Opportunities Fund has awarded funding for two healthy living centres, both of which were established in 1999. The St. Augustine's Project is located in the Eastern Region (Norfolk), and the Arden Rehabilitation Project is situated in the South-east Region (Kent).

Over the lifetime of this initiative, the New Opportunities Fund expects to support over 300 healthy living centres UK wide. Over 70 bids are currently at an advanced stage of consideration and the New Opportunities Fund expects to make further announcements at the end of this month.

In addition, there are a number of existing healthy living centres funded from other sources. We do not hold a central record of these.

Funding

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what opportunities there are for (a) dance, (b) drama, (c) music, (d) art and (e) sport for people (i) under 16 years and (ii) over 60 years which receive funding from his Department. [111099]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Arts Council of England which my Department funds directly (£227 million grant-in-aid in 1999–2000), is dedicated to giving opportunities to young people, and supporting lifelong learning. Through initiatives ranging from the Lottery-funded Foundation for Youth Music to Green Candle Dance Company's ArtAge programme, the Arts Council is improving opportunities for all generations to experience a range of art forms. My Department also funds directly Sport England (£34 million grant-in-aid in 1999–2000), which seeks to ensure that opportunities for sport and physical education are available to all, regardless of age, through initiatives such as the Active Schools and Active Community programmes.

WALES

Child Abusers

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the (a) number and (b) professions of the alleged abusers who were referred to but not named in the report, "Lost in Care"; [111032]

(2) if he will place a list of the names of the child abusers listed but not named in the "Lost in Care" report in the Library; [111265]

(3) if he will list the nature of the offences that those abusers, referred to but not named in the report, "Lost in Care", are alleged to have committed. [110986]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The report has been published and has been made available to my hon. Friend. The Tribunal's approach to the evidence, including its policy on naming is set out in Chapter 6. It would not be appropriate to list this information outside the context of the report.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that relevant information held by public bodies in relation to abusers in connection with the "Lost in Care" report is passed to police forces. [110984]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Government expect public bodies to pass all relevant information about the alleged abuse of children to the police. This includes any information in connection with the "Lost in Care" Report.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names of those alleged abusers referred to in the report, "Lost in Care", who (a) are awaiting prosecution for sexual abuse and (b) have not been prosecuted for sexual abuse. [110991]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Tribunal has explained in chapter 6 of the report "Lost in Care" that it was unable to report at all on some allegations because they are the subject of ongoing police investigations and proceedings. A summary of developments on these investigations and proceedings between 1997 and 1999 is given at paragraphs 50.29 to 50.32 of the report.

It was for the Tribunal to decide who should be named in the report. The Tribunal considered this issue carefully, and has set out its policy on naming names in chapter 6 of the report. It would not be appropriate for me to list any individuals, including alleged abusers awaiting prosecution for sexual abuse or who have not been prosecuted for sexual abuse, whom the Tribunal decided not to name in the report.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of those named as child abusers in the "Lost in Care" report have been found guilty of child abuse offences during the course of the Lost in Care inquiry. [111264]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer my hon. Friend to paragraphs 50.29 to 50.32 of the report.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names and positions of the alleged abusers highlighted in the report, "Lost in Care". [111053]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Tribunal considered carefully the issue of naming names, and has set out its policy on this issue in chapter 6 of the report.

The Tribunal's findings against individuals of having harmed children or of being unsuitable to work with children relate to incidents of varying gravity which are described in the report. It is important to read the report to understand the context for these allegations and the Tribunal's findings.

I will not therefore issue a list of their names and positions in isolation from the report.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names of the alleged abusers, who have not been traced, referred to in the report, "Lost in Care". [110985]

Mr. Hanson: The names of 28 individuals named in the report whose whereabouts were not known prior to publication were sent to local authorities, health authorities, and NHS trusts in England and Wales last week in confidence and for child protection purposes. The list of names was not drawn up for general publication, and I will not therefore list the names here.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the victims of abuse in children's homes in North Wales, referred to in the report, "Lost in Care", committed suicide. [110983]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Information about these tragic events is not held centrally.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) authorities and (b) children's organisations were contacted to try and trace the known sex abusers named in the "Lost in Care" report prior to its publication; and if he will make a statement. [111263]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The successor local authorities and the police in North Wales had access to the evidence given to the tribunal. The authorities were therefore able to assess the position of those people who were named in the evidence and who were in their employment or involved in services regulated by them.

However we were not in a position to share the names of those named in the report with other organisations until we had the protection of parliamentary privilege, following laying of the report as an unopposed return in the House of Commons.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what child care provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by (i) his departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department; what was the cost to parents of this child care; and how many parents used the facilities. [108829]

Mr. Straw: The Civil Service as a whole is striving for an improved balance between work and family life. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to her by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 518–19W.

The Home Office provides subsidised child care as part of a raft of policies to enable staff to better balance their work and home responsibilities.

During the financial year 1998–99, the Home Office provided 157 subsidised nursery places to employees with children under five at a variety of locations. Emergency care was usually available at these locations for employees who had short-term difficulties with their usual child care provision. Holiday Playschemes are run in central London, Croydon, and on Merseyside during half terms and all the major school holidays for children aged five—12. A breakdown of the overall departmental provision including details of the parental contribution to fees and the number of parents who benefited from the provision is shown in the table.

The parental contribution varies according to the location of the nursery or playscheme, but on average the department meets 38 per cent. of the child care costs.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions are made available to (i) departmental staff and (ii) employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department, for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contract, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers' leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108851]

Mr. Straw: The Civil Service as a whole is striving for an improved balance between work and family life. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to her by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 519W-22W.

Changes to the maternity leave rights under the Employment Relations Act 1999, will apply to core Home Office employees who are pregnant and whose expected week of childbirth is the week commencing 30 April 2000 or later.

The Department currently meets the majority of these rights with its existing policy. I have placed a copy of the detailed statement in the Library.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of his Department (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [109231]

Mr. Straw: The Civil Service as a whole is striving for an improved balance between work and family life. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to her by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 15 February 2000, Official Report, columns 519W-20W.

The available information on my Department and its Agencies is set out in the table.

[1] Staff movement between the Home Office and its Agencies can not be determined historically from the central personnel system. Figures given are for the careers of staff currently serving in the areas shown.
[2] This figure may include certain staff who returned to work after an additional career break following maternity leave.
[3] The proportion shown is that for staff returning before the end of paid maternity leave. Maternity leave changed from 14 to 18 weeks in 1999. A period of 14 weeks paid maternity leave has been used.
[4] For Prison Service staff it is assumed that all staff have taken the period of maternity leave due to them. The time-range given is that for all staff returning.
[5] The Home Office personnel system only holds current information on staff hours. This figure shows those staff who returned on reduced hours (and who have not since reverted to full-time working). Staff whose hours reduced within three days of their return are included in (c).
[6] The Prison Service personnel system only holds current information on staff hours. This figure shows those staff who either returned on part-time hours or later reduced their hours.
[7] The Home Office and non-Prison Service Agency figures in (d) shows those whose hours have reduced since return and who have not after that change returned to full-time working.

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109782]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Food safety and hygiene guidance issued within my Department requires that food provided for official functions is obtained from staff restaurants or other reputable suppliers. These are subject to the Food Safety Act 1990. Any contracts let for food or catering services require providers to comply with all food safety legislation. I have no reason to think that these requirements are not being met.

Emergency Services

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many calls to (a) fire brigades, (b) police forces and (c) ambulance services were (i) false alarms and (ii) malicious calls in each of the past five years; [110315]

(2) what was the total number of 999 call-outs, for (a) the Fire Service, (b) the Police and (c) ambulances in each of the past five years; [110313]

(3) what was the total cost of (a) false alarms and (b) malicious calls to the emergency services in each of the past five years. [110305]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Figures for 999 calls received by fire brigades in England and Wales are not collected. This is because brigades often receive multiple 999 calls for a single incident. Brigades, therefore, record the number of incidents actually attended. The figures include fires, false alarms and special service incidents for the last five years for which the information is available, were as follows:

	Number
1994	988,914
1995	1,148,812
1996	1,060,845
1997	991,435
1998	900,287

The following information on numbers of false alarms and malicious calls, therefore, relates to incidents actually attended.

	False alarms	Malicious calls
1994	295,600	132,200
1995	345,200	102,700
1996	331,600	98,400
1997	341,400	88,800
1998	323,400	74,100

The number of 999 calls received by police forces in England and Wales was as follows:

	Number
1993–94	5,297,040
1994–95	6,088,654
1995–96	6,881,163
1996–97	7,297,219
1997–98	7,670,039

No information on false or malicious 999 calls is collected centrally for police forces. Therefore, the information could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

The number of emergency calls received by the ambulance services in England and Wales was as follows:

	Calls	Response
1994–95	2,611,300	2,609,600
1995–96	3,163,200	2,855,700
1996–97	3,337,000	2,993,800
1997–98	3,576,200	3,160,500
1998–99	3,847,500	3,291,000

The difference between the number of calls and the number of actual responses is due to: duplicate calls, false alarms and hoaxes. It is not possible to separate these into the different categories.

Political Donations

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of EU legislation on the free movement of capital on the provisions of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Bill relating to donations to political parties for individuals and unincorporated bodies. [110286]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 15 February 2000]: The Government believe that the controls on donations set out in the Bill are compatible with our European Union treaty obligations.

Secure Training Centres

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the ratio of staff, excluding administrative staff, to trainees at (a) Medway, (b) Rainsbrook and (c) Hassockfield secure training centres; how many staff have (i) resigned and (ii) had their employment terminated at each facility since opening; and if he will make a statement on current staff shortages at each facility. [110456]

Mr. Boateng: The contracts for the three secure training centres each require the Contractor to maintain minimum staffing levels in relation to the availability of 40 trainee places, regardless of the number of trainees held in the centre. The staff (excluding administrative staff) to trainee ratio underpinning these minimum requirements is as follows:

Secure Training Centre	Daytime	Evening	Night
Medway	26:40	17:40	9:40
Rainsbrook	26:40	17:40	9:40
Hassockfield	37:40	17:40	9:40

All three contracts require that, notwithstanding the minimum staffing levels set out in the table, the Contractor will provide a sufficient number of staff with the appropriate skills, qualifications and/or experience at the secure training centre to meet its obligations under, and comply with the provisions of, the contract at any time irrespective of the number of staff required for it to do so. This means that the staff to trainee ratios regularly exceed the minimum contractual requirements. A snapshot of the staff to trainee ratios at each of the three centres, based on the main morning shift on Friday 11 February, is as follows:

Medway: 48:32

Rainsbrook: 46:40

Hassockfield: 37:20.

Medway opened on 17 April 1998, Rainsbrook opened on 1 July 1999 and Hassockfield opened on 17 September 1999. Numbers of staff resignations and terminations for each establishment since opening are as follows:

	Resignations	Terminations
Medway	61	3
Rainsbrook	33	5
Hassockfield	29	5

All three centres continue to maintain the contractual minimum staffing levels, with the exception that the full complement of Social Workers is not always being met at Medway and Rainsbrook. The Operating Contractors have provisional arrangements in place to cover these shortfalls and are continuing in their efforts to recruit additional Social Workers in the face of a shortage of Social Workers generally in these geographical areas.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what formal (a) inspections and (b) audits have taken place in respect of (i) Medway, (ii) Rainsbrook and (iii) Hassockfield secure training centres since each facility opened; and what their findings were. [110457]

Mr. Boateng: Each secure training centre is subject to inspection by the Social Services Inspectorate. Formal inspections have so far taken place only at Medway. The centres at Rainsbrook and Hassockfield have been open for seven and a half and five months respectively and full inspections are not scheduled to take place until later this year. Three formal inspections have been undertaken at Medway and I am arranging for copies of the two published reports to be sent to the hon. Member. The report on the latest inspection is not yet available.

No audits have taken place or are planned. Home Office Monitors are based at each site and they are responsible for seeing that the terms of the contracts are met on a day to day basis and also that the centres are complying with the Secure Training Centre Rules.

HMP Altcourse

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a security audit of HMP Altcourse was carried out; what were the findings of the audit; if he will publish the findings; if the operator is to be penalised for contract failures identified by the audit; what contract failures occurred and what was the amount of the penalties incurred; what remedial action has been (a) recommended and (b) implemented in respect of deficiencies found; and if he will make a statement. [110445]

Mr. Boateng: A security audit of Altcourse prison was carried out between 27 January and 4 February 2000. The report has not yet been issued but I understand the overall rating awarded will be acceptable. The report and findings cannot be made public as the information they contain could compromise the security of the establishment. The report is due to be issued on 3 March and the Director of Altcourse will then produce an action plan addressing any shortcomings identified. When he receives the audit report, the Home Office Controller will consider whether any of its findings should lead to financial penalties against the contractor.

Ashfield Young Offenders Institution

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the expected age range of the prisoner population at HMP and Young Offenders Institution Ashfield; what are the expected average numbers for each age group within the prisoner population; what specific training has been given to staff to care for each specific age group; when he expects the establishment to become overcrowded; and if he will make a statement. [110460]

Mr. Boateng: Ashfield is certified to hold 400 male offenders between the ages of 15 and 21. It is expected that 300 of these will be aged under 18. Under the terms of its contract, the prison can be asked to hold up to 40 prisoners above its uncrowded capacity. However, the level of overcrowding and when this might occur will be dependent on prison population pressures.

All prison custody officers at Ashfield have received 40 hours of training on working with adolescents in addition to their normal six weeks of general training.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current prisoner population at HMP Young Offenders Institution Ashfield; when it will reach capacity; what incidents have been reported at the establishment since it opened; what is the current staff/prisoner ratio; what is the staff/prisoner ratio at full capacity; of serving prisoner custody officers, how many have experience of working in a young offenders institute run by the Prison Service; what is the ratio of managers to prisoner custody officers; and how many managers have had experience of working in Prison Service establishments. [110454]

Mr. Boateng: As at 16 February 2000, the prisoner population of Ashfield was 264. Under the terms of the contract, Ashfield was required to have 400 places available by 3 January 2000, and this was achieved. The rate of at which Ashfield fills will depend on the numbers of prisoners committed to custody by the courts.

Incidents reported since Ashfield opened are detailed in the table.

Four prison custody officers have previously worked in Prison Service establishments, three of them in Young Offender Institutions. Eleven managers have previously worked in Prison Service establishments. Staff ratios at Ashfield are a matter for the contractor.

	Number
Fights	23
Self harm	16
Fire (minor)	4

Possession of drugs	4

Firearms

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to discuss with the Scottish Executive changes in the legislation governing the use and possession of firearms. [110495]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government have no immediate plans to change the laws governing the possession and use of firearms, but existing controls will be kept under close scrutiny to see if there is anything further which needs to be done to protect public safety. As part of this process, the Home Office remains in close contact with the Scottish Executive on a wide range of policing issues, including firearms controls as well as other issues of mutual concern. I have recently corresponded with the Scottish Minister of Justice about the matters currently being considered by the Home Affairs Committee inquiry into controls on firearms and shall certainly wish to consult further and take into account the view of the Scottish Executive before responding to any recommendations.

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of the number of people in the UK in possession of firearms. [110496]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Records are kept of the number of people holding firearm and shotgun certificates at the end of each year, and the figures for these as of the end of 1998 are as follows:

	Firearm Certificates	Shotgun Certificates
England and Wales	131,900	627,600
Scotland	31,072	63,100

Some individuals within these totals may hold both firearm and shotgun certificates. These figures do not take into account the ownership of low-powered air weapons which do not require a certificate.

Firearms in Northern Ireland are recorded against the fiscal year and a single type of Firearm Certificate applies to firearms, shotguns and air weapons. At the end of March 1999, there were 83,229 certificates on issue in Northern Ireland.

These figures do not include firearms possessed by Government agencies, commercial bodies or by institutions such as museums. Nor do they include any estimate of firearms in criminal hands.

Prisons

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria have been drawn up on which to base a decision to market-test failing public sector prisons; which prisons are now being considered for market testing; and if he will make a statement. [110458]

Mr. Boateng: I have asked the Director General of the Prison Service to put forward proposals on how prisons which continually fail to meet the standards required of them should be subjected to market-testing. No decision has been made on the criteria to be used, and there is no list of prisons being considered for market-testing.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 January 2000, Official Report, columns 233–34W, on prisons, for what reason he did not include information on plans to open new prisons in the next five years. [110446]

Mr. Boateng: I regret that the information about new prisons was omitted in error from my reply of 27 January 2000, Official Report, columns 233–34W. The table shows new prisons scheduled to open in the next five years.

New prisons planned

Prison	Rye Hill	Marchington

[1] The "cost at NPV" is the total cost of designing, constructing, financing and managing the prison over the 25 year life of the contract, expressed in Net Present Value (NPV) terms

HMP Parc

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial penalties have been incurred by the operator of HMP Parc since 1 March 1999; what contract failures have been identified since 1 March 1999; what payments have been withheld in respect of such failures; on what date the Prison Service withdrew special managerial attention from HMP Parc; which recommendations made by HM Chief Inspector of Prisons in his report of October 1999 have (a) been implemented and (b) not been implemented, stating the method of implementation and reasons for non-implementation respectively; and if he will make a statement. [110443]

Mr. Boateng: Financial penalties totalling £199,950.48 have been withheld for the period 1 March 1999 to 31 December 1999, of which £198,594.65 have been calculated by converting the penalty points accrued during the period to a financial value in accordance with the performance mechanism contained in the contract. The amount also includes the sum of £1,355.83 which has been deducted from the contractor for "doubling" in excess of permitted levels.

The incidents leading to the deductions are listed in the table and are failures to comply with performance standards.

The list of establishments requiring close managerial attention has been discontinued. For the current approach to raising the standard of under-performing prisons, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Ms Kelly) on 31 January 2000, Official Report, column 426W.

Responses to inspection reports follow a protocol agreed between the Secretary of State, the Prison Service and Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons. Following the publication of an inspection report, the Prison Service produces an action plan within 30 working days setting out in detail the programme for implementing each recommendation or, in some cases, the reasons for rejecting the recommendation. The report on Parc contained 216 recommendations and all but 23 are being implemented. Action plans are routinely updated nine and 15 months after publication to monitor the progress made, and copies are submitted to Ministers and to the Chief Inspector. I will write to the hon. Member with details of progress when the Parc action plan has been updated in July.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral statement of 2 February 2000, Official Report, columns 1057–67, concerning the number of asylum decisions made each month, how many asylum decisions were made in each of the last three months for which figures are available; and if he will give full particulars of dates and types of decision. [110670]

Mrs. Roche: The available information is given in the table. The January figures will be published via the internet at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm. It would not be possible to give full details of the dates of each decision without the examination of individual case records.

Initial decisions made on applications received, October to December 1999 [1,2,3]

	October	November	December
Total decisions	2,630	2,650	2,320

Backlog clearance exercise
Granted exceptional leave under backlog criteria[5,6]	790	715	920
Refused on non-compliance grounds under backlog criteria[5,7]	240	80	65

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
[2] Information is of initial determination decisions, excluding the outcome of appeals or other subsequent decisions.
[3] Provisional figures.
[4] Paragraph 340 (paragraph 180F prior to 1 October 1994) of the Immigration Rules, for failure to provide evidence to support the asylum claim within a reasonable period, including failure to respond to invitation to interview to establish identity.
[5] Cases decided under pragmatic measures aimed at reducing the pre 1996 asylum application backlog.
[6] Includes a small number of cases where asylum has been granted.
[7] Includes a small number of cases where the application has been refused on substantive grounds.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum decisions were made by his Department in each week of January. [111344]

Mrs. Roche: Statistics on asylum decisions are not available on a weekly basis. Statistics showing how many decisions were made in January will be published via the internet at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm on 25 February 2000.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the target of clearing all current asylum cases by October. [111345]

Mrs. Roche: We remain committed to the White Paper target of reducing the backlog of initial asylum decisions to frictional levels by April 2001. Over 250 new asylum decision-makers have already been recruited and more are planned. We are close to achieving 4,000 asylum decisions a month and we are aiming to make 8,000 a month by the late spring. At current intake levels, we expect to make major inroads into the backlog by the end of the year.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the statistical source for his oral statement of 2 February 2000, Official Report, column 1064, that his Department is "close to achieving 4,000 asylum decisions a month". [111355]

Mrs. Roche: Provisional information from management sources indicated that the number of asylum decisions in January would be close to 4,000. The actual figure will be published on 25 February.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum were received from applicants travelling from Pakistan in each of the last five years. [111057]

Mrs. Roche: The information requested is given in the table.

Asylum applications [1] received in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, 1995 to 1999, nationals of Pakistan

Year	Number
1995	2,915

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what method the number of asylum seekers for dispersal to Scotland has been calculated. [111041]

Mrs. Roche: We have made no such calculations.

We have given indications to local authority consortiums of the total amount of accommodation we are likely to need in 2000–01. We are now in the process of acquiring accommodation both from the public sector and the private sector in order to be able to accommodate the anticipated demand.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to use the powers under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 to direct local authorities in Scotland to take asylum seekers. [111042]

Mrs. Roche: I have no plans at this stage to exercise the powers in the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 to direct any local authorities to take asylum seekers.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been subject to dispersal from the South East of England; and how many have been dispersed to each local authority area in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland. [111054]

Mrs. Roche: Under the interim arrangements, which came into force on 6 December, a total of 1,124 asylum seekers were dispersed from London and Kent up to 2 February 2000. They were all dispersed to local authorities across England. The table reflects how many have been subject to dispersal in each region/local authority:

The interim arrangements do not apply in Scotland where existing arrangements for the support continue to have effect until the new scheme under Part VI of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 comes into force.

Combat 18

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the membership and geographical distribution of Combat 18 in the United Kingdom; and what assessment he has made of how it has changed over the past five years; [110661]

(2) how many individuals have been charged in the past three years with offences related to their activities on behalf of Combat 18 or in association with suspected members of that organisation; and if he will set out a chronological list of the charges made and the outcome at trial; [110662]

(3) what assessment he has made of the aims and objectives of the organisation known as Combat 18. [110663]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I understand that the name "Combat 18" is used by a very small number of individuals with neo-nazi views who associate in a series of loose groupings, mainly in South-East England. The name has also been used by others in racist graffiti or in connection with acts of vandalism and hooliganism. This has been the position for the last five years. It is not possible to provide authoritative information on criminal proceedings because links to these loose groupings are seldom clear cut.

The Government deplore the activities of any group or individual which promotes bigotry, hate and violence.

HMP Manchester

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria were used as the basis for the decision to market-test the current service level agreement for HMP Manchester; and if he will make a statement. [110459]

Mr. Boateng: The current service level agreement for Manchester expires in 2001 and the competitive process of a market test is the best means of driving up standards and of obtaining a high quality service at maximum value for money.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on the extent to which (a) the Information Commissioner and (b) the utility regulators will have the overriding power to adjudicate on matters of dispute in regard to applications for release of information from utilities. [110648]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Under the Freedom of Information Bill, which was introduced into Parliament last November, the Information Commissioner will have wide powers to adjudicate on complaints arising from a public body's refusal to disclose information requested by an applicant.

The utility regulators are public bodies and are included in the scope of the Bill. Applicants may obtain such information about the public functions of the utilities as their regulators hold, if it does not fall within any of the exemptions in the Freedom of Information Bill. And even when a public authority receives a request for information which is exempt, it will be required to consider the exercise of any discretion it may have to disclose it.

The Information Commissioner has the power to order disclosure except where an exemption has been properly relied on, and the issue is whether information should be disclosed as a matter of discretion. Where information is exempt, the Commissioner may consider whether the authority had proper regard to its discretion to release the information when it is in the public interest. She can also recommend discretionary disclosure of the information. In such cases, however, it would be for the public body, in this case the utility regulator, to determine whether or not to accept the Commissioner's recommendation.

We have made it clear that we are considering representations made during the course of the debate in the Commons on Second Reading and in the Committee Stage. My hon. Friend did not contribute in these debates but if he wishes to write to me I will certainly consider any points he wishes to make.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the mechanism by which the freedom of information legislation is to be implemented in Northern Ireland. [110649]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Freedom of Information proposals within the Bill will apply to Northern Ireland in the same way as to England and Wales. However, when the suspension of the Northern Ireland Assembly is lifted, the Assembly will be able to use its power to amend the legislation in relation to bodies in the transferred field. It will be up to them to decide whether they wish to do so.

Clause 85, subsection (3) of the Bill makes provision for the legislation to come into force within five years of achieving royal assent. This is a statutory limit and not a target for implementation. This subsection also makes provision for the Secretary of State, by order, to appoint different days for the legislation to come into force for different purposes.

Stansted Hijack

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the criteria he used to distinguish applications from those seeking asylum following the Stansted hijacking from other applications outstanding which led him to consider the former personally. [110562]

Mrs. Roche: While it is for the Secretary of State to make decisions on asylum claims, there are too many for the Home Secretary to do so in every case. However, as my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, said in his statement to the House on 10 February 2000, Official Report, columns 417–18, the special circumstances of the hijacking caused him to decide to consider these particular asylum applications personally.

West Yorkshire Police

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are currently suspended in the West Yorkshire Force; and in each case for how long the officer has been suspended. [110468]

Mr. Charles Clarke: West Yorkshire Police currently has 13 officers suspended. Five officers have been suspended for 330 days; and others have each been suspending for 401 days, 251 days, 246 days, 241 days, 235 days, 185 days, 150 days and 108 days.

Data Protection Registrar

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time taken by the Data Protection Registrar to deal with complaints from the public. [110666]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Data Protection Registrar publishes information about complaints handling in her Annual Report to Parliament. Her 15th report, published in July 1999, records that in 1998–99 a total of 1,686 complaint files were closed. Of these, 38 per cent. were open for 0–3 months; 26 per cent. for 3–6 months; 19 per cent. for 6–12 months; and 17 per cent. for more than 12 months.

Farm Watch Schemes

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the success of farm watch schemes in combating crime; [110786]

(2) what assessment he has made of the success of the Kent Country Eye partnership in combating crime. [110785]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government recognise that, although people in rural areas face much the same sort of crime as urban and inner-city areas, they have different policing needs. Owing to the physical nature of the countryside, police response times may not always be as quick as they or the public would like.

The most effective response to rural crime, therefore, is the partnership approach between the police and local communities and schemes such as Farm Watch and Country Eye are important in enabling members of the public to work with the police and other agencies to tackle specific issues of crime and disorder.

As schemes such as Farm Watch and Country Eye are run at local level in conjunction with local police forces, the Home Office does not keep records and has not evaluated their success. Along with Neighbourhood Watch, though, they appear to be popular and worthy of replication.

Feltham Young Offenders Institute

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average time out of cell for (a) juvenile and (b) young adult remand prisoners in Feltham Young Offenders Institute during 1999. [110961]

Mr. Boateng: The amount of time individual prisoners at Feltham spend out of cell may vary according to their location within the establishment. In 1999, the average time out of cell was 3.45 hours per day for unsentenced prisoners aged under 18 years, and 3.29 hours per day for those aged 18 to 21.

As a result of a specific recruitment initiative for London and the South-East, the governor of Feltham expects to achieve full staffing levels by July, which will allow the time spent on purposeful activity and out of cell to rise.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the factors which have led to officers seeking transfer out of Feltham Young Offenders Institute. [110960]

Mr. Boateng: The main reason why staff leave Feltham is the high cost of living in London. To help attract new staff, the governor may offer a relocation package to help with the cost of living. Changes to the age limits for prison officer recruitment have been introduced together with an alternative entry test for those without the formal educational qualifications. The governor may, in exceptional circumstances, start new recruits above the normal starting salary.

A specific recruitment drive for London and the south-east, including Feltham, was initiated in October 1999. Applications resulting from this are still being assessed, but a large number of successful candidates are starting duty at Feltham during the first quarter of this year.

Prison Staff (Recruitment and Retention)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve the recruitment and retention of prison staff in areas of high property prices. [110959]

Mr. Boateng: The Prison Service recognise that there are concerns about the recruitment and retention of staff predominantly, but not exclusively, in the South-East. This area has been particularly affected by recent trends in house prices.

The Service is currently working with unions on a number of initiatives which aim to address pay and recruitment and retention issues. These initiatives included a review of local pay issues. This builds further on changes to pay and recruitment introduced in 1999 which included:

- the introduction of additional flexibility to offer higher starting pay for new entrants including prison officer and related grades;
- raising significantly the minimum rates of many administrative and industrial grades in the 1999 pay round;
- launching a national recruitment campaign specifically targeted to filling posts in London and the South-East, which included a central clearing house to speed up processing of applications;
- offering relocation expenses of up to £5,000 to new entrant prison officers who have to move home in order to take up an appointment in high priced housing areas, principally in London and the South-East;
- the introduction nationwide of an alternative entry test for candidates who do not meet the minimum educational requirements for entry as a prison officer; and
- the introduction of revised upper and lower age limits for prison officer recruitment.

Foston Hall

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to ensure that prisoners at HMP and Young Offenders Institution Foston Hall have access to suitable health care. [110899]

Mr. Boateng: There is a full range of clinics and counselling services at Foston Hall prison. However, improvements are being made to health care services at the prison. The governor has had discussions with the chief executive of Derbyshire National Health Service to agree new arrangements under the new joint Prison Service/National Health Service partnership. All standards will be met under the new partnership. A health questionnaire prepared by the health authority has been completed by prisoners and will form the basis of a needs analysis.

Gambling

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to set up an inquiry into the future of gambling; and if he will make a statement. [111274]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Enfield, Southgate (Mr. Twigg) on 16 February 2000, Official Report, columns 537–38W, which set out the terms of reference for the review of gambling which should start shortly after Easter and which will be undertaken by a review body chaired by Sir Alan Budd.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in the reform of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. [110590]

Mrs. Roche: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate has continued to operate an efficient port control, facilitating the arrival in the United Kingdom of nearly 90 million passengers (returning residents, tourists, business travellers, students and others), while preventing the admission of those not entitled to enter and removing many not entitled to stay. Workload pressures and operational difficulties have slowed dispatch of asylum and other casework, but the ground has been laid for recovery. A new legislative framework has been established for the future conduct of immigration and asylum business in the interests of the economic growth and social stability of the United Kingdom.

Performance Inspection Probation Report

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the Performance Inspection Probation report for the West Midlands Region. [110589]

Mr. Boateng: I have considered the reports by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Probation on the five services in the West Midlands region resulting from inspections carried out early in 1999 under his Performance Inspection Programme of probation services in England and Wales.

The Chief Inspector considers that two services, Hereford and Worcester and Warwickshire, are generally performing satisfactorily; that Staffordshire, while not performing satisfactorily in all respects, has features which contain good practice; and that Shropshire and West Midlands services are underachieving.

This last point is a matter of serious concern. Shropshire and West Midlands services receive a full follow up inspection later this year, as part of a planned programme of such inspections.

I will consider the position further on receipt of reports of these re-inspections.

Anti-social Behaviour Orders

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many anti-social behaviour orders have been implemented in each police authority area. [111020]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Records of the numbers of anti-social behaviour orders granted by the courts are not currently held centrally, but we understand that about 25–30 orders have been made.

Court Order Pilots

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the areas in which (a) reparation orders, (b) parenting orders, (c) child safety orders and (d) action plan orders are being piloted; and how many such orders which have been issued to date in each pilot area since the legislation came into force. [111021]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is set out in the table. It indicates the number of orders made in the pilot areas from 30 September 1998 to 31 January 2000, the latest date for which this information is available.

Pilot area/order	Reparation order	Parenting order	Action plan order

In addition, two child safety orders have been made, both in the Sunderland pilot area.

Hendon Police Training College

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers have applied to join training at the Metropolitan Police Training College at Hendon commencing in March 2000. [110976]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner informs me that as at 18 February, there are 80 applicants to join the March 2000 intake.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the maximum number of officers which can be taken for training by the Metropolitan Police Training College at Hendon on a monthly basis. [110969]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner informs me that the training college at Hendon provides a wide range of residential and non-residential training courses, including recruit training. The maximum number of officers who can be accommodated for residential courses is 945.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers were taken for training by the Metropolitan Police Training College at Hendon in each month since April 1999 to date. [110968]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is given in the table, provided by the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police.

Police Officers

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimates he has received from each police force of total wastage in police numbers for the three years commencing in April 2000; [110977]

(2) what estimates he has received from each police force of the actual wastage in police numbers for the three years commencing in April 2000. [110755]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In their bids for a share of the recruitment scheme of the Crime Fighting Fund, forces provided information on their projected wastage over the next three years. The table shows the estimates they have given for (i) wastage in terms of losses to each force and the Police Service as a whole; and (ii) projected transfers (i.e. transfers from each force into another), for the next three years. The latter are not losses to the Service.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) total wastage and (b) actual wastage in police numbers has taken place since March 1999 on a monthly basis in respect of each police force. [110972]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Wastage figures for the police are not collected on a monthly basis. The numbers of officers who left police forces between April and September 1999 are given in the table. These figures do not reflect recruitment to forces during this period.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 9 February 2000, to the hon. Member for Elmet (Mr. Burgon), Official Report, column 172W, of the 12,478 police officers, how many are planned to be recruited by each force in each of the three years commencing in April. [110754]

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Elmet (Mr. Burgon) of 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 172W, on police officer recruitment, if he will give a breakdown for each police force, in each year, of the officers they are planning to recruit over the next three years; for what reason the estimated figure of general police recruitment over the next three years is lower than the estimate he gave in October 1999 to the Home Affairs Committee; and if he will make a statement. [110743]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In their bids for a share of the recruitment scheme of the Crime Fighting Fund, forces provided information on their planned recruitment over the next three years. The table shows the projected appointments on probation and transfers in from other forces.

Actual recruitment levels will depend on the chief officer's decisions in the light of the available resources—including the outcome of the 2000 Spending Review now under way.

When my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary spoke to the Home Affairs Committee on 26 October last year, the best estimate at that time for the recruitment of new officers to the police service over the next three years was based on projecting forward past trends and suggested between a little over 13,000 and 16,500, but crucially, depending on the assumptions made about the impact of future budget pressures. Professor Buck independently verified these figures and thought that taking 15,000 as an indicative figure for planning purposes was not unreasonable. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary said that we would be seeking more specific information from forces about their recruitment plans.

In bidding for a share of the Fund, forces were asked for details of the numbers of officers (new to the service) that they were planning to recruit over the next three years. Their projections come to 12,478.

Forces' projections reflect the decisions and assumptions they and their police authorities have made about the way in which they will use the resources available to them, not just next year but in the two following years, where budgets have yet to be settled.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has received from the Metropolitan Police Commission of the end of year 1999–2000 strength of the Metropolitan Police as against the budgeted target. [110975]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner informs me that the estimate of police strength at the end of the current financial year will be 26,048 officers against a budgeted target of 26,425 officers.

Both figures include officers seconded to the National Criminal Intelligence Service and the National Crime Squad.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total number of civilian staff in the Metropolitan Police Service in each month since March 1999. [111045]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is given in the table, provided by the Metropolitan Police Commissioner:

Month	Numbers of civilian staff
March	11,390
April	11,249
May	11,190
June	11,242

January	10,791

Notes:
1. Figures represent the totals as at the end of each month
2. 313 civilian staff were transferred to outsourced contractors between March 1999 and January 2000

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total number of constables with less than two years police service in the Metropolitan Police Service in each month since March 1999. [110973]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is given in the table, provided by the Metropolitan Police Commissioner:

Interception Warrants

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been (a) made to and (b) upheld by the Tribunal set up under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 since its establishment. [111136]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of complaints investigated by the Tribunal are given in the table:

On no occasion has the Tribunal concluded that there had been a contravention of sections 2–5 of the Interception of Communications Act 1985.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many interception warrants he authorised in 1999. [111142]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Figures for the number of warrants authorised in 1999 are not yet available. They will be published in the annual report of the Commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 (currently Lord Nolan). A copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many interception warrants were in force in England, Wales and Northern Ireland on 31 December 1999. [111132]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Figures for the number of warrants in force on 31 December 1999 are not yet available. They will be published in the annual report of the Commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 (currently Lord Nolan). A copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many modifications of interception warrants he authorised in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999. [111135]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Figures are available only for the modification of warrants issued for the purpose of the prevention and detection of serious crime. Until 1 August 1998, this power was used only for warrants issued on the grounds of national security or of safeguarding the economic well-being of the United Kingdom. From 1 August 1998 until 31 December 1998, there were 172 modifications of serious crime warrants. Figures for 1999 are not yet available.

Traffic Wardens

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total number of traffic wardens in the Metropolitan Police Service jurisdiction in each month since March 1999. [110974]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is given in the table provided by the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police:

Legislation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the Bill to extend the use of mandatory drug testing, reform the probation services in England and Wales, create a new children and family court advisory service and prevent unsuitable people from working with children; what are the reasons for the timescale adopted for publishing the Bill; and if he will make a statement. [110749]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We will introduce legislation to reform the probation service in England and Wales, to create a new children and family court advisory service, to provide for mandatory drug testing, to extend the use of electronic monitoring, and to create an integrated system to help prevent unsuitable people from working with children, as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Fines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 February 2000, Official Report, column 318W, for what reasons the number of people fined for offences has fallen over the last 10 years; whether it is his policy to increase the number of offenders fined; what the latest figures are for reoffending rates following a fine compared to other types of sentence; and if he will make a statement. [110953]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government want to encourage the use of fines, which can be an effective penalty. A project funded under the Crime Reduction Programme is under way to identify and extend successful fine enforcement techniques. This should encourage courts to make greater use of fines.

The use of fines as a disposal has been decreasing since the mid 1970s. This is due to a combination of factors including the greater variety and use of community sentences, and the increased use of immediate custody. Other specific factors, such as the sharp fall in 1996–97 in proceedings under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts (mainly Television licence evasion), and changes arising from the reclassification of the offence of driving while disqualified also had an effect.

Information on reoffending rates is not available centrally. The latest information on reconviction rates following fines and other types of non-custodial disposal is shown in the table. These relate to a sample of offenders who were sentenced during the first quarter of 1996 and reconvicted within two years of sentence. 56 per cent. of those released from custody during 1995 were reconvicted within two years of release.

Jury Trials

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for 1995 to 1999 the number and percentage of those who elected trial by jury in either way offences and who subsequently pleaded guilty who were committed jointly charged with others who contested the case in the Crown Court. [110819]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As I stated in my reply to a question from my hon. and learned Friend on 9 December 1999, Official Report, column 618W, the information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people ordinarily resident in Scotland elected trial by jury in either way offences in the United Kingdom in each year from 1995 to 1999. [110818]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is not collected centrally. It is only in England and Wales that defendants have the option of electing trial by jury.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iran

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the evidence of the Director of the CIA to the US Congress on Iranian foreign policy. [105003]

Mr. Hain: We are not aware of the CIA Director recently addressing Congress on Iranian foreign policy. We are, however, aware that he addressed the Senate on 3 February and touched on Iran.

Arms Sales

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to end export credits for arms sales. [109199]

Mr. Hain: The scope of the Government's productive expenditure initiative (which excludes export credit cover for projects that do not contribute to the social and economic development of the country concerned) is being discussed as part of the thorough review of ECGD ordered by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The FCO is playing a full part in this review.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for International Development regarding the decision to ban 62 of the world's poorest countries from receiving Export Credits Guarantee Department cover for arms sales. [109198]

Mr. Hain: The Secretary of State welcomes the announcement by the Chancellor to extend the so called "productive expenditure" criteria for export credits to a further 22 developing countries (taking the total to 63). These criteria exclude projects that do not contribute to the social and economic development of the country concerned. This does not exclude export credit support for arms sales but military equipment can be provided only when improved security can be shown to have a positive development impact, for example, fishery protection vessels. The scope of the productive expenditure initiative is being discussed as part of the thorough review of the Export Credits Guarantee Department ordered by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The FCO is playing a full part in this review.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110161]

Mr. Hain: The Department has issued environmental guidance to purchasing staff which encourages buyers to use products from sustainable sources.

This guidance is being reviewed as part of the Environmental Audit of FCO operations.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110162]

Mr. Hain: The Forestry Stewardship Council (FSC) label is accepted by buyers as demonstrating that timber and timber products have come from sustainably managed resources. It is not practicable to require that all paper and timber products purchased by the Department are independently certified by FSC because this might discriminate against any equally valid schemes and therefore be against public procurement rules. Moreover, insistence on FSC certification alone might result in FCO failing to meet all its requirements as only a tiny percentage of timber products are currently FSC certified. The Department is undertaking an environmental audit of its operations.

The issue of certification of sustainably managed paper and timber sources will be addressed. Evidence of sustainability might take the form of a certificate issued under a credible, preferably independent, verification scheme; or other documents which demonstrate the operation of an environmental management system incorporating forest management criteria which conform with internationally recognised principles such as the Helsinki Guidelines.

China

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to encourage further strengthening of professional exchanges between the UK and China. [110404]

Mr. Battle: We attach importance to strengthening professional exchanges with China. The British Council has given particular support to this work, notably in the educational, legal and construction sectors, through collaboration projects, seminars and other training schemes, with the assistance of professional institutions.

We also support the UK/China Forum, a high-level non-governmental body, the first meeting of which was held in October 1999, and whose work in the fields of industry, finance, environment, science and technology, law, education, culture and the media, should also strengthen professional exchanges in these areas.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to increase co-operation with China within the framework of the UN for the promotion of international peace and security. [110405]

Mr. Battle: As Permanent Members of the UN Security Council, we and China maintain an ongoing dialogue on a range of international peace and security issues. Chinese peacekeepers also serve with British peacekeepers in a number of countries.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of Voluntary Service Overseas in strengthening links between young people from Britain and China. [110406]

Mr. Battle: Voluntary Service Overseas' mission is to post skilled volunteers to work in organisations with the aims of skills exchange, institutional development and poverty reduction, as well as to provide educational opportunities for the volunteers. The commitment each VSO volunteer makes to working in China for a minimum period of two years undoubtedly helps to strengthen links between young (and not so young) people in Britain and China. DFID provides grant-in-aid to VSO, and is responsible for carrying out evaluations of its effectiveness.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to promote the development of exchanges between police forces in China and the UK in the field of protecting the victims of crime. [110910]

Mr. Battle: We encourage increased links with the Chinese police. UK police forces and their Chinese equivalents have co-operated successfully on a number of cases. The UK has provided training for senior Chinese police officers; the Chinese have indicated that such training is highly valued. Further exchanges are planned both with the police and the National Narcotics Control Commission. We believe that these exchanges will expose the Chinese to best practice and further develop respect for civil rights and the rule of law in China.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the steps being taken by the Government to encourage China to continue its process of economic reform. [110908]

Mr. Battle: We support China's process of economic reform and we believe that China's membership of the WTO will prove a powerful stimulus to China's continuing economic reform. We also believe that the presence of British companies in China—there are now over 2,500 British-invested Joint Ventures—encourages China to continue the process of economic reform.

The Department for International Development is supporting the process of reform of State-Owned Enterprises through a £19 million programme to develop models for enterprise restructuring and development. They are also in discussions with the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank about co-operation in assistance with fiscal reforms.

We also support the training of Chinese lawyers and judges, and believe that progress towards a proper rule of law will help China's economic reforms. We also assist in the training of Chinese financial regulators through a course funded by British Trade International, and the Treasury hold a regular financial dialogue with their Chinese counterparts. We believe all these programmes have a positive effect on China's economic and financial reforms.

Sudan

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what methods his Department uses to assess transparency in accounting for the expenditure by the Sudanese Government of its oil revenues. [110382]

Mr. Hain: Oil was first exported from Sudan in August 1999 and the Government of Sudan have a 5 per cent. stake. We have pressed for revenues to be used for development projects and for transparency in the oil account. The Government of Sudan have made public assurances that this will happen. We shall look to them to honour those assurances and shall remain focused on this issue as evidence becomes available.

Exports

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria his Department uses in advising the Department of Trade and Industry on designating a country as a suitable recipient of UK exports. [110383]

Mr. Battle: The FCO and DTI trade support services are now operated by British Trade International, which has lead responsibility within government for trade development and promotion on behalf of British business. Established in May last year following a Cabinet Office review of all export promotion activities across government, British Trade International has now published its national strategy for international trade and development.

Advertising Budget

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the average cost of issuing a media release from his Department in 1999. [110276]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 16 February 2000]: £76.52 for press releases distributed through the Central Office of Information. This figure includes a proportion of standing charges as well as per release delivery. In addition, a number of press releases are issued each month direct from FCO out of hours for which cost and other figures are not available.

Yugoslavia

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors underlay his proposal for a temporary suspension of the ban on flights by European carriers into the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. [110491]

Mr. Vaz: The General Affairs Council of 14 February agreed to suspend the EU ban on flights between EU and Serbian destinations for a period of six months (Montenegro and Kosovo are already exempt from the ban). The UK supported this decision as a positive response to the requests of the democratic Serb opposition, and as part of the package which included the significant tightening of sanctions targeted on the Milosevic regime such as the visa ban list and financial sanctions.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the impact that the Energy for Democracy scheme has had upon the Belgrade regime; and what plans he has to broaden the initiative to other Serbian towns. [110492]

Mr. Vaz: The initial response of the Serbian government to the Energy for Democracy scheme was to block the first consignment of heating oil at the FRY/ Macedonian border. They were forced to let the consignment through after public protests in the towns of Nis and Pirot. The scheme has helped to refute one of Milosevic's main propaganda lies, that the West is anti-Serb. The EU has now agreed to consider the expansion of the scheme to a further five towns: Novi Sad, Subotica, Sombor, Kraljevo and Kragujevac.

Kosovo

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on the Kosovo Serbs' proposal regarding establishment of (a) Serb enclaves within Kosovo, (b) Serb defence forces and (c) a Serb police force. [110493]

Mr. Vaz: (a) We do not support ethnically pure enclaves. We want to preserve a multi-ethnic Kosovo. The protection of minorities in Kosovo is a major priority for the Kosovo force (KFOR). 50 per cent. of KFOR manpower is involved in the protection of minorities.

(b) We are opposed to the creation of any defence forces in Kosovo. KFOR has sole responsibility for security in Kosovo.

(c) The Kosovo Police Service is a multi-ethnic force. Kosovo Serbs were among the first graduates of the force.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of people killed in Yugoslavia as a result of the conflict over Kosovo (a) by NATO forces and the KLA and (b) by Yugoslav forces, since the NATO action began on 22 March 1999. [109409]

Mr. Vaz: NATO has no reliable figures for the number of casualties arising from the campaign in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. We would be wary of relying on figures whose source was the authorities in Belgrade.

We estimate that around 10,000 Kosovo Albanians, many of them civilians, were killed by Yugoslav forces between June 1998 and June 1999. Most of these deaths occurred in the period between March and June 1999. The International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) continues to work, with our support, to calculate the full scale of the death toll arising from Serb repression and violence in Kosovo.

Zimbabwe

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government have an arms embargo on Zimbabwe. [110577]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 17 February 2000]: No. Our export licensing policy towards Zimbabwe and other countries intervening in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) is set out in the reply my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge) on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 184W.

Colonel Gaddafi

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the Internet report on the assassination attempt on Colonel Gaddafi in Libya in 1996; [110429]

(2) what support was supplied by Her Majesty's Government to the persons who made the assassination attempt on Colonel Gaddafi in Libya in 1996. The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. [110430]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 17 February 2000]: Nothing in the Internet report sustains the allegation that either the previous Administration or the Intelligence Agencies proposed the assassination of Colonel Gaddafi.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will set up an inquiry into allegations that the British security services knew of plans to assassinate Colonel Gaddafi; [110517]

(2) when Britain's security services knew about proposals to assassinate Colonel Gaddafi; and if he will make a statement; [110519]

(3) when he was first informed of plans to assassinate Colonel Gaddafi; what he knew about such plans; and if he will make a statement. [110518]

Mr. Robin Cook: I was informed of the background to Mr. Shayler's allegations in August 1998. Nothing in the Internet report sustains the allegation that either the previous Administration or the Intelligence Agencies proposed the assassination of Colonel Gaddafi. If the right hon. Member has evidence that the previous Administration authorised an assassination, I would be glad to receive it.

War Criminals

Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to arrest indicted war criminals in (a) Bosnia-Herzegovina and (b) Kosovo. [109408]

Mr. Vaz: The mandates of the NATO-led Stabilisation Force in Bosnia and Herzegovina (SFOR) and the Kosovo Force (KFOR) authorise troops to detain indicted persons with whom they come into contact in the course of their duties, provided the tactical situation permits. Within Bosnia, SFOR has detained 17 suspects. Two further indictees were shot dead by SFOR personnel acting in self defence during a detention operation. UNMIK (UN police force) in Kosovo have detained war crimes suspects there, but the five persons indicted for war crimes by ICTY for atrocities committed in Kosovo are still are large in Serbia.

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many suspected war criminals have been arrested by UK forces in Bosnia. [109401]

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many suspected war criminals have been apprehended by British forces in Bosnia [109417]

Mr. Vaz: British SFOR troops have successfully detained eight war crimes suspects indicted by the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. They have also been involved in the arrest of a further two suspects with other SFOR forces. A further indictee was shot dead by British SFOR personnel acting in self defence during a detention operation.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral statement of 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 782, if he will make it his policy to veto the forthcoming EU treaty if it does not include provision for a blocking minority in the Council for the United Kingdom, France and Germany. [110848]

Mr. Vaz: The Government's policy on vote reweighting is set in the IGC White Paper.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the exercise by Her Majesty's Government of its veto during the negotiations on the forthcoming EU Intergovernmental Conference. [111080]

Mr. Vaz: The Government's approach to the various issues is clearly set out in the White Paper which was laid before the House on 15 February.

East Timor

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representatives the UK has in East Timor; what is their status; and if he will make a statement on their role and functions. [110488]

Mr. Battle: We have already opened a temporary British Office in Dili staffed, at First Secretary level, by a member of HM Diplomatic Service. The officer's role is to cultivate Britain's relationship with the East Timorese and the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor (UNTAET) during the first months of the territory's transition to independence.

Our diplomatic presence is in addition to the 14 British police officers and four military observers assigned to UNTAET.

Peru

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring is being undertaken by United Kingdom representatives of the electoral process in Peru. [110489]

Mr. Battle: Presidential and Congressional elections will be held in Peru on 9 April. We sponsored the visit to Peru in January of an electoral expert from Electoral Reform International Services to help the Defensoria (an umbrella organisation representing numerous human rights and civic groups in Peru) to supervise the electoral process, and are considering sponsoring a follow-up visit in March. The British Group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union has accepted an invitation from the Peruvian Ministry of Foreign Affairs to send election observers in April. In addition, we have contributed £20,000 to support plans by the Peruvian Ombudsman's office to supervise the electoral system.

Austria

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to monitor human rights in Austria. [110588]

Mr. Vaz: We have welcomed the commitments made by the new Austrian Government to abide by the common obligations and values of EU membership, to combat all forms of discrimination, and to deal with Austria's Nazi past; and we have made clear our hope that their actions will fully match their words.

Sanctions Policy

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the sanctions policy towards (a) Yugoslavia and (b) Iraq. [110587]

Mr. Hain: UN sanctions against the former Yugoslavia played an important role in bringing Milosevic to the negotiating table at Dayton. EU sanctions against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia have been targeted to place additional pressure on the repressive regime, restricting the ability of Milosevic and his associates to travel and to finance their activities and underlining the political isolation of Serbia from the European mainstream.

Sanctions against Iraq have successfully contained Saddam Hussein for over nine years and have significantly reduced the threat from his weapons of mass destruction. The effort the Iraqi regime and its friends put into their campaign to have sanctions lifted is evidence of the impact of sanctions on the Iraqi leadership.

Tibet

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese Government about reports that Tibetan woman are to be compulsorily sterilised after their second child. [111019]

Mr. Battle: We raised our concerns about these reports with the Chinese, at official level, during the UK/China Human Rights Dialogue which took place in Beijing from 16–18 February.

Sombrero

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is towards the proposal by Andrew Beal to lease for the Government of Anguilla the Island of Sombrero for a rocket launch pad to carry telecommunications satellites. [111231]

Mr. Vaz: It is for the Government of Anguilla to respond to the request by Andrew Beal for permission to build a rocket launching pad on Sombrero Island. The Government of Anguilla have requested technical advice from Her Majesty's Government to help them decide on this planning proposal. This is to allow the Government of Anguilla to investigate thoroughly the proposal's many implications and reach an informed decision. When the Outer Space Act 1986 is extended to Anguilla the Governor will have the discretion to set the terms and grant licences for individual launch missions.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Lobby Members

42. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the President of the Council what representations she has received from members of the Lobby about the facilities available to them in the House. [109661]

Mr. Tipping: My right hon. Friend has received representations from the Chairman of the Lobby in her capacity as Chairman of the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons.

Modernisation

43. Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on progress in modernisation of the House of Commons. [109662]

Mrs. Beckett: Forty seven of the 54 recommendations of the Modernisation Committee directed at Government have already been implemented. The House has adopted a range of measures to improve the scrutiny of legislation; Thursday sittings have been brought forward; the scrutiny of European business has been reformed and sittings in Westminster Hall have begun.

Westminster Hall

44. Mr. Salter: To ask the President of the Council what assessment she has made of the experiment with sittings in Westminster Hall. [109663]

Mr. Tipping: Early indications suggest that Westminster Hall is providing a useful and popular forum for debate.

45. Angela Smith: To ask the President of the Council if the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons will assess the impact of sittings in Westminster Hall. [109665]

Mrs. Beckett: The Modernisation Committee has already undertaken to do so.

46. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Council when she will assess the experiment of sittings in Westminster Hall. [109666]

Mrs. Beckett: It is for the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons to assess the experiment of sittings in Westminster Hall and it has undertaken to do so before the end of the session.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council if she will make an assessment of the clarity of information provided to hon. Members in written parliamentary answers. [109664]

Mrs. Beckett: Parliamentary answers are the responsibility of the Ministers who give them who will bear in mind the Resolution of 19 March 1997, and give accurate and truthful information to Parliament.

Hereditary Peers

Mr. Olner: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if the Committee has considered the matter of membership of All-Party Parliamentary Groups and of Associate Parliamentary Groups by those hereditary peers excluded from the House of Lords under the House of Lords Act 1999; and if she will make a statement. [111911]

Mrs. Roe: Over the past few months, the Committee has been considering a number of matters in connection with All-Party Parliamentary and Associate Parliamentary Groups, including membership of the groups by "excluded" hereditary peers. I am now able to announce a number of measures, which I am sure the hon. Member will find of interest.

With respect to those hereditary peers excluded from the House of Lords Act, the Committee has agreed that:

(i) for prospective groups, while excluded hereditary peers may be ordinary members of such groups, they may not be officers, nor should they be counted as one of the 20 "qualifying" Members of either House; and

(ii) for existing approved groups, which may have excluded hereditary peers as officers or qualifying members:

(a) if the peers concerned are retained as ordinary members of a group, and are allowed voting rights, then it should amend its title immediately to Associate Parliamentary Group, if not already so termed;

(b) groups should elect new officers to replace excluded hereditary peers by 31 July 2000; and

(c) groups should recruit replacement qualifying members, also by 31 July 2000.

The Committee has also agreed:

that the definition of "full member" of an All-Party Parliamentary or of an Associate Parliamentary Group means a member of a group who has voting rights; that before it can be accepted onto the Approved List, a prospective group must hold an inaugural meeting to elect its officers, and that the meeting must be advertised as such on the All-Party Notices; in addition, the Committee agreed that any elections of officers of an approved group must be advertised on the All-Party Notices; and that therefore the relevant point of the declaration, which prospective groups have to sign, will be amended to read "the group elects its honorary officers, who are all Members of either House, every 12 months; this, and any other election of officers, must be announced in advance on the All-Party Notices."; that a group must advise the Registry of Members' Interests of any change in the information contained in its Information Sheet and its Register entry within 28 days of such a change occurring; and an additional declaration will therefore be added to the application form, namely, "the group undertakes to notify the Registry of Members' Interests of any change that is required to its records (ie, its Register entry and its Information Sheet) within 28 days of such a change occurring; where there is no change to its records following an AGM, the group will sign and return its records as correct."; that the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards may authorise checks to establish whether or not a group's records are correct, and may authorise the removal of a group from the Approved List if the group fails to comply with the rules; and that groups will be required to keep a record of their meetings and those attending so that, if challenged, they can demonstrate that they have met at least three times per year and that there were never less than five Members of the Commons present at each meeting; the declaration will be changed accordingly to state "the group undertakes to keep a record of every meeting so that, if challenged, it can demonstrate that it has met at least three times a year (a year starts on the date of the group's last registered AGM, and ends exactly 12 months later; AGMs cannot be included in the total of three); and also that there are present at every meeting a minimum of five Commons members of the group, including at least one Commons officer".

Finally, the Committee expressed concern over the proliferation of groups dealing with similar matters; it has therefore agreed, later in this Parliament, to re-examine the question of overlap between groups, and in particular to consider whether a formal policy on this matter should be adopted, in order to ease pressure on House facilities caused by such a proliferation.

PDVN/Internet (Parliamentary Access)

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee what progress has been made in modernising parliamentary access to the PDVN and the Internet. [109656]

Mr. Allan: Considerable progress has been made over recent years in providing Members and their staff with networked information services in Parliament. There is an ongoing process of modernising and improving the Parliamentary Data and Video Network and Parliament's access to the Internet. That modernisation process is an operational matter falling within the remit of the Head of the Parliamentary Communications Directorate. I have therefore asked him to reply directly to the hon. Member.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the President of the Council (1) what steps she has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by her Department come from a sustainable source; [110190]

(2) if she will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by her Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110191]

Mrs. Beckett: The stationery products used in my Department are purchased from suppliers who use recycled paper for everything except specialist use. My Department purchases few timber products (mainly furniture) but, when it does, the policy is that the timber concerned should have been sustainably harvested.

As to the certification process provided by the Forest Stewardship Council, I refer to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Stretford and Urmston (Ms Hughes) on 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 357W.

WALES

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provisions are made available to Departmental staff for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job-sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) child care allowances, (m) careers leave and (n) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [108840]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Civil Service as a whole is striving for an improved balance between work and family life. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office, on 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 519W.

Provision for these matters is set out in the Terms and Conditions of Service Code, which for my Department are the same as the Terms and Conditions of Service for the National Assembly for Wales. A copy of this Code has been placed in the Library of the House.

There are some exceptions. Annualised hours and term time working are not currently operated in my Department, and parental leave is not explicitly covered but falls within current special leave provision. The Code is currently being amended to take account of the provisions under the Employment Relations Act 1998.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what childcare provision was made available in the financial year 1998–99 for use by his departmental staff; what was the cost to parents of this childcare; and how many parents used the facilities. [108857]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 518W.

The table shows the type of childcare provision in my Department; the number of parents who used it; and the cost to parents, for 1998–99.

Type of childcare provision	Nursery	Holiday playscheme
Number of places	[1]30	[2]50
Cost to Welsh Office parents per day	£19.00	£8.00
Cost of private places per day	£22.00	£12.00

[1] All 30 places at the nursery were occupied.

[2] The 50 places represent those occupied by a consortium including the Welsh Office and others, for example Employment Services. The playscheme operated in both the Easter and Summer holidays during which time 33 and 17 places were occupied respectively by children of Welsh Office staff.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of his Department, (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [109233]

Mr. Paul Murphy: From July 1994 to June 1999, 89 per cent. of those staff in the Welsh Office who took maternity leave had returned to work by the end of their provision within the Department's maternity scheme. From July 1999 to date, 100 per cent. of staff who have been on maternity leave in the Wales Office have returned to work

The current provision is set out in the Leave and Attendance section of the National Assembly Terms and Conditions of Service Code, Chapter 5, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

The remaining information is not held centrally and would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many senior civil servants from an ethnic minority background are employed in his Department; and how many of them are (a) men and (b) women. [110683]

Mr. Paul Murphy: As at 1 April 1999, 55 members of the senior civil service were from ethnic minority background (1.7 per cent.).

Information on ethnic origin in the Civil Service is collected on the understanding that it will be treated on a confidential basis. To protect the privacy of individual members of staff we do not disclose data relating to fewer than five people.

My Department has fewer than five senior civil servants in total.

Paper and Timber Products

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council as coming from a sustainable source. [110217]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Stretford and Urmston (Ms Hughes) on 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 357W. It is not practicable to require that all paper and timber products purchased by my Department are independently certified by the Forest Stewardship Council because this might discriminate against any equally valid schemes and therefore be against public procurement rules.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to ensure that paper and timber products purchased by his Department come from a sustainable source. [110216]

Mr. Paul Murphy: All potential suppliers are issued with "Selling to the Welsh Office—A Green Guide for Suppliers of Goods and Services to the Welsh Office". Following devolution, this guide now applies to my Department, the Wales Office.

The guide sets out what is expected from contractors who supply paper and timber products, among other things, and ensures that we operate a purchasing policy which gives full weight to environmental considerations in the procurement of all goods and services.

The guide specifies that timber products should be supplied only from wood produced from sustainably managed forests. The current paper contract provides paper that is at least 80 per cent. post consumer waste, produced using Environmentally Chlorine Free pulp from sustainable forests.

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110716]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department does not own or tend any gardens.

However, my Department has a Green Guide for suppliers of goods and services, to operate a purchasing policy which gives full weight to environmental considerations in the procurement of all goods and services. The horticultural policy is to use alternatives to peat such as bark chippings, coir, composts, green manuring, leaf mould, manures and seaweed based products.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

World Cup 2006

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when he expects to receive the full accounts of the FA (FIFA) World Cup 2006 bid for (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99 from the FA; and if he will make a statement; [104167]

(2) if there is an upper limit on the amount of money Sport England has contributed and will contribute to the FA (FIFA) World Cup 2006 bid; [104166]

(3) when he expects to publish the accounts of the Government's contribution to the FA (FIFA) World Cup 2006 bid. [104168]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 10 January 2000]: The bid to host the World Cup in 2006 is a bid by the Football Association, with the full backing of the Government and Sport England, who have allocated £3 million of Lottery funding for the bid. It is not a Lottery condition to require published accounts. However, Sport England monitors how the Lottery grant is spent.

The remainder of the estimated £9 million which the bid will cost is being provided by the FA, the FA Premier League and by commercial sponsors. Reference to the bid is made in the FA's 1998 general annual report and accounts, but any decision to publish detailed accounts for the 2006 bid is for the FA to make.

National Lottery

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the monetary value of National Lottery awards made in (a) rural and (b) urban areas in each of the years since the National Lottery was established. [110508]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 17 February 2000]: The Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions classifies rural areas as those local authorities where there is no settlement greater than 35,000. The table shows the monetary value of National Lottery awards made to local authorities in Great Britain in rural and other areas (that is Small Towns, Large Towns, Free Standing Cities, Conurbations and London) in each of the years since the National Lottery was established. This information is taken from the National Lottery Awards database which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributing bodies. The totals exclude Lottery awards not attributed by the distributing bodies to a particular local authority.

	Amount awarded to rural areas	Amount awarded to non-rural areas
1995	131,759,797	822,929,475
1996	272,702,182	1,352,526,177
1997	204,161,295	2,116,096,616
1998	164,005,639	1,045,100,364
1999	162,866,596	703,373,321

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the number of grants made from the National Lottery was in (a) urban areas and (b) rural areas between 1 May 1997 and 31 December 1999. [110642]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 17 February 2000]: The Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions classifies rural areas as those local authorities where there is no settlement greater than 35,000. The total number of awards to local authorities in rural areas in Great Britain between 1 May 1997 and 31 December 1999, was 11,571. The number of awards to local authorities in other areas in Great Britain, (that is Small Towns, Large Towns, Free Standing Cities, Conurbations and London) between 1 May 1997 and 31 December 1999, was 26,198. This information is taken from the National Lottery Awards database which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributing bodies.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the average size of grant was from the National Lottery in (a) urban areas and (b) rural areas between 1 May 1997 and 31 December 1999. [110643]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 17 February 2000]: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions classifies rural areas as those local authorities where there is no settlement greater than 35,000. The average size of award to local authorities in rural areas in Great Britain between 1 May 1997 and 31 December 1999, was £43,059. The average size of award to local authorities in other areas in Great Britain, (that is Small Towns, Large Towns, Free Standing Cities, Conurbations and London), between 1 May 1997 and 31 December 1999, was £115,406. This information is taken from the National Lottery Awards database which uses information supplied by the distributing bodies.

Sport (Funding)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the amount of (a) World Class Performance, (b) World Class Potential and (c) World Class Start funding distributed by (i) UK Sport, (ii) Sport England, (iii) Sport Scotland, (iv) the Sports Council for Wales and (v) the Northern Ireland Sports Council in (x) 1998–99 and (y) 1999–2000, and the provisional figures for 2000–01; and if he will list the sports in receipt of World Class lottery funding and how much they received from each of the above bodies. [110028]

Kate Hoey: The World Class Performance Programme is administered by Sport England and UK Sport. World Class Potential and Start Programmes are administered solely by Sport England. A number of sports have submitted applications to Sport England under the Start and Potential Programmes which have been approved or approved in principle, but to date no payments have been made. Alternative programmes for the elite level sport are in place in the Home Countries. The sums awarded to elite sport appear in the following table:

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
UK Sport—World Class[1] Performance Programme	21,839,545	17,129,000	[2]18,000,000
Sport England—World Class Performance Programme	27,366,285	17,330,962	[3]—
Sport Scotland—Talented Athlete Programme	1,694,338	887,703	[3]—
Sport Scotland—Scotland Junior Groups	150,349	383,151	[3]—
Sports Council for Wales—Elite Cymru[4]	634,781	570,764	[2]750,000
Sports Council for Northern Ireland—Development Of Talented Individuals Programme	422,584	348,306	[3]—

[1] UK Sport became a Lottery distributor in its own right from 1 July 1999. Before this time the Home Country Sports Councils were jointly responsible for funding World Class Performance on the basis of recommendations and advice of the UK Sports Council.
[2] Provisional figure.

The information required for the latter part of the question is not held within my Department.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 3 February, Official Report, column 29W, on asset sales, if he will list the individual land and buildings sold by the Tate Gallery and the amount realised by each item. [111266]

Mr. Chris Smith: The amount of £1,200,000 given in my previous answer derived from the sale of the Tate's former Gorst Road site in London. The land and the buildings were not sold individually, but as a single package. The buildings were subsequently demolished by the purchaser.

PRIME MINISTER

Operation Horseshoe

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Prime Minister on what date he was first informed that Operation Horseshoe might be implemented in 1999; and by whom he was so informed. [108655]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 February 2000]: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs told the Foreign Affairs Committee on 14 April 1999, we were aware that a spring offensive against the KLA had been planned before the start of the NATO airstrikes, and we knew from previous experience that it was likely to be accompanied by ethnic cleansing. Throughout the crisis, we received information from a variety of sources, some of them sensitive. Details of a plan called Operation Horseshoe were made public in a statement by the German Defence Minister on 9 April 1999.

Lord Levy

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what restrictions apply to the undertaking of private business by Lord Levy while acting as his personal envoy on visits overseas. [110242]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 February 2000]: Lord Levy does not conduct private business while travelling as my personal envoy. Lord Levy paid his own travel expenses. The FCO and Embassies provided practical support, the cost of which is not separately itemised.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the visits undertaken by Lord Levy as his personal envoy, indicating in each case the (a) dates, (b) destinations, (c) cost to public funds and (d) purpose of the visits. [110240]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 February 2000]: Lord Levy has made the following visits as my personal envoy:

1999

9–10 April: Syria
5–7 June: Jordan
7–10 June: Syria
9–11 October: Oman
11–12 October: Qatar
12–14 October: Bahrain
29 November-1 December: Syria

2000

2–3 February: Syria
3 February: Lebanon.

Lord Levy made calls in Egypt on 8 October 1999 en route for Oman, and on 3 February 2000 while returning from Lebanon.

Lord Levy also frequently visits Israel in a personal capacity and has on occasions had discussions there in the furtherance of my support for the peace process.

The purpose of Lord Levy's visits was to develop the United Kingdom's bilateral relationships with the countries visited, and to exchange views on key regional issues, including the Middle East Peace Process.

Lord Levy paid his own travel expenses. The FCO and Embassies provided practical support, the cost of which is not separately itemised.

PPS Guidelines

Mr. Paice: To ask the Prime Minister what guidelines there are for Parliamentary Private Secretaries on discussing Government policy in public within their own constituencies. [111310]

The Prime Minister: Guidance to Parliamentary Private Secretaries on their role and responsibilities is set out in paragraphs 44–46 of the Ministerial Code.

Police (West Midlands)

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when (a) his officials and (b) staff at 10 Downing Street were first informed that the matter of Transfer Technology grants was being referred to the West Midlands Police; [111628]

(2) when he was first informed that the matter of Transfer Technology grants was being referred to the West Midlands Police. [111626]

The Prime Minister: In accordance with normal procedure, the No. 10 Press Office was informed on Thursday 3 February after my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry had made his decision.

I was informed after the Secretary of State had made his announcement.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Prime Minister if he will provide the basis for his oral statement of 16 February 2000, Official Report, column 947, that the Immigration Department is close to achieving 4,000 asylum decisions a month. [111522]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the Answer given to him today by my hon. Friend the Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche), the Minister of State, Home Office, Official Report, column 815W.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Staff

Mr. Cox: To ask the Solicitor-General how many senior civil servants from an ethnic minority background are employed in the Law Officers' Department; and how many of them are (a) men and (b) women. [110690]

The Solicitor-General: As at 1 April 1999, 55 members of the Senior Civil Service were from ethnic minority background (1.7 per cent.).

Information on ethnic origin in the Civil Service is collected on the understanding that it will be treated on a confidential basis. To protect the privacy of individual members of staff, we do not disclose data relating to fewer than five people.

The Law Officers' Departments (The Crown Prosecution Service, Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Serious Fraud Office) have four members of the SCS declared to be of ethnic minority background as at 1 April 1999.

Racism (CPS)

Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Solicitor-General what action has been taken by the Crown Prosecution Service to identify institutional racism in its employment of staff and in the carrying out of prosecution functions; and what action has been taken or proposed as a result. [111283]

The Solicitor-General: The CPS is strongly committed to equality for all staff and has agreed a programme of action with the Commission for Racial Equality. As a result of this agreement, the CRE has suspended its decision to carry out an investigation of the CPS under the Race Relations Act 1976. As well as implementing action on training, development and selection, the CPS has commissioned Sylvia Denman CBE, a leading academic with a distinguished background in equality issues, to carry out a review of the Service.

The terms of reference of the review will include investigating the processes, behaviour and attitudes present in the CPS to determine the extent to which race discrimination and institutional racism may exist in the Service nationally. Mrs. Denman will present her preliminary report towards the end of April 2000.

The CPS last year set up an Equality Committee, chaired by the Chief Executive, with sub-groups on race and women. The Committee is responsible for driving through policy and action on equality in the CPS. It includes representatives from the Equal Opportunities Commission and NACRO. The CPS is implementing an Immediate action plan on race, which has been agreed with the CRE. An action plan for implementation of longer term initiatives drawn up by the sub-group on race will be presented to the Director's Board at the end of February.

The CPS participated in a major research project on the ethnic monitoring of young offenders, conducted by Dr. Bonny Mhlanga of the University of Hull. Dr. Mhlanga's report was published in October 1999. The research project found no evidence of unfair discrimination by the CPS in its casework decisions against defendants from ethnic minorities, indicating that decision the CPS is performing its role as an independent prosecuting authority properly and effectively.

Fast-tracking (Merseyside)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the fast tracking project in Merseyside. [111246]

The Solicitor-General: When I visited CPS Merseyside in September last year, I observed at first hand the efforts made by the CPS and other local agencies to reduce delay in the criminal justice system.

The fast-tracking project at Knowsley Magistrates Court has been a great success, reducing the time from arrest to disposal in all youth cases. As a result, fast-tracking arrangements based on the pilot were implemented throughout Merseyside on 28 June 1999.

In addition the CPS Area and its criminal justice partners on 1 November 1999 implemented the Narey measures to speed up justice in the magistrates courts for both youth and adult defendants. These and other changes that the criminal justice agencies are making should further reduce delay in the criminal justice system.

The local inter-agency Trials Issue Group discussed the impact of Narey at its meeting on 21 January 2000. It was too early to make a proper assessment while some pre-Narey cases remain in the court system. A full evaluation of Narey will take place at the Group's next meeting in April.

CABINET OFFICE

Advertising Budgets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what was the average cost of issuing a media release from her Department in 1999. [110270]

Mr. Stringer: The average cost of issuing a media release by this Department in 1999 was £131.00. Media releases are distributed electronically on the Department's behalf by the Central Office of Information.

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps she is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by her Department; and if she will make a statement. [110729]

Mr. Stringer: The Cabinet Office does not use peat compost in its gardens.

Draft Equality Bill

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will prepare a draft equality bill for consideration by Parliament. [111100]

Marjorie Mowlam: A number of Bills were announced for advanced drafting in the Queen's speech last year. The Government's legislative proposals for the 4th session will be announced in the Queen's speech later this year.

SCOTLAND

Post Office

5. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are being taken to improve postal services in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [109611]

Dr. Reid: The Government are committed to the modernisation of the postal service. Scotland, like the rest of the UK will benefit from the £480 million investment in the HORIZON project to computerise all post offices by 2001.

15. Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the effects which transferring pension payments from post offices to bank accounts will have on small post offices. [109625]

Dr. Reid: I am in contact with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer over a range of issues.

This Government are committed to making a major investment in the Post Office and the maintenance of a nation-wide network of post offices. All people in receipt of benefits, including pensions, will continue to have the choice of receiving payments in cash at their local post office.

Higher Education

6. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the First Minister regarding higher education issues. [109613]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend meets the First Minister regularly to discuss a range of issues.

Oil

7. Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future of oil fabrication in the highlands and islands. [109615]

Mr. Wilson: I am a member of Pilot, the successor body to the Oil and Gas Industries Task Force. It has set up a support group for the oil fabrication sector, involving government agencies and the industry. The group is charged with identifying the way forward, and ensuring that the skills base is maintained.

Block Grant

8. Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the mechanisms used for calculating the size of the block grant. [109616]

Dr. Reid: I have regular discussions with the Chancellor about a range of matters. The arrangements in place continue to provide a fair deal for Scotland within a United Kingdom framework and I have no plans to revise the underlying principles.

National Minimum Wage

9. Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many enforcement cases there have been in Scotland in respect of the national minimum wage. [109618]

Mr. Wilson: As at the end of January 2000, the National Minimum Wage helpline had received 293 complaints about underpayment of the National Minimum Wage in Scotland. All complaints are followed up.

Economy

10. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer concerning the state of the Scottish economy in the context of the forthcoming Budget. [109619]

Dr. Reid: I meet the Chancellor from time to time to discuss a range of issues about the Scottish economy.

Scotland has benefited greatly from the Government's macroeconomic framework, which has achieved sound public finances while guaranteeing additional resources for priority areas such as health and education.

11. Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last discussed the Scottish economy with the Chancellor of the Exchequer. [109621]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend meets the Chancellor from time to time to discuss a range of issues about the Scottish economy.

The Scottish economy continues to perform strongly. Output is expanding across all main sectors, and unemployment is low by historical and international standards.

Scottish MPs

12. Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussion he has had with the Prime Minister about reducing the number of hon. Members sitting in the House for Scottish constituencies. [109622]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend has regular discussions with the Prime Minister on a wide range of matters. However, the position on the number of Members sitting in this House for Scottish seats is set out in Section 86 of the Scotland Act 1998. This will be implemented by the Boundary Commission for Scotland in its next review, which is due to be submitted between December 2002 and December 2006.

Media Officers

13. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many media officers are employed by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [109623]

Dr. Reid: My Department does not employ any media officers. It employs five Information Officers to advise Ministers on the presentation of Government policy and to explain Government policy to the media. Some of these officers have other duties within the Department.

Export Promotion Services

14. Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ensure that Scottish companies continue to receive the full range of export promotion services. [109624]

Mr. Wilson: We work very closely with the Scottish Executive to ensure that Scottish companies are aware of the full range of UK wide support available from the Government as well as the support, tailored to the specific needs of Scottish business, from Scottish Trade International

Last week I was in the Far East. This was part of my cabinet committee responsibilities but I was also spending time promoting Scottish companies and Scottish goods and services. Two weeks ago I led an 18 strong trade mission to Egypt organised by Scottish Trade International. Every week I am speaking to Scottish companies about how we can help them increase their exporting effort.

I am very pleased that Scottish companies are continuing to increase their competitiveness in the international market place. Recent figures showed that Scottish manufactured exports had increased by 7.8 per cent. in real terms during the third quarter of 1999.

Devolution

16. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review the devolution settlement in Scotland. [109626]

Dr. Reid: The Memorandum of Understanding between the United Kingdom Government and the devolved administrations which was published on 1 October 1999 provides for the operation of the devolution settlements to be kept under review by the Joint Ministerial Committee.

Pig Industry

17. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received about the Scottish pig industry. [109627]

Mr. Wilson: I have received a number of representations about the Scottish pig industry's difficulties. Most of the issues raised are now the responsibility of the Scottish Executive and are being pursued by the appropriate Ministers.

Shipyards

18. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last visited shipyards on the River Clyde; and if he met both managers and trade union representatives to discuss matters relating to Her Majesty's Government's contracts for the construction of vessels. [109628]

Dr. Reid: My last visit to a shipyard on the River Clyde was on 14 January when I visited the Govan shipyard. I met both managers and trade-union representatives and we discussed a range of issues including Ministry of Defence contracts for the construction of vessels.

Anti-drugs Strategy

19. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has held with the First Minister on co-ordination of the Government's anti-drugs strategy in Scottish schools. [109629]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend discussed generally the co-ordination of the Government's anti-drugs strategy, a central component of which is education, at a meeting with the First Minister on 14 January. Both he and the First Minister have also recently had separate meetings with the UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator, Mr. Keith Hellawell.

New Deal

20. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the operation of the New Deal in Scotland. [109630]

Mr. Wilson: I am very pleased to say that the operation of New Deal in Scotland is proving very successful. We have reached the significant milestones of 20,000 young people now having gained jobs through the programme in Scotland, and the 10,000th employer signing up to participate in the programme.

The latest published figures provide further hard evidence of the significant impact the New Deal is having in Scotland. Over 43,000 young people have benefited from the New Deal. By the end of November 1999, a total of 28,000 young people had entered jobs, work experience or training.

Special Advisers

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement regarding the number of Special Advisers employed by his Department. [109620]

Dr. Reid: My Department employs three Special Advisers to advise me on the development of government policy. One of the Special Advisers is unpaid and works part-time.

Air Traffic Control, Prestwick

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement regarding the future of the Air Traffic Control Centre at Prestwick. [109609]

Dr. Reid: I welcome the announcement made by my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Transport on 14 February 2000. The agreement between National Air Traffic Services Ltd. and Lockheed Martin for the provision of air traffic control systems for the New Scottish Centre ends any uncertainty about its future. The 530 jobs at Prestwick will be secured and the construction phase for the new centre will create about 700 jobs during the three-year construction phase, which will begin next year.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the impact of a single European currency on the Scottish economy. [109614]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend meets the Chancellor from time to time to discuss a range of issues about the Scottish economy.

The policy on membership of the single currency was set out by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the House of Commons in October 1997. The determining factor underpinning any UK Government decision on membership of the single currency is whether the economic case for the UK joining is clear and unambiguous. The interests of the Scottish Economy will be an integral part of that process.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Legislation

21. Dr. Godman: To ask the Advocate-General, pursuant to her oral answer of 25 January 2000, Official Report, column 137, if she will list the Bills introduced by the Scottish Parliament which she has considered to be (a) within and (b) outwith the legislative competence of the Parliament. [109631]

The Advocate-General for Scotland: Thus far, two Bills have been passed by the Scottish Parliament and I have not considered it necessary to refer either to the Judicial Committee. They are now the Mental Health (Public Safety and Appeals) (Scotland) Act 1999 and the Public Finance and Accountability (Scotland) Act 2000.

25. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what Bills introduced by the Scottish Parliament she has considered to be (a) within and (b) outwith its legislative competence. [109635]

The Advocate-General for Scotland: Under section 33 of the Scotland Act 1998, when a Bill has been passed by the Scottish Parliament I have the power to refer it to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for a decision on whether it is within the competence of the Scottish Parliament.

Thus far, two Bills have been passed by the Scottish Parliament, and I have not considered it necessary to refer either to the Judicial Committee. They are now the Mental Health (Public Safety and Appeals) (Scotland) Act 1999 and the Public Finance and Accountability (Scotland) Act 2000.

Devolution

24. Mr. Browne: To ask the Advocate-General what subjects have been raised with her as devolution issues in the context of applications to Scottish criminal courts. [109634]

The Advocate-General for Scotland: Devolution issues raised by the defence in criminal cases have mainly focused on the right to a fair trial which is set out in Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights. Some of the principal matters raised include: the admissibility of evidence; delays in trials; the right to an "independent and impartial tribunal"; prejudicial pre-trial publicity; access to a solicitor; cases under the Road Traffic Acts; and legal aid questions. Devolution issues focusing on other Convention articles have also been raised but less frequently.

Departmental Staff

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Advocate-General for Scotland what plans she has to increase the staffing of her Department. [109636]

The Advocate-General for Scotland: Staffing levels in the Office of the Solicitor to the Advocate-General and my Legal Secretariat are presently under review.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Charities

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the Charity (Accounts and Reports) Regulations 1995. [111907]

Mr. Boateng: A clear framework for charity accounting is important for the public's confidence in the integrity of charity. In general, the 1995 regulations have worked well. I am today publishing a consultation document about how to keep the regulations up to date. The proposed changes reflect the new exposure draft of the Statement of Recommended Practice (SORP) for accounting by charities, as well as proposals for some charities that follow other SORPs. I would welcome views by 30 April.

I have arranged for copies of the consultation document to be placed in the Library.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what level of support will be provided under the new asylum seeker support arrangements. [111908]

Mrs. Roche: Subject to assessment on a case by case basis, the weekly levels of voucher support for asylum seekers under the new arrangements is given in the table:

	Amount of voucher support
Person aged 18–24	28.95
Person aged 25 or over	36.54
Couple	57.37
Lone parent	36.54
Child under 16	26.60
Child 16 or 17	31.75

These amounts will be given in the form of vouchers, £10 of which will be redeemable for cash per person per week.

Stephen Lawrence Inquiry Report

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the first annual report of progress on the implementation of the Action Plan he published in March 1999 as the Government's response to the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry report; and if he will make a statement. [111909]

Mr. Straw: I will publish the first annual report tomorrow. It will set out details of progress made on each of the areas covered by the recommendations of the Inquiry and will identify action still to be taken. It will show that there has been substantial progress across the criminal justice and education systems. But there is much more to be done and it is vital that all the public services covered by the Inquiry's report maintain their determination to deliver the highest standards of service to all members of society regardless of their race.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the measures police forces are taking to ensure that policies and practices formed in response to the Stephen Lawrence inquiry report are being effectively implemented across all ranks. [111318]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will publish tomorrow the first Annual Report on progress on implementation of the Action Plan he published in March 1999 in response to the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry report. This will give details of progress made within the police service to give effect to the Inquiry's recommendations. A key element in ensuring that forces turn policies into action on the ground is the new Ministerial Priority to increase trust and confidence in policing among minority ethnic communities which will provide clear measurement of forces' performance on race equality.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those police forces in England and Wales that are undertaking an examination of their policies and practices to identify institutional racism as recommended by the Stephen Lawrence inquiry report; and if he will make a statement. [111317]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will publish tomorrow the first Annual Report on progress on implementation of the Action Plan he published in March 1999 in response to the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry report. The Action Plan amounts to a comprehensive programme to tackle institutional racism and the annual report will give a detailed picture of the steps which the police service is taking to implement it.

Under the "Dismantling the Barriers" Action Plan he launched in July 1999 to help forces meet the targets my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has set for the recruitment, retention and progression of ethnic minority officers, all forces are required to conduct full race relations/cultural audits which will include surveys across all staff to assess the perception of the treatment of ethnic minority officers and other diversity issues. The aim will be to identify all the elements of the organisational culture and their likely impact on policing a diverse society; and to assess the impact on the recruitment, retention and progression of ethnic minority staff.

Youth Justice

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to implement nationally the youth justice provisions of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 which have been piloted; and if he will make a statement. [111906]

Mr. Straw: Pilots of most of the youth justice provisions of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 have been operating in 10 areas since September 1998. They cover the operation of the multi-agency youth offending teams; the final warning scheme, which will replace cautioning for young offenders; and the reparation order, action plan order, child safety order and parenting order. The pilots have helped to identify good practice in delivering these measures and are being evaluated by a team from Sheffield, Hull and Swansea Universities. A copy of their most recent report, published in December, is in the Library. Building on the experience of the pilots, the Government have decided to implement the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 provisions for youth offending teams on 1 April 2000 and for the final warning scheme and four community-based orders on 1 June 2000.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost to public funds of issue 2 of the Youth Justice Board's newsletter, "Preventing Youth Offending"; and how many copies have been (a) printed and (b) distributed. [111523]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The cost to the public funds of issue 2 of the Youth Justice Board's newsletter "Preventing Youth Offending' was £10,000. 11,000 copies were printed and 10,000 have so far been distributed. One of the Board's tasks is to provide information to professions and the public about the changes being made to the youth justice system. The newsletter is one means of providing that information.

Global Cultural Diversity Congress

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about requests for additional funding for the Global Cultural Diversity Congress. [111905]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 11 January 2000, the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) asked the Home Office for authority to provide funding to enable the Global Cultural Diversity Congress, in Cardiff on 20–23 March to go ahead as planned and subsequently asked for additional funding from the Home Office Vote. This international conference was being organised under the auspices of the CRE following decisions they made in 1998 but by a separate company limited by guarantee, Global Cultural Diversity Congress (GCDC) 2000 Ltd. At the time they first decided to proceed in 1998, it was made clear that the Government could not offer substantial financial support for the Conference.

The Government have supported the aims of the Congress, which was a potentially important forum for serious debate about issues of race and diversity, and was widely welcomed by many with an interest in these issues both in this country and worldwide.

In the light of the CRE request in January this year for Government funding, the Government thought it right to seek advice from independent consultants on the viability of the conference at this late stage, including from forensic accountants who examined the affairs of GCDC 2000 Ltd.

The conclusions of the accountants' report raised serious questions about the quality of the management and financial controls in GCDC 2000 Ltd. as well as confirming that very significant additional funds, in the order of £1.5 million, would be required to enable the Congress to go ahead, not least because less than 500 tickets had been sold for a congress initially planned to attract 2,000.

Given the report's findings, it would not be justifiable to use substantial public funds to support this event. Yesterday, the Directors of the company were advised of the report's findings and our decision. I understand that the Directors of GCDC 2000 Ltd. decided late yesterday to put the company into liquidation.

The decision to set up GCDC 2000 Ltd. was a collective one of the Commissioners for Racial Equality, taken in September 1998. I have asked the incoming Chair of the CRE, Gurbux Singh, to consider urgently the lessons to be learned from all of this and to provide us with a report.

Community Sentences

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate (a) the number of community sentences, (b) the number returned to court as a result of breach proceedings and (c) the number of breach proceedings (i) that were not proven and (ii) where the community sentence was revoked and the offender re-sentenced. [111491]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The available information, taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database, is given in the table.

England and Wales: 1998

	000s
	Number
Offenders given a community sentence[1] for all offences	149,400
Proceedings for a breach of a community sentence[1,2]	28,500
of which:
Sentence given for breach[2]	28,100

[1] Includes probation, supervision, attendance centre, community service, combination and curfew orders.
[2] Statistics as to the proportion found not proven; and the proportion where the breached order is revoked and the offender resentenced are not recorded centrally.

Hendon Police College

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the size of the training intake at Hendon Police College (a) for each of the last three months and (b) in January (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999. [111525]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is given in the table, provided by the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police:

	Intake
(a)
November 1999	94
December 1999	0
January 2000	101
(b)	83
(i) January 1997	83
(ii) January 1998	95
(iii) January 1999	147

Note:
Intakes are five weekly, so some months have no intake

Jury Trial

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implications of the Government's proposals to abolish the right to elect trial by jury. [109646]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Giving the courts rather than defendants the power to decide whether either-way offences should be heard in the Crown Court would reduce delays and secure a more efficient system of justice. Our proposals would be to the benefit of the public, victims and witnesses, but would nevertheless protect the interests of the accused.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the experience of the trial without jury system in Scotland. [109649]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The main difference with the Scottish jury system is that there is no right for the accused to choose trial by jury. The decision on mode of trial is made by Crown Counsel on the recommendation of the procurator fiscal, who has a wide discretion. I am not aware that this has led to any unfairness to defendants in Scotland.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the 20 most common triable either way offences in the past year; and if he will make a statement. [111321]

Mr. Straw: The information is given in the table.

Most common triable either way offences [1]

Offence description	Prosecutions
1. Stealing from shops and stalls	77,914
2. Absconding by person released on bail	45,495

[1] Defined by number of defendants prosecuted at magistrates' courts in 1998

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if any criminal offences related to arson are triable either-way; and if he will make a statement. [111323]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Under the Criminal Damage Act 1971, destruction or damage by fire is charged as arson and is triable either-way. If there is intent to endanger life or recklessness as to whether life would be endangered, the offence must be tried in the Crown Court.

Royal Prerogative

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to bring the exercise of the Royal Prerogative under parliamentary scrutiny. [109655]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: No. With very few exceptions, the Royal Prerogative is exercised only on the advice of Ministers. This provides accountability to Parliament for its exercise.

Freepost Election Mailings

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost to public funds of the freepost election mailing in (a) the 1997 General Election, (b) the Scottish Parliament elections, (c) the Welsh Assembly elections and (d) the Northern Ireland Assembly elections; and what estimate he has made of cost of the freepost mailing he has authorised in the Watford local authority area election. [111521]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The costs to public funds of the free election mailings were as follows:

Election	Cost (£)
1997 General Election	[1]17,770,103.80
Scottish Parliament Elections	[2]4,629,603.05
Welsh Assembly Elections	[2]2,243,929.14
Northern Ireland Assembly Elections	1,083,427.95

[1] At 1997 value
[2] Year at 1999 value

The cost of any freepost facility offered to candidates standing for election to Watford Council would be met by the Council itself. The Council estimate that this would be in the region of £6,500.

European Crime Convention

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the situation concerning negotiations on the draft European Convention on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters. [111488]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The European Union Mutual Legal Assistance Convention has been under negotiation since 1996, and is intended to enhance existing arrangements for co-operation between member states' judicial and prosecuting authorities for the purposes of criminal investigations and proceedings. The negotiations have been complicated, and, throughout, the Scrutiny Committees of both Houses have been kept fully informed of progress. Although a number of specific provisions have cleared scrutiny, the Convention itself remains subject to Parliamentary scrutiny.

Work has continued to agree outstanding matters, and I understand that the opinion of the European Parliament on the draft text has now been issued, and is to be considered.

At the meeting of Council on 2–3 December 1999, Ministers agreed that at the Council meeting on 27 March 2000, an attempt should be made to complete work on the Convention. My officials will remain in contact with the scrutiny committees.

Secure Training Centres

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list incidents that have occurred and been reported at (a) Medway, (b) Rainsbrook and (c) Hassockfield secure training centres since each facility opened; on what occasions contract failures have occurred at each facility; and what financial penalties have been incurred by the operators. [110455]

Mr. Boateng: The secure training centre at Medway opened on 17 April 1998, Rainsbrook opened on 1 July 1999 and Hassockfield opened on 17 September 1999.

The total number of incidents which have occurred and been reported since each facility opened are 1,513 at Medway; 497 at Rainsbrook and 612 at Hassockfield. These reportable incidents cover any occurrence which disturbs the normal operation of any part of the centre and range from a trainee refusing to go to his bedroom or do his chores, to acts of concerted indiscipline.

The contracts set out the performance measurements applying to specified services to be delivered by the Contractor, and the performance penalty points to be incurred for failure to deliver each of these services. If the Contractor reaches a specified level of performance penalty points, further points result in reductions in the payments made to the Contractor up to a maximum of 5 per cent. of the contract price in any year. The number of occasions on which performance points have been awarded for each contract is as follows:

Medway—175;

Rainsbrook—8; and

Hassockfield—29.

A full list of reported incidents and of contract failures can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The contracts additionally provide for financial penalties to be imposed for failure by the Contractor to meet the scheduled opening date and for any subsequent non-availability of trainee places. To date, financial penalties of £663,240 have been incurred by the operator at Medway, £155,152 at Rainsbrook and £44,890 at Hassockfield.

Mr. Ben James

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated (a) total legal cost to the Government and (b) cost of administration by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, to date, for proceedings related to the immigration case of Mr. Ben James; and if he will make a statement. [111322]

Mrs. Roche: The information that the hon. Member requires is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Racism

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been for racially aggravated offences under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998; what percentage of these prosecutions involved defendants who were not white; and if he will make a statement. [111320]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information available centrally indicates that 745 persons were prosecuted in magistrates courts in England and Wales for racially aggravated offences between October 1998 and June 1999. It is not possible centrally to identify those defendants that were not white.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures have been taken in the Metropolitan Police Service to ensure proper communication between uniform and CID officers in relation to serious racist crime. [111103]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me that his principal specialist organisations in the systems for the investigation of racist crime are the Racial and Violent Crime Task Force and Borough-based Community Safety Units. All are staffed by both uniform and Criminal Investigation Department (CID) officers. In addition, a range of measures are in place throughout the Metropolitan police to ensure that all officers, both CID and uniform, involved in the investigation of racist crime work together using corporate documentation and methods.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers of each rank have received anti-racism training; and how many of these have achieved minimum effective training levels. [111105]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office manages a three year contract with a specialist consultant to deliver community and race relations training to the police, and it is expected that 1,760 officers will have been trained under the terms of this contract by the end of February. A breakdown of these officers in terms of rank is not available. This training incorporates the applicable Minimum Effective Training Level. Other anti-racism training is carried out in forces and by National Police Training, particularly for probationer constables: the total number of officers who have received such training during their careers is not recorded centrally.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training has been provided to Victim Support volunteer visitors on providing appropriate support for ethnic minority victims of racist crime. [110282]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Victim Support is an independent national charity which receives a substantial Home Office grant each year for its work in supporting victims of, and witnesses to, crime. Current grant conditions require Victim Support to continue to review how their work affects ethnic minorities, taking into account the recommendations of the Macpherson Report.

Responsibility for the operational implementation of these requirements rests with Victim Support.

I understand from the Chief Executive that Victim Support issued guidance to volunteers on racist crime in 1991 and 1996. And, following the Macpherson Inquiry, specialist training for volunteers dealing with racist incidents is to be developed and the general training for all volunteers is to be updated to include training on cultural diversity.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been disciplined for using racist words or behaviour; how many have been dismissed following disciplinary action for such offences; and how many such disciplinary cases have been dismissed, since 1 April 1999. [110369]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The statistics of police misconduct cases in England and Wales for the 12 months from 1 April 1999 are not yet available.

Rowe and Davis Case

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he plans to take following the judgment of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Rowe and Davis. [111495]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The powers of the Home Secretary to refer alleged miscarriages of justice to the Court of Appeal were replaced in 1997 by new powers vested in the Criminal Cases Review Commission, which is now responsible for the investigation of cases of alleged wrongful conviction. The Commission referred the cases of Rowe and Davis to the Court of Appeal on 7 April 1999, in the exercise of its powers under section 9 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1995. It will be for the Court to decide in due course whether their convictions should be quashed.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he plans to take following the judgment of the House of Lords in the case of Rowe and Davis. [111494]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Michael Davis and Raphael Rowe were convicted, on 26 February 1990, of murder, assault occasioning actual bodily harm and three counts of robbery. Their appeal against conviction was dismissed by the Court of Appeal on 29 July 1993, and an application to the Court of Appeal for leave to appeal to the House of Lords was refused on 30 September 1993. However, the Criminal Cases Review Commission referred their cases to the Court of Appeal on 7 April 1999, in the exercise of its powers under section 9 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1995. It will be for the Court to decide in due course whether their convictions should be quashed.

Coroners

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the terms of reference and timetable of his review of coroners. [111524]

Mr. Boateng: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced on 1 February 2000, Official Report, columns 907–919, one of the actions being taken in the light of the Shipman trial is an urgent review of death certification procedures and the checks undertaken before cremation and burial. The work of this review is to be made available to the Inquiry chaired by Lord Laming of Tewin which is due to report in the autumn.

The death certification review will also consider whether there should be a role for coroners in monitoring the proper procedures after death. Coroner arrangements may consequently need to be considered more widely in due course.

Mr. Hector Harvey

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2000, Official Report, Column 49W, how many and which crimes Mr. Hector Harvey has pleaded guilty to that were committed since 5 August 1998 and which of these were committed (a) while in police custody and (b) whilst temporarily released from police custody; and if he will make a statement. [111648]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me that Mr. Hector Harvey was arrested on 3 August 1998 for armed robbery. He has remained in custody from that date and has committed no offences in the intervening period.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2000, Official Report, column 49W, (a) under what powers, (b) for what duration and (c) for what purpose Hector Harvey was given temporary release from the custody of the CIB and Metropolitan Police; and if he will make a statement. [111647]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me that since he was arrested on 3 August 1998 for armed robbery, Mr. Hector Harvey has not been released from police custody.

Magistrates

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department takes to keep magistrates informed of legislative changes proposed by the Government. [109647]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Both the lay and professional branches of the magistracy are consulted by this department in relation to changes to the criminal justice system which would affect the work of the magistrates' courts.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent he intends that the Welsh Assembly will be empowered (a) to make decisions and (b) to implement regulations in respect of the release of information by local authorities that is at variance with guidance provided to English local authorities on information disclosure. [110646]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Freedom of Information Bill would apply to public authorities, including local authorities, in Wales in the same way as to those in England.

There are no provisions under the Bill for the Welsh Assembly to make regulations or issue guidance. There are no plans at present for regulations under, or guidance relating to the Freedom of Information Bill to be varied for different parts of the United Kingdom.

Young Offenders

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juvenile remand prisoners and young adult remand prisoners are held in doubled-up cells in (a) Feltham Young Offenders Institution and (b) other young offenders institutions in England; and what were the numbers during 1999. [110958]

Mr. Boateng: The Prison Service does not collect centrally information to show the level of overcrowding separately for the remand population or for juveniles.

Information in the table gives the average monthly number of prisoners held two to a cell designed for one in Feltham and all other young offenders institutions in England during 1999.

Establishments are categorised by their main function only and the most recent data for December are provisional and subject to validation by prisons.

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of young offenders in Staffordshire who have committed (a) five offences or more, (b) 10 offences or more, (c) 20 offences or more and (d) 50 offences or more; and if he will make a statement. [110732]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The exact information requested is not held centrally.

However, we do have the total number of convictions for recordable offences relating to persistent young offenders convicted of one or more recordable offences in 1998. 239 were sentenced on one or more occasions following apprehension by Staffordshire Police. Of these, 69 had been sentenced for a total of between five and nine recordable offences, 107 had been sentenced for between 10 and 19 recordable offences, 49 had been sentenced for between 20 and 49 recordable offences, and six had been sentenced for 50 or more recordable offences. The remaining eight individuals had been sentenced for four recordable offences each.

Special Constables (Staffordshire)

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) civilians and (b) special constables have been employed by the Staffordshire Police in each of the last five years. [110734]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The strength of the civilians and special constables employed by Staffordshire Police in each of the last five years is recorded in the table.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers transferred from the Metropolitan Police to other forces in 1999. [110905]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me that 225 officers transferred from the Metropolitan Police to other forces in 1999.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations in the Metropolitan Police area reduced the hours which they are open to the public in 1997, 1998 and 1999. [111489]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me this information is not recorded centrally, and could not be obtained from local records because of the extensive reorganisation in the period concerned.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications by officers in the Metropolitan Police to retire on medical grounds were approved in 1999. [110971]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me that 316 officers retired from the Metropolitan Police due to ill health during 1999.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average length of service of police officers in the Metropolitan Police in 1999. [110904]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me that the average length of service of police officers in the Metropolitan Police, as at July 1999, was 14.5 years.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the (a) length of service and (b) age profile of police officers serving in the Metropolitan Police. [110970]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is given in the tables, provided by the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, and represents the position as at 31 January 2000.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in the Metropolitan Police have applications to retire on the grounds of ill health outstanding; and how many such officers are (a) on full pay, (b) on half pay and (c) off pay. [110954]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me that a total of 47 officers are currently awaiting ill health retirement. Thirty-nine are on full pay, six are on half pay and two are off pay.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers resigned from the Metropolitan Police in 1999. [110978]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police informs me that 347 officers resigned from the Metropolitan Police in 1999.

Police Pensions

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the percentage of revenue budget apportioned to the payment of police pensions for each police authority in England and Wales for 1999–2000. [110903]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is set out in the table.

Prisoners (Tariff Date)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many current prisoners have (a) reached and (b) exceeded their tariff date; and if he will make a statement. [110847]

Mr. Boateng: On 31 January, 2000, a total of 4,407 life sentence prisoners and detainees at Her Majesty's pleasure were held in custody. Of these, approximately 1,400 had reached or exceeded their tariff expiry date.

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110723]

Mr. Straw: The Home Office Greening Operations Policy includes a statement that slow renewables such as peat should be replaced by organic wastes such as coir, manure, leaf mould and bark. The Home Office Procurement Manual also states that peat free composts should be used.

Police Recruitment

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to attract more recruits to the police force. [111033]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Elmet (Mr. Burgon), on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 172–74W.

Casino Staff

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff working in casinos were consulted in the preparation of the draft regulatory impact assessment on the proposal to extend casino opening hours; what their responses were; and if he will place in the Library a summary of their views. [111312]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Before publishing the draft regulatory impact assessment (RIA) in November 1999, we did not ourselves consult casino staff directly, but the draft did take account of the British Casino Association's forecast of likely staff reaction. The publication of the draft has provided an opportunity for staff themselves to comment, and a number have done so. We have received about 3,000 representations opposing the change, mostly from staff and interested unions, and are now considering them. If we decide to proceed with the deregulation order proposal, we shall publish with it a final RIA, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who applied for licences PPL 170 04972 and PPL 170 04956 under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; [110987]

(2) in respect of Paragraph 5.13 of the Minutes of the Animal Procedures Committee of 13 October 1999, for what reasons animals suffering from convulsions are treated as not requiring intervention; [111048]

(3) if he will make a statement on the use of animals in procedures aimed at identifying people who could be targeted for smoking cessation programmes; [110989]

(4) for what reason it was concluded that animal experimentation is justified under licences PPL 70/04972 and PPL 70/04956; [111015]

(5) pursuant to his answer of 10 February 2000, Official Report, column 258W, if he will make a statement on paragraph 5:11 of the Minutes of the Animal Procedures Committee of 13 October 1999; [111083]

(6) in respect of paragraph 5:7 of the Minutes of the Animal Procedures Committee of 13 October 1999, what information beyond that gained over the past 30 years is expected to be realised by licences PPL 70/04972 and PPL 70/04956; [111013]

(7) what weight he gave to the views of members of the Animal Procedures Committee opposed to the granting of applications PPL 170 04972 and PPL 170 04956 before deciding to authorise these. [110988]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 21 February 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 10 February 2000, Official Report, columns 257–58W.

Project licences are only issued for legitimate purposes under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 after the likely benefits (to man, animals or the environment) have been weighed against the costs to the animals involved. Any alternatives which replace animal use, reduce the number of animals needed or refine the experimental design to minimise suffering must be employed. In the cases of these two project licences, the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate and the Animal Procedures Committee have both advised that the use of animals can be fully justified.

The Animal Procedures Committee gave careful consideration to these applications, most recently on 13 October. The views of all members as well as its overall advice was taken into account in reaching my conclusion.

The minutes of this meeting show at paragraph 5:7 that the issue of smoking research during the last 30 years was raised. The Government have a firm policy of not granting applications to research tobacco products. Such research is an entirely different matter from research into chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. The benefits of the information gained through the use of newly available molecular biology will be a better understanding of the resulting condition, the ability to identify those most at risk of developing these conditions, and the development of new and improved treatments. The identification of people for possible smoking cessation programmes was given as only one possible example of the likely benefits of the work. It did not feature as a major reason for approving either of the applications and is considered to be nothing more than an incidental benefit which, if it were to be considered in isolation, would not have justified the issue of licenses.

Paragraphs 5:11 and 5:13 of the minutes discuss some aspects of the applications. My previous statement that the animals are not expected to suffer convulsive spasms is correct. Reference to "convulsions" was made as this adverse effect is routinely included on the standard scoring system for assessing distress levels at the establishment where the work is to be performed. Such adverse effects seldom occur in isolation from other signs of distress and I am assured that they are not expected to occur at all in the context of these projects. The reference to scoring "normal" is, therefore, misleading. The Committee minutes make reference to the administration of spasmogens which are substances that may induce bronchospasm (wheezing). I am told that these will not cause convulsions or seizures mediated through the central nervous system and the reference to "convulsions" was subsequently removed from the application.

Section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 prohibits me from naming the applicants.

Court Transcripts

Mrs. Fiona Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make court transcripts available via the Internet. [111223]

Jane Kennedy: I have been asked to reply.

There are currently no plans for making court transcripts available via the internet. Current court reporting equipment does not allow for automatic production of authorised transcripts and the cost of placing this information on the internet would outweigh any benefits gained from doing so.

DEFENCE

Army Trade Training

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the (a) contractual and (b) funding difficulties limiting the Army Training and Recruiting Agency's ability to provide trade training for vehicle mechanics; [109739]

(2) what assessment he has made of whether the contracts let for trade training by the Army Training and Recruiting Agency contain sufficient flexibility to respond to changes in demand within the contract period. [109740]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The Army Training and Recruiting Agency has had no specific contractual difficulties that have limited its ability to provide trade training for vehicle mechanics. The contracts in place for this and other trade training are sufficiently flexible to allow for changes to the requirement to be made within the contract period, subject, of course, to appropriate negotiations between the contractor and the customer. There have been some difficulties in aligning available funding with the required outputs in time to produce the necessary changes to throughput in any one year. However, changes to the budget structure from this year will give the Agency greater control over this process.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers based at Bordon were waiting for trade training on (a) 1 February 2000, (b) 1 October 1999, (c) 1 April 1999, (d) 1 October 1998, (e) 1 April 1998, (f) 1 October 1997, (g) 1 April 1997, (h) 1 October 1996 and (i) 1 April 1995. [109736]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The information is not available prior to 30 April 1997. The figures requested, since that date, are as follows:

Date	Soldiers awaiting trade training
1 February 2000	154
1 October 1999	234
1 April 1999	140
1 October 1998	259
1 April 1998	189
1 October 1997	283
30 April 1997	207

These numbers represent a "snap shot" on the date in question. Numbers will vary throughout the year, but tend to be particularly high in October when students passing out from the Army Apprentice College the previous month are awaiting allocation to courses.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the (a) financial provision and (b) expenditure by the Army Training and Recruiting Agency on trade training for the School of Electrical and Mechanical Engineering at Bordon in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [109735]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 14 February 2000]: The information requested is as follows:

Financial year	Financial provision at current (1999–2000) prices	Actual expenditure at current (1999–2000) prices
1994–95	17,497	17,298
1995–96	15,489	15,755
1996–97	17,649	18,106
1997–98	15,579	15,991
1998–99	14,681	15,248

The downward trend over the last three years is as a result of efficiencies introduced by the ATRA, which was formed in 1996. The slight overspends against provision were accommodated within the Agency's overall provision.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what increases in funding for the Army Training and Recruiting Agency to cover trade training have been requested; and what was the response. [109737]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 14 February 2000]: All training conducted by the Army Training and Recruiting Agency is subject to review and the outcome is taken into account in the annual planning rounds. This process is being undertaken at present and no decisions have been made.

Defence Export Services Organisation (Jakarta)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff are employed at the Defence Export Sales Organisation's branch office in Jakarta; and if the office closed during the period of the EU arms embargo on Indonesia. [109853]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Export Services Organisation currently employs one UK-based civil servant in the British Embassy in Jakarta as the First Secretary (Defence Supply). There is also one locally engaged driver. The First Secretary post was filled during the period of the EU embargo, but had no role in the support of marketing and sales by British defence companies in Indonesia during that period.

Armed Forces (Morale)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he has in place to increase morale in the armed forces. [110593]

Mr. Spellar: We know that morale on operations, where personnel are doing what they joined up to do, is generally good. Our 'Policy for People' has introduced a series of measures designed to aid morale in the armed forces. We have reduced commitments where possible, thereby easing overstretch. We have made it easier for personnel deployed on operations to keep in touch with their families back home. The Service Families Task Force is addressing problems caused by the mobility of Service families. The 'Learning Forces' initiative is ensuring that personnel have access to modern learning facilities—both at home and when they are on operations. And we have again accepted in full the recommendations of the Pay Review Bodies on pay for the armed forces.

Aircraft Crashes

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF aircraft and helicopters have crashed during (a) operational flying and (b) non-operational flying in each year from 1989 to date, stating in each case (i) the aircraft involved, (ii) the flight task being undertaken, (iii) the reason for loss of the aircraft and (iv) how many crew members (x) died and (y) sustained serious injury, and (v) what compensation was paid; and if he will make a statement. [111349]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Dangerous Substances

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the (i) explosives and (ii) other substances currently licensed under the Dangerous Substances in Harbour Areas Regulations 1987 at Loch Straven in Argyll and (b) applications for explosives and substances licences currently under consideration for this area stating which substances or explosives they relate to. [111529]

Mr. Spellar: A single licence is held by the NATO Oil Fuel Depot Loch Striven under the Dangerous Substances in Harbour Areas Regulations 1987. This licence sets the limit for the quantity of explosives or munitions that can be held on board a vessel while alongside the jetty. One of the terms of this licence is that explosives or munitions shall not be loaded, unloaded or otherwise handled and shall remain on board the vessel for the duration of the time that the vessel is at the Depot.

The licence is granted by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and to meet operational requirements, an application was made on 12 July 1999 to the HSE to increase the limit granted under the licence from 80,000 kilograms to 160,000 kilograms. Following a preliminary survey by the HSE, it has been agreed that the limit of the licence will be increased to 110,000 kilograms.

Cluster Bombs

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what were the (a) types and (b) quantities of cluster bombs used during the trials at Luce Bay in 1999; [111074]

(2) on what dates in 1999 were live cluster bombs used in trials at Luce Bay; [111075]

(3) what was the purpose of the trials using live cluster bombs at Luce Bay in 1999. [111076]

Mr. Spellar: The type of cluster bomb used during the trials at Luce Bay in 1999 was the 600lb RBL 755 version. A total of 52 bombs were used of which 40 were inert and 12 were live. The live bombs were dropped on 6 and 7 April 1999. The purpose of the trials was to evaluate the performance of the bombs in response to an Urgent Operational Requirement, in direct support of UK participation in the NATO action in Kosovo. To evaluate the performance of this weapon it was necessary to release them under a range of conditions, e.g. height, speed, altitude and from different aircraft types. This required a number of weapons to achieve all these parameters. While most of these conditions could be met using the available supply of inert bombs it was necessary to use some live variants to complete the series of trials. Although these weapons contained live bomblets, they were configured so that they were not deployed during flight and entered the water intact.

Iraq

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total cost to the Exchequer of the military operations against Iraq (i) in Operation Desert Fox and (ii) since the end of Operation Desert Fox. [110697]

Mr. Hoon: The information required on the total cost of Operation Desert Fox cannot be reliably differentiated from the overall costs of military operations in the Gulf which for the financial year 1998–99 were £35 million. Costs for the current financial year are estimated to be in the region of £33 million.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many precision-guided weapons have been used by the UK in Iraq (a) in Operation Desert Fox and (b) since the end of Operation Desert Fox; and what was their total cost in each case. [110698]

Mr. Hoon: During Operation Desert Fox the RAF dropped 52 precision-guided weapons at a total cost of £2.12 million. Since then and up to 9 February 2000 the RAF have dropped 136 precision-guided weapons at a total cost of £5.464 million.

Overseas Territories

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent the Governments of the overseas territories provide (a) equipment and (b) funding for their own defence. [110673]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 17 February 2000]: I have been asked to reply.

We are committed to guaranteeing the defence of our Overseas Territories. This was reiterated in the Strategic Defence Review of July 1998 and is reflected in the deployments of HM Forces. Four Territories also make provision from their own budget for a locally-recruited defence force:

(i) The Bermuda Defence Force has sufficient equipment for a battalion-sized group. Its budget for 1999–2000 is $4.2 Bermuda million (£1 = $1.60 Bermuda).

(ii) The Falkland Islands Defence Force is equipped to provide an infantry company and has a defined operational role. Provisional outturn for the year 1998–99 was £405,000. In addition the Falkland Islands Government provide some support services to the British garrison free of charge.

(iii) The Gibraltar Government contributed £35,500 towards the pay of the territorial element of the Gibraltar Defence Force for 1999–2000.

(iv) The Montserrat Government contributed £38,000 to the budget of the Royal Montserrat Defence Force for 1998–99.

Departmental Expenditure

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes will be made to his Department's budget, departmental expenditure and Operating Cost limits for 1999–2000. [108701]

Mr. Hoon [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 2000, c. 677]: I regret that there was an error in the information given. A technical error of £0.479 million was made in calculating the MOD's supplementary requirements and, subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class VI Vote 1 Defence for 1999–2000, the figures are now as follows:

(a) The overall limit increase will be increased by £583.803 million, from £22,283.085 million to £22,866.888 million.

(b) The Ministry of Defence Departmental Expenditure Limit will be increased by £582.421 million from £22,280.341 million to £22,862.762 million.

(c) The Ministry of Defence Operating Cost limit increase remains at £778.972 million from £15,918.341 million to £16,697.313 million.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Qualifications

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of children in LEA and LEA-supported schools achieved (a) five GCSE A to C grades, (b) level 2 or above at Key Stage 1, (c) level 4 or above at Key Stage 2, (d) levels 5, 6 or above at Key Stage 3 in each of the three years (i) in the city of Newcastle, and (ii) in England; and what the average figure was in each category in each of these years for metropolitan authorities outside London. [111051]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested is given in the five tables:

*(a) The percentage of 16 year olds who achieved 5 or more GCSE grades A -C in LEA and LEA-supported schools in England in the last three years were:

Percentage

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
(i) City of Newcastle	31.6	31.0	33.6

Free School Meals (Newcastle upon Tyne)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of children received free school meals in LEA and LEA-supported schools in the city of Newcastle upon Tyne from 1995 to 2000. [111058]

Ms Estelle Morris: The available information is shown in the table.

Numbers and percentage of pupils who receive, or are known to be eligible for free school meals in maintained schools[1] in the local education authority area of Newcastle upon Tyne: 1995–2000a

Newcastle upon Tyne	1999	1998	1997	1996	[2]1995
Number on roll	40,473	40,745	41,064	41,182	41,221

Percentage of pupils who are known to be eligible for free meals	32	33	35	36	36

[1] Includes maintained nursery, primary, middle, secondary, pupil referral units and maintained and non-maintained special schools.
[2] Excludes dually registered pupils educated in special schools who are otherwise included in the January 1996–99 figures.

Employment Zones

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements he has made to appoint contractors to run the remaining four employment zones. [111904]

Mr. Blunkett: Further to my announcement on 23 November 1999 of the previous 11 Zones, I am pleased to inform the House that the following organisations have been successful, subject to post-tender negotiations in their bids to run the four remaining Employment Zones. In Doncaster, Reed in Partnership has been successful, in North West Wales the North West Wales Partnership has been successful, in Nottingham City the Nottingham Employment Zone Partnership has been successful and in Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland, Working Links have been successful.

GCSE Syllabus

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the (a) subjects and (b) syllabuses he intends to remove from the approved list for examinational GCSE giving the reasons for each decision. [111144]

Mr. Wicks: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) is working with the awarding bodies to develop advice to the Department on the list of titles to be offered at GCSE in 2001. No decisions have been reached at this stage. If proposals are made to remove titles from the approved list, QCA will seek the views of teacher organisations, schools and colleges and appropriate subject organisations before submitting final recommendations.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on action he is taking to encourage equal opportunities in further and higher education. [110370]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 21 February 2000]: If we are to improve our international competitiveness and create a truly inclusive society, it is important that we ensure equality of opportunity in all sectors of education and training.

We made clear in the Learning and Skills Council Prospectus that we want the Council to ensure that high quality opportunities are available to meet the needs of all learners across the range of abilities and aptitudes, including the very able. We will expect the Council to build equality of opportunity into all its policies, programmes and actions, working closely with key equality organisations including the Equal Opportunities Commission, the Commission for Racial Equality and the Disability Rights Commission which is being set up in April 2000.

In November, we asked the Higher Education Funding Council for England to ensure that all higher education institutions have equal opportunities statements and they are accountable for their full and proper implementation. We placed particular emphasis on seeing that institutions make progress on racial equality for staff.

We are determined to make increased participation by people who have been traditionally under-represented a priority for the expansion of post-secondary education, which is receiving record levels of funding.

Higher Education (Disabled Persons)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements he will put in place for the resolution of disputes over issues concerned with the provision of educational services to disabled persons in further and higher education. [110400]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 21 February 2000]: We have said that we will respond positively to the recommendations in the report of the Disability Rights Task force for legislation to secure civil rights for disabled people in further and higher education and in LEA—secured adult education. We will consult shortly on the contents of legislation and on implementation issues, including rights of redress.

New Deal

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many long-term unemployed people living within the Greater London area have benefited from the New Deal measures since their introduction. [107290]

Ms Jowell: Up to November 1999, 59,700 young people and 42,850 long-term unemployed adults have benefited from entry to the New Deals in the Greater London area since these initiatives started in 1998. It is a measure of the success of the Government's Welfare to Work policies that 22,300 young people and 6,320 adults in London have found jobs through the New Deals. The remainder are benefiting from the help that the Personal Adviser can offer. This includes help with barriers to employment, access to specialist help and, training, education and work experience opportunities.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide a breakdown by destination of those who have left each New Deal scheme in Cumbria between the start of each scheme and up to the latest date for which figures are available. [109287]

Ms Jowell: Between January 1998 and November 1999, 2,702 people left the New Deal for Young People in Cumbria. Of these

1,281 left for unsubsidised employment

380 transferred to another benefit

514 left for another known reason

527 left for an unknown destination.

A recent survey showed that 57 per cent. of young people leaving the New Deal gateway for unknown destinations, had found a job.

Between July 1998 and November 1999, 1,514 people left the New Deal for long-term unemployed people aged 25+ in Cumbria. Of these

238 left for unsubsidised employment

206 transferred to another benefit

50 left for another known reason

116 left for an unknown destination

903 continued their normal jobseeking activity.

Between October 1998 and November 1999, 325 people left the New Deal for Lone Parents in Cumbria. Of these

149 went into employment

8 transferred to another benefit

39 were no longer eligible for income support

17 declined to join the caseload

106 withdrew for other reasons

6 left for an unknown destination.

Exclusions

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total number of pupils excluded from schools in England in each of the last three years; and what is the total number of ethnic minority pupils excluded from schools. [111104]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is shown in the table.

Number of permanent exclusion, by ethnic group from schools in England [1]: 1995–96 to 1997–98

Year	Number of permanent exclusions [2]	Number of ethnic minority permanent exclusions
1995–96	12,476	2,196
1996–97	12,668	2,113
1997–98	12,298	1,995

[1] Includes Maintained Primary, Secondary, Special and Non Maintained Special Schools

[2] Includes some pupils who were unclassified according to ethnic group

Further Education

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to encourage young people to stay in further education. [110591]

Mr. Wicks: The Government want to see all young people staying in learning until 18 and beyond as part of its lifelong strategy. We have injected the biggest ever investment into Further Education to support the expansion of places. We recently announced the Connexions Strategy and Connexions Service to bring together a number of initiatives to secure greater participation by young people. We are also piloting Education Maintenance Allowances for young people in 15 areas, and we will consider extending them nationally if they are successful.

Primary and Secondary Pupils (SSAs)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will state (a) the primary school per pupil Standard Spending Assessment and (b) the secondary school per pupil Standard Spending Assessment for each English local education authority in 1999–2000 and 2000–01; and how many pupils (i) attract such Standard Spending Assessment and (ii) receive free school meals in each school sector and local education authority for the same years. [111352]

Ms Estelle Morris: I will place a table in the Library that shows the Standard Spending Assessment per primary pupil and per secondary pupil for each English local education authority in 1999–2000 and 2000–01. The number of primary pupils and secondary pupils used in calculating the Standard Spending Assessment for each local education authority for the same years is also given in the table. We are unable to provide for each sector the number of primary and secondary pupils who receive free school meals: the table therefore lists the proportion of children under 18 who are entitled to free school meals.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many 18 to 24-year-olds have started the New Deal scheme in Shrewsbury and Atcham, broken down into (a) New Deal Options and (b) other destinations. [110128]

Ms Jowell: In the period to the end of November 1999, 321 young people had joined New Deal in the Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency. The following shows the breakdown requested:

	Number
People joining a New Deal option:
Employment	14
Full-time education/training	46
Voluntary sector	46
Environment task force	50
Total	156
People leaving from New Deal:
Unsubsidised employment	96
Other destinations:
Other benefits	9
Other known destination	31
Not known	67
Total	213

We know from a recent survey that many of those who left for unknown destinations will have found work.

Ofsted Reports

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the local education authorities in respect of which Ofsted has expressed serious concern. [111575]

Ms Estelle Morris: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

School Meals

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each local education authority the average price of school meals in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [110702]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not collected centrally. Under education legislation, it is up to local education authorities, and schools with delegated budgets for school meals, to decide what price to charge.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of the total workforce in his Department is of ethnic minority origin; and what steps he is taking to encourage the employment of people from the ethnic minorities in his Department. [102736]

Mr. Wills: The percentage of the work force in my Department who, at 1 April 1999, declared themselves to be of ethnic minority origin is 8.3 per cent.

My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office set out in her reply of 16 December 1999, Official Report, column 264W, corporate action that we are taking to encourage the employment of people from ethnic minority communities. We are developing a comprehensive outreach strategy which, for example includes contacting all organisations that help people from ethnic minorities into employment and establishing what further steps we should be taking to attract and retain people from ethnic minority backgrounds, this includes:

Marketing the Department to applicants from ethnic minority communities by placing adverts in ethnic press; taking part in recruitment fairs aimed at ethnic minority graduates and undergraduates; and also making contact with over 100 ethnic minority organisations to research the barriers that prevent people from ethnic minority backgrounds joining the civil service.

In June 1998 the Department appointed a Senior Equal Opportunities Adviser from outside the Department to work with staff and advise the Board on how to take forward equal opportunities in the Department.

Moreover, in July 1999, we published a Race Equality Action Plan—"Race Equality in DfEE: Our Targets for the Future". This sets out targets for representation at senior management level (Grade 7 and above) grades in the Department. It includes action to improve the recruitment, career progression and retention of ethnic minority staff.

The launch of a unique and high profile secondment/exchange initiative—aimed to encourage experienced, senior ethnic minority managers from other organisations to join us on secondments or exchanges. The initial response to this national exercise was high. We will currently be shortlisting the names of successful candidates from the first tranche of applicants and the first successful candidate will start his post on 10 January 2000.

By providing opportunities for students to work with us on short term placement, for example we have increased the number of Windsor Fellowship graduates that we sponsor. The Department will continue to take measures which increase the numbers of people from ethnic minorities who are recruited, retained and promoted in the organisation.

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of the total workforce in his Department is registered as disabled; and what steps he is taking to encourage the employment of disabled people in his Department. [102047]

Ms Hodge: The percentage of the work force in my Department who have identified themselves as having a disability under the definition contained in the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 is 6 per cent.

Our recruitment strategy includes contacting all organisations that help people with disabilities into employment. We are examining what other steps we should take to attract people with disabilities in recruitment exercises.

My Department has for a number of years used the Disability Symbol on all recruitment exercises. This employment initiative guarantees a person with a disability an interview as long as they meet the minimum criteria for that particular recruitment exercise. We are also members of the SCOPE fast track programme which provides personal development training and work placements for graduate level people with disabilities.

In addition, as part of the Department's Equal Opportunities Strategy, an Advisory Group for People with Disabilities was established in 1996. This group advises the DfEE Board on any issue which affects people with disabilities including recruitment, retention and awareness raising.

My Department will continue to take measures to increase the numbers of people with disabilities who are recruited and to ensure that the retention of people with disabilities is a priority within the organisation.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Stakeholder Pensions

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the tax regime for stakeholder pensions. [111928]

Mr. Darling: Our proposals for the stakeholder pension tax regime were well received when we announced these in September 1999. We are grateful for all of the constructive responses, which we have considered carefully.

I am placing in the Library a copy of a document: "Stakeholder Pensions: Details of The Tax Regime And Draft Finance Bill Clauses". This outlines a number of key decisions on the tax regime and draft Finance Bill clauses to implement these.

Stakeholder pensions are intended to fill the gap for many people who can afford to save for their retirement but do not currently have a suitable means of doing so. From April 2001 there will be a new single tax regime for stakeholder and personal pensions. Retirement savers currently excluded from taking out personal pensions will then be able to do so, enabling:

people taking career breaks, for example mature students and carers, to take out a stakeholder pension and benefit from the tax relief it attracts;

self employed people on low earnings to receive more tax relief on their pension contributions; costs to be kept down so that pension savers can be offered low cost, good value stakeholder products.

The main aspects of the tax regime for stakeholder pensions confirmed today are:

stakeholder pensions will be part of a radically reformed and much simplified tax regime for all defined contributions pensions; contributions up to £3,600 each tax year can be made irrespective of earnings. Higher level contributions can be made under the existing personal pension age and earnings related limits and can continue for up to five years after earnings have ceased or reduced;

all contributions from individuals will be paid net of basis rate tax with the pension provider reclaiming that tax from the Inland Revenue; employers' money purchase schemes may opt onto this new tax regime;

new and simpler rules will replace the existing personal pension "carry forward/carry back" rules;

10 per cent. of the pension contribution can be used for life assurance;

tax relief for waiver of pension contributions insurance will be simplified and broadened to circumstances other than ill-health, such as unemployment; shares from an approved employee share scheme can, within the contribution limits, be put into the pension and attract tax relief;

contributors must be resident in UK unless serving or the spouse or someone serving, abroad and undertaking "Crown duties";

simplification will be introduced into the administrative arrangements for DC pensions—for example, electronic and telephone applications will be permitted and various information requirements relaxed;

the rules regarding benefits are being altered to allow phased vesting from within a single arrangement. This technical change will ease administration for new and existing PP providers.

We have decided that stakeholder contributions should not be made if an individual is also contributing to a defined occupational scheme—ie so called "full concurrency" will not be allowed. We are however inviting employers representatives and bodies representing the pensions industry to bring forward any ideas they have which will, through some limited form of concurrency, help moderate earners to increase their pension provision.

Benefits

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what measures his Department uses to gauge the effectiveness of moneys spent in (a) Scotland and (b) the UK on (i) reducing benefit fraud and (ii) increasing the uptake of benefit entitlements; and what assessment he has made of their effectiveness in each year between 1992–93 and 1998–99; [111165]

(2) how much was spent on (a) reducing benefit fraud and (b) increasing the uptake of benefits in (i) Scotland and (ii) the UK for each financial year between 1992–93 and 1998–99. [111168]

Mr. Rooker: In the past each agency and local authority was responsible for its own operational plans for countering fraud. Apart from Fraud investigations, the costs of most anti-fraud activities were not separately identified. However, the Benefits Agency has had a national security and control programme since 1995. The figures in the table show the funding for the Security Control programme since its introduction.

£ million

	Actual security control programme funding	Total funding including benefit fraud investigation service and benefit agency security investigation service
1995–96	106.5	182.6
1996–97	164	263.7
1997–98	246	336
1998–99	264	379.5
Total	780	1,161.8

However, this system had numerous flaws. In particular instead of a single goal, there was a series of centrally set targets, which failed to give staff a clear view of the overall outcome wanted. We have now replaced this with a single target. Our Public Service Agreement commits us to reduce by 30 per cent. benefit losses from fraud and errors in Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance by March 2007, with at least a 10 per cent. reduction by March 2002. Customer fraud and error in these two benefits has been reduced by six per cent. for the 12 months ending March 1999, compared to the period ending September 1998.

Figures for earlier years could not be given without incurring a disproportionate cost. Research on why pensioners do not take-up their entitlement to Income Support was published on 15 October 1999. The evaluation of the pilot initiatives will be published later this year. The cost of the qualitative and quantitative research was £316,000. The pilot evaluation and the contextual survey that will be published with it will cost £279,000.

Pensions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of up-rating in line with inflation the basic state pension of those pensioners living abroad on frozen pensions, for each of the next 10 years. [111108]

Mr. Rooker: The precise information requested is not available.

The cost of paying the 1990–2000 uprating of the State Retirement Pension to pensioners in frozen rate countries is estimated to be £25 million.

The cost of increasing all of these pensions to the rate paid to pensioners resident in the UK is currently estimated to be £300 million.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners living in the UK have state pensions from countries without reciprocal pension uprating agreements with the UK; and how many of them are claiming income support. [111107]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available.

Earnings Disregards

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the earnings disregards in those benefits for which he is responsible expressed in (a) cash terms and (b) terms of hours of permitted work at present minimum wage rates. [111362]

Angela Eagle: The information for those benefits which are affected by earnings is in the following tables.

Benefit	Disregard (£)	Weekly hours at £3.60	Weekly hours at £3.20	Weekly hours at £3.00

Capital Limits

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the capital limits in those benefits for which he is responsible expressed in (a) cash terms and (b) terms of years of maximum ISA allowances at (i) the first year rate and (ii) subsequent yearly rates. [111363]

Mr. Bayley: (a) The capital limits for the income-related benefits are given in the table.

Benefit	Lower capital limit	Upper capital limit
Income Support	3,000	8,000
	[1]10,000	[1]16,000
Income-based Jobseeker's Allowance	3,000	8,000
	[1]10,000	[1]16,000
Housing Benefit	3,000	16,000
Council Tax Benefit	3,000	16,000

[1] For residential care and nursing home cases

(b) (i) Expressed as years of maximum ISA allowances, for accounts opened in the period April 1999-March 2000, a person making the maximum investment of £7,000 would reach the £8,000 benefit upper limit during the second year, and the £16,000 limit during the third year. (ii) For investments started in subsequent years where the maximum ISA allowance is £5,000, a person would reach the £8,000 benefit upper limit during the second year, and the £16,000 limit during the fourth year.

Savings (Income)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the tariff incomes schedule of attributed income from savings was last revised; what rate of return is assumed by the schedule; and what changes in the schedule would result if current bank rate plus 1 per cent. was used to determine the base for the Schedule. [111361]

Mr. Bayley: The tariff income rule has remained unchanged since its introduction in 1988. However, in 1990 the upper capital limit for Income Support was increased from £6,000 to £8,000. In 1996 higher capital limits for people living permanently in a residential care or a nursing home were introduced. The capital limits are kept under regular review but are not increased annually.

The basis for the Department's calculation of tariff income in the income-related benefits, with a system of graduated deductions between lower and higher limits, is not intended to represent any return that could be obtained from investing capital and hence is not based on the current bank rate or any other rate of return. A tariff income of £1 per week is assumed for each £250, or part thereof, held between the appropriate lower and upper limits[1]. This system provides a straightforward method of calculating the weekly contribution which people with capital in excess of the lower limit are expected to make from those resources to help meet their normal living expenses.

Notes:

1. £3,000 and £8,000 in Income Support and income-based Jobseeker's Allowance; except in residential care home and nursing home cases where the limits are £10,000 and £16,000; and Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit where the limits are £3,000 and £16,000.

2. Based on Quoted (nominal) sterling interest rates—households sectors—Bank Timed Deposits—December 1999.

3. Applying the notional interest rate to the band midpoint.

Disabled People

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many disabled people have benefited from (a) the New Deal for disabled people and (b) the disabled person's tax credit in (i) Shrewsbury and Atcham and (ii) Shropshire; and if he will make a statement. [111446]

Mr. Bayley: Three of the New Deal for Disabled People (NDDP) innovative Schemes provide national coverage, so are available to disabled people in Shropshire. By the end of January 2000 the NDDP had helped 2,180 people into work out of over 8,000 participants. Separate figures for Shropshire are not available.

The Inland Revenue has responsibility for Disabled Person's Tax Credit. By the end of January 2000 there have been 27 awards of the Disabled Person's Tax Credit in Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency and 88 awards in the county of Shropshire.

Benefit Claims

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, for each month since January 1998, the number of counter applicants at the Benefits Agency offices at Finsbury Park and Highgate; and what is the Agency's estimate of the adequacy of staff numbers to deal with them. [110487]

Angela Eagle: The administration of benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 21 February 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list, for each month since January 1998, the number of counter applicants at the Benefits Agency (BA) offices at Finsbury Park and Highgate; and what is the Agency's estimate of the adequacy of staff numbers to deal with them.

The number of counter applicants at Finsbury Park and Highgate Branch Offices is shown in the attached tables.

I am aware of the staffing position in both of these Branch Offices as well as the other Branch Offices in the Chilterns South district. I am satisfied that the current staffing levels are sufficient to meet BA service standards for customers who attend these offices. In addition, arrangements are in place to deal with any disruptions to services in the local office network.

The estimate of staff required to deal with callers is termed as complement, and is based on workload. It is detailed in the attached table. The actual staffing levels in the period are also included as "staff in post" figure.

I hope this is helpful.

Unclaimed Benefits

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the number of people over the age of 60 years who are not claiming the benefits to which they are entitled in (a) the UK and (b) Sefton. [110364]

Mr. Rooker: Latest estimates of take-up of income related benefits covering the year 1997–98 for Great Britain were placed in the Library on 24 September 1999.

It is not possible to produce reliable estimates of numbers not claiming their entitlement at local level.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review his policy on inclusion of invalid care allowance in a person's income when assessing eligibility for housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [110774]

Mr. Bayley: Most income is taken into consideration when assessing income related benefits. There is no disregard of payments of Invalid Care Allowance when assessing eligibility for Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit. To do so would duplicate payments from public funds for the same purpose. There are no plans to change this policy.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the claim process for the winter fuel allowance for men between the ages of 60 and 65. [110808]

Angela Eagle: We are currently considering the options for the secure and accurate delivery of Winter Fuel payments. An announcement on this and the claim process will be made soon.

HEALTH

Health Services (Hull)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for combating long-term illnesses in impoverished areas in (a) West Hull primary care group, (b) East Hull primary care group and (c) East Riding Primary care group. [110355]

Yvette Cooper: East Riding Health Authority has indicated that it plans to combat long-term illness in impoverished areas in the East Riding Health Authority Primary Care Groups through the following initiatives:

Strategic review of continuing care services.

Mental health promotion and prevention.

Establishment of a Centre for Independent Living.

Development of an integrated care scheme to provide social and nursing care.

Expansion of renal dialysis services.

Establishment of smoking prevention and smoking cessation programmes.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average level of public funding per ward for cancer services in (a) West Hull primary care group, (b) the East Hull primary care group, (c) the East Riding primary care group and (d) the United Kingdom. [110310]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held at ward level.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the funding is for the primary care groups of (a) West Hull, (b) East Hull and (c) the East Riding in the current financial year. [110358]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is given in the table.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the budget for the health authority encompassing the areas of (a) West Hull, (b) East Hull and (c) the East Riding. [110354]

Mr. Denham: For 2000–01 the unified allocation for East Riding health authority is £387.7 million.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the Government initiatives to address inequalities in the National Health System in (a) West Hull primary care group, (b) East Hull primary care group and (c) East Riding primary care group. [110356]

Yvette Cooper: East Riding health authority has indicated the following initiatives in:

West Hull Primary Care Group

Sure Start Programme in Orchard Park.

Sexual Health Resource Centre.

Establishment of smoking prevention and smoking cessation programme.

Introduction of stroke prevention worker.

Support and prevention project for domestic violence.

Development of Prison Healthy Living Centre.

Establishment of primary care centre in central Hull focusing on the provision of medical care for socially excluded groups.

Development of a Dental Access Centre.

Undertakers (Southampton)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the undertakers who were invited to tender for the contract for the removal of bodies out of hours at Milford-on-Sea Community Hospital; [106390]

(2) what is the price paid by Southampton University NHS Trust to undertakers for the removal of each cadaver under the existing out of hours contractual arrangements; [106392]

(3) if he will list the hospitals which share the same contract for out of hours removal of bodies at Milford-on-Sea Community Hospital. [106391]

Ms Stuart: The undertakers invited to tender for the contract for the removal of bodies out of hours for the Southampton and South West Hampshire Health Authority area were:

Beastons

J. Bevois and Son

Co-op Funeral Services

Diamond and Sons

B. Matthews

Simplicity Funerals

Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust is forecasting payment of between £20,000 to £23,000 this year as part of their contracts with local undertakers. The price paid by Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust for the removal of each cadaver under the existing out of hours contractual arrangements is not held centrally.

Milford-on-Sea Hospital shares the same contract for out of hours removal of bodies with Lymington Hospital, both managed by Southampton Community Health Services NHS Trust.

NHS Direct

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the unit cost to his Department of handling a telephone inquiry at each call centre of NHS Direct. [107083]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 27 January 2000]: We envisage the cost of NHS Direct to be approximately £8 per telephone call. This compares favourably to the cost per accident and emergency attendance £42 (1997–98) and cost per general practitioner contact £10.55 (1996–97).

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state in respect of each call centre of NHS Direct (a) how many telephone calls were received from members of the public, (b) how many calls were answered by an answerphone or other courtesy message service, giving in each case the time and duration of the calls, (c) the average duration of a call and (d) how many callers were advised to contact their general practitioner in each week from the week beginning 1 November 1999 to date. [107079]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 27 January 2000]: The number of telephone calls answered by NHS Direct at each call centre is shown in the table for November and December and for each week since 20 December.

The number of calls answered by a message or an answerphone is not collected. Over the Christmas and new year holiday period, the standard call-centre practice of using messages to inform the public about the service was incorporated into NHS Direct.

As with any new telephone-based service, call lengths reduce over time as operators become more familiar with their system. Call lengths for nurse triage calls in December averaged about 12 minutes.

The proportion of callers advised by NHS Direct to contact their general practitioner averages about 40 per cent. each month.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the report his Department has received from Sheffield University on NHS Direct. [111121]

Ms Stuart: Sheffield University's interim report is in the Library. This was published in March 1999. Sheffield University's final report on NHS Direct is expected shortly. Copies of the report will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls have been made to NHS Direct over the last six months; and what proportion of those calls were made by carers. [110735]

Ms Stuart: Between July and December 1999 NHS Direct received more than 750,000 calls. NHS Direct nurses ascertain the relationship between the caller and the patient for every call. Details for these relationships are shown in the table for December 1999.

Health Authority Funding

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the additional funding that will be made available to Wakefield health authority in each of the next five years, following the Prime Minister's recent announcement on NHS spending. [107607]

Mr. Denham: 2000–01 health authority allocations were announced on 21 December 1999. The allocation for Wakefield health authority for 2000–01 is £227.89 million. This represents an increase of £14.80 million (6.95 per cent.). Decisions on expenditure plans for 2001–02 to 2003–04 will be taken in due course as part of the current spending review.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what socio-economic factors and indices are included as part of the weighted capitation formula used when determining funding for health authorities and whether the formula is under review. [110942]

Mr. Denham: The weighted capitation formula used to inform allocations to English health authorities includes a wide range of socio-economic variables associated with the need for healthcare. These are described in "Resource Allocation: Weighted Capitation Formulas". Copies are available in the Library.

There is currently a wide-ranging review of the formula.

Social Workers

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on plans to employ social workers from South Africa; and what plans he has to encourage more people into the profession in Britain. [107598]

Mr. Hutton: Although vacancy rates for social workers are among some of the lowest for a decade, we are concerned that social workers must be available in the right numbers if we are to deliver the higher quality of services that users and their carers deserve, and if we are to make a success of vital new initiatives such as Quality Protects.

It is the responsibility of local authorities, as employers, to ensure that they have sufficient social workers who are competent and safe to practise. It is a matter for each local authority to consider whether a possible answer to an immediate recruitment difficulty is to recruit social workers from abroad.

We are maintaining the traditional professional social work courses in higher education. In addition we have funded the development of open and distant learning routes in social work to maintain a wide access gate to these professional qualifications. We also believe that the employers should be doing more to develop the skills and commitment of the nearly 900,000 staff they employ in social care and provide more of these staff with access to professional social work training.

Without wishing to take away from the employers their responsibility for their own workforce, the Government can act positively to stimulate debate among employment interests as to how best to tackle problems of recruitment and retention and to give a boost to the morale and standing of staff in the social services.

We therefore propose to host a summit meeting of all the key employment interests including employers, staff and professional associations across all sectors of social care. We intend to see employment interests put in place a positive campaign of action on the recruitment and retention issues of the whole social care workforce, not just those of professional social workers.

Drugs Purchases (North Essex)

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cost to the National Health Service of the purchase of drugs within the area of the North Essex Health Authority for each year since 1995. [109437]

Ms Stuart: The information available is in the table.

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
NHS Trust expenditure	10,589,000	12,514,000	14,491,000
Prescription pricing authority (PPA)[1]	65,340,000	70,898,000	75,354,000
Total	75,929,000	83,412,000	89,845,000

[1] estimates

Notes:

1. The figures for 1995–96 are not on a comparable basis, as although there was a North Essex District Health Authority, the Family Health Services Authority covered the whole of Essex.

2. Trust expenditure on drugs and gases is from the Trust Financial Returns for the eight National Health Service Trusts where North Essex Health Authority is the major commissioner. This is not audited information and will include some expenditure incurred for other commissioners.

3. An estimate of drugs expenditure is available by individual health authority from the Prescription Pricing Authority's EPACT system. The national estimated total expenditure for all health authorities supplied by the Prescription Pricing Authority does not equal the total included in their audited accounts of health authorities.

Nurses

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses left the NHS for retirement in each of the last 10 years. [108222]

Mr. Denham: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the NHS Pensions Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. A. F. Cowan. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase spending on NHS dentistry. [109854]

Mr. Hutton: We have accepted in full the recommendations of the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' remuneration. These include an increase of 3.3 per cent. in general dental practitioners' (GDPs') remuneration and awards totalling about £17 million per year in England to reward GDPs' commitment to the National Health Service. The Review Body's recommendations will increase expenditure by over £50 million a year. The other principal factor determining expenditure on the General Dental Service will be the number of patients registered and treated by individual GDPs. As they work within a non cash limited service, their activity is not constrained to a fixed, pre-set budget. Expenditure levels on the Community and Hospital Dental Services are set by individual health authorities in the light of their local operational needs and priorities. We are considering currently what, if any, further expenditure is needed.

CCTV

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will install close circuit television in units for patients with mental or learning disabilities. [109675]

Mr. Hutton: The safety of both patients and staff is best protected by adequate staffing levels, appropriate training, clear operational policies, and proper supervision and monitoring. Use of CCTV would be a matter for local decision, and in cases of secure accommodation would be used to monitor public and secure perimeter areas.

Austria (Bilateral Meetings)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those previously planned meetings, and their subject, between his Department and its Austrian counterpart which have been cancelled since the formation of the new Austrian Government. [109894]

Ms Stuart: No previously planned meetings have been cancelled since the new Austrian government was formed.

Dental Laboratories

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to improve the quality of work produced by dental laboratories since May 1997. [109945]

Mr. Hutton: All dental materials used to manufacture dental appliances must be safe and fit for their purpose and must meet the requirements of the Medical Devices Regulations. Dental appliances must be manufactured in accordance with a dentist's instructions.

Regulations provide that in providing general dental services a dentist shall employ a proper degree of skill and attention, and use only materials suitable for the purpose for which they are used.

Clinical governance is being implemented in the general dental services which will improve the clinical effectiveness and cost effectiveness of dental treatment There is a system by which restorations which are claimed to have been placed can be inspected by a Dental Reference Officer of the Dental Practice Board.

Mind Report

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will assess the report, "Counting the Cost", published on 9 February by Mind. [109957]

Mr. Hutton: We are already making use of Mind's report, which we funded, in a series of events around the country designed to engage the media in constructive dialogue about the way they report mental health issues. The report, together with an evaluation of these events, will also help us to plan future initiatives.

Drugs Supply

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many drug companies supply the NHS; and if he will list the major suppliers. [110555]

Ms Stuart: In 1998 approximately 700 companies supplied the National Health Service with proprietary medicines. This figure for all prescriptions dispensed in the community in England is based on statistics from the Prescription Cost Analysis system.

The 40 major companies supplying the NHS with branded medicines (defined as those with NHS sales of £20 million or more in 1998) are listed.

Nurse Training

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what pre-training courses exist for people interested in taking up nursing as a profession; what steps he is taking to extend such courses; and if he will make a statement. [110559]

Mr. Denham: A number of steps are being taken to extend the accepted entry routes into nurse training. The new model of nurse education that was announced in "Making a Difference" will deliver more flexible career pathways into and through nursing and midwifery education. Initiatives include:

Developing more access courses.

The introduction of nurse 'cadet' schemes which lead to individuals being able to achieve the qualifications sufficient to meet the entry requirements to a pre-registration nursing or midwifery course, eg NVQ level 3.

Stronger links between vocational training and pre-registration education allowing people to take up a career as a qualified nurse later in life.

Expansion of part time and more flexible pre-registration nursing diploma programmes including the development of 'stepping on and off' points on nurse education programmes.

Expansion of secondment opportunities for National Health Service employees to access pre-registration nursing and midwifery diploma programmes.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that trainee nurses undergo practical experience with patients at an early stage of their training; and if he will make a statement. [110560]

Mr. Denham: Under the new model of nurse education that was announced in 'Making a Difference: Strengthening the nursing, midwifery and health visiting contribution to health and healthcare', steps are now being taken to ensure that nursing students have higher quality and longer placements and the opportunity to start to acquire the necessary clinical skills for practice from the beginning of their programme.

Drugs Bill

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the total cost of drugs to the NHS in (a) gross and (b) net terms for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [110557]

Ms Stuart: The information requested is shown in the table.

£ million

Year	Gross NHS drugs bill	Net NHS drugs bill
1989–90	1,951	1,942
1990–91	2,092	2,080
1991–92	2,335	2,317
1992–93	2,651	2,641
1993–94	2,979	2,951
1994–95	3,252	3,230
1995–96	3,505	3,498
1996–97	3,808	3,774
1997–98	4,107	4,085
1998–99	4,356	4,339

Note:
1. The gross figure represents FHS and HCHS costs
2. The net figure has PPRS receipts deducted

Drugs Recycling

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to encourage the recycling of drugs not taken by patients; and if he will make a statement. [110554]

Ms Stuart: We are taking no such steps. Recycling of drugs is unsafe.

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance he has issued in respect of access to intensive care beds for elderly patients. [110433]

Ms Stuart: Guidelines on admissions to and discharge from intensive care and high dependency units were issued in March 1996. The guidelines provide advice according to severity of illness and not according to age. Copies of the guidelines are available in the Library.

Stoma Services

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many stoma nurses working in the NHS are sponsored by dispensing appliance contractors; and if he will make a statement on the Government's policy in respect of sponsored clinical personnel. [110929]

Ms Stuart: Sponsorship of Stoma nurses is by local arrangement.

The Department expects all staff to adhere to high standards of business conduct, as set out in existing guidelines published in January 1993—Standards of business conduct for National Health Service staff (HSG(93)5).

Consultation has recently taken place on updated guidance, which we expect to be available shortly, which will specifically address stoma care nurses.

Hospital Outpatient Appointments

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to reduce the number of first appointments not attended by patients at hospital outpatient departments; and if he will make a statement. [110896]

Ms Stuart: There are a number of examples of good practice already introduced by National Health Service trusts to reduce the number of patients that fail to turn up for appointments. These include issuing reminder letters and installing dedicated 24 hour answerphones so that patients can call to cancel their appointments at a time that suits them.

The recent report "Variations in NHS Outpatient Performance" recommends the introduction of partial booking systems as a step towards total booking systems. In a partial booking system, patients are informed upon receipt of the general practitioner's referral letter of the waiting time for that particular clinic, and the patient is asked to telephone the hospital a few weeks before that time to arrange a convenient date. Evidence suggests that this process reduces the number of occasions where patients fail to attend appointments.

The introduction of booking systems—so that patients can pre-book an appointment/admission date that is convenient to them—is a key part of the modernisation agenda. 24 pilots began to introduce these systems in September 1998. Most of these booked admissions pilots have significantly reduced the "Did Not Attend" (DNA) rates, with some eliminating them altogether. In September 1999, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced a further 60 pilots to take forward this part of the modernisation agenda, increasing the coverage to around 2 million patients.

Devonshire Royal Hospital Site, Buxton

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will announce the final plans for the disposal of the Devonshire Royal Hospital site, Buxton. [110843]

Ms Stuart: The process of selecting a preferred purchaser is not yet finalised, however, the National Health Service is planning to vacate the site in July this year and decommissioning should be completed by September 2000.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of hyperbaic oxygen therapy for MS; and if he will make a statement. [110707]

Mr. Denham: There are no current United Kingdom marketing authorisations for hyperbaic oxygen indicated for the treatment of Multiple Sclerosis. Therefore, it is not licensed in the UK as a medicinal product for this purpose and the Medicines Control Agency cannot comment as to its safety, quality and efficacy for this kind of treatment.

Mrs. Hilary Pearce

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission a public inquiry into the events and procedures surrounding the death of Mrs. Hilary Pearce at Addenbrookes Hospital, Cambridge; and if he will make a statement. [110842]

Ms Stuart: Addenbrooke's Hospital National Health Service Trust has offered its sincerest apologies to the family of Mrs. Pearce following this dreadful mistake which caused her tragic death. The trust has conducted an internal inquiry into the circumstances surrounding this incident and Mrs. Pearce's family has been given the full report of the findings. The trust has taken this matter seriously and has already put in place action in response to the recommendations of the inquiry.

Too often we hear of incidents occurring in the NHS which should have been avoidable if the lessons of past experience had been properly learned. That is why last year we asked the Chief Medical Officer, Professor Liam Donaldson, to convene an expert group to examine the mechanisms by which the NHS currently analyses and learns from adverse health care events and to make recommendations for improvements. The group will report to Health Ministers shortly and we will be looking very carefully indeed at what it has to say.

Premature Deaths (Somerset)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the principal causes of premature death in Somerset in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [110800]

Ms Stuart: The 10 most common causes of death in 1998 for residents of Somerset aged under 75-years-old is given in the tables:

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the letter from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for North Warwickshire (Mr. O'Brien), of 2 February to the hon. Member for Lewes, on xenotransplantation, what disposal methods are authorised for meat from pigs subject to xenotransplantation procedures under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if such meat is deemed suitable for human consumption. [111049]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 February 2000]: The Home Office Code of Practice for the Humane Killing of Animals under Schedule 1 to the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 lists appropriate methods for the killing of animals regulated by the Act and advice on disposal of carcases.

Meat from genetically modified animals, such as those used in some xenotransplantation procedures, cannot enter the food chain without approval under the Novel Foods and Novel Food Ingredients Regulations (258/7). Genetically modified animals would fall within the category of > "foods and food ingredients containing or consisting of genetically modified organisms within the meaning of Directive 90/220/EEC".

Before approval could be granted an application would have to be made within the European Union seeking clearance for meat from such animals to be placed on the market. Any application would have to demonstrate that the meat was safe for human consumption. No applications under the Novel Food Regulations have been made relating to meat from animals used in xenotransplantation procedures.

Midwives

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified midwives were employed in the NHS (a) in 1979, (b) in 1997 and (c) at the latest available dates. [111316]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 February 2000]: Information about numbers of midwives employed by the National Health Service is collected as at 30 September each year. Latest figures are as at 30 September 1998. The information is shown in the table.

NHS hospital and community health services (HCHS): Midwives, in England, as at 30 September each year

Voluntary Organisations (Grants)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances he renews a core grant to a voluntary organisation beyond the normal period for which such grants are payable. [110920]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 February 2000]: The Section 64 General Scheme of grants is the Department's main channel of support to the voluntary sector. Core grants, as well as project grants, are awarded for up to three years to national voluntary organisations. There is no bar to any voluntary organisation applying for renewal core funding, but a renewal application should concentrate on showing why and how continued funding would help the Department to achieve its aims, and the outputs and achievements that a grant would produce.

Electro-convulsive Treatment

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients (a) under and (b) over the age of 18 years were given electro-convulsive treatment in England and Wales (i) with and (ii) without their consent for each of the last two years. [111416]

Mr. Hutton: The information is not available in the form requested. A one-off survey covering the period from January 1999 to March 1999, England only, was undertaken to provide an up to date and accurate snapshot picture of the use of electro-convulsive treatment (ECT). Prior to this information previously recorded on ECT did not provide an accurate picture on the use of ECT. Any data collected in Wales is a matter for the Welsh Assembly.

The results of the survey are contained in the Department of Health Statistical bulletin "Electro Convulsive Therapy: Survey covering the period from January 1999 to March 1999, England", a copy of which is in the Library.

Naloxone/Nacran

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will undertake a consultation exercise on extending the categories of health professionals qualified to administer the drug Naloxone/Nacran, to include ambulance technicians. [111166]

Ms Stuart: Any extension to the groups of professionals who may administer injectable medicines such as Naloxone without a doctor's directions and on their own initiative, would require an amendment to the Prescription Only Medicine (Human Use) Order 1997. There is an established process whereby advice is sought from the Committee on Safety of Medicines on an application prior to public consultation. Currently there is no application under consideration and I have no plans to undertake a consultation exercise. Naloxone may be administered by ambulance paramedics as they are one of the groups mentioned above.

Heart Disease

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the Government initiatives in the primary care system to address coronary heart disease. [110353]

Yvette Cooper: Primary care initiatives have an important role to play in health promotion and in preventing coronary heart disease (CHD). The main risk factors are smoking, physical inactivity, obesity and poor diet. Since 1990, the terms of services for general practitioners has obliged them to provide opportunistic health promotion services to patients, including advice about the significance of diet, exercise and the use of tobacco. A locally based health promotion programme for GPs was also introduced from October 1996.

The National Priorities Guidance (NPG), which sets the Government's aim and objectives for the National Health Service, highlights CHD and smoking as key priorities for modernisation. The NPG directs health authorities and primary care groups to develop services for smoking cessation. Both primary care groups and individual practices should be working closely with these specialist services.

On 2 February, my hon. Friend the Minister of State announced the launch of the National Primary Care Development Team, a major initiative to enable primary care to cut unnecessary deaths, improve patient access and tackle waiting lists and times. The primary care groups and trusts in this scheme will commit themselves to tackling CHD. In addition, the Government will publish shortly a National Service Framework for CHD, the first ever comprehensive plan to deal with all aspects of this disease. It is an ambitious 10 year strategy that will address both prevention and treatment of CHD, in which primary care teams will be playing a major part.

Cancer Services

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to increase access to specialists for suspected cancers, with particular reference to the most disadvantaged patients. [110362]

Yvette Cooper: We have introduced a two week waiting time standard, which will be in place for all cases of suspected cancer by the end of this year, whereby all patients with suspected cancer referred urgently by their general practitioners for a specialist investigation should be seen within two weeks.

We are also developing cancer referral guidelines to help GPs and other members of primary care identify more easily those symptoms that could be cancer and require an urgent appointment with a specialist within two weeks. The final guidelines will be published by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence in April 2000.

We are also increasing the number of cancer specialists. There are currently 400 higher specialist trainees for main cancer specialties—oncology and palliative care. We expect these will emerge from training over the next five years increasing the number of specialists by 60 per cent. Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director, is developing a work force strategy and will work with professional bodies and local cancer networks to identify future work force demands and ways in which they could be met.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Congestion Charging

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the outcome was of his consultation on road user charging and the workplace parking levy. [111713]

Mr. Hill: Our consultation paper "Breaking the Logjam, the Government's consultation paper on fighting traffic congestion and pollution through road user and workplace parking charges" was published on 8 December 1998. It confirmed our intention to legislate on road user charging and on the workplace parking levy and invited comments by 31 March last year on a wide range on mainly practical issues.

Some 8,000 copies of "Breaking the Logjam" were distributed, and we received 665 responses. 75 per cent. of the responses which gave an opinion supported or accepted the need for the new charges. The Transport Bill currently before Parliament implements these policies.

Following our consultation, we are proposing an exemption or concession from the workplace parking levy for National Health Service hospitals.

We have today published a report analysing the responses we received, and placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses and in the Vote Office. We are grateful to everyone who responded.

Antibiotic Marker Genes

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the antibiotic marker genes, and the antibiotics to which they convey resistance, that have been used in the genetic modification of plant crops, listing the crops that have been released for research purposes in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the EU, in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [108623]

Mr. Meacher: Antibiotic resistance genes are included in some (but not all) GM plants to help identify them in the research and development phase of their production. The Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment has considered the risks posed to the environment by antibiotic resistance genes. It was the Committee's view that, of the ones approved for release, there is little or no evidence that antibiotic resistance genes can escape from crop plants under field conditions, but even if it did happen it would not cause environmental harm, or add significantly to the total amount of resistance already widespread in the environment, compared to other uses in medicine and agriculture.

The table lists the antibiotic marker genes, and the antibiotics to which they convey resistance, used in genetic modification of crops for research releases in the United Kingdom during the past five years.

Gene	Antibiotic
nptII or neo	Aminoglycoside antibiotics including kanamycin, and neomycin
Aad	Streptomycin and spectinomycin
Bla	Narrow spectrum lactam antibiotics such as ampicillin and amoxycillin
Hpt	Hygromycin

I have today placed in the House Library details of the specification of modified crops including antibiotic marker genes that have been released in the UK for research purposes over the last five years.

The Joint Research Centre (JRC), through its Institute for Health and Consumer Protection, collate and distribute to member states, Norway and Iceland a summary of each part B (research and development) application received in the EU. In excess of 1,000 (approx.) crops containing antibiotic marker genes have been released for research purposes in the EU in the last five years. To provide information on each crop through this PQ would involve a disproportionate cost because member states have direct control over the licensing the release of GM crops in their own territory. Each member state would therefore need to be contacted individually to clarify the information.

Planning Applications

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the average time taken between a planning inspector submitting his report to ministers and a decision being taken by ministers in each of the last three years. [110229]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The information is as follows:

	Weeks
	Call ins	Recovered Appeals
1997	21	19
1998	20	20
1999	21	21

Called-in and recovered appeal cases, by their nature, tend to raise issues which often need further consideration within the Department before decisions can be taken.

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many planning applications he called in for decision in each of the last 10 years. [111526]

Mr. Raynsford: The figures are as follows:

	Number
1989–90	103
1990–91	132
1991–92	140
1992–93	101

	Number

The total number of applications listed above is 145. These are at different stages of the process. For instance, some have just been called in, or are at inquiry, or the inspectors' reports have been received following inquiry. Where applications are mentioned more than once this is because a called-in scheme comprises two or more separate applications.

Council Tax (Somerset)

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the (a) real terms and (b) cash terms rise in the Council Tax in Somerset for each year since 1983–84; and if he will make a statement. [110801]

Ms Armstrong: The information for each year since the introduction of Council Tax in 1993–94 is as follows:

Year-on-year Council Tax[1] changes in Somerset 1994–95 to 1999–2000

Percentage

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
(a) Real change
Mendip	7.1	–1.9	4.3	4.4	2.5	4.9
Sedgemoor	4.8	0.6	1.3	5.4	1.5	4.8
Taunton Deane	2.9	0.9	8.5	5.5	4.1	4.8
West Somerset	12.0	0.7	1.6	4.1	3.4	4.4
South Somerset	3.7	2.5	–0.0	4.8	2.5	4.7
(b) Actual change
Mendip	8.6	1.0	7.7	7.3	5.8	7.3
Sedgemoor	6.3	3.5	4.5	8.3	4.8	7.2
Taunton Deane	4.3	3.8	12.0	8.5	7.5	7.2
West Somerset	13.6	3.7	4.9	7.1	6.8	6.7
South Somerset	5.2	5.5	3.2	7.7	5.8	7.0

[1] The percentage changes are calculated from the headline Council Tax (Band D, 2 adults) amounts, before transitional relief and Council Tax benefit. These amounts cover the authority's own Council Tax plus the Council Tax of Somerset County Council and Avon and Somerset Police Authority.

London Transport

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 337W, on London Transport, on what date he will report on London Transport's expenditure on external consultants up to the end of the first half of the current financial year. [110894]

Mr. Hill: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas) on 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 525W.

Housing Development

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to facilitate the building of more homes in villages of fewer than 3,000 people, through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme. [110787]

AVAILABLE

Mr. Mullin: I have asked the Housing Corporation to continue to ensure in the year 2000–01 that 3.4 per cent. of new approvals through the Approved Development Programme are in settlements with a population of 3,000 people or fewer. This will generate 750 new homes.

The number of new homes produced through the Approved Development Programme in subsequent years will depend on the outcome of this year's Spending Review.

Thameslink 2000

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the public inquiry into the Thameslink 2000 project will commence. [111006]

Mr. Hill: The inquiry arrangements have not yet been finalised. I hope to make an announcement about this shortly.

Packaging Recovery

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total revenue raised by the Packaging Recovery Note system in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999. [110641]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 17 February 2000]: In 1998, my Department estimates that revenue raised by the Packaging Recovery Note (PRN) System was some £78,000,000. A final outturn for 1999 is not yet available but on the basis of the first three quarters' outturn, our preliminary estimate is that revenue from the PRN system in 1999 will have been in the region of £62,000,000.

Hedgerow Regulations 1997

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to scrutinise the operation of the Hedgerow Regulations 1997. [110907]

Mr. Mullin: The report of a review of the Hedgerows Regulations 1997 was published in June 1998. This included information from a Local Government Association survey of its members on the operation of the Regulations. We are currently evaluating the results of research into the review proposals and in the light of that expect to publish draft regulations for consultation later this year.

Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Directive

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of installations to be affected by the introduction of the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Directive, specifying (a) pig installations and (b) poultry installations. [110738]

Mr. Meacher: Only farms with more than 2,000 places for pigs over 30 kilos or 750 places for sows, or 40,000 places for poultry, will be regulated under IPPC. The Environment Agency estimates that in England and Wales this will encompass up to 435 pig installations and about 1,200 broiler installations, and 200 laying hen installations; for poultry, the great majority of installations will not come into IPPC until 2003, and for pigs until 2004.

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the charges to be levied by other EU countries and by Scotland consequent upon the introduction of the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Directive; and if he will make a statement. [110737]

Mr. Meacher: The Environment Agency is gathering information on charging practices associated with IPPC in other EU countries. This will inform the development of a long-term charging scheme. The Scottish Environment Protection Agency proposes to apply its existing charging schemes relating to discharges to air, land and water to IPPC as an interim measure, with an increase in tariff of 10 per cent. to reflect the extra regulatory activities associated with IPPC.

Montreal Protocol

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action the Government will take with its counterparts in the European Union to ensure that the Montreal Protocol of 1987 is implemented; and if he will make a statement. [110773]

Mr. Meacher: The Montreal Protocol is implemented within the European Union by EC Regulation 3093/94 on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer. The current Regulation enables the EU to meet its commitments under the Protocol as agreed by Parties at the Copenhagen Meeting in 1992. A new EC Regulation is currently being agreed which will implement subsequent revisions to the Protocol.

Conservation

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to protect (a) vascular plants, (b) fungi, (c) lichens, (d) bryophytes and (e) stoneworts; and if he will make a statement. [110706]

Mr. Mullin: All wild plants are protected from picking, uprooting and destruction by unauthorised persons under section 13 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

The highest level of protection is given to wild plants of species listed in schedule 8 to the Act. All intentional picking, uprooting and destruction of wild plants of these species is prohibited. Sale of plant species listed in schedule 8 is also prohibited.

Additionally, there are a number of Biodiversity Action Plans being implemented for many species of vascular plants, fungi, lichens, bryophytes and stoneworts.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of (a) wild flower meadows, (b) open heaths, (c) open peat bogs and (d) hedgerows were (i) destroyed and (ii) seriously damaged between 1979 and 1997 in (x) England and (y) Shropshire; and if he will make a statement. [110705]

Mr. Mullin: Comprehensive information on loss and damage to wildflower meadows, open heaths, open peat bogs and hedgerows for England for the full period between 1979 and 1997 is not currently available. However, it is estimated that 18 per cent. of non-agriculturally improved grasslands and calcareous grasslands, 2 per cent. of open heaths and 2 per cent. of open peat bogs were converted for agriculture or forestry in Great Britain in the period between 1984 and 1990. It is estimated that 12 per cent. of hedgerows were removed in England and Wales in the period between 1984 and 1993. These losses were partly compensated for by creation and natural regeneration of habitats and planting of new hedges. No separate estimates of damage are currently available for any of these features.

In Shropshire, the Shropshire Wildlife Trust have estimated that 20 per cent. of wildflower meadows, 6.1 per cent. of open heaths, and 3.5 per cent. of open peat bogs were lost between 1979 and 1989.

The Department is currently funding Countryside Survey 2000, which will provide up-to-date estimates of change in broad habitat types for Great Britain.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the amount of housing benefit paid to each local authority in respect of council housing for the years 1995–96, 1996–97, 1997–98, 1998–99, and 1999–2000, indicating the average number of recipients for each authority. [110952]

Mr. Mullin: A table showing the available information has been placed in the Library. The table shows the Rent Rebate Subsidy Element of the Housing Revenue Account Subsidy, which represents eligible expenditure by authorities on rent rebates offset by any assumed surplus on their Housing Element. For some authorities, no Rent Rebate Element is paid because the assumed surplus on the Housing Element exceeds their eligible spending on rent rebates.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those local authorities which (a) have completed and (b) are in the process of transferring their housing stock by means of a large scale voluntary transfer, indicating the number of units involved for each authority. [110951]

Mr. Mullin: The local authorities which have transferred all or part of their housing stock to a new landlord are in the table:

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the amount of council house subsidy paid to each local authority in the years 1995–96, 1996–97, 1997–98, 1998–99, and 1999–2000, indicating the number of council houses in each authority in those years. [110950]

Mr. Mullin: A table showing the available information has been placed in the Library. For many authorities no housing subsidy was paid because they were in assumed surplus on their Housing Element subsidy and this assumed surplus was offset against payments of Rent Rebate subsidy.

Care Leavers and Orphans

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds of his plans to house care leavers and orphans between the ages 16 and 17 years; and by what amount these proposals will reduce the number of rough sleepers. [110955]

Mr. Raynsford: We have no plans to assist care leavers or orphans between the ages of 16 to 17 with housing unless they are homeless and vulnerable. Local authorities already have a duty to accommodate homeless young people whom they consider to be vulnerable, and therefore in priority need, under the provisions of the Housing Act 1996. We recognise that young people who are leaving care may face particular difficulties in making the transition to independent living, as a consequence of institutionalisation and perhaps having limited back-up support. The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' revised draft Code of Guidance on the Allocation of Accommodation and Homelessness, due to be published later this year, will therefore recommend that local authorities treat young care leavers, and 16 and 17-year-olds with little or no back-up support, as being vulnerable under the homelessness legislation. This clarifies existing local authority duties in order to ensure a greater consistency of approach. As such, it should require no additional cost to public funds. Our Housing Green Paper, also due to be published later this year, will include further measures to improve the protection for unintentionally homeless people.

The Government have set up the Rough Sleepers Unit, with a budget of almost £200 million, to reduce rough sleeping in England by at least two thirds by 2002. A commitment to focusing on the most vulnerable people on the streets is at the heart of the Unit's approach, and young rough sleepers are among the most vulnerable of all. The revised guidance on housing allocation is one of the ways in which we will prevent future rough sleeping among vulnerable young people. This will complement the provisions of the Children (Leaving Care) Bill, and the "Quality Protects" programme, which makes available £375 million to local authorities over three years to increase the support offered to care leavers.

Post Offices

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his estimate of the number of post offices which receive (a) 25 per cent., (b) 50 per cent., (c) 75 per cent. and (d) 100 per cent rate relief, for the latest year for which statistics are available; what plans he has to change the funding of, and guidelines for, such rate relief; and if he will make a statement. [110791]

Ms Armstrong: The number of post offices receiving rate relief is not held centrally. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

We have no plans to change the funding or extent to which rural post offices can qualify for rate relief under the village shop rate relief scheme.

The Prime Minister announced on 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 630W, the Post Office Network Project, to identify the contribution made by post offices to the vitality of local communities, consider how the Post Office Network can best contribute to the Government's objectives in the future and in the process formulate objectives for the Post Office Network.

National Air Traffic Services

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if a public sector comparator was used as a benchmark against which the judgment to proceed with a public/private partnership option for NATS was made in line with the recommendations in technical note 5-The Objectives of a PPP; [110551]

(2) how he will ensure that an appropriate level of risk will be transferred in the proposed NATS public/private partnership to guarantee value for money for public funds; [110550]

(3) what economic appraisal techniques were used fully to evaluate the key commercial risks of the public/private partnership for NATS to ensure value for money for public funds. [110549]

Mr. Mullin: As set out on page 3 of the Treasury Taskforce Private Finance Guidance (Technical Note No. 5), the Government will ensure a proper competition is held to identify a private sector strategic partner. The Government, along with their financial advisers, have also carried out a proper assessment of the economic and commercial risks, including on proceeds and for major projects such as the New En-Route Centre and the New Scottish Centre. This assessment included both qualitative and quantitative techniques such as risk-adjusted discounted cash flow analysis.

The Government have also undertaken a comprehensive assessment of benefits offered to NATS, its customers and the public sector compared to retention of NATS in the public sector. In making this assessment, the Government considered a wide range of factors, including qualitative factors such as its objectives for the PPP to improve NATS efficiency and project management abilities. The Government concluded that only a private sector solution, by providing commercial disciplines and access to private sector project management skills, would offer the right combination of benefits to NATS, its customers and the public sector.

A full analysis was made of how the risks could be best allocated between public and private sectors to ensure that the risks are borne where they are best managed and also to deliver value for money. In the case of the NATS PPP, the risk transfer will be commensurate with the transfer of control to the private sector. Following receipt of tenders from bidders, a final assessment will be made to ensure value for money and a proper transfer of risk.

Racist Incidents

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many local authorities in England (1) have established schemes for co-operation with (a) the police and (b) other agencies for the purposes of sharing information concerning racist incidents; [111289]

(2) how many local authorities in England have adopted the definition of racist incident given in the Stephen Lawrence inquiry report. [111290]

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many local authorities in England (a) are and (b) are not participating in multi-agency panels to tackle racial harassment. [110297]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many local authorities in England (a) provide and (b) support the provision of facilities for the reporting of racist incidents. [110367]

Ms Beverley Hughes: This information is not held centrally. However, following my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's Action Plan, my right hon. Friend will be announcing tomorrow the publication of the first annual report. It will set out the details of progress made and identify action still to be taken across public services.

In addition, for 2000–01 the Audit Commission has required that local authorities publish annually the number of racial incidents recorded by the authority per 100,000 population and the percentage of such incidents that result in further action by the authority. For this purpose, racial incidents are "any incidents regarded as such by the victim or anyone else" which reflects the definition given in the Stephen Lawrence inquiry report. The indicators cover all an authority's services.

Council House Sales

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Government have to (a) require and (b) request councils to sell off council housing. [111114]

Mr. Mullin: We have no plans to force local authorities to sell off their council housing. Housing transfers to registered social landlords will remain voluntary and require the approval of tenants before they can take place. However, we are keen for local authorities to pursue transfer where it is clearly part of their housing strategy and will improve the living conditions of tenants and the service which they receive.

Driving Test Centres

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the cost of running the (a) Llandrindod Wells-Powys, (b) Newtown-Powys, (c) Brecon-Powys, (d) Kington-Herefordshire and (e) Hereford driving test centres for each of the last three years, indicating the total property rental costs in each case. [111101]

Mr. Hill: The Driving Standards Agency does not have a driving test centre in Kington, Herefordshire. The annual property costs, including rates, service charges, maintenance and utilities, for the other four locations are shown, with the rental shown separately.

Land Use (Tyne and Wear)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate on the basis of the provisional national land use database the area of (a) vacant and (b) derelict land in each local authority in Tyne and Wear together with the area available for (i) conversion, (ii) reuse and (iii) redevelopment. [111358]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The available information for the local authority districts is in "Government Statistics Supplementary Table" on the NLUD website (www.nlud.org.uk); the table provides an extract for Newcastle, North Tyneside, South Tyneside, Sunderland and Gateshead. It shows the total amounts of previously developed vacant land, derelict land and land occupied by vacant buildings reported by each local authority. It is important to note that not all of this land will be available for redevelopment. The table shows the portions allocated for housing use in the local plan or with planning permission for housing. The table additionally shows amounts of land in use with allocation for redevelopment or with planning permission for housing. The figures refer to the time of the survey in 1998, and have not been adjusted for some cases where the coverage was partial.

Press Officers

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many press officers were employed in his Department; and what was the total expenditure on press officers by his Department, at (a) May 1997, (b) January 1998, (c) January 1999 and (d) January 2000. [111620]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Detailed information on the numbers of permanent civil servants employed in Departmental Press Offices during the financial year 1997–98 were provided in a memorandum dated 16 June 1998 to the Select Committee on Public Administration and published in its report on the Government Information and Communication Service (HC 770) in July 1998. A copy is in the Library of the House. The number of press officers in post and their cost in January 1999 was 34.3 staff costing £109,000 and in January 2000 was 40.8 staff costing £131,000.

Macpherson Report

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the local authorities in England which have adopted action plans for tackling institutional racism following the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry report. [110296]

Ms Beverley Hughes: This information is not held centrally. However the "Local Authorities Race Relations Information Exchange" (LARRIE) is preparing a report for publication next month which will set out this information.

Taxis

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to allow licensed private hire vehicles to be driven by the spouses of licensed private hire vehicle drivers for non-hire purposes; and if he will make a statement. [110830]

Mr. Hill: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Oldham, East and Saddleworth (Mr. Woolas) on 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 521W.

Water Companies

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which water companies (a) have and (b) have not accepted responsibility for a free leak repair service for domestic supply pipes. [111275]

Mr. Mullin: All water companies currently offer some degree of free repair to all domestic customers' supply pipes, with the exception of Mid Kent Water. Most companies have some restrictions, for example up to a maximum cost for each repair, although many companies offer free or subsidised pipe replacement. Mid Kent Water will undertake free repairs only in areas where it considers water resources to be tight, but has not currently designated any such areas.

Full details for each company are provided in Appendix 2 of the Director General of Water Services' 1998–99 Report on Leakage and Water Efficiency.

Pollution (Falmouth Harbour)

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent directions he has given to the Environment Agency regarding pollution in Falmouth Harbour; and if he will make a statement. [111129]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 21 February 2000]: Section 40 of the Environment Act 1995 provides for the Secretary of State to make directions to the Environment Agency in respect of the carrying out of any of its functions. No such directions have been made to the Environment Agency in respect of pollution in Falmouth Harbour.

In July last year I announced the designation of an additional 76 new shellfish waters, and the extension of 17 existing designations in England, including the Fal Estuary. In addition, My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made a number of designations of Sensitive Areas pursuant to implementation of the EC Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive. The most recent, made on 30 July 1998, included designation of the upper reaches of the Truro, Tresillian and Fal estuaries. In such areas, the Environment Agency is required to ensure through its discharge consenting powers that appropriate nutrient removal requirements are imposed through sewage discharge.

Pedestrians

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to publish a daughter document on facilities for pedestrians and strategies for promoting walking. [110746]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 21 February 2000]: Guidance to local authorities on encouraging walking will be published shortly.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received about producing guidance for local authorities on a strategy for pedestrians. [110748]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 21 February 2000]: The Secretary of State has received a letter from the Chairman of the Commission for Integrated Transport about publishing guidance on encouraging walking. This is being considered by Ministers.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what planning guidance he will produce to encourage facilities for pedestrians and to promote walking. [110747]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 21 February 2000]: The Government published for consultation last year a draft revision to Planning Policy Guidance Note 13 on Transport, which encourages local authorities to promote walking by a range of measures including the creation of safe and secure walking routes, improved design and access to new developments, pedestrianisation schemes, traffic calming and pedestrian-friendly road crossings. We intend to publish the final version of PPG13 later this year.

In September 1998, the Government published a good practice guide "Places, Streets and Movement: A companion guide to Design Bulletin 32. Residential roads and footpaths", which explains how the layout of residential areas can contribute to the promotion of walking.

Rough Sleeper Deaths

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people sleeping rough died, broken down by cause of death, in each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [111070]

Mr. Hill: The Government do not collect this information. Research has, however, shown that the mortality rate of rough sleepers is higher than that of the general population; that rough sleepers are more likely than the general population to die of unnatural causes; and that they are much more likely to commit suicide.

Council Tax

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those local authorities that exceeded the council tax increase guideline set under the Council Tax Benefit subsidy limitation scheme in 1999–2000; what amount of subsidy is to be withdrawn from these local authorities in an individual basis; and on what date any withdrawal of subsidy will take effect. [111236]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Contributions to the cost of council tax benefit are required by 156 authorities in 1999–2000. Their contributions total £31.222 million. I have placed a table showing the individual figures for the 156 authorities in the Library.

Council tax benefit subsidy is paid in 12 monthly instalments during the year based on estimates submitted by the authority before the start of the financial year, and adjusted at mid year when authorities submit updated estimates. At the end of the financial year authorities submit final subsidy claims to DSS on actual expenditure when adjustments are made against previous estimates. The first subsidy instalments taking account of local contributions under the council tax benefit subsidy limitation scheme were made in October 1999 after authorities had submitted mid year estimates based on their contribution to council tax benefit.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Helsinki Council

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 13 December 1999, Official Report, columns 59–60W, concerning parliamentary scrutiny of policy decisions or agreements on matters placed before the European Council at Helsinki on 10 to 11 December 1999, if he will list (a) the decisions approved there together with the title and reference numbers of related public documents; and (b) when they and related Government memoranda were placed in the Vote Office of the House. [105129]

Mr. Vaz: Strictly speaking, the European Council does not take decisions, but notes documents submitted to it in Council Conclusions. A number of documents were submitted to the Helsinki European Council on 10–11 December 1999. The table gives the titles, references and details of the scrutiny history of each document.

Departmental Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 315W, what restrictions were placed on contractors carrying out research projects funded by his Department in 1999 in respect of them discussing their findings with journalists (a) before and (b) after publication. [108191]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 8 February 2000, Official Report, columns 135–37W.

Austria

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many bilateral meetings were held between his Department and its Austrian counterpart in each of the last five years; and what was discussed at each meeting since May 1997. [109876]

Mr. Vaz: From May 1997 until December 1999 there were many bilateral and other meetings involving Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers and Officials and their Austrian Ministry of Foreign Affairs counterparts. A wide range of issues, mostly on EU related matters was discussed.

Departmental Functions (Food)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if all food served at his Department's official functions meets the standards of production required of domestic producers. [109784]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 11 February 2000]: All food served at official functions in my office is obtained from suppliers who are subject to the relevant legal requirements.

EU Enlargement

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future of the enlarged European Union in the light of the Helsinki European Council agreement. [109952]

Mr. Vaz: On 14 February the member states of the European Union convened an Intergovernmental Conference to make the institutional changes necessary to prepare for enlargement. The following day they launched accession negotiations with six countries (Bulgaria, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Romania and Slovakia), increasing to 12 the total number of countries currently in negotiation. Both events represent important steps towards a swift and successful enlargement of the EU, in line with the Helsinki European Council conclusions.

EU General Affairs Council

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the outcome was of the General Affairs Council held in Brussels on 14 and 15 February; and if he will make a statement. [110552]

Mr. Vaz: The General Affairs Council in Brussels on 14–15 February adopted the A points listed in document no. 6075/00 and noted resolutions, decisions and opinions adopted by the European Parliament in its session of 3 February 2000 in Brussels, as listed in document no. 5316/00. Copies of these documents will be placed in the House Libraries as soon as they become available.

1. Preparations for Lisbon European Council

The Presidency summarised discussions so far. The UK welcomed the proposals for modernisation of the EU economy, and stressed the need for the Lisbon Special Council to agree clear objectives and a timetable for action.

2. Defence

The GAC agreed to establish three interim bodies as part of the follow-up to the Report to the Helsinki European Council on strengthening the Common European Security and Defence Policy: an interim Political and Security Committee, an interim military body, and a system for the detachment of national experts in the military field to the General Secretariat of the Council.

3. Charter of Rights

The Presidency gave a brief progress report on preparatory work on the draft EU Charter of Rights.

4. Commission reform

The GAC heard a presentation from the Commission Vice-President Neil Kinnock on proposals for management reform within the Commission. The GAC adopted conclusions welcoming these proposals and calling for their rapid implementation.

5. Freelance interpreters

The GAC did not reach agreement on the European Commission's proposal to restore the right of freelance interpreters employed by the Commission to be taxed at Community rates, rather than national rates. The issue will be reconsidered at a later date.

6. Opening of Inter-Governmental Conference (IGC)

Foreign Ministers inaugurated an Inter-Governmental Conference to decide institutional reforms necessary for enlargement. The President of the European Parliament, Nicole Fontaine, and the President of the Commission, Romano Prodi, made statements. Subsequent discussion focused on procedural arrangements for the IGC, such as the language regime for meetings and the order and scope of issues to be discussed.

7. Western Balkans

The GAC agreed to maintain its policy of applying maximum pressure on President Milosevic, without penalising the Serbian people. IT decided to suspend the flight ban for a period of six months, to extend the scope of the visa ban list and invited the Commission to present detailed proposals on enhancing the effectiveness of existing financial sanctions. The GAC repeated the urgency of re-establishing freedom of navigation on the Danube and agreed that responsibility in this regard lay mainly with the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY).

The GAC invited the Commission to submit further proposals to address Montenegro's most pressing needs, including facilitation of trade. It reiterated the importance of including Montenegro in the regional projects to be presented at the Regional Funding Conference for the stability pact.

The GAC reiterated its condemnation of all acts of violence in Kosovo and was particularly concerned by the renewed outbreak of ethnic violence in Mitrovica and the recent attacks against members of KFOR. The GAC warned that its assistance to Kosovo was dependent on progress in inter-ethnic reconciliation. The GAC took note of the High Representative's appeal to provide more police officers for the UN Civil Police mission, and welcomed the Commission's announcement of the early disbursement of 35 million euros to the consolidated Kosovo budget.

The GAC agreed on an early visit by an EU Ministerial Troika to Croatia. It also invited the Commission to prepare a feasibility study on the prospects of a Stability and Association Agreement. The Prime Minister of Croatia, Mr. Ivica Racan, joined EU Ministers for coffee after lunch.

The GAC reiterated its concern about the unwillingness of the leadership of Bosnia and Herzegovina to implement the New York declaration and efforts to unravel the Dayton-Paris General Frame Agreement for Peace.

The GAC gave its full support to the efforts of the Special Co-ordinator, the European Commission and the World bank to give a strong impetus to the Stability Pact's goal of reinvigorating the political and economic reform process and stimulating regional co-operation.

The GAC endorsed the principal findings in the Commission's report of the Stabilisation and Association process for Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Former Republic of Yugoslavia, Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Albania. The Council hoped that the next conditionality review could show significant improvements and underlined the need for fulfilment of all conditions by these countries.

8. Middle East Peace Process

The GAC issued conclusions urging restraint in Lebanon; expressing regret and concern that the 13 February deadline for a Framework Agreement between the Israelis and Palestinians had been missed; and urging the Israelis and Palestinians to resume negotiations with a view to concluding permanent status negotiation within the agreed target period.

9. Russia

The GAC discussed the latest situation in Chechnya, called on the Russian government to take immediate steps towards a peaceful solution and stressed the need to meet the humanitarian needs of people displaced by the war. The GAC reiterated its support for the OSCE and Council of Europe's efforts to reach a peaceful settlement and expressed its concern about the missing Russian journalist Andrei Babitski.

10. Mexico

The GAC welcomed the outcome of negotiation between the EU and Mexico on a Free Trade Agreement, and reaffirmed the importance of the Agreement entering into force quickly. The GAC also agreed that the Commission should monitor and evaluate the impact of the tariff import quota granted to Mexico for orange juice, and that the provisions agreed regarding rules of origin for industrial products did not constitute a precedent for negotiations with third countries.

11. EU/South Africa

The Council discussed outstanding difficulties relating to the provisional application of the EU/South Africa Trade, development and Co-operation Agreement. The Council agreed a draft letter to South Africa, on the basis of earlier discussions between South Africa and the European Commission, proposing a solution to the outstanding difficulties and confirming the Council's agreement to the provisional application.

12. Indonesia

The Commission presented a communication on Indonesia. This will be the subject of detailed discussion at the March GAC.

13. Association Council with Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia

Associations Councils with Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia were held in the margins of the GAC on 14 February. The Association Councils covered preparations for accession, trade, international issues and implementation of the European Agreements.

14. Enlargement

On 15 February, six separate Inter-Governmental Conferences were launched establishing accession negotiations with Bulgaria, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Romania and Slovakia.

Kazakhstan

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response the UK Ambassador made to the proposal by the Kazakhstan Government to change the country's capital city. [110695]

Mr. Vaz: It is not for our Ambassador to comment on the change of Kazakhstan's capital city, which transferred formally from Almaty to Astana in June 1998.

The British Embassy in Kazakhstan, which is also responsible for Krygyzstan, is still situated in Almaty, as are the Embassies of our EU partners and most other countries. We and our EU partners keep the question of transferring our Embassies to the new capital under regular review.

Serbia

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals the Government have for an expansion of the heating oil to Serbia scheme. [110694]

Mr. Vaz: The initial response of the Serbian government to the Energy for Democracy scheme was to block the first consignment of heating oil at the FRY/Macedonian border. They were forced to let the consignment through after public protests in the towns of Nis and Pirot. The scheme has helped to refute one of Milosevic's main propaganda lies, that the West is anti-Serb. The EU has now agreed to consider the expansion of the scheme to a further five towns: Novi Sad, Subotica, Sombor, Kraljevo and Kragujevac.

South-Eastern Europe

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what projects have been (a) agreed by and (b) put to, but not yet agreed by (i) the European Union, (ii) the World Bank, (iii) NATO and (iv) other institutions, as part of the Stability Pact for South-Eastern Europe. [110691]

Mr. Vaz: A large number of projects for the Economic Reconstruction and Security Working Tables of the Stability Pact were tabled at Pact meetings in Skopje on 10–11 February and Sarajevo on 15–16 February. Democracy and Human Rights projects are to be tabled at a meeting in Budapest on 21–22 February. Others are being submitted directly to the Office of the Stability Pact Special Co-Ordinator.

After the Budapest meeting the Special Co-ordinator's Office will begin tabulating, sifting and prioritising the projects, with a view to tabling a final list at a Regional Financing Conference to be held in Brussels on 29–30 March. International Financial Institutions (including the World Bank), the European Commission and other donors will then consider which of these projects might be financed.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what forthcoming conferences and meetings with UK Government involvement are planned to consider economic projects for South-Eastern Europe; and what is on the agendas. [110692]

Mr. Vaz: The UK expects to be represented at a South-Eastern Europe Regional Financing Conference in Brussels on 29–30 March, which will consider financing of projects for the region. The agenda for this meeting has not yet been set.

Danube

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received on cyanide pollution in the Danube; and if he will make a statement. [111003]

Mr. Vaz: We have followed with concern reports of the pollution in the Danube caused by a serious spill of cyanide-contaminated water from a gold mine in Western Romania. There is no UK involvement in this disaster. The UK supports the EU principle of "The Polluter Pays". We also support the EU initiative in calling for an investigation into the causes of this pollution.

European Union Political and Security Committee

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the (a) terms of reference and (b) proposed composition of the European Union Political and Security Committee. [110701]

Mr. Vaz: The Presidency report adopted at the Helsinki European Council on strengthening the common European security and defence policy adopted at the Helsinki European Council, and placed in the Library of the House, proposed the establishment of a standing Political and Security Committee which would deal with all aspects of the Common Foreign and Security Policy, including the common European security and defence policy, in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to Community competence; and that the Committee would be composed of national representatives of senior/ambassadorial level.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many senior civil servants from an ethnic minority background are employed in his Department; and how many of them are (a) men and (b) women. [110689]

Mr. Hain: Information on the ethnic origin of the Department's staff is collected on the understanding that it will be treated on a confidential basis. To protect the privacy of individual members of staff we do not disclose data relating to fewer than five people. My Department has fewer than five people of minority ethnic origin in its Senior Management Structure. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is committed to ensuring that it reflects the diversity of modern Britain. The Department has a comprehensive minority strategy in place to ensure this happens.

Russia

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the President of Russia; and if he will make a statement on the matters discussed. [111004]

Mr. Vaz: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will meet Acting President Vladimir Putin in Moscow this week. He expects to discuss the situation in Chechnya, the outlook for Russia, and a range of issues on the international agenda.

Middle East

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the Israeli (a) politicians and (b) political advisers who met Lord Levy on each of his visits to the Middle East as the Prime Minister's Special Envoy. [110509]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 17 February 2000]: I refer to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker).

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110725]

Mr. Hain: Our policy is that the use of peat should be avoided and manures, coir, bark chippings and organic fertilizers used instead.

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the electricity used by his Department is generated from renewable sources; and if he will make a statement. [111036]

Mr. Hain: None of the electricity used by the Department is currently generated from renewable sources.

British Council

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what extra Government grant will be allocated to the British Council for the opening of planned new country directorates in (a) Libya and (b) Iran. [111261]

Mr. Hain: The British Council is funded through grant-in-aid, voted by Parliament, for its activities world-wide rather than through specific grants for individual countries. The Council makes decisions about resource allocation for its activities in consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his policy to give the same percentage increase or decrease in Government grant to the British Council at the annual spending review as his Department receives in the review; and if he will make a statement. [111244]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for South-West Devon (Mr. Streeter) on 9 February 2000, Official Report, column 181W.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what extra grant was allocated by his Department to the British Council for opening the new country directorates in (a) Bolivia and (b) Cuba. [111262]

Mr. Hain: The British Council is provided with grant-in-aid funding for its activities world-wide. This Government provided the Council with an increase in its grant-in-aid at the first opportunity, ie in the Comprehensive Spending Review settlement covering 1999–2000 to 2001–02. The Council makes decisions on the allocation of resources for its activities, in consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Export Licences (Pakistan)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 February 2000, Official Report, column 336W, if he has amended any valid open general export licence since 12 October 1999 by removal of Pakistan as a permitted destination; whether he has issued any instructions to HM Customs and Excise to prevent the export to Pakistan of any specified goods for which a valid standard or open licence is in force; if he has revoked any licence for the export of licensable goods to Pakistan since 12 October 1999; and if he will make a statement. [111079]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 11 February 2000, Official Report, columns 336–37W. None of these steps have been taken. There is no arms embargo on Pakistan. It is possible that some exporters with valid licences agreed before 12 October have competed deliveries under these licences.

Recycling

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of documentation used by his Department is (a) made from recycled paper and (b) collected for recycling. [111600]

Mr. Hain: The FCO does not have this information readily available.

We are currently carrying out an Environmental Audit which will include recommendations on how to achieve the recycling targets set out in the 1st annual report of the Green Ministers committee.

"Your Britain, Your Europe" Roadshow

Mr. John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1999, Official Report, column 33W, which business, educational and other organisations contributed to the "Your Britain, Your Europe", roadshow; and what they contributed. [111152]

Mr. Vaz: I visited a number of schools and businesses during the "Your Britain, Your Europe" roadshow. These included Woodham Comprehensive School (Newton Aycliffe), St. Joseph's School (Hebburn), Nissan Manufacturing (UK), Hull University, CORUS Engineering Steels, Rotherham Chamber of Commerce, Kwik Strip Eco Solutions (Bristol), Queen Elizabeth Hospital School (Bristol), the South West Regional Euro Forum, Bath University, King Edward VI College (Nuneaton), St. John's Primary School (Birmingham), Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and De Montfort University (Leicester). Some of these organised events to mark my visit.

Mr. John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information was distributed during the "Your Britain, Your Europe" roadshow which directly related to the promotion of the European single currency. [111153]

Mr. Vaz: We did not distribute any material relating to the promotion of the European single currency during the roadshow.

EuroMed

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 762, on EuroMed, if he will list matters covered by negotiations for EuroMed agreements. [111164]

Mr. Vaz: Association Agreements negotiated between the EU and individual EuroMed countries cover a wide range of topics, including:

political dialogue

respect for human rights

free movement of goods

agricultural and fisheries products right of establishment and services movement of capital competition

economic cooperation

dialogue and cooperation against money laundering, drugs, terrorism and illegal immigration treatment of legally resident nationals cultural matters

financial cooperation (through the EU's MEDA funding programme).

European Union

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to press for greater flexibility in institutional arrangements in the European Union. [111382]

Mr. Vaz: The Government's approach to flexibility is set out in the IGC White Paper which was laid before the House on 15 February.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 15 February 2000, Official Report, column 781, concerning a united Europe of states, what the Government's policy is on the powers which states within the EU should continue to be able to exercise independently. [111109]

Mr. Vaz: The independence of member states is not an issue which will be addressed at the IGC. It will be about those reforms necessary to ensure the Union continues to function effectively after enlargement.

Seal Culling (Russia)

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Russian Government on the culling of baby seals in Russian waters. [111427]

Mr. Vaz: We raised the issue of seal culling with the Russian Ambassador in April last year. Our Embassy in Moscow raised it with the Russian authorities in July. On both occasions we reiterated the strong concerns felt about this issue by both parliamentarians and the British public.

Colonel Gaddafi

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of transcripts of interviews he has given on allegations of British intelligence involvement in an attempted assassination of Colonel Gaddafi. [111591]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have been asked about this subject in interviews given to the BBC on 9 August 1998 and 14 February 2000. These interviews are a matter of public record. The full text of the first of these interviews is available on the FCO website at www.fco.gov.uk/news/newstext.asp?1401.

Iran

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he is making to the Government of Iran about the death sentences imposed on three Iranian Bahài in the city of Mashad on 3 February; and if he will make a statement. [111621]

Mr. Hain: We are concerned at reports that three members of the Bahài community were sentenced to death on 3 February. We therefore welcome the subsequent statement from a spokesman for the Iranian Judiciary that no such sentences have been passed, and that there remained the possibility that any convictions would be quashed. The Portuguese Presidency on behalf of the EU member states summoned the Iranian Ambassador to Lisbon on 17 February to express our concern at these reports and seek clarification. The Ambassador was unsighted but said that he would convey the concern of the EU to Tehran. We shall be taking similar action bilaterally.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Power Stations

Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on Eastern Merchant Generation's proposal to retrofit the flue gas desulphurisation plant at the West Burton coal-fired power station. [111901]

Mrs. Liddell: I have today granted consent under Section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 to Eastern Merchant Generation Limited for the construction of flue gas desulphurisation plant at the 2,000 MW coal-fired power station at West Burton in Nottinghamshire. Planning permission for the plant has also been deemed to be granted, subject to 49 planning conditions agreed with the Nottinghamshire County Council and the Bassetlaw District Council and also subject to the company entering into an agreement with the County Council under section 106 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 to carry out necessary collateral works. The decisions have been taken in accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled 'Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee' (Cm 4071).

Copies of the Press Notice and decision letter are being placed in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on Smith Kline Beecham Pharmaceuticals and Scottish Power plc's proposal to build a combined heat and power station at Irvine, Ayrshire. [111903]

Mrs. Liddell: I have today given clearance under Section 14 of the Energy Act 1976 to SmithKline Beecham Pharmaceuticals and ScottishPower plc's notification to build a 45 MW gas-fired combined heat and power station at the SmithKline Beecham works, Irvine. The decision has been taken in accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled "Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071).

The decision to give clearance to the proposal on energy policy grounds is without prejudice to any decision that may be taken on whether or not planning permission is granted.

Copies of the Press Notice and the clearance letter are being placed in the Library of the House.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government will provide a detailed response to the Low Pay Commission's recommendations on the national minimum wage. [111902]

Mr. Byers: Yes. The Government are today publishing their detailed response to the recommendations and suggestions contained in the Low Pay Commission's second report. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses alongside the Report itself, which the Government published on Tuesday 15 February at the same time as they announced increases to the main and youth rates, and a new remit for the Low Pay Commission.

British American Tobacco

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposes to take regarding the trading activities of British American Tobacco; and if he will make a statement. [111486]

Dr. Howells: The Companies Acts enable me to investigate companies to establish the facts when there are suggestions of serious misconduct or fraud. The allegations here seem more appropriate for HM Customs and Excise, who are responsible for issues relating to smuggling and VAT evasion. I understand that officials there have received documents on this matter and are considering them.

The Health Select Committee is currently looking into aspects of this affair. My hon. Friend will understand that I cannot comment further.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implementation of the Working Time Directive. [110594]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government commissioned an interim report of research on the implementation of the Working Time Regulations. A copy of the report is available from the Library of the House.

Post Offices

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the proportion of the (a) turnover and (b) profit of sub-post offices in Paisley, South that accrued from benefit transaction charges in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [111138]

Mr. Alan Johnson: These figures are commercially confidential but I understand from the Post Office that, of the 17 post offices in the Paisley, South constituency, 12 derive 40 per cent. or more of their workload from Benefits Agency-related work.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many rural (a) banks and (b) post offices closed in each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [110711]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I understand from the Post Office that the numbers of rural post office closures are as follows:

Year to March
1992	33
1993	163
1994	160
1995	55
1996	131
1997	149
1998	235
1999	214

I understand from the British Bankers' Association that data on bank closures is not maintained in a form which identifies rural locations. The numbers of bank branch closures in total are as follows:

Year to December
1992	522
1993	626
1994	432
1995	646
1996	820
1997	680
1998	355

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many pensioners he estimates use rural post offices for collecting pensions; and if he will make a statement. [110710]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Post Office does not hold details of benefit recipients individually or by category.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to improve access to post offices for people in rural areas. [110781]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government are committed to ensuring that post offices are equipped and re-designed to face the future, and that they are thereby able to continue to play their role as an essential part of the country's social fabric. For the first time, under provisions in the Postal Services Bill, the Government will issue access criteria for post office counter services to ensure reasonable access to these services, particularly in rural areas and areas of social deprivation. Details of the access criteria will follow the conclusion of the work by the Performance and Innovation Unit.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the population lives (a) within one mile of a post office and (b) over three miles from a post office in (i) rural areas and (ii) urban areas. [110782]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Post Office have provided the following information:

Percentage

Distance	Urban	Rural	Northern Ireland
0.25 mile	49	19	29
0.50 mile	92	52	60
1 mile	100	85	83
2 miles	100	97	96
3 miles	100	99	100
5 miles	100	100	100

Rural areas comprise settlements of less than 6,300 people.

Data for Northern Ireland are not split between urban and rural categories.

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to help all sub-post offices to diversify into (a) bureau de change services, (b) car tax renewals, (c) National Lottery on-line and (d) mobile phone top-up cards; and if he will make a statement. [109479]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 11 February 2000]: A bureau de change service, introduced in 1996 and providing a wide range of currencies and travellers cheques, is available from all post offices nationwide. Currently 631 post offices offer an on demand bureau de change service whereby foreign currencies and travellers cheques can be bought over the counter. Bureau de change service is available to order throughout the rest of the network and provides delivery within four working days.

The number of vehicle re-licensing offices has increased from some 2,000 in the early eighties to the present 4,000.

National Lottery on-line terminals are sited in 4,303 post offices, of which 3,771 are sub-post offices and approximately 1,500 are located in rural areas.

Mobile phone pre-pay vouchers are currently available from some 4,800 post offices. I am pleased to be able to inform the right hon. Member that this service will be available to a further 1,800 post offices by April.

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the additional income which will accrue to post offices from cash dispensers to be installed in post offices over the next two years; and if he will make a statement. [109478]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The additional income accruing to post offices from the installation of cash dispensers will be dependent on the size and location of the post offices concerned.

Nannies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date he will implement a code of practice for nanny agencies. [111251]

Mr. Alan Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities announced on 17 January that the principles in the proposed voluntary code for nanny agencies would be reflected in the revised statutory regulations to govern the conduct of employment agencies which we expect to table in Spring. Specific guidance for nanny agencies will be issued around that time.

Holocaust Survivors

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he is making in discussions with the banking industry concerning bank charges levied on Holocaust survivors in respect of conversion of pensions to sterling from Deutchmarks; what response he has received from the banking industry to his letter to them; when he will place the relevant correspondence in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [111653]

Mr. Byers: As I said in my reply on 29 October 1999, Official Report, column 1012W, I am pursuing this matter with the banking industry. I will send a substantive reply to my hon. Friend as soon as I have received a full response from the banking industry. I will place a copy of my response in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Staff

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in the last five years, what proportion of women employees in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies under the control of his Department, (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours. [109234]

Dr. Howells: In DTI Headquarters, the following data are available on women taking and returning from maternity leave in the last five years:

Calendar year	Number of staff going on maternity leave	Number of staff returning from maternity leave
1995	116	32
1996	101	39
1997	67	37
1998	69	44
1999	67	37
Total	420	189

Those returning in each year may, in addition to their maternity leave entitlement on full pay, have taken a period of unpaid maternity leave which may extend up to 41 weeks after the birth. They will not therefore have necessarily begun their leave in the same year. Other staff may continue on a career break for up to 5 years following their full maternity leave entitlement.It is not possible to obtain the full data requested on length of maternity leave or hours worked on return for Headquarters staff using the Department's current personnel database without incurring disproportionate cost. Chief Executives of the Departments Agencies have been asked to reply separately.

Letter from Ian Jones to Caroline Flint, dated 22 February 2000:

You tabled a Parliamentary Question on 4 February to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry about women employees in his Department and executive agencies. I have been asked to reply in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS) which is an executive agency of the DTI.

Between 1997 and 1999 forty-three staff returned from maternity leave.

I am able to inform you that the remaining information you have requested is either not available or could only be made available at disproportionate cost. It is not possible for ETS to identify most of the data requested, using the current Personnel data system (Permis), without more complex programming which would take several days.

The information dates only from the period since the inception of the Employment Tribunals Service as an executive agency in 1997. There are no earlier records held on the Permis system.

Letter from J. S. Holden to Caroline Flint, dated 22 February 2000:

I have been asked to reply to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in respect of Companies House Executive Agency.

In the last five years, of the total number of women employees who have taken maternity leave.

(a) 100% returned to work after childbirth. However, 5% left shortly afterwards as they only returned so that they would not lose their paid maternity leave benefit. They would have been accommodated in part-time posts if they had so wished.

(b) 100% took their full paid maternity benefit.

(c) 30% changed their hours immediately on their return to work, and then worked on average 19 hours per week.

(d) 15% returned to full-time hours and changed to part-time hours subsequently, and then worked on average 24 hours per week.

The remainder carried on working their previous working pattern by choice, which could be either full-time or part-time.

Letter from David Hendon to Caroline Flint, dated 22 February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to your question on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency.

The following information relates to women within the Radiocommunications Agency who have taken maternity leave in the last five years.

(a) 84 percent of women returned to work after childbirth

(b) 66 percent of those women returned to work before the end of maternity leave of which the time range was 41 weeks and the mean time was 18 weeks

(c) 6 percent of women returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours for which the average part-time hours worked was 19 hours per week

(d) 9 percent of women returned work after childbirth on a full-time basis but subsequently reduced their hours.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Caroline Flint, dated 22 February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to your question about the proportion of women employees in The Insolvency Service who in the last five years (a) returned to work after childbirth, (b) returned to work after childbirth before the end of maternity leave, indicating the (1) time-range and (2) mean time, (c) returned to work after childbirth on reduced working hours, indicating the average hours worked and (d) returned to work after childbirth full-time and subsequently reduced their hours.

The table below provides limited information about the number and percentage* of female staff commencing and returning from maternity leave in the last five years:

Year	Number of women commencing maternity leave	Percentage	Number of women returning from maternity leave	Percentage
1995	27	3.75	40	5.6
1996	33	4.6	31	4.3
1997	29	4.0	32	4.4
1998	33	4.6	30	4.2
1999	20	2.8	28	3.9

* Based on the estimated number of women working in The Service during the five years of 720.

However, I regret that the information held centrally by The Service on its staff is not maintained in a form which would provide the specific details you have asked for except at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Caroline Flint, dated 22 February 2000:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of NWML to your question regarding women employees returning to work after childbirth.

Within the Agency in the last 5 years, 3 women employees (12.5% of the female workforce here) have taken maternity leave. Thus, in response to your specific questions:

(a) 100% returned to work after childbirth

(b) None returned before the end of maternity leave

(c) 100% returned to work on reduced working hours (although one employee had been part-time prior to maternity leave), the average hours being 20 per week.

(d) None returned full-time and subsequently reduced their hours.

I trust that this will be satisfactory.

Letter from Alison Brimelow to Caroline Flint, dated 22 February 2000:

I am replying on behalf of the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry relating to the return to work of women employees after childbirth during the last five years. The information is based on 77 cases.

(a) 81.8% returned to work after childbirth.

(b) 35% returned to work before the end of the Statutory Maternity Pay period.

(i) time range 5–15 weeks

(ii) mean time 14.04 weeks

(c) 26.8% returned to work on reduced working hours at an average of 18 hours per week.

(d) 15.6% returned to work full-time and subsequently reduced their hours.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many senior civil servants from an ethnic minority background are employed in his Department; and how many of them are (a) men and (b) women. [110688]

Dr. Howells: As at 1 April 1999, 55 members of the senior civil service as a whole were from an ethnic minority background (1.7 per cent).

Information on ethnic origin in the Civil Service is collected on the understanding that it will be treated on a confidential basis. To protect the privacy of individual members of staff we do not disclose data relating to fewer than five people.

My Department has fewer than five people of ethnic minority background in the Senior Civil Service.

Departmental Initiatives

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the initiatives launched by his Department since May 1997 under which specific grants are allocated, indicating in each case and for each financial year the funding provided by central Government. [109316]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 10 February 2000]: A detailed breakdown of the Department's activities is given in the annual Expenditure Plans Reports Trade and Industry: The Government's Expenditure Plans (Cm 3905, Cm 3605, Cm 4211), published by the Stationery Office Limited.

Paid Parental Leave

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many recent representations he has received in support of paid parental leave from (a) hon. Members and (b) others. [110466]

Mr. Byers: From the start of the consultation on the Maternity and Parental Leave Regulations on 4 August 1999, we have received approximately 310 representations in support of paid parental leave. This includes the consultation responses and around 260 letters received by the Department.

In addition to these representations, we have discussed this issue with key representatives and we are setting up a group to monitor and evaluate the take-up of unpaid parental leave. Its findings will influence our future thinking.

Retail Price Comparisons

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total net price in sterling of the 56 items surveyed in the AC Nielsen report for each of the four countries included in the project. [111059]

Dr. Howells: Information on the net price of each of the 56 items is included in AC Nielsen's report on international retail price comparisons, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. It is also available on the Internet.

The research was designed to provide item by item comparisons and comparisons of totals for any sub-group of items, or for the list as whole, are not valid.

Indonesia

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many arms export licences for Indonesia have been (a) applied for, (b) granted and (c) rejected since May 1997, in each case listing the categories of equipment they cover. [110772]

Dr. Howells: Details of export licensing decisions between 2 May 1997 and 31 December 1998 were set out in the Government's Annual Reports on Strategic Export Controls published by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in March and November 1999; copies are in the Library of the House.

The entry in the relevant legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating. As regards export licences granted since 1 January 1999, the Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated. Between 1 January 1999 and 11 February 2000, 16 Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) and eight Open Individual Export Licences (OIELs) were issued covering the export to consignees or end-users in Indonesia of goods subject to export control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, commonly known as the Military List. No applications for a SIEL or OIEL were refused during this period. Individual licences may cover a range of goods with various ratings (and OIELs may also cover a range of countries). Where this is so, the licence is included in the table in the total for all of the relevant ratings.

No new licences were issued for the export to Indonesia of goods on the Military List during the four month period of the EU arms embargo which expired on 17 January 2000.

This information does not cover any Media OIELs that may have been issued during this period. Media OIELs authorise the export to all destinations of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists, when working in areas of conflict.

As at 11 February 2000, decisions had not yet been taken on eight applications for a SIEL and 14 applications for an OIEL to export such goods to Indonesia.

This information should be considered in light of the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 307–08W.

In addition, between 2 May 1997 and 15 September 1999, Indonesia was a permitted destination on certain Open General Export Licences covering the export of goods on the Military List; copies of all Open General Export Licences valid during this period are in the Library of the House.

Arms Brokering

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to bring forward legislation to better regulate the brokering of arms. [110962]

Dr. Howells: The Government do have the powers to control trafficking and brokering under the United Nations Act 1946 where this is necessary to implement a binding UN Resolution. Under the European Communities Act 1972 the Government have the power to provide for enforcement of a Council Regulation prohibiting trafficking and brokering of specified goods, e.g. dual use goods where there is Community competence. However, competence to prohibit trafficking and brokering of arms or military equipment lies with the member states.

The Government's White Paper on Strategic Export Controls, published in July 1998, proposed new legislation to extend the Government's power to control trafficking and brokering in several areas, including with respect to the supply of military equipment to destinations subject to any form of arms embargo and the supply of equipment, the export from the UK of which has been banned because of evidence that goods of the same type have been used in torture.

The Government will announce proposals for new export control legislation in due course, following conclusion of the review of the White Paper proposals in the light of responses received.

Recycling

Mr. Cranusby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of documentation used by his Department is (a) made from recycled paper and (b) collected for recycling. [111609]

Dr. Howells: This Department purchases 44 per cent. recycled paper and 81 per cent. of waste paper is recycled.

Credit Blacklisting

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the percentage of adults in the UK who are credit blacklisted. [110733]

Dr. Howells: Most lenders use credit scoring techniques to help them decide whether they will lend to particular individuals. The Office of Fair Trading research for its 1999 report "Vulnerable Consumers and Financial Services" found that over six million households (out of a total of 24 million) were defined as having low or very low household income. Of these, 3.5 million did not use any form of credit. I would estimate that many of these would not satisfy the credit scoring test.

Assisted Areas Map

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he has made in reaching agreement with the European Commission on the determination of the new assisted areas map for Great Britain; and if he will make a statement. [111333]

Dr. Howells: Discussions with the Commission on the proposals for new Assisted Areas are continuing. We will announce the new map as soon as possible.

Gardening Leave

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many officials in his Department are on gardening leave. [111623]

Mr. Byers: On 22 February 2000, two officials in the Department's headquarters were at home on full pay pending appointment to a new position in the Department.

Transfer Technology Ltd.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when his Department first informed 10 Downing Street that the matter of Transfer Technology grants was being referred to the West Midlands Police; [111627]

(2) what was the grade of the official who advised that the matter of Transfer Technology grants should be referred to the West Midlands Police; [111625]

(3) when he was first advised that the matter of Transfer Technology grants should be referred to the West Midlands Police. [111624]

Mr. Byers: I received advice on this matter from one of the Department's Directors on 3 February 2000.

In accordance with normal procedure the No.10 Press Office was informed after I had taken my decision.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the grant paid to the hon. Member for Coventry, North-West (Mr. Robinson) in respect of Transfer Technology Ltd. as reference WMR 46414/Z1/1 was repaid. [111629]

Mr. Byers: A grant paid to Transfer Technology Ltd. under reference WMR 46414/Z1/1 has not been repaid.

No grant has been paid to my hon. Friend the Member for Coventry, North-West.

Austria (Trade)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what nugatory costs have been incurred by (a) his Department, (b) British Trade International and (c) potential exhibitors as a result of the postponement of the fashion trade fair planned for May 2000 in Vienna; and if he will make a statement. [111635]

Dr. Howells: British Trade International had committed funding of £50,000 to 'Britain Now', spread equally over this and the next financial year.

With the postponement of the event there will now be no call on the second tranche of our funding, ie for the financial year 2000–01. Of the £25,000 already transferred to the project, we are likely to incur some cancellation charges (eg for the fashion show models), although the scale of these is not yet clear. Other "logistic" sponsors (eg freight carriers/shippers and venue) and potential exhibitors have already confirmed that any cancellation fees incurred now will be offset against costs when we reactivate 'Britain Now' at a later date.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many British companies agreed to participate in the Trade Fair in Vienna in May 2000; and if he will list them. [111637]

Dr. Howells: The 'Britain Now' event was to be a showcase initiative, promoting the best of British Design in all its aspects, including the Millennium Product Static Exhibition. It was a joint effort by the British Embassy, Vienna, and British Trade International aimed at businesses, opinion formers and the general public in Eastern Austria, but also attracting visitors from the growing markets of the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Slovenia and Hungary.

At the time of the postponement, the British Embassy was still receiving approaches from potential participants. Those participants already committed include the Crafts Council; The British Jewellery and Giftware Federation; Glasgow 1999; The Royal Institute of Architects; Jaguar; Rover; Morgan; Lotus; Rolls Royce; Bentley; Aston Martin; Williams Formula 1 (sponsored by Castrol); British Tourist Authority; British Council; Barbour; Burberry's; Chester Barry; Daks-Simpson; John Smedley; Johnstons of Elgin; Pringle of Scotland; Bella Freud; Jasper Conran and Tristan Webber.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the British companies that have informed (a) his Department and (b) British Trade International that they will not participate in the Trade Fair planned for May 2000 in Vienna. [111634]

Dr. Howells: Bella Freud, fashion designer and granddaughter of Sigmund Freud, is the only participant to have withdrawn from participating in 'Britain Now' because of her family history in Austria. All other companies/organisations have already confirmed with the British Embassy and British Trade International their agreement to participate fully in 'Britain Now' at a later date.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what trade promotion activities to further UK trade with Austria (a) his Department and (b) British Trade International will be sponsoring or supporting financially during 2000. [111632]

Dr. Howells: It is important to stress that the sanctions imposed by the EU Member States on Austria are purely political measures. There is no trade embargo with Austria. British Trade International will therefore still be undertaking its normal trade promotion programme during 2000–01.

Initiatives under consideration include attendance by UK companies sponsored by British Trade International to attend key trade fairs; inward/outward missions and seminars.

Specifically:

RETA, a fire and security trade fair in September 2000.

British Trade International is aiming to recruit 10–20 UK companies to participate in the four-day exhibition. Cost to British Trade International will be approximately £7K.

PSDB 2000 (Police Scientific Development Branch).

In April, British Trade International will undertake a pan-European inward mission to this exhibition, recruiting from Poland, Switzerland, Austria, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Italy and Greece. Two participants have been confirmed from Austria, out of a total of 20 missioners. Cost to British Trade International will be approximately £1K.

Gartentreff (gardening trade fair).

In October, British Trade International will be funding a UK brochure stand displaying brochures from approximately 20 UK companies. The stand will be manned by the British Embassy with a cost to British Trade International of approximately £2K.

Anglo/Austrian Forum. May 2000.

This is a business to business seminar focusing on Anglo-Austrian trade; Austria as a gateway to Central and Eastern Europe and young entrepreneurs. 10–15 UK companies will be participating at a cost to British Trade International of approximately £1K.

Southampton Boat Show. September 2000.

An inward mission with five Austrian buyers. Cost to British Trade International approximately £2K.

Export Credit Guarantees

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications for credit guarantees were received by the ECGD, from which companies, for what amount, and on what date in respect of (a) the Pergau Dam, (b) Singapore Utilities Water Project, (c) the Turkwell Dam, (d) the Ewaso Ngiro Dam,

(e) the Ajaokuta Steel Plant, (f) the Katse Dam and (g) the Meula Dam; which applications were approved, for what amount, and on what date; what payment has been made against each project by the ECGD and on what date; what ECGD liability exists against each project; and if he will make a statement. [110393]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 21 February 2000]: ECGD can find no trace of applications for Credit Guarantees for the Singapore Utilities Water Project, the Turkwell Dam, and the Muela Dam. However ECGD was approached for support for the construction of an underground power station associated with the Muela Dam.

The answers to the question on the remaining Projects are set out in the following table.

The information on the Ajaokuta Steel Plant in Nigeria relates to an application for support for a Technical Training Centre associated with the Steel Plant.

National Regional Aid

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measurement of sparsity he made of the Inverness travel-to-work area when proposing the Highlands and Islands as a NUTS 2 area under the sparsity provision of the European Commission Guidelines on national regional aid. [111332]

Dr. Howells: We proposed the Highlands and Islands as a single NUTS 2 level area with a population of between nine and 10 inhabitants per square kilometre.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Consultation

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the public consultation exercises on policy matters carried out by his Department and its agencies in each of the last five years; who was consulted and by what means; how responses were analysed; how and in what form the results were transmitted to those responsible for the consultation; how the results of the consultation were published; and what analysis has been carried out of the extent and nature of policy changes resulting from the consultation. [106291]

Mr. Ingram: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Terrorist Violence (Victim Compensation)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what mechanisms are in place to monitor aftercare of victims of terrorist violence and punishment shootings; what is his assessment of the extent to which compensation payments have been subject to seizure by paramilitary organisations; how many incidents of such seizure have been reported; what is the RUC estimate of the extent of under-reporting; what steps are taken to prevent fraudulent claims; and what is his assessment of the proportion of claims that may be fraudulent. [107818]

Mr. Ingram: All patients receive the treatment and care necessary for their recovery. There are no mechanisms to monitor the aftercare of patients. There is no record of any incidents being reported to police relating to compensation payments being subject to seizure by paramilitary organisation. Consequently, the Royal Ulster Constabulary cannot give an assessment of the extent of such seizure and the level of under-reporting.

Each claim for criminal injury compensation is investigated by the Compensation Agency to establish that the statutory criteria contained in the Criminal Injuries Compensation (NI) Order 1988 are satisfied. This includes confirming that the alleged offence was reported to the police, obtaining copies of the police investigation report and witness statements, and the court outcome of any prosecution of alleged offenders. Where liability to pay compensation under the 1988 Order is accepted the amount of compensation is determined by reference to medical reports detailing the nature and extent of the injury suffered. The policy of the Compensation Agency is to refer all cases of alleged fraud to the police for investigation. No criminal injury claim arising from terrorist violence or punishment shooting has been referred to the police.

Departmental Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 32W, what restrictions were placed on contractors carrying out research projects funded by his Department in 1999 in respect of them discussing their findings with journalists (a) before and (b) after publication. [108205]

Mr. Ingram: Further to my reply to him of 10 January, contracts for research projects funded by this Department generally carry a clause highlighting the obligations of the contractor under the Official Secrets Act and/or a confidentiality clause preventing the contractor from printing, publishing or disclosing information gained during the course of the contract without the written consent of the Department.

Twenty four contracts did not contain restrictions which prevented the contractor from discussing the findings with journalists until after publication because the letting organisation. Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency, only part-funded the research. The copyright in these instances remain with the researcher.

Deaths (Investigations)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost to date of the inquiries into the deaths of (a) Mrs. Rosemary Nelson and (b) Mr. John Finucane. [109035]

Mr. Ingram: Information on the total cost of these investigations is not available. However, on Mrs. Nelson, £767,000 has been spent on this inquiry to date. This figure includes travel, overtime, accommodation and incidental expenses. It does not include the salary costs of Deputy Chief Constable Colin Port and his team of officers.

On the other death, (assuming that this refers to the murder of Patrick Finucane) the additional cost of police agencies' salaries, overtime, travel, accommodation and incidental expenses since 1989 is £2.3 million. The figure does not include RUC costs.

Thiepval Memorial Tower

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Government's support for the Thiepval Memorial Tower on the Somme. [111093]

Mr. Ingram: The Government are responsible for the maintenance of the Memorial. It also provides financial assistance to the Somme Association Ltd. which manages the visitor access.

Probation Service

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list each category of employee within the Northern Ireland Probation Service and the numbers employed in each category, broken down by (a) gender and (b) perceived community origin. [110657]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is given in the table:

Probation Board for Northern Ireland

Prosecutions

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases in each category of offence were referred by the RUC to the DPP in 1998 and 1999; and in how many and in what percentage of cases the DPP (a) directed no prosecutions and (b) brought a successful prosecution. [110659]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply as the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland and his Department are superintended by the Attorney-General for Northern Ireland.

The information sought is not available in the form requested. What information is available is set out in tabular form.

The figures given in the table for the number of persons reported include persons referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland by investigative agencies other than the RUC.

The figures relate to the number of persons proceeded against rather than the number of offences.

The number of cases dealt with in a year does not correlate directly with the number of cases reported and directed in that year as a proportion of the results will relate to persons reported and directed in previous years. Further, the figures for 1999 are incomplete as additional returns have to be collated.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Courts

30. Mr. Pond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of Kent magistrates courts committee's approach to consultation with local communities. [109643]

Jane Kennedy: The Justices of the Peace Act 1997 requires Magistrates Courts Committees to consult with the paying authority when proposing to close a courthouse.

It is for Kent Magistrates Courts Committee to determine the scope of its consultation but Committees are encouraged to consult wider than the statute requires, for example, with magistrates, staff, police, Probation, Crown Prosecution Service and other professional users.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the future of magistrates courts in Worcestershire. [109645]

Jane Kennedy: It is for the Hereford and Worcester Magistrates Courts Committee to determine the future of magistrates courts in both Worcestershire and Herefordshire. This is in consultation with the local paying authorities, the Worcestershire County Council and the County of Herefordshire District Council.

JPs

33. Mr. Tyler: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the impact on justices of the peace of his proposals to achieve economies in the magistrates courts. [R] [109650]

Jane Kennedy: I have made no assessment.

Magistrates Courts Committees are, under statute, responsible for the efficient and effective administration of the magistrates courts for their area.

Central Government provide 80 per cent. of the funding for Magistrates Courts Committees. The grant allocated for 1999–2000 was £257.5 million. In 2000–01 it is £270.3 million. The Magistrates Courts Committees experiencing hardship have been invited to apply for additional funding.

Immigration and Asylum

Ms Keeble: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on steps taken by his Department to process immigration and asylum cases. [109651]

Jane Kennedy: Plans are now in place to ensure that the Immigration Appellate Authorities have sufficient staff, judicial, IT and accommodation resources in order to meet the expected increase in workload in the year 2000–01.

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110722]

Jane Kennedy: My Department does not use peat compost in the gardens that it owns. The Department's Environment Strategy, while not specifically referring to peat compost, makes a commitment to the integration of sound environmental practice into operational activities. The agents responsible for managing my Department's estate are required to integrate good environment practice into the procurement and supervision of grounds maintenance contracts.

Information on the use of peat compost on land managed in trust my Department is not collected and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Recycling

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of documentation used by his Department is (a) made from recycled paper and (b) collected for recycling. [111604]

Jane Kennedy: The paper in the documentation used by my Department comes from various independently verified sustainable sources. Information on the percentage of documentation that comes from recycled paper could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All sensitive waste is either recycled or incinerated to generate electricity. Information on the percentage of documentation that is recycled by my Department is not collected and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Conditional Fees

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what advice he has given to the Rules Committee on the rules of court he considers necessary on conditional fees; and if he will make a statement. [111657]

Mr. Lock: The paper, "The Government's conclusions following consultation on Conditional Fees: sharing the risks of litigation" was published on 31 January. That paper sets out the Government's recommendations in respect of rules of court to govern the recovery of the success fee under a conditional fee agreement and of insurance premiums. A copy of the paper has been sent to the Civil Procedure Rule Committee.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assistance will be offered to (a) the public and (b) the legal profession in relation to understanding and preparing for the new rules on conditional fees; and if he will make a statement. [111658]

Mr. Lock: The Government will introduce new regulations on 1 April requiring all legal representatives to provide information to lay clients who are considering entering conditional fee agreements. The regulations will require a legal representative, before entering a conditional fee agreement, to explore with the client whether alternative methods of funding the litigation are available, including whether the client's liability for their costs (including the costs of another party) may be covered by insurance. The regulations will require the legal representative to provide an oral explanation of the agreement in addition to providing written information. My Department is also working with the Legal Aid Board to prepare an information leaflet for members of the public explaining the options they will have for financing litigation.

The report entitled "The Government's Conclusions Following Consultation on Conditional Fees: Sharing the Costs of Litigation", published on 1 February, announced the principles to be set out in regulations applying to conditional fee agreements and contained recommendations to the Civil Procedure Rule Committee concerning the detailed guidance of rules of court governing the recovery of success fees under conditional fee agreements and premiums for after the event insurance policies. Legal representatives can refer for guidance on the regulations to this document, and to the regulations and rules of court themselves once they are made.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent representations he has received concerning (a) the substance of and (b) the procedure leading to, the new rules of court on conditional fees; and if he will make a statement. [111656]

Mr. Lock: The Government received 91 responses to their consultation paper "Conditional Fees: Sharing the Risks of Litigation" on 23 September 1999 from respondents providing views on the regulations and rules of court required to give effect to its policy on conditional fee agreements. These included responses from consumer groups, the Civil Justice Council, the Association of District Judges, the Senior Costs Judge, the legal professional bodies (including those with a specialist interest in conditional fees such as the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers), the trade unions and their legal representatives, individual judges, practitioners and the insurance industry. The views of respondents are summarised in the report entitled "The Government's Conclusions Following Consultation on Conditional Fees: Sharing the Costs of Litigation". That document also lists the names of respondents.

Since the publication of the report I have received a number of letters from practitioners welcoming the principles the Government intend to set out in regulations applying to conditional fee agreements. These practitioners also welcomed the Government's recommendations to Civil Procedure Rule Committee concerning the detailed guidance in rules of court governing the recovery of success fees under conditional fee agreements and premiums for after the event insurance policies.

I have also received representations from the President of the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers which among other things suggested that its representative and a representative of the Federation of Insurance Lawyers should be co-opted to assist the Civil Procedure Rule Committee draft rules of court, given their special interest in conditional fee agreements and insurance. The Government have no power under the Civil Procedure Act 1997 to co-opt representatives onto the Committee.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent representations he has received concerning the proposed 1 April implementation date for rules of court concerning conditional fees; and if he will make a statement. [111655]

Mr. Lock: I have received two letters from the President of the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers expressing concern that the Government might have to defer its plans to make success fees and insurance premiums recoverable from 1 April 2000. No such deferment is planned.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what will be recoverable in respect of conditional fee success fees by a successful litigant's lawyers by way of maximum percentage of cap, in relation to each type of work for which success fees can be recovered. [111587]

Mr. Lock: The maximum success fees in cases where success fees are permitted will remain at 100 per cent. Recoverability will be subject to the discretion of the court.

Insurance Premiums

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to ensure that after-the-event insurance premiums recoverable against a losing party will relate only to the risk against incurring a liability in a proceedings and not to financing or marketing expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [111654]

Mr. Lock: In its recommendations to the Civil Procedure Rule Committee the Government made clear their wish that rules of court relating to success fees under conditional fee agreements or litigation insurance premiums should provide that only the element relating to the risk that was being covered should be recoverable. A recoverable success fee or insurance premium, in the Government's view, should reflect the related business overheads including, for example, the cost of marketing the services or products concerned. It would be neither desirable nor practicable to attempt to identify and exclude particular elements of normal overhead costs from success fees or insurance premiums.

The Government have also made clear that they do not believe that the costs relating to financing a case, such as actual or notional interest or credit charges, should be recoverable whether as part of the premium or the success fee.

It is, however, for the Civil Procedure Rule Committee to decide what detailed rules of court are needed to govern the recoverability of success fees and insurance premiums.

National Insurance Commissioners

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appeals by claimants to the National Insurance Commissioners were (a) granted leave, (b) successful and (c) remitted for rehearing to an appeal tribunal, for each region of the country, in each of the last three years. [111390]

Jane Kennedy: We do not categorise appeals by region and therefore are unable to provide the information in the form requested. However details of the number of applications in which leave was granted, in each of the last three years and, of the number of appeals determined in each of these years, the numbers which many were in the claimant's favour are set out in the tables.

Applications

	Granted	Leave Refused	Closed	Total
1997	1,865	2,850	37	4,752
1998	1,364	1,130	35	2,529
1999	2,010	1,935	31	3,976

Appeals

	Appeals decided	Decision in claimant's favour
1997	3,926	2,939
1998	4,317	3,210
1999	4,140	3,237

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) in relation to cases classed as lookalike, delayed behind a l d case before or beyond the NI commissioners what was (a) the average, (b) the median and (c) the longest delay (i) before disposal and (ii) so far while waiting for disposal in each of the last three years; [111395]

(2) in relation to appeals heard by the National Insurance Commissioners, how many times the DSS was represented by (a) solicitors, (b) junior counsel or advocate, (c) a QC and (d) DSS in-house staff in each of the last three years; [111393]

(3) what was the (a) average, (b) median and (c) longest delay between grant of leave to a claimant to appeal to the National Insurance Commissioners and the receipt of the (i) representations in writing of the DSS and (ii) representations in writing of the claimant in each of the last three years; [111392]

(4) how many successful appeals to the National Insurance Commissioners were remitted for rehearing to appeal tribunals in each of the last three years. [111397]

Jane Kennedy: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in relation to appeals heard by the National Insurance Commissioners (a) what was the total number of appeals heard and (b) how many claimants were represented (i) by solicitors, (ii) by junior counsel or advocate, (iii) by a QC, (iv) by an advice worker and (v) by his or her self in each of the last three years. [111394]

Jane Kennedy: Data regarding representation at appeal hearings are not kept, although it is unusual for claimants to be represented by solicitors, junior counsel or advocate or a QC. Claimants are on occasions represented by advice workers but in the main represent themselves.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many lead cases on appeal for the National Insurance Commissioners there were to higher courts; what was the name of each lead case; how many lookalike cases were held up in relation to each such case; and in relation to each such case in which court the case (a) was disposed of and (b) is awaiting disposal. [111396]

Jane Kennedy: The information is as follows:

(1) Lead case—Bate (Income support severe disability premium)

13 January 1993—Decided by the Commissioner adversely to the claimant on the question of backdating.

30 November 1994—Appeal by claimant to Court of Appeal allowed on a fresh point.

16 May 1996—Appeal by Secretary of State/Adjudication Officer to House of Lords allowed.

There were approximately 5,000 lookalike cases.

(2) Lead case—Fairey (Day attention condition of DLA)

14 October 1994—Decided by Commissioner in favour of claimant.

15 June 1995—Appeal by Secretary of State/Adjudication Officer to Court of Appeal dismissed by a majority.

21 May 1997—Further appeal by Secretary of State/Adjudication Officer to House of Lords dismissed.

There were approximately 320 lookalike cases.

(3) Lead case—Plummer and Hammond (Retirement allowance (industrial injuries benefit replacing reduced earnings allowance))

28 May 1997—Decided by Commissioner adverse to Claimant.

8 December 1998—Appeal by claimant to Court of Appeal dismissed.

Approximately 150 lookalike cases were then decided by the Commissioner.

Of the original 350 cases the remainder still await a judgment of the European Court of Justice in five representative cases (Hepple, Stec and others).

8 May 1998—Reference by Commissioner to ECJ.

(4) Lead case—Stafford and Banks (Benefit for casual workers during school holidays)

24 February 1999—Decided by Commissioner in claimant's favour.

October 1999—Secretary of State/Adjudication Officer to Court of Appeal allowed.

The claimant's petition for leave to appeal to House of Lords is outstanding.

There are approximately 100 cases waiting decision.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the most recent figures for confirmed BSE cases broken down by year of birth. [111528]

Ms Quin: The position as at 16 February 2000 was as follows:

Year of birth	Total number of confirmed cases
1974	1
1976	2
1977	10
1978	6
1979	41
1980	101

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to publish the evidence given in the Phillips inquiry into BSE. [110501]

Ms Quin: The BSE Inquiry is responsible for decisions about the publication of the evidence it receives and its approach has been to make available the evidence on which it relies. It has published witness statements and transcripts of all oral hearings on the internet at http://www.bse.org.uk, and many other documents are publicly available at its offices.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what (a) evidence and (b) observations relating to the use of organophosphates on cattle he has submitted to the Phillips inquiry. [110502]

Ms Quin: My Department has provided numerous documents on the use of organophosphorus based warblecides to the BSE Inquiry, including papers on the warble fly eradication programme and on the licensing of warblecides.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what live tests have resulted from the research which he sponsored as a result of the open competition for research on BSE diagnosis in cattle in 1994. [110527]

Ms Quin: No research on BSE diagnosis was funded following the open competition for research in 1994. This competition did not call for work in this area. There was, however, a competition in 1996 which resulted in three projects on diagnostic tests for BSE. One of these, which was designed to investigate the differences in metabolic markers in the live animal, is still in progress. None of this work has yet produced a test which can be used in the live animal. Useful post mortem tests have resulted from the completed projects. These are now being evaluated and developed further to improve their sensitivity.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken to protect (a) British consumers and (b) the British cattle herd since he was informed of the contents of the report to Directorate D of the Health and Consumer Protection Directorate-General of a veterinary mission to France with regard to certain protective measures against BSE and scrapie with particular reference to implementation of Commission Decisions 94/381/EC, 98/272/EC, 98/703EC and 97/18/EC. [109788]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 11 February 2000]: Domestic legislation already in place to safeguard consumers prohibits the import of bovine specified risk material and the sale of any meat derived from cattle over 30 months old. Compliance with the prohibition on meat and bone meal in feed is monitored through regular sampling.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what dates he has (a) spoken by telephone to and (b) met (i) the French Minister of Agriculture, (ii) the European Commissioner with responsibility for agriculture and (iii) the European Commissioner with responsibility for health and consumer protection to discuss the contents of the report to Directorate D of the Health and Consumer Protection Directorate-General of a veterinary mission to France with regard to certain protective measures against BSE and scrapie, with particular reference to implementation of Commission Decisions 94/381/EC, 98/272/EC, 98/703EC and 97/18/EC. [109787]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 11 February 2000]: These issues are for the Commission and individual member states, not for bilateral discussion between member states.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he was first informed of the contents of the report to Directorate D of the Health and Consumer Protection Directorate-General of a veterinary mission to France with regard to certain protective measures against BSE and scrapie, with particular reference to implementation of Commission Decisions 94/381/EC, 98/272/EC 98/703EC and 97/18/EC. [109789]

Mr. Nick Brown: I was informed of the report on 6 February.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list, for each of the last two years for which records are available, the ages at the time of diagnosis of all the cattle in the United Kingdom diagnosed as suffering from BSE. [109328]

Ms Quin: The table shows the number of confirmed cases of BSE reported in the UK in the calendar years 1998 and 1999[1], by age of the animals.

Age in years	1998	1999[1]
1–2	0	0

Totals	3,196	2,170

[1] Preliminary figures for 1999 as at 9 February 2000

Lamb

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total tonnage of lamb offered in the United Kingdom under the private storage aid scheme adopted by the EU Sheepmeat Management Committee on 17 September 1999; how many carcases this represented; and what were the corresponding figures for Northern Ireland. [111248]

Ms Quin [holding answer 21 February 2000]: Commission Regulation (EC) No. 2099/1999 provided for aid for the private storage of lamb up to a limit of 2,350 tonnes in the United Kingdom.

2,306 tonnes were offered into the Scheme from Great Britain with contracts issued in respect of 2,297 tonnes. The accepted figure represents 131,236 carcases.

53 tonnes were offered and accepted from Northern Ireland representing 3,289 carcases.

Feedingstuff Regulations

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy towards the proposals for the administering of vitamins and minerals contained within section 13 of the EU Draft Feedingstuff Regulations 2000. [110753]

Ms Quin [holding answer 21 February 2000]: My Department's recent consultation on the draft Feedingstuff Regulations 2000, specifically requested comments on regulation 13 in order that all the implications of this proposed measure could be assessed. We will be in a position to make a decision on this issue shortly, when we have considered all the responses.

Exchange Rate

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the availability of EU funds to offset the impact of fluctuations in the green pound. [110712]

Ms Quin: £264 million in agrimonetary compensation has been, or is being, paid to UK livestock and arable farmers as the 100 per cent. EU-funded first instalment of a compulsory three year package to compensate for the effects on direct payments of euro/sterling exchange rates in 1999. A further £132 million of EU funds will be paid over the period 2000 to 2001 if exchange rates remain as they are.

Following further currency fluctuation, additional optional EU-funded compensation is available; details will be provided by the Commission at the end of next month. Any additional expenditure on agrimonetary compensation would have to be considered against other calls on public expenditure; because of the Fontainebleau rebate the UK taxpayer would pay about 71p for every £1 spent.

Regulation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives are being pursued to reduce the costs arising for agriculture from regulation in (a) the short-term and (b) the long-term. [110533]

Ms Quin: The new support package for farmers announced on 20 September 1999 included two measures which will save the industry £89 million over three years. Charges for inspection of the removal of Specified Risk Material from cattle and sheep carcases and for the provision of cattle passports will not be imposed before 2002–03 at the earliest. On 1 December 1999 we announced that meat hygiene inspection charges for the whole of 1999–2000 are being held at the levels fixed for 1998–99. The charges for 2000–01 will not rise by more than the rate of inflation over current levels.

Following the review of regulatory burdens three priority reports were presented by the industry-led working groups before Christmas. They were asked to root out unnecessary burdens or to find ways of doing things better. They made 107 recommendations 98 of which were accepted and six will require further consideration. Twenty-three will need to be pursued in Brussels. The aim is to implement these recommendations as quickly as possible. Reports on other issues are expected shortly. We shall continue to work to minimise burdens wherever possible. The next phase will look at policies or schemes run by other Government Departments.

Sheep Premium

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received on the effect that exchange rates have had on the sheep premium calculation; and if he will make a statement. [110526]

Ms Quin: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member on 10 February 2000, Official Report, column 285W.

British Cattle Movement Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what proposals he has to audit the performance of the British Cattle Movement Service; [110595]

(2) what initiatives he is pursuing to improve the efficiency and performance of the British Cattle Movement Service. [110535]

Ms Quin: The British Cattle Movement Service (BCMS) is subject to regular audit both from within my Department and by the National Audit Office.

BCMS's performance is monitored against its Public Service Agreement Targets. Industry now has a key role in this process through the recently formed Cattle Tracing Industry Forum.

As a relatively new organisation, BCMS has been developing its quality control procedures and these have already delivered significant improvements in efficiency. As a result of current management initiatives, together with the commitment of BCMS staff, it is expected that registration of the BCMS quality management system under International Standard ISO EN BS 9002 will be achieved during the next financial year.

BCMS is also undertaking a programme of visits to commercial organisations and to other member states carrying out analogous services. The visits are intended as a best practice and benchmarking exercise to compare business efficiency. One comparison visit with the commercial sector has already taken place and efficiency visits to two other member states' cattle tracing organisations are arranged for March and April.

Farming (Promotion)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives he is pursuing to promote a stronger partnership between farming, its customers and consumers. [110537]

Ms Quin: We are working on a number of initiatives with interested organisations, including the National Farmers Union and IGD (formerly the Institute of Grocery Distribution) to encourage primary producers to work together and with their customers, and to increase understanding of one another and of consumers. The importance of such partnerships was highlighted in the report of the Food Chain Group, which was published last November. The Group identified a range of issues for Government and for industry, and we intend to review progress in the summer.

Hedgerows

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of arable farms have hedgerow buffer strips around their fields; and if he will make a statement. [110704]

Ms Quin: Some figures are available for the length of arable margins on which payments are made under agri-environment schemes, but these do not take account of all other farms where farmers may voluntarily have buffer strips. Figures on the percentage of farms which have buffer strips are not collected and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Beef on the Bone

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what European Commission measures would regulate any bans on the sale of beef on the bone. [107238]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 27 January 2000]: In the light of public protection measures already taken in the UK and the professional advice available to government, we see no case for the re-introduction of such a ban by European Commission measures.

Agriculture Development Scheme

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bristol, North-West (Dr. Naysmith) of 2 February 2000, Official Report, columns 641–42W, concerning the agriculture development scheme, what was the amount of grant aid offered to each of the lead organisations listed. [109689]

Mr. Nick Brown: The size of individual awards is commercially confidential, but these grants range in value from £5,500 to £100,000.

Food Chain Group

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Food Chain Group. [109795]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 11 February 2000]: The Food Chain Group comprises senior figures from the National Farmers Union, Food and Drink Federation, IGD (formerly the Institute of Grocery Distribution) and MAFF, under the chairmanship of a senior MAFF official. The Group was invited to review the opportunities for working together and increasing understanding among the players in the food chain, and between the industry as a whole and consumers.

The Group's report, which was published on 10 November last year and a copy placed in the Library of the House, has been welcomed by many across the supply chain as a significant contribution to the drive to improve agri-food competitiveness. I have asked the Policy Issues Council of IGD to consider how best to take forward those issues which are for the industry. We intend to review progress in the summer.

GM Crops

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if EU Marketing Consent has been given for 98/294/CE Elgina Monsanto Bt maize; on which national seed lists the seed is currently included; and if it is subject to field trials in any EU state; [110290]

(2) if EU marketing consent has been given for 98/293/CE Chardonell Aventis herbicide tolerant maize; on which national seed lists the seeds are currently included; and if they are subject to field trials in any EU state; [110291]

(3) if EU marketing consent has been given for 97/98/CE Compa CB Novartis Bt/herbicide tolerant maize; on which national seed lists the seeds are currently included; and if they are subject to field trials in any EU state. [110293]

Ms Quin: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions take the policy lead on marketing consents under Directive 90/220/EEC. They have advised that marketing consents have been given in respect of all of the above Commission decisions. The position with regard to national listing for these varieties is as follows:

Chardon LL—on the Dutch national list

Compa CB—on Spanish national list

Jordi—on the Spanish national list

Elgina and Compa CB—were added to the Portuguese national list but the Portuguese authorities have notified the Commission that their registration has been suspended.

We are not aware if any of these varieties are the subject of field trials in other EU member states.

Pet Travel Scheme

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations he has received from airlines regarding the pet travel scheme; [109362]

(2) when he plans to include airlines in the arrangements available under the pet travel scheme. [109360]

Ms Quin: All airlines flying into the UK were invited to express interest in taking part in the Pet Travel Scheme. Eight have done so. Discussions are still underway with the following airlines with a view to agreeing their "Required Methods of Operation":

British Airways,

British Midland,

Finnair, Iberia Airlines,

Lufthansa,

Qantas.

Once these have been agreed the airlines concerned will be able to enter the scheme.

TREASURY

Underweight Babies

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the (a) number and (b) percentage of underweight babies born in each health authority area in each of the past 10 years. [110827]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 21 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on underweight babies by health authority for each of the past ten years.

The number of live births under 2,500 grams and their percentage of all live births with a stated birthweight in each Regional Office and health Authority for 1990–1998 are shown in the attached table. Also provided are the number of live and stillbirths under 2,500 grams and their percentage of all births with stated birthweight in each Regional Office and Health Authority for 1990–1998. Data for 1989 are not available based on the latest health authority boundaries as at 1st April 1999.

I will arrange for a copy of this letter to be placed in the House of Commons library.

Note:

The table referred to has been placed in the Library.

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many underweight babies were born in each health authority for each of the past 10 years; and what percentage of live births this represented. [110766]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Dari Taylor, dated 22 February 2000:

Import/Export Traders

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements have been made to assess demand from import/export traders for simplified Customs procedures across the community. [11910]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs are planning to carry out pilot studies of a Single European Authorisation (SEA) which would allow multinational traders to be authorised by and pay customs duty to one Member State in respect of all their import and export operations within the European Union. Excise duties such as on alcohol and tobacco products are excluded from these arrangements. The Government considers that SEA will increase the competitiveness of UK business by reducing their administrative burdens. It will facilitate the opportunities for speedy paperless movement of goods throughout the EU.

SEA is actively promoted by the main UK trade associations and their affiliated associations in the EU, including the Freight Transport Association and the Confederation of British Industry.

Under the terms of the trials businesses will be able to centralise the payment of duty in one accounting centre in one of the Member States, even though the movement of goods may take place elsewhere in the Community. VAT will be excluded from the trial because it is a 'destination' based tax and has to be accounted for in the Member State where the goods are 'consumed'. The provision of trade statistics, too, will remain a national requirement.

The United Kingdom plans to undertake up to 12 pilot studies. They will be closely assessed and each authorisation will be reviewed after 12 months. In addition, the project as a whole will be evaluated before any decision is taken to adopt the procedure permanently, which would require Community legislation. The procedure does not involve any transfer of responsibility from the Member States to the European Commission.

To safeguard the interests of both the UK and other Member States with whom we enter into such arrangements, a Joint Understanding on Co-operation will be signed by the customs administrations involved to govern the conduct of the pilot studies. Discussions are at their most advanced with the Dutch customs administration and I am placing a copy of the draft understanding in the Libraries of both Houses. The document is expected to provide a template for similar agreements with other Member States.

Although the pilot arrangements will allow duty to be paid in one Member State for goods imported into another, there will be no difference in the total amount the Member States' customs duty contributes to the Community. Customs will negotiate reciprocal arrangements with other Member States in respect of the 10 per cent. of duty which is retained by the Member States to cover their costs of collecting Community duties. It is envisaged that the arrangements will vary depending on the circumstances of each agreement.

Customs have already undertaken a financial impact analysis of the top 500 UK customs duty payers to assess what would happen to duty payments for each of these traders if they were authorised for SEA. The analysis suggests that the consequences for the UK's retained Own Resources (including interest) for duty collected under SEA if the arrangements were universally implemented would be likely to be positive.

The SEA arrangements represent a significant departure from usual practice for collecting and making available Community own resources which would help to streamline and modernise the collection of customs duty, and facilitate trade by reducing traders' compliance costs.

Personal Services (Taxation)

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the draft legislation covering the taxation of personal services provided through intermediaries (IR35) will be published. [111869]

Dawn Primarolo: The draft Finance Bill clauses, draft Social Security Regulations and accompanying Explanatory Notes have been published today. Copies have been placed on the Inland Revenue website (www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/ir35) and also in the Libraries of the House.

The Social Security Regulations will come into force on 6 April 2000. The Finance Bill clauses will be debated during the passage of the Finance Bill and will become law once the Finance Bill has received Royal Assent. The tax changes will be applied retrospectively from 6 April 2000.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact of changes in (a) indirect taxation, (b) direct taxation and (c) benefits since May 1997 on the real-terms incomes of an average pensioner household; and if he will indicate the method he used in making this calculation. [111169]

Mr. Timms: The Government have introduced a package of measures to provide support that is decent and fair and ensures that even the least well off pensioners can share in the increasing prosperity of the nation.

As a result of the measures announced by the Government, pensioner households will be, on average, £300 a year better off.

The Minimum Income Guarantee for pensioners was introduced in April 1999. The Government are committed to increase the MIG in line with earnings throughout the remainder of this Parliament;

The five-fold increase in the Winter Fuel Allowance for pensioners means that pensioner households will receive a payment of £100 every winter;

Under the Minimum Tax Guarantee, the age related personal allowances were increased by £200 more than statutory indexation in April 1999, thereby lifting 200,000 pensioners out of tax. Pensioners aged 65 or over now have to have an income of at least £110 a week before they pay any income tax;

The extension of the 10p rate of income tax to savings income will benefit 1.5 million pensioners;

Free television licences for pensioners aged 75 and over will be introduced in autumn 2000 and will benefit over three million pensioner households.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms using 1998–99 prices the total level of national insurance contributions received for each year from 1979–80 to 1999–2000, indicating for each of those years the real terms percentage growth of national insurance contributions received in relation to the preceding year's total. [110026]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 17 February 2000]: Available information for Great Britain is given in the table.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many requests for employment histories are pending in the National Insurance Contributions Office; and what assessment he has made of the period of time required to clear the backlog. [110085]

Dawn Primarolo: As at Friday 4 February 2000 there were 5,790 employment history cases awaiting completion. It is estimated that it will take 34 weeks to recover and restore the normal target clearance of 13 weeks for these cases. We anticipate being back on target by 31 October 2000.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what target has been set for average response times for employment history requests when the new National Insurance Recording System is fully operational; and from what date the target will be applicable. [110086]

Dawn Primarolo: The target will remain at the current 13 weeks from receipt of the request.

NIRS2

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if implementation milestones have been agreed for the rollout of the NIRS2 project; if those milestones have been revised; and on what dates, and in respect of what sums, penalty payments have been incurred by the NIRS2 project manager. [111670]

Mr. Timms: Implementation milestones were agreed for the NIRS2 project when the Private Finance Initiative contract was awarded in May 1995.

The original implementation date for the first NIRS2 Release was on 10 February 1997. In July 1996 this milestone was revised to allow the first release to be phased in over three stages between 10 February and 5 April 1998. Subsequent releases, that have introduced changes to the system, have been successfully delivered and on time.

The supplier, Andersen Consulting, has made compensation payments for the revised implementation strategy of £4.1 million.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the payments made for the commissioning of the NIRS2 project and the dates on which payments were made; and what further programme of payments to commission NIRS2 has been agreed. [111669]

Mr. Timms: The table shows the payments made to Andersen Consulting for the work commissioned from them during the NIRS2 project. The payments cover both the provisions of the NIRS2 service and changes that have been made to the system.

Tobacco Smuggling

Mr. Austin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he proposes to take following allegations that tobacco companies are involved in smuggling and evasion of customs and excise duties; and if he will make a statement. [111487]

Mr. Timms: HM Customs and Excise will examine thoroughly any information provided to them about criminal involvement by any organisation or individual in the smuggling of tobacco or any other goods into the UK and will take appropriate action.

E-commerce

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that e-commerce transactions bear the full tax liabilities; what examination he is making of e-commerce websites; and what revenue he anticipates from e-commerce transaction tax in the current financial year. [111357]

Mr. Timms: The Government's policy on the taxation of e-commerce was set out in a paper "Electronic Commerce: The UK's Taxation Agenda". This was published jointly by Customs and Excise and Inland Revenue in November 1999. A copy of the paper is in the Library.

Office for National Statistics

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will hold an inquiry into the alleged leak of ONS average earnings figures on Wednesday 16 February. [111619]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government are committed to the highest standards in the handling and release of market sensitive data. Data leaks by their nature are serious. We have seen no evidence but if any did emerge we would take it very seriously indeed.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 14 February 2000, Official Report, column 451W, on asset sales if he will list projections of aggregate receipts by Department in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02. [111276]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Data for 1999–2000 and projections for the following two years will be published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report in March and Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses in April.

Fuel Taxation

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the present level of fuel taxation on people in rural areas. [111282]

Mr. Timms: As the Chancellor made clear in the Pre-Budget Report he will take the Government's economic and social objectives as well as the UK's environmental commitments into account in deciding the appropriate level of fuel duties.

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the present level of fuel taxation on small garage owners. [111167]

Mr. Timms: None.

Russian Debt

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 16 February 2000, Official Report, column 616W, if he will place a copy of the agreement on restructuring Russian debt in the Library. [111342]

Mr. Timms: Her Majesty's Government were not a party to the agreement restructuring Russian debt owed to the London Club of private sector creditors reached on 11 February. The London office of Deutsche Bank, the lead bank of the London Club in this negotiation, may be able to provide further details.

Capital Modernisation Fund

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the projects that will receive funding from the capital modernisation fund in the years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02 and (i) the funding for and (ii) the timing of spending on each project; and if he will make a statement. [111249]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Allocations from the Capital Modernisation Fund have been announced for the projects listed in the following table. A second round of bidding for the Fund is underway.

VAT

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department has undertaken into the impact of the changes in VAT on domestic fuel made in July 1997 on different groups of the population. [111366]

Mr. Timms: The rate of VAT on domestic fuel was reduced to 5 per cent. on 1 September 1997, the lowest rate possible under EC law. There has been no research into the impact of the cut.

Recycling

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of documentation used by his Department is (a) made from recycled paper and (b) collected for recycling. [111599]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury does not purchase recycled paper. However, the paper purchased is produced using an ECF/TCF bleaching process and the paper fibres are obtained from a sustainable source. Approximately 74 per cent. of paper purchased is collected for recycling.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action the Government are taking to implement the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative. [111667]

Mr. Timms: So far this year, three countries have reached decision point under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative: Mauritania, Bolivia and Uganda. We are working closely with International Financial Institutions and with the countries themselves, in a capacity building and advisory role, towards the G7 target that three quarters of eligible countries should reach their decision point by the end of the year.

The Government have stepped in to bridge the IMF financing gap and have pledged to help other Multilateral Development Banks meet their costs of participating in the initiative. In total the Government have pledged $385 million to the Institutions involved in debt relief. The UK's contribution (including our share of the sum from the European Development Fund) is the largest resourced pledge of any bilateral donor. The European Development Fund contribution, released at the UK Government's urging, has been instrumental in allowing countries to be brought forward for debt relief before the delivery of the US's pledged financing.

Peat Compost

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to phase out the use of peat compost in gardens (a) owned and (b) tended by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [110717]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury does not own or maintain any gardens.

Electricity

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the electricity used by his Department is generated from renewable sources; and if he will make a statement. [111035]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury's electricity contract does not include supply from renewable sources.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many senior civil servants from an ethnic minority background are employed in his Department; and how many of them are (a) men and (b) women. [110679]

Mr. Timms: As at 1 April 1999, 55 members of the senior civil service were from an ethnic minority background (1.7 per cent).

Information on ethnic origin in the civil service is collected on the understanding that it will be treated on a confidential basis. To protect the privacy of individual members of staff we do not disclose data relating to fewer than five people.

The aggregate total of ethnic minority staff in the senior civil service within HM Treasury, Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise is fewer than five people.

Drug Enforcement

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each of the last 10 years the amount spent by Customs and Excise on drug enforcement for (a) the United Kingdom as a whole, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales. [111002]

Mr. Timms: Customs and Excise's estimated expenditure on drugs enforcement for 1999–2000 is £209 million. Comparable figures for previous years are not available separately from overall expenditure on protection of society. Nor are separate figures available for Scotland and Wales.

National Minimum Wage

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the (a) gross earnings, (b) earnings after income tax and National Insurance Contributions and (c) entitlements to the Working Families Tax Credit of a dual-earner couple with two children under the age of 11 years, both earning the minimum wage and both working full-time. [111241]

Mr. Timms: The figures requested are given in the table.

£/week

	Couple, both working full-time
Gross earnings	252.00
Earnings net of income tax and National Insurance Contributions	231.67
Amount of Working Families' Tax Credit	25.13

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many young people between the ages of 16 and 25 years do not have a National Insurance number; and for what reasons; what assessment he has made of the effects on access to work of not possessing a National Insurance number; and if he will make a statement. [110809]

Dawn Primarolo: Statistics on young people without a National Insurance number are not available. Allocation of the National Insurance numbers is normally via the automatic data transfer of children approaching their 16th birthday from the Child Benefit system to the National Insurance Recording System (NIRS). Young people who fall outside the scope of the Child Benefit System do not automatically receive a National Insurance number. There is no legal requirement to have a National Insurance number before applying for employment. The legal requirement is to apply for a National Insurance number on entry to employment.

When an individual without a National Insurance number registers for employment, the Employment Services Agency will issue them with a temporary number.

Primary Care (Death Rates)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the standardised mortality rate for each ward in (a) West Hull primary care group, (b) East Hull primary care group and (c) East Riding primary care group; and what is the average figure for the United Kingdom. [110357]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 22 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on standardised mortality rates for each ward in the West Hull, East Hull and East Riding Primary Care Groups and the UK.

East Riding Health Authority contains 4 Primary Care Groups: Western Hull, Eastern Hull, Yorkshire Coast and Wolds and East Yorkshire. The attached table shows European standardised mortality rates for each ward in East Riding HA based on deaths in 1991–3 and populations from the 1991 Census. Many of the wards in existence in 1991 are covered by more than one Primary Care Group. We have not provided data for all wards in the UK due to disproportionate cost.

The European standardised mortality rate is a measure of the expected number of deaths per 100,000 population if the local population had the same age structure as the European standard population.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what are the average death rates by ward allowing for age and sex standardisation in (a) West Hull Primary Care Group, (b) East Hull Primary Care Group, (c) East Riding Primary Care Group and (d) the UK; [110374]

(2) what are the average cancer-related death rates by ward allowing for age and sex standardisation in (a) West Hull Primary Care Group, (b) East Hull Primary Care Group, (c) East Riding Primary Care Group and (d) the UK; [110375]

(3) what are the average death rates for cervical cancer by ward allowing for age and sex standardisation in (a) West Hull Primary Care Group, (b) East Hull Primary Care Group, (c) East Riding Primary Care Group and (d) the UK; [110376]

(4) what are the average coronary heart disease death rates by ward allowing for age and sex standardisation in (a) West Hull Primary Care Group, (b) East Hull Primary Care Group, (c) East Riding Primary Care Group and (d) the UK; [110377]

(5) what are the average stroke death rates by ward allowing for age and sex standardisation in (a) West Hull Primary Care Group, (b) East Hull Primary Care Group, (c) East Riding Primary Care Group and (d) the UK. [110378]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 22 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent questions on average death rates, average cancer related death rates, average death rates for cervical cancer, average coronary heart disease death rates and average stroke death rates. You asked for the rates for each ward in the West Hull, East Hull and East Riding Primary Care Groups and the UK.

East Riding Health Authority is made up of 4 Primary care Groups: Western Hull, Eastern Hull, Yorkshire Coast and Wolds and East Yorkshire. The attached table shows indirectly standardised mortality ratios (SMR) for all-causes of death, coronary heart disease, cancer and stroke, for each ward in East Riding HA during 1991–1993, based on populations from the 1991 Census.

We have provided indirectly standardised ratios rather than European standardised rates as the latter does not incorporate sex standardisation and is likely to be less accurate for small numbers of deaths by cause in each ward. Many of the wards in existence in the 1991 Census are covered by more than one Primary Care Group. We have not provided data for all wards in the UK due to disproportionate cost and we have not provided data for cervical cancer deaths as the maximum number of deaths over the three year period in any ward in East Riding HA is three and most wards had no deaths.

An SMR is defined as the ratio for the observed deaths in a given population over the expected deaths in that population if it experienced the age-specific death rates of a standard population (in this case the United Kingdom). The SMR for the UK is 100. Values greater than 100 indicate higher than average mortality and values lower than 100 indicate lower than average mortality.

Job Vacancies (Newcastle upon Tyne)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the number of job vacancies in Newcastle upon Tyne each December from 1992 to 1999; and if he will analyse in which broad occupational group those vacancies fall. [111359]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 22 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the number of job vacancies in Newcastle upon Tyne.

Jobcentre vacancies information analysed by occupational groups are only available quarterly for the months of January, April, July and October and can be obtained from the Nomis database at the House of Commons Library.

Jobcentre vacancies do not represent the total number of vacancies available in the economy. Latest estimates suggest that about a third of all vacancies nationally are notified to Jobcentres. This proportion may vary between regions and between occupations as well as over time.

Taxation

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the percentage of the income of each quintile group of the population which is taken in (a) direct tax and (b) indirect tax; and if he will provide a breakdown of this estimate for each of the main taxes. [111151]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 22 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question asking for an estimate of the percentage of the income of each quintile group of the population which is taken in (a) direct tax and (b) indirect tax; and for a breakdown of this estimate for each of the main taxes.

The information that you requested is set out in the attached table. These figures are derived from Table 2A in Appendix 1 of the article 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income, 1997–98' published in the April 1999 edition of Economic Trends. The analyses in the article are based on data from the Family Expenditure Survey.

Youth Unemployment (Sundorne)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the percentage change has been in youth unemployment in the ward of Sundorne in Shrewsbury and Atcham since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [110834]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Paul Marsden, dated 22 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the percentage change in youth unemployment in the ward of Sundorne in Shrewsbury and Atcham since May 1997.

The ONS publish a monthly count of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. The claimant count consists of all people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or National Insurance credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made.

In May 1997, in the Sundorne ward there were 32 computerised claims among the 18–24 year olds compared with 16 in January 2000. This represents a fall of 50%. Claimant count figures are not seasonally adjusted at ward level. Computerised claims do not include clerical claims which make up around 1 per cent. of the total claimant count.

Suicides (Somerset)

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many suicides there have been in (a) Somerset and (b) Yeovil constituency in each year since 1980, broken down by age; and if he will make a statement. [110794]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Paddy Ashdown, dated 22 February 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking how many suicides there have been in Somerset and Yeovil.

Figures for the county of Somerset are presented in the attached table for years up to 1998 (the latest available.) Boundary changes to the Yeovil constituency mean that figures are not available for years prior to 1988. Figures for Yeovil are therefore presented in the attached table only for years 1988 to 1998, based on the 1999 constituency boundary.

Wages (Somerset)

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in (a) Somerset and (b) Yeovil constituency earn (a) £3.60 per hour, (b) £3.61 per hour to £3.80 per hour, (c) £3.81p per hour to £4.00 per hour and (d) £4.00 to £4.50 per hour; and what percentage of total employees this constitutes in each case. [110795]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Jim Holt to Mr. Paddy Ashdown, dated 22 February 2000:

As the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question regarding earnings for employees in Somerset and Yeovil.

The New Earnings Survey (NES) can provide earnings data for small geographical areas. However, the release of NES data is restricted to figures which are derived from a sufficiently large sample of employees, and have an acceptable level of accuracy. I have provided the available data for Somerset and Yeovil in the attached table. These are based on the 1999 NES, the latest survey for which data are available.

We are only able to give percentage earning below specified thresholds, rather than numbers because appropriate grossing factors for the NES sample are not available at very detailed levels of disaggregation such as parliamentary constituencies.

The NES is based on a one per cent. sample of employees in the PAYE system and is therefore likely to under-represent relatively low paid staff earning below the tax threshold and in particular those who work part-time.

New Earnings Survey, April 1999 (GB): Employees on adult rates, whose pay for the survey period was unaffected by absence

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 344

SESSION 1999–2000

7th February—22nd February 2000

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volumes of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The fortnightly index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references are to the column numbering in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Debates etc. (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Sittings in Westminster Hall (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings); and
  - Questions (which includes written, oral and private notice questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R=First reading
- 2R=Second reading
- Com=Committee stage
- Rep=Report stage
- 3R=Third reading
- res=resolution
- amendt(s)=amendment(s)
- *=matter taken formally without debate or division.
